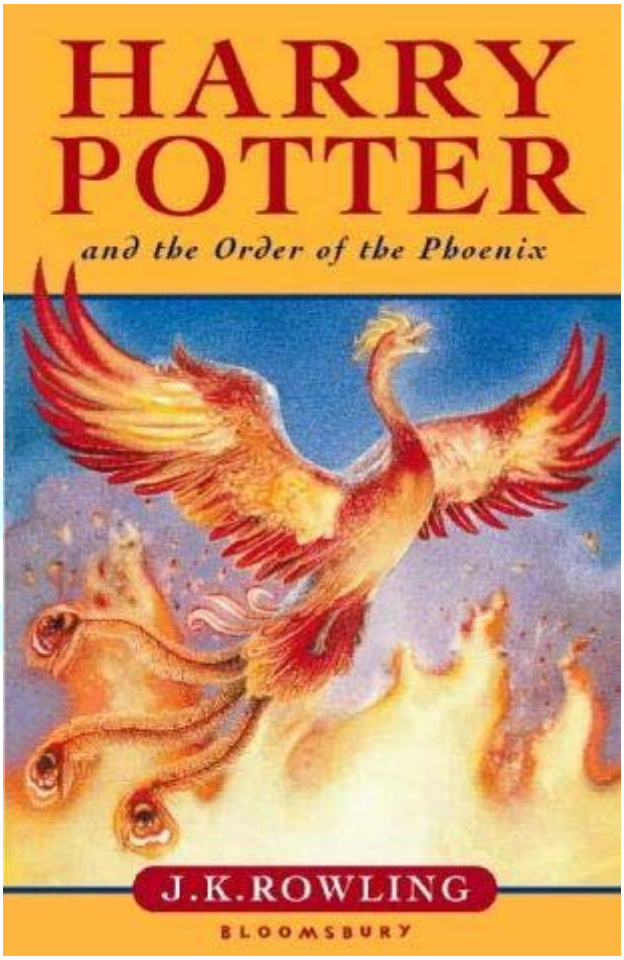
Harry Porter and the Order Of Phoenix

by J.K. Rowling



普特英语 E 书编辑部

PUTCLUB BOOKS

— CHAPTER ONE —

Dudley DementedThe hottest day of the summer so far was drawing to a close and a drowsy silence layover the large, square houses of Privet Drive. Cars that were usually gleaming stooddusty in their drives and lawns that were once emerald green lay parched and yellowing - for the use of hosepipes had been banned due to drought. Deprived of their usual carwashingand lawn-mowing pursuits, the inhabitants of Privet Drive had retreated into theshade of their cool houses, windows thrown wide in the hope of tempting in a nonexistentbreeze. The only person left outdoors was a teenage boy who was lying flat on his back ina flowerbed outside number four.
He was a skinny, black-haired, bespectacled boy who had the pinched, slightly unhealthylook of someone who has grown a lot in a short space of time. His jeans were torn anddirty, his T-shirt baggy and faded, and the soles of his trainers were peeling away fromthe uppers. Harry Potter's appearance did not endear him to the neighbours, who were thesort of people who thought scruffi-ness ought to be punishable by law, but as he hadhidden himself behind a large hydrangea bush this evening he was quite invisible topassers-by. In fact, the only way he would be spotted was if his Uncle Vernon or AuntPetunia stuck their heads out of the living-room window and looked straight down intothe flowerbed below.
On the whole, Harry thought he was to be congratulated on his idea of hiding here. Hewas not, perhaps, very comfortable lying on the hot, hard earth but, on the other hand,nobody was glaring at him, grinding their teeth so loudly that he could not hear the news,or shooting nasty questions at him, as had happened every time he had tried sitting downin the living room to watch television with his aunt and uncle.
Almost as though this thought had fluttered through the open window, Vernon Dursley,Harry's uncle, suddenly spoke.
'Glad to see the boy's stopped trying to butt in. Where is he, anyway?'
'I don't know,' said Aunt Petunia, unconcerned. 'Not in the house.'
Uncle Vernon grunted.
'Watching the news …' he said scathingly. 'I'd like to know what he's really up to. As if anormal boy cares what's on the news -Dudley hasn't got a clue what's going on; doubt heknows who the Prime Minister is! Anyway, it's not as if there'd be anything about his loton our news — '
'Vernon, shh!' said Aunt Petunia. The window's open!'
'Oh - yes - sorry, dear.'

The Dursleys fell silent. Harry listened to a jingle about Fruit 'n' Bran breakfast cerealwhile he watched Mrs Figg, a batty cat-loving old lady from nearby Wisteria Walk,amble slowly past. She was frowning and muttering to herself. Harry was very pleased hewas concealed behind the bush, as Mrs Figg had recently taken to asking him round fortea whenever she met him in the street. She had rounded the corner and vanished fromview before Uncle Vernon's voice floated out of the window again.
'Dudders out for tea?'
'At the Polkisses',' said Aunt Petunia fondly. 'He's got so many little friends, he's sopopularHarry suppressed a snort with difficulty. The Dursleys really were astonishingly stupidabout their son, Dudley. They had swallowed all his dim-witted lies about having tea witha different member of his gang every night of the summer holidays. Harry knew perfectlywell that Dudley had not been to tea anywhere; he and his gang spent every eveningvandalising the play park, smoking on street corners and throwing stones at passing carsand children. Harry had seen them at it during his evening walks around Little Whinging; he had spent most of the holidays wandering the streets, scavenging newspapers frombins along the way.

The opening notes of the music that heralded the seven o'clock news reached Harry's earsand his stomach turned over. Perhaps tonight - after a month of waiting - would be thenight.
'Record numbers of stranded holiday makers fill airports as the Spanish baggagehandlers' strike reaches its second week -
'Give 'em a lifelong siesta, I would,' snarled Uncle Vernon over the end of thenewsreader's sentence, but no matter: outside in the flowerbed, Harrys stomach seemed tounclench. If anything had happened, it would surely have been the first item on the news; death and destruction were more important than stranded holidaymakers.
He let out a long, slow breath and stared up at the brilliant blue sky. Every day thissummer had been the same: the tension, the expectation, the temporary relief, and thenmounting tension again… and always, growing more insistent all the time, the questionof why nothing had happened yet.
He kept listening, just in case there was some small clue, not recognised for what it reallywas by the Muggles - an unexplained disappearance, perhaps, or some strange accident…
but the baggage-handlers' strike was followed by news about the drought in the Southeast('I hope he's listening next door!' bellowed Uncle Vernon. 'Him with his sprinklers on atthree in the morning!'), then a helicopter that had almost crashed in a field in Surrey, thena famous actress's divorce from her famous husband ('As if we're interested in theirsordid affairs,' sniffed Aunt Petunia, who had followed the case obsessively in everymagazine she could lay her bony hands on).

Harry closed his eyes against the now blazing evening sky as the newsreader said, '- andfinally, Bungy the budgie has found a novel way of keeping cool this summer. Bungy, wholives at the Five Feathers in Barnsley, has learned to water ski! Mary Dorkins went tofind out more.'
Harry opened his eyes. If they had reached water-skiing budgerigars, there would benothing else worth hearing. He rolled cautiously on to his front and raised himself on tohis knees and elbows, preparing to crawl out from under the window.
He had moved about two inches when several things happened in very quick succession.
A loud, echoing crack broke the sleepy silence like a gunshot; a cat streaked out fromunder a parked car and flew out of sight; a shriek, a bellowed oath and the sound ofbreaking china came from the Dursleys' living room, and as though this was the signalHarry had been waiting for he jumped to his feet, at the same time pulling from thewaistband of his jeans a thin wooden wand as if he were unsheathing a sword - but beforehe could draw himself up to full height, the top of his head collided with the Dursleys' open window. The resultant crash made Aunt Petunia scream even louder.
Harry felt as though his head had been split in two. Eyes streaming, he swayed, trying tofocus on the street to spot the source of the noise, but he had barely staggered uprightwhen two large purple hands reached through the open window and closed tightly aroundhis throat.
'Put - it - away!' Uncle Vernon snarled into Harry's ear. 'Now.' Before - anyone - sees!'
'Get - off - me!' Harry gasped. For a few seconds they struggled, Harry pulling at hisuncles sausage-like fingers with his left hand, his right maintaining a firm grip on hisraised wand; then, as the pain in the top of Harry's head gave a particularly nasty throb,Uncle Vernon yelped and released Harry as though he had received an electric shock.

Some invisible force seemed to have surged through his nephew, making him impossibleto hold.
Panting, Harry fell forwards over the hydrangea bush, straightened up and stared around.
There was no sign of what had caused the loud cracking noise, but there were severalfaces peering through various nearby windows. Harry stuffed his wand hastily back intohis jeans and tried to look innocent.
'Lovely evening!' shouted Uncle Vernon, waving at Mrs Number Seven opposite, whowas glaring from behind her net curtains. 'Did you hear that car backfire just now? GavePetunia and me quite a turn!'
He continued to grin in a horrible, manic way until all the curious neighbours haddisappeared from their various windows, then the grin became a grimace of rage as hebeckoned Harry back towards him.

Harry moved a few steps closer, taking care to stop just short of the point at which UncleVernon's outstretched hands could resume their strangling.
'What the devil do you mean by it, boy?' asked Uncle Vernon in a croaky voice thattrembled with fury.
'What do I mean by what?' said Harry coldly. He kept looking left and right up the street,still hoping to see the person who had made the cracking noise.
'Making a racket like a starting pistol right outside our -
'I didn't make that noise,' said Harry firmly.
Aunt Petunia's thin, horsy face now appeared beside Uncle Vernon's wide, purple one.
She looked livid.
'Why were you lurking under our window?'
'Yes - yes, good point, Petunia! What were you doing under our window, boy?'
'Listening to the news,' said Harry in a resigned voice.
His aunt and uncle exchanged looks of outrage.
'Listening to the news! Again?'
'Well, it changes every day, you see,' said Harry.
'Don't you be clever with me, boy! I want to know what you're really up to - and don'tgive me any more of this listening to the news tosh! You know perfectly well that yourlot -
'Careful, Vernon!' breathed Aunt Petunia, and Uncle Vernon lowered his voice so thatHarry could barely hear him,'- that your lot don't get on our news!'
'That's all you know,' said Harry.
The Dursleys goggled at him for a few seconds, then Aunt Petunia said, 'You're a nastylittle liar. What are all those -' she, too, lowered her voice so that Harry had to lip-read thenext word, - owls doing if they're not bringing you news?'
'Aha!' said Uncle Vernon in a triumphant whisper. 'Get out of that one, boy! As if wedidn't know you get all your news from those pestilential birds!'
Harry hesitated for a moment. It cost him something to tell the truth this time, eventhough his aunt and uncle could not possibly know how bad he felt at admitting it.

'The owls… aren't bringing me news,' he said tonelessly.
'I don't believe it,' said Aunt Petunia at once.
'No more do I,' said Uncle Vernon forcefully.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'We know you're up to something funny,' said Aunt Petunia.
'We're not stupid, you know,' said Uncle Vernon.
'Well, that's news to me,' said Harry, his temper rising, and before the Dursleys could callhim back, he had wheeled about, crossed the front lawn, stepped over the low garden walland was striding off up the street.
He was in trouble now and he knew it. He would have to face his aunt and uncle later andpay the price for his rudeness, but he did not care very much just at the moment; he hadmuch more pressing matters on his mind.
Harry was sure the cracking noise had been made by someone Apparating orDisapparating. It was exactly the sound Dobby the house-elf made when he vanished intothin air. Was it possible that Dobby was here in Privet Drive? Could Dobby be followinghim right at this very moment? As this thought occurred he wheeled around and staredback down Privet Drive, but it appeared to be completely deserted and Harry was surethat Dobby did not know how to become invisible.
He walked on, hardly aware of the route he was taking, for he had pounded these streetsso often lately that his feet carried him to his favourite haunts automatically. Every fewsteps he glanced back over his shoulder. Someone magical had been near him as he layamong Aunt Petunia's dying begonias, he was sure of it. Why hadn't they spoken to him,why hadn't they made contact, why were they hiding now?
And then, as his feeling of frustration peaked, his certainty leaked away.
Perhaps it hadn't been a magical sound after all. Perhaps he was so desperate for thetiniest sign of contact from the world to which he belonged that he was simplyoverreacting to perfectly ordinary noises. Could he be sure it hadn't been the sound ofsomething breaking inside a neighbour's house?
Harry felt a dull, sinking sensation in his stomach and before he knew it the feeling ofhopelessness that had plagued him all summer rolled over him once again.
Tomorrow morning he would be woken by the alarm at five o'clock so he could pay theowl that delivered the Daily Prophet -but was there any point continuing to take it? Harrymerely glanced at the front page before throwing it aside these days; when the idiots whoran the paper finally realised that Voldemort was back it would be headline news, andthat was the only kind Harry cared about.

If he was lucky, there would also be owls carrying letters from his best friends Ron andHermione, though any expectation he'd had that their letters would bring him news hadlong since been dashed.
We can't say much about you-know-what, obviously… We've been told not to sayanything important in case our letters go astray… We're quite busy but I can't give youdetails here… There's a fair amount going on, we'll tell you everything when we seeyou…
But when were they going to see him? Nobody seemed too bothered with a precise date.
Hermione had scribbled I expect we'll be seeing you quite soon inside his birthday card,but how soon was soon? As far as Harry could tell from the vague hints in their letters,Hermione and Ron were in the same place, presumably at Ron's parents' house. He couldhardly bear to think of the pair of them having fun at The Burrow when he was stuck inPrivet Drive. In fact, he was so angry with them he had thrown away, unopened, the twoboxes of Honeydukes chocolates they'd sent him for his birthday. He'd regretted it later,after the wilted salad Aunt Petunia had provided for dinner that night.
And what were Ron and Hermione busy with? Why wasn't he, Harry, busy? Hadn't heproved himself capable of handling much more than them? Had they all forgotten whathe had done? Hadn't it been he who had entered that graveyard and watched Cedric beingmurdered, and been tied to that tombstone and nearly killed?

Don't think about that, Harry told himself sternly for the hundredth lime that summer. Itwas bad enough that he kept revisiting the graveyard in his nightmares, without dwellingon it in his waking moments too.

He turned a corner into Magnolia Crescent; halfway along he passed the narrow alleywaydown the side of a garage where he had first clapped eyes on his godfather. Sirius, atleast, seemed to understand how Harry was feeling. Admittedly, his letters were just asempty of proper news as Ron and Hermione's, but at least they contained words ofcaution and consolation instead of tantalising hints:

I know this must be frustrating for you… Keep your nose clean and everything will beOK… Be careful and don't do anything rash…

Well, thought Harry, as he crossed Magnolia Crescent, turned into Magnolia Road andheaded towards the darkening play park, he had (by and .large) done as Sirius advised.

He had at least resisted the temptation to tie his trunk to his broomstick and set off forThe Burrow by himself. In fact, Harry thought his behaviour had been very goodconsidering how frustrated and angry he felt at being stuck in Privet Drive so long,reduced to hiding in flowerbeds in the hope of hearing something that might point towhat Lord Voldemort was doing. Nevertheless, it was quite galling to be told not to berash by a man who had served twelve years in the wizard prison, Azkaban, escaped,attempted to commit the murder he had been convicted for in the first place, then gone onthe run with a stolen Hippogriff.

Harry vaulted over the locked park gate and set off across the parched grass. The parkwas as empty as the surrounding streets. When he reached the swings he sank on to theonly one that Dudley and his friends had not yet managed to break, coiled one armaround the chain and stared moodily at the ground. He would not be able to hide in theDursleys' flowerbed again. Tomorrow, he would have to think of some fresh way oflistening to the news. In the meantime, he had nothing to look forward to but anotherrestless, disturbed night, because even when he escaped the nightmares about Cedric hehad unsettling dreams about long dark corridors, all finishing in dead ends and lockeddoors, which he supposed had something to do with the trapped feeling he had when hewas awake. Often the old scar on his forehead prickled uncomfortably, but he did not foolhimself that Ron or Hermione or Sirius would find that very interesting any more. In thepast, his scar hurting had warned that Voldemort was getting stronger again, but now thatVoldemort was back they would probably remind him that its regular irritation was onlyto be expected… nothing to worry about… old news…

The injustice of it all welled up inside him so that he wanted to yell with fury. If it hadn'tbeen for him, nobody would even have known Voldemort was back! And his reward wasto be stuck in Little Whinging for four solid weeks, completely cut off from the magicalworld, reduced to squatting among dying begonias so that he could hear about waterskiingbudgerigars! How could Dumbledore have forgotten him so easily? Why had Ronand Hermione got together without inviting him along, too? How much longer was hesupposed to endure Sirius telling him to sit tight and be a good boy; or resist thetemptation to write to the stupid Daily Prophet and point out that Voldemort hadreturned? These furious thoughts whirled around in Harry's head, and his insides writhedwith anger as a sultry, velvety night fell around him, the air full of the smell of warm, drygrass, and the only sound that of the low grumble of traffic on the road beyond the parkrailings.

He did not know how long he had sat on the swing before the sound of voices interruptedhis musings and he looked up. The streetlamps from the surrounding roads were casting amisty glow strong enough to silhouette a group of people making their way across thepark. One of them was singing a loud, crude song. The others were laughing. A softticking noise came from several expensive racing bikes that they were wheeling along.

Harry knew who those people were. The figure in front was unmistakeably his cousin,Dudley Dursley, wending his way home, accompanied by his faithful gang.

Dudley was as vast as ever, but a year's hard dieting and the discovery of a new talent hadwrought quite a change in his physique. As Uncle Vernon delightedly told anyone whowould listen, Dudley had recently become the Junior Heavyweight Inter-School BoxingChampion of the Southeast. The noble sport', as Uncle Vernon called it, had madeDudley even more formidable than he had seemed to Harry in their primary school dayswhen he had served as Dudley's first punchball. Harry was not remotely afraid of hiscousin any more but he still didn't think that Dudley learning to punch harder and moreaccurately was cause for celebration. Neighbourhood children all around were terrified ofhim - even more terrified than they were of 'that Potter boy' who, they had been warned, was a hardened hooligan and attended St Brutus's Secure Centre for Incurably CriminalBoys.

Harry watched the dark figures crossing the grass and wondered who they had beenbeating up tonight. Look round, Harry found himself thinking as he watched them. Comeon… look round… I'm sitting here all alone… come and have a go…

If Dudley's friends saw him sitting here, they would be sure to make a beeline for him,and what would Dudley do then? He wouldn't want to lose face in front of the gang, buthe'd be terrified of provoking Harry… it would be really fun to watch Dudley's dilemma,to taunt him, watch him, with him powerless to respond… and if any of the others triedhitting Harry, he was ready - he had his wand. Let them try… he'd love to vent some ofhis frustration on the boys who had once made his life hell.

But they didn't turn around, they didn't see him, they were almost at the railings. Harrymastered the impulse to call after them… seeking a fight was not a smart move… hemust not use magic… he would be risking expulsion again.

The voices of Dudley's gang died away; they were out of sight, heading along MagnoliaRoad.

There you go, Sirius, Harry thought dully. Nothing rash. Kept my nose clean. Exactly theopposite of what you'd have done.

He got to his feet and stretched. Aunt Petunia and Uncle Vernon seemed to feel thatwhenever Dudley turned up was the right time to be home, and any time after that wasmuch too late. Uncle Vernon had threatened to lock Harry in the shed if he came homeafter Dudley ever again, so, stifling a yawn, and still scowling, Harry set off towards thepark gate.

Magnolia Road, like Privet Drive, was full of large, square houses with perfectlymanicured lawns, all owned by large, square owners who drove very clean cars similar toUncle Vernon's. Harry preferred Little Whinging by night, when the curtained windowsmade patches of jewel-bright colour in the darkness and he ran no danger of hearingdisapproving mutters about his 'delinquent' appearance when he passed the householders.

He walked quickly, so that halfway along Magnolia Road Dudley's gang came into viewagain; they were saying their farewells at the entrance to Magnolia Crescent. Harrystepped into the shadow of a large lilac tree and waited.

'… squealed like a pig, didn't he?' Malcolm was saying, to guffaws from the others.

'Nice right hook, Big D,' said Piers.

'Same time tomorrow?' said Dudley.

'Round at my place, my parents will be out,' said Gordon.

'See you then,' said Dudley.
'Bye, Dud!'
'See ya, Big D!'
Harry waited for the rest of the gang to move on before setting off again. When theirvoices had faded once more he headed around the corner into Magnolia Crescent and bywalking very quickly he soon came within hailing distance of Dudley, who was strollingalong at his ease, humming tunelessly.
'Hey, Big D!'
Dudley turned.
'Oh,' he grunted. 'It's you.'
'How long have you been "Big D" then?' said Harry.
'Shut it,' snarled Dudley, turning away.
'Cool name,' said Harry, grinning and falling into step beside his cousin. 'But you'llalways be "Ickle Diddykins" to me.'
'I said, SHUT IT!' said Dudley, whose ham-like hands had curled into fists.
'Don't the boys know that's what your mum calls you?'
'Shut your face.'
'You don't tell her to shut her face. What about "Popkin" and "Dinky Diddydums", can Iuse them then?'
Dudley said nothing. The effort of keeping himself from hitting Harry seemed to demandall his self-control.
'So who've you been beating up tonight?' Harry asked, his grin fading. 'Another ten-yearold?
I know you did Mark Evans two nights ago -
'He was asking for it,' snarled Dudley.
'Oh yeah?'
'He cheeked me.'

'Yeah? Did he say you look like a pig that's been taught to walk on its hind legs? 'Causethat's not cheek, Dud, that's true.'
A muscle was twitching in Dudley's jaw. It gave Harry enormous satisfaction to knowhow furious he was making Dudley; he felt as though he was siphoning off his ownfrustration into his cousin, the only outlet he had.
They turned right down the narrow alleyway where Harry had first seen Sirius and whichformed a short cut between Magnolia Crescent and Wisteria Walk. It was empty andmuch darker than the streets it linked because there were no streetlamps. Their footstepswere muffled between garage walls on one side and a high fence on the other.
Think you're a big man carrying that thing, don't you?' Dudley said after a few seconds.
'What thing?'
'That - that thing you are hiding.'
Harry grinned again.
'Not as stupid as you look, are you, Dud? But I's'pose, if you were, you wouldn't be ableto walk and talk at the same time.'
Harry pulled out his wand. He saw Dudley look sideways at it.
'You're not allowed,' Dudley said at once. 'I know you're not. You'd get expelled fromthat freak school you go to.'
'How d'you know they haven't changed the rules, Big D?'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

They haven't,' said Dudley, though he didn't sound completely convinced.
Harry laughed softly.
'You haven't got the guts to take me on without that thing, have you?' Dudley snarled.
'Whereas you just need four mates behind you before you can beat up a ten year old. Youknow that boxing title you keep banging on about? How old was your opponent? Seven?
Eight?'
'He was sixteen, for your information,' snarled Dudley, 'and he was out cold for twentyminutes after I'd finished with him and he was twice as heavy as you. You just wait till Itell Dad you had that thing out -
'Running to Daddy now, are you? Is his ickle boxing champ frightened of nasty Harry'swand?'

'Not this brave at night, are you?' sneered Dudley.
This is night, Diddykins. That's what we call it when it goes all dark like this.'
'I mean when you're in bed!' Dudley snarled.
He had stopped walking. Harry stopped too, staring at his cousin.
From the little he could see of Dudley's large face, he was wearing a strangely triumphantlook.
'What d'you mean, I'm not brave when I'm in bed?' said Harry, completely nonplussed.
'What am I supposed to be frightened of, pillows or something?'
'I heard you last night,' said Dudley breathlessly. Talking in your sleep. Moaning.'
'What d'you mean?' Harry said again, but there was a cold, plunging sensation in hisstomach. He had revisited the graveyard last night in his dreams.
Dudley gave a harsh bark of laughter, then adopted a high-pitched whimpering voice.
'"Don't kill Cedric! Don't kill Cedric!" Who's Cedric - your boyfriend?'
'I - you're lying,' said Harry automatically. But his mouth had gone dry. He knew Dudleywasn't lying - how else would he know about Cedric?
'"Dad! Help me, Dad! He's going to kill me, Dad! Boo hoo!"'
'Shut up,' said Harry quietly. 'Shut up, Dudley, I'm warning you!'
''Come and help me, Dad! Mum, come and help me! He's killed Cedric! Dad, help me!
He's going to -" Don't you point that thing at me!'
Dudley backed into the alley wall. Harry was pointing the wand directly at Dudley'sheart. Harry could feel fourteen years' hatred of Dudley pounding in his veins - whatwouldn't he give to strike now, to jinx Dudley so thoroughly he'd have to crawl home likean insect, struck dumb, sprouting feelers…
'Don't ever talk about that again,' Harry snarled. 'D'you understand me?'
'Point that thing somewhere else!'
'I said, do you understand me?'
'Point it somewhere else!'

'DO YOU UNDERSTAND ME?'
'GET THAT THING AWAY FROM -'
Dudley gave an odd, shuddering gasp, as though he had been doused in icy water.
Something had happened to the night. The star-strewn indigo sky was suddenly pitchblack and lightless - the stars, the moon, the misty streetlamps at either end of the alleyhad vanished. The distant rumble of cars and the whisper of trees had gone. The balmyevening was suddenly piercingly, bitingly cold. They were surrounded by total,impenetrable, silent darkness, as though some giant hand had dropped a thick, icy mantleover the entire alleyway, blinding them.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

For a split second Harry thought he had done magic without meaning to, despite the factthat he'd been resisting as hard as he could - then his reason caught up with his senses - he didn't have the power to turn off the stars. He turned his head this way and that, tryingto see something, but the darkness pressed on his eyes like a weightless veil.
Dudley's terrified voice broke in Harry's ear.
'W-what are you d-doing? St-stop it!'
'I'm not doing anything! Shut up and don't move!'
'I c-can't see! I've g-gone blind! I -'
'I said shut up!'
Harry stood stock still, turning his sightless eyes left and right. The cold was so intensehe was shivering all over; goose bumps had erupted up his arms and the hairs on the backof his neck were standing up - he opened his eyes to their fullest extent, staring blanklyaround, unseeing.
It was impossible… they couldn't be here… not in Little Whinging… he strained hisears… he would hear them before he saw them…
'I'll't-tell Dad!' Dudley whimpered. 'W-where are you? What are you d-do—?'
'Will you shut up?' Harry hissed, I'm trying to lis—'
But he fell silent. He had heard just the thing he had been dreading.
There was something in the alleyway apart from themselves, something that was drawinglong, hoarse, rattling breaths. Harry felt a horrible jolt of dread as he stood trembling inthe freezing air.

'C-cut it out! Stop doing it! I'll h-hit you, I swear I will!'
'Dudley, shut—'
WHAM.
A fist made contact with the side of Harrys head, lifting him off his feet. Small whitelights popped in front of his eyes. For the second time in an hour Harry felt as though hishead had been cleaved in two; next moment, he had landed hard on the ground and hiswand had flown out of his hand.
'You moron, Dudley!' Harry yelled, his eyes watering with pain as he scrambled to hishands and knees, feeling around frantically in the blackness. He heard Dudley blunderingaway, hitting the alley fence, stumbling.
'DUDLEY, COME BACK! YOU'RE RUNNING RIGHT AT IT!'
There was a horrible squealing yell and Dudley's footsteps stopped. At the same moment,Harry felt a creeping chill behind him that could mean only one thing. There was morethan one.
'DUDLEY, KEEP YOUR MOUTH SHUT! WHATEVER YOU DO, KEEP YOURMOUTH SHUT! Wand!'
Harry muttered frantically, his hands flying over the ground likespiders. 'Where's - wand -come on - lumos!'
He said the spell automatically, desperate for light to help him in his search - and to hisdisbelieving relief, light flared inches from his right hand - the wand tip had ignited.
Harry snatched it up, scrambled to his feet and turned around.
His stomach turned over.
A towering, hooded figure was gliding smoothly towards him, hovering over the ground,no feet or face visible beneath its robes, sucking on the night as it came.
Stumbling backwards, Harry raised his wand.
'Expecto patronum!'
A silvery wisp of vapour shot from the tip of the wand and the Dementor slowed, but thespell hadn't worked properly; tripping over his own feet, Harry retreated further as theDementor bore down upon him, panic fogging his brain - concentrate -

A pair of grey, slimy, scabbed hands slid from inside the Dementor's robes, reaching forhim. A rushing noise filled Harry's ears.
'Expecto patronum!'

His voice sounded dim and distant. Another wisp of silver smoke, feebler than the last,drifted from the wand - he couldn't do it any more, he couldn't work the spell.
There was laughter inside his own head, shrill, high-pitched laughter… he could smellthe Dementor's putrid, death-cold breath filling his own lungs, drowning him - think…
something happy…
But there was no happiness in him… the Dementor's icy fingers were closing on histhroat - the high-pitched laughter was growing louder and louder, and a voice spokeinside his head: 'Bow to death, Harry…it might even be painless… I would not know … Ihave never died …"
He was never going to see Ron and Hermione again -
And their faces burst clearly into his mind as he fought for breath.
'EXPECTO PATRONUM!'
An enormous silver stag erupted from the tip of Harry's wand; its antlers caught theDementor in the place where the heart should have been; it was thrown backwards,weightless as darkness, and as the stag charged, the Dementor swooped away, bat-likeand defeated.
'THIS WAY!' Harry shouted at the stag. Wheeling around, he sprinted down thealleyway, holding the lit wand aloft. 'DUDLEY? DUDLEY!'
He had run barely a dozen steps when he reached them: Dudley was curled up on theground, his arms clamped over his face. A second Dementor was crouching low overhim, gripping his wrists in its slimy hands, prising them slowly almost lovingly apart,lowering its hooded head towards Dudley's face as though about to kiss him.
'GET IT!' Harry bellowed, and with a rushing, roaring sound, the silver stag he hadconjured came galloping past him. The Dementor's eyeless face was barely an inch fromDudley's when the silver antlers caught it; the thing was thrown up into the air and, likeits fellow, it soared away and was absorbed into the darkness; the stag cantered to the endof the alleyway and dissolved into silver mist.
Moon, stars and streetlamps burst back into life. A warm breeze swept the alleyway.
Trees rustled in neighbouring gardens and the mundane rumble of cars in MagnoliaCrescent filled the air again.
Harry stood quite still, all his senses vibrating, taking in the abrupt return to normality.
After a moment, he became aware that his T-shirt was sticking to him; he was drenchedin sweat.
He could not believe what had just happened. Dementors here, in Little Whinging.

Dudley lay curled up on the ground, whimpering and shaking. Harry bent down to seewhether he was in a fit state to stand up, but then he heard loud, running footsteps behindhim. Instinctively raising his wand again, he span on his heel to face the newcomer.
Mrs Figg, their batty old neighbour, came panting into sight. Her grizzled grey hair wasescaping from its hairnet, a clanking string shopping bag was swinging from her wristand her feet were halfway out of her tartan carpet slippers. Harry made to stow his wandhurriedly out of sight, but - 'Don't put it away idiot boy!' she shrieked. 'What if there are more of them around? Oh,I'm going to kill

Mundungus Fletcher!'

— CHAPTER TWO —

A Peck of Owls'What?' said Harry blankly.

'He left!' said Mrs Figg, wringing her hands. 'Left to see someone about a batch ofcauldrons that fell off the back of a broom! I told him I'd flay him alive if he went, andnow look! Dementors! It's just lucky I put Mr Tibbies on the case! But we haven't gottime to stand around! Hurry, now, we've got to get you back! Oh, the trouble this is goingto cause! I will Ml him!'

'But -' The revelation that his batty old cat-obsessed neighbour knew what Dementorswere was almost as big a shock to Harry as meeting two of them down the alleyway.

'You're — you're a witch?'

'I'm a Squib, as Mundungus knows full well, so how on earth was I supposed to help youfight off Dementors? He left you completely without cover when I'd warned him -'

This Mundungus has been following me? Hang on - it was him! He Disapparated fromthe front of my house!'

'Yes, yes, yes, but luckily I'd stationed Mr Tibbies under a car just in case, and MrTibbies came and warned me, but by the time I got to your house you'd gone - and now - oh, what's Dumbledore going to say? You!' she shrieked at Dudley, still supine on thealley floor. 'Get your fat bottom off the ground, quick!'

'You know Dumbledore?' said Harry, staring at her.

'Of course I know Dumbledore, who doesn't know Dumbledore? But come on — I'll beno help if they come back, I've never so much as Transfigured a teabag.'

She stooped down, seized one of Dudley's massive arms in her wizened hands andtugged.

'Get up, you useless lump, get up!'

A PECK OF OWLS 25But Dudley either could not or would not move. He remained on the ground, tremblingand ashen-faced, his mouth shut very tight.

Til do it.' Harry took hold of Dudleys arm and heaved. With an enormous effort hemanaged to hoist him to his feet. Dudley seemed to be on the point of fainting. His smalleyes were rolling in their sockets and sweat was beading his face; the moment Harry letgo of him he swayed dangerously.

'Hurry up!' said Mrs Figg hysterically.

Harry pulled one of Dudley's massive arms around his own shoulders and dragged himtowards the road, sagging slightly under the weight. Mrs Figg tottered along in front ofthem, peering anxiously around the corner.

'Keep your wand out,' she told Harry, as they entered Wisteria Walk. 'Never mind theStatute of Secrecy now, there's going to be hell to pay anyway, we might as well behanged for a dragon as an egg. Talk about the Reasonable Restriction of UnderageSorcery ... this was exactly what Dumbledore was afraid of - What's that at the end of thestreet? Oh, it's just Mr Prentice ... don't put your wand away, boy, don't I keep telling youI'm no use?'

It was not easy to hold a wand steady and haul Dudley along at the same time. Harrygave his cousin an impatient dig in the ribs, but Dudley seemed to have lost all desire forindependent movement. He was slumped on Harrys shoulder, his large feet draggingalong the ground.

'Why didn't you tell me you're a Squib, Mrs Figg?' asked Harry, panting with the effort tokeep walking.

'All those times I came round your house - why didn't you say anything?'

'Dumbledore's orders. I was to keep an eye on you but not say anything, you were tooyoung. I'm sorry I gave you such a miserable time, Harry, but the Dursleys would neverhave let you come if they'd thought you enjoyed it. It wasn't easy, you know ... but oh myword,' she said tragically, wringing her hands once more, 'when Dumbledore hears aboutthis - how could Mundungus have left, he was supposed to be on duty until midnight - where is he? How am I going to tell Dumbledore what's happened? I can't Apparate.'

26 HARRY POTTER'I've got an owl, you can borrow her.' Harry groaned, wondering whether his spine wasgoing to snap under Dudley's weight.

'Harry, you don't understand! Dumbledore will need to act as quickly as possible, theMinistry have their own ways of detecting underage magic, they'll know already, youmark my words.'

'But I was getting rid of Dementors, I had to use magic - they're going to be more worriedabout what Dementors were doing floating around Wisteria Walk, surely?'

'Oh, my dear, I wish it were so, but I'm afraid - MUNDUNGUS FLETCHER, I AMGOING TO KILL YOU!'

There was a loud crack and a strong smell of drink mingled with stale tobacco filled theair as a squat, unshaven man in a tattered overcoat materialised right in front of them. Hehad short, bandy legs, long straggly ginger hair and bloodshot, baggy eyes that gave him the doleful look of a basset hound. He was also clutching a silvery bundle that Harryrecognised at once as an Invisibility Cloak.

"S'up, Figgy?' he said, staring from Mrs Figg to Harry and Dudley. 'What 'appened tostaying undercover?'

Til give you undercover!' cried Mrs Figg. 'Dementors, you useless, skiving sneak thief!'

'Dementors?' repeated Mundungus, aghast. 'Dementors, 'ere?'

'Yes, here, you worthless pile of bat droppings, here!' shrieked Mrs Figg. 'Dementorsattacking the boy on your watch!'

'Blimey,' said Mundungus weakly, looking from Mrs Figg to Harry, and back again.

'Blimey, I -'

'And you off buying stolen cauldrons! Didn't I tell you not to go? Didn't I?'

'I - well, I -' Mundungus looked deeply uncomfortable. 'It - it was a very good businessopportunity, see —'

Mrs Figg raised the arm from which her string bag dangled and whacked Mundungusaround the face and neck with it; judging by the clanking noise it made it was full of catfood.

'Ouch - gerroff- gerroff, you mad old bat! Someone's gotta tell Dumbledore!'

'Yes - they - have!' yelled Mrs Figg, swinging the bag of cat food at every bit ofMundungus she could reach. 'And - it - hadA PECK OF OWLS 27- better - be - you - and - you - can — tell - him - why - you -weren't - there - to - help!'

'Keep your 'airnet on!' said Mundungus, his arms over his head, cowering. 'I'm going, I'mgoing!'

And with another loud crack, he vanished.

'I hope Dumbledore murders him!' said Mrs Figg furiously. 'Now come on, Harry, whatare you waiting for?'

Harry decided not to waste his remaining breath on pointing out that he could barely walkunder Dudley's bulk. He gave the semi-conscious Dudley a heave and staggered onwards.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Til take you to the door,' said Mrs Figg, as they turned into Privet Drive. 'Just in casethere are more of them around ... oh my word, what a catastrophe ... and you had to fightthem off yourself... and Dumbledore said we were to keep you from doing magic at allcosts ... well, it's no good crying over spilt potion, I suppose ... but the cat's among thepixies now.'

'So,' Harry panted, 'Dumbledores ... been having ... me followed?'

'Of course he has,' said Mrs Figg impatiently. 'Did you expect him to let you wanderaround on your own after what happened in June? Good Lord, boy, they told me youwere intelligent ... right ... get inside and stay there,' she said, as they reached numberfour. 'I expect someone will be in touch with you soon enough.'

'What are you going to do?' asked Harry quickly.

'I'm going straight home,' said Mrs Figg, staring around the dark street and shuddering.

Til need to wait for more instructions. Just stay in the house. Goodnight.'

'Hang on, don't go yet! I want to know -'

But Mrs Figg had already set off at a trot, carpet slippers flopping, string bag clanking.

'Wait!' Harry shouted after her. He had a million questions to ask anyone who was incontact with Dumbledore; but within seconds Mrs Figg was swallowed by the darkness.

Scowling, Harry readjusted Dudley on his shoulder and made his slow, painful way upnumber four's garden path.

The hall light was on. Harry stuck his wand back inside the waistband of his jeans, rangthe bell and watched Aunt Petunia's28 HARRY POTTERoutline grow larger and larger, oddly distorted by the rippling glass in the front door.

'Diddy! About time too, I was getting quite - quite - Diddy, what's the matter?'

Harry looked sideways at Dudley and ducked out from under his arm just in time. Dudleyswayed on the spot for a moment, his face pale green ... then he opened his mouth andvomited all over the doormat.

'DIDDY! Diddy, what's the matter with you? Vernon? VERNON!'

Harrys uncle came galumphing out of the living room, walrus moustache blowing hitherand thither as it always did when he was agitated. He hurried forwards to help AuntPetunia negotiate a weak-kneed Dudley over the threshold while avoiding stepping in thepool of sick.

'He's ill, Vernon!'

'What is it, son? What's happened? Did Mrs Polkiss give you something foreign for tea?'

Why are you all covered in dirt, darling? Have you been lying on the ground?'

'Hang on - you haven't been mugged, have you, son?'

Aunt Petunia screamed.

'Phone the police, Vernon! Phone the police! Diddy, darling, speak to Mummy! What didthey do to you?'

In all the kerfuffle nobody seemed to have noticed Harry, which suited him perfectly. Hemanaged to slip inside just before Uncle Vernon slammed the door and, while theDursleys made their noisy progress down the hall towards the kitchen, Harry movedcarefully and quietly towards the stairs.

Who did it, son? Give us names. We'll get them, don't worry.'

'Shh! He's trying to say something, Vernon! What is it, Diddy? Tell Mummy!'

Harry's foot was on the bottom-most stair when Dudley found his voice.

'Him.'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Harry froze, foot on the stair, face screwed up, braced for the explosion.
'BOY! COME HERE!'
A PECK OF OWLS 29With a feeling of mingled dread and anger, Harry removed his foot slowly from the stairand turned to follow the Dursleys.
The scrupulously clean kitchen had an oddly unreal glitter after the darkness outside.
Aunt Petunia was ushering Dudley into a chair; he was still very green and clammylooking.
Uncle Vernon was standing in front of the draining board, glaring at Harrythrough tiny, narrowed eyes.
'What have you done to my son?' he said in a menacing growl.
'Nothing,' said Harry, knowing perfectly well that Uncle Vernon wouldn't believe him.

'What did he do to you, Diddy?' Aunt Petunia said in a quavering voice, now spongingsick from the front of Dudley's leather jacket. 'Was it - was it you-know-what, darling?
Did he use - his thing?'
Slowly, tremulously, Dudley nodded.
'I didn't!' Harry said sharply, as Aunt Petunia let out a wail and Uncle Vernon raised hisfists. '1 didn't do anything to him, it wasn't me, it was —'
But at that precise moment a screech owl swooped in through the kitchen window.
Narrowly missing the top of Uncle Vernon's head, it soared across the kitchen, droppedthe large parchment envelope it was carrying in its beak at Harry's feet, turned gracefully,the tips of its wings just brushing the top of the fridge, then zoomed outside again and offacross the garden.
'OWLS!' bellowed Uncle Vernon, the well-worn vein in his temple pulsing angrily as heslammed the kitchen window shut. 'OWLS AGAIN! I WILL NOT HAVE ANY MOREOWLS IN MY HOUSE!'
But Harry was already ripping open the envelope and pulling out the letter inside, hisheart pounding somewhere in the region of his Adam's apple.
Dear Mr Potter,We have received intelligence that you performed the Patronus Charm at twenty-threeminutes past nine this evening in a Muggle-inhabited area and in the presence of aMuggle.
The severity of this breach of the Decree for the Reasonable Restriction of UnderageSorcery has resulted in your expulsion30 HARRY POTTERfrom Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry. Ministry representatives will becalling at your place of residence shortly to destroy your wand.
As you have already received an official warning for a previous offence under Section 13of the International Confederation of Warlocks' Statute of Secrecy, we regret to informyou that your presence is required at a disciplinary hearing at the Ministry of Magic at 9a.m. on the twelfth of August.
Hoping you are well,Yours sincerely,Mafalda Hopkirk
Improper Use of Magic OfficeMinistry of MagicHarry read the letter through twice. He was only vaguely aware of Uncle Vernon andAunt Petunia talking. Inside his head, all was icy and numb. One fact had penetrated hisconsciousness like a paralysing dart. He was expelled from Hogwarts. It was all over. Hewas never going back.
He looked up at the Dursleys. Uncle Vernon was purple-faced, shouting, his fists stillraised; Aunt Petunia had her arms around Dudley, who was retching again.
Harry's temporarily stupefied brain seemed to reawaken. Ministry representatives will becalling at your place of residence shortly to destroy your wand. There was only one thingfor it. He would have to run - now. Where he was going to go, Harry didn't know, but hewas certain of one thing: at Hogwarts or outside it, he needed his wand. In an almostdreamlike state, he pulled his wand out and turned to leave the kitchen.

'Where d'you think you're going?' yelled Uncle Vernon. When Harry didn't reply, hepounded across the kitchen to block the doorway into the hall. 'I haven't finished withyou, boy!'
'Get out of the way,' said Harry quietly.
'You're going to stay here and explain how my son -'
'If you don't get out of the way I'm going to jinx you,' said Harry, raising the wand.
'You can't pull that one on me!' snarled Uncle Vernon. 'I knowA PECK OF OWLS 31you're not allowed to use it outside that madhouse you call a school!'
The madhouse has chucked me out,' said Harry. 'So I can do whatever I like. You've gotthree seconds. One - two -'
A resounding CRACK filled the kitchen. Aunt Petunia screamed, Uncle Vernon yelledand ducked, but for the third time that night Harry was searching for the source of adisturbance he had not made. He spotted it at once: a dazed and ruffled-looking barn owlwas sitting outside on the kitchen sill, having just collided with the closed window.
Ignoring Uncle Vernon's anguished yell of'OWLS!' Harry crossed the room at a run andwrenched the window open. The owl stuck out its leg, to which a small roll of parchmentwas tied, shook its feathers, and took off the moment Harry had taken the letter. Hands shaking, Harry unfurled the second message, which was written very hastily and blotchilyin black ink.
Harry -
Dumbledore's just arrived at the Ministry and he's trying to sort it all out. DO NOTLEAVE YOUR AUNT AND UNCLE'S HOUSE. DO NOT DO ANY MORE MAGIC.
DO NOT SURRENDER YOUR WAND. Arthur WeasleyDumbledore was trying to sort it all out ... what did that mean? How much power didDumbledore have to override the Ministry of Magic? Was there a chance that he might beallowed back to Hogwarts, then? A small shoot of hope burgeoned in Harry's chest,almost immediately strangled by panic - how was he supposed to refuse to surrender hiswand without doing magic? He'd have to duel with the Ministry representatives, and if hedid that, he'd be lucky to escape Azkaban, let alone expulsion.
His mind was racing ... he could run for it and risk being captured by the Ministry, or stayput and wait for them to find him here. He was much more tempted by the former course,but he knew Mr Weasley had his best interests at heart ... and after all, Dumbledore hadsorted out much worse than this before.
32 HARRY POTTER'Right,' Harry said, 'I've changed my mind, I'm staying.'
He flung himself down at the kitchen table and faced Dudley and Aunt Petunia. TheDursleys appeared taken aback at his abrupt change of mind. Aunt Petunia glanceddespairingly at Uncle Vernon. The vein in his purple temple was throbbing worse thanever.
'Who are all these ruddy owls from?' he growled.
The first one was from the Ministry of Magic, expelling me,' said Harry calmly. He wasstraining his ears to catch any noises outside, in case the Ministry representatives wereapproaching, and it was easier and quieter to answer Uncle Vernon's questions than tohave him start raging and bellowing. The second one was from my friend Ron's dad, whoworks at the Ministry'
'Ministry of Magic?' bellowed Uncle Vernon. 'People like you in government? Oh, thisexplains everything, everything, no wonder the country's going to the dogs.'
When Harry did not respond, Uncle Vernon glared at him, then spat out, 'And why haveyou been expelled?'
'Because I did magic.'

'AHA!' roared Uncle Vernon, slamming his fist down on top of the fridge, which sprangopen; several of Dudley's low-fat snacks toppled out and burst on the floor. 'So you admitit! What did you do to Dudley?'

'Nothing,' said Harry, slightly less calmly. That wasn't me -'

'Was,' muttered Dudley unexpectedly, and Uncle Vernon and Aunt Petunia instantlymade flapping gestures at Harry to quieten him while they both bent low over Dudley.

'Go on, son,' said Uncle Vernon, 'what did he do?'

Tell us, darling,' whispered Aunt Petunia.

'Pointed his wand at me,' Dudley mumbled.

'Yeah, I did, but I didn't use -' Harry began angrily, but —'SHUT UP!' roared Uncle Vernon and Aunt Petunia in unison.

'Go on, son,' repeated Uncle Vernon, moustache blowing about furiously.

'All went dark,' Dudley said hoarsely, shuddering. 'Everything dark. And then I h-heard ...

things. Inside m-my head.'

Uncle Vernon and Aunt Petunia exchanged looks of utter horror. If their least favouritething in the world was magic - closely followedA PECK OF OWLS 33by neighbours who cheated more than they did on the hosepipe ban - people who heardvoices were definitely in the bottom ten. They obviously thought Dudley was losing hismind.

'What sort of things did you hear, Popkin?' breathed Aunt Petunia, very white-faced andwith tears in her eyes.

But Dudley seemed incapable of saying. He shuddered again and shook his large blondhead, and despite the sense of numb dread that had settled on Harry since the arrival ofthe first owl, he felt a certain curiosity. Dementors caused a person to relive the worstmoments of their life. What would spoiled, pampered, bullying Dudley have been forcedto hear?

'How come you fell over, son?' said Uncle Vernon, in an unnaturally quiet voice, the kindof voice he might adopt at the bedside of a very ill person.

T-tripped,' said Dudley shakily. 'And then -'

He gestured at his massive chest. Harry understood. Dudley was remembering theclammy cold that filled the lungs as hope and happiness were sucked out of you.

'Horrible,' croaked Dudley. 'Cold. Really cold.'

'OK,' said Uncle Vernon, in a voice of forced calm, while Aunt Petunia laid an anxioushand on Dudley's forehead to feel his temperature. 'What happened then, Dudders?'

'Felt ... felt ... felt ... as if ... as if ...'

'As if you'd never be happy again,' Harry supplied dully.

'Yes,' Dudley whispered, still trembling.

'So!' said Uncle Vernon, voice restored to full and considerable volume as he straightenedup. 'You put some crackpot spell on my son so he'd hear voices and believe he was - wasdoomed to misery, or something, did you?'

'How many times do I have to tell you?' said Harry, temper and voice both rising. 'Itwasn't me! It was a couple of Dementors!'

'A couple of - what's this codswallop?'

'De - men - tors,' said Harry slowly and clearly. Two of them.'

'And what the ruddy hell are Dementors?'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

They guard the wizard prison, Azkaban,' said Aunt Petunia.
Two seconds of ringing silence followed these words before Aunt Petunia clapped herhand over her mouth as though she34 HARRY POTTERhad let slip a disgusting swear word. Uncle Vernon was goggling at her. Harry's brainreeled. Mrs Figg was one thing - but Aunt Petunia!
'How d'you know that?' he asked her, astonished.
Aunt Petunia looked quite appalled with herself. She glanced at Uncle Vernon in fearfulapology, then lowered her hand slightly to reveal her horsy teeth.
'I heard - that awful boy - telling her about them - years ago,' she said jerkily.
'If you mean my mum and dad, why don't you use their names?' said Harry loudly, butAunt Petunia ignored him. She seemed horribly flustered.

Harry was stunned. Except for one outburst years ago, in the course of which AuntPetunia had screamed that Harry's mother had been a freak, he had never heard hermention her sister. He was astounded that she had remembered this scrap of informationabout the magical world for so long, when she usually put all her energies into pretendingit didn't exist.
Uncle Vernon opened his mouth, closed it again, opened it once more, shut it, then,apparently struggling to remember how to talk, opened it for a third time and croaked, 'So- so - they - er - they - er - they actually exist, do they - er - Dementy-whatsits?'
Aunt Petunia nodded.
Uncle Vernon looked from Aunt Petunia to Dudley to Harry as if hoping somebody wasgoing to shout 'April Fool!' When nobody did, he opened his mouth yet again, but wasspared the struggle to find more words by the arrival of the third owl of the evening. Itzoomed through the still-open window like a feathery cannon-ball and landed with aclatter on the kitchen table, causing all three of the Dursleys to jump with fright. Harrytore a second official-looking envelope from the owl's beak and ripped it open as the owlswooped back out into the night.
'Enough - effing - owls,' muttered Uncle Vernon distractedly, stomping over to thewindow and slamming it shut again.
Dear Mr Potter,Further to our letter of approximately twenty-two minutes ago, theA PECK OF OWLS 35Ministry of Magic has revised its decision to destroy your wand forthwith. You mayretain your wand until your disciplinary hearing on the twelfth of August, at which timean official decision will be taken.
Following discussions with the Headmaster ofHogwarts School of Witchcraft andWizardry, the Ministry has agreed that the question of your expulsion will also bedecided at that time. You should therefore consider yourself suspended from schoolpending further enquiries.
With best wishes,Yours sincerely,Mafalda HopkirkImproper Use of Magic Office
Ministry of MagicHarry read this letter through three times in quick succession. The miserable knot in hischest loosened slightly with the relief of knowing he was not yet definitely expelled,though his fears were by no means banished. Everything seemed to hang on this hearingon the twelfth of August.
'Well?' said Uncle Vernon, recalling Harry to his surroundings. 'What now? Have theysentenced you to anything? Do your lot have the death penalty?' he added as a hopefulafterthought.
'I've got to go to a hearing,' said Harry.
'And they'll sentence you there?'
'I suppose so.'
'I won't give up hope, then,' said Uncle Vernon nastily.
'Well, if that's all,' said Harry, getting to his feet. He was desperate to be alone, to think,perhaps to send a letter to Ron, Hermione or Sirius.

'NO, IT RUDDY WELL IS NOT ALL!' bellowed Uncle Vernon. 'SIT BACK DOWN!'
'What now?' said Harry impatiently.
'DUDLEY!' roared Uncle Vernon. T want to know exactly what happened to my son!'
'FINE!' yelled Harry, and in his temper, red and gold sparks shot out of the end of hiswand, still clutched in his hand. All three Dursleys flinched, looking terrified.
36 HARRY POTTER'Dudley and I were in the alleyway between Magnolia Crescent and Wisteria Walk,' saidHarry, speaking fast, fighting to control his temper. 'Dudley thought he'd be smart withme, I pulled out my wand but didn't use it. Then two Dementors turned up -'
'But what ARE Dementoids?' asked Uncle Vernon furiously. 'What do they DO?'
'I told you - they suck all the happiness out of you,' said Harry, 'and if they get thechance, they kiss you -'
'Kiss you?' said Uncle Vernon, his eyes popping slightly. 'Kiss you?'
'It's what they call it when they suck the soul out of your mouth.'

Aunt Petunia uttered a soft scream.
'His soul? They didn't take - he's still got his -'
She seized Dudley by the shoulders and shook him, as though testing to see whether shecould hear his soul rattling around inside him.
'Of course they didn't get his soul, you'd know if they had,' said Harry, exasperated.
'Fought 'em off, did you, son?' said Uncle Vernon loudly with the appearance of a manstruggling to bring the conversation back on to a plane he understood. 'Gave 'em the oldone-two, did you?'
'You can't give a Dementor the aid one-two,' said Harry through clenched teeth.
'Why's he all right, then?' blustered Uncle Vernon. 'Why isn't he all empty, then?'
'Because I used the Patronus -' WHOOSH. With a clattering, a whirring of wings and a soft fall of dust, a fourth owlcame shooting out of the kitchen fireplace.
'FOR GOD'S SAKE!' roared Uncle Vernon, pulling great clumps of hair out of hismoustache, something he hadn't been driven to do in a long time. 'I WILL NOT HAVEOWLS HERE, I WILL NOT TOLERATE THIS, I TELL YOU!'
But Harry was already pulling a roll of parchment from the owl's leg. He was soconvinced that this letter had to be from Dumbledore, explaining everything - theDementors, Mrs Figg, what the Ministry was up to, how he, Dumbledore, intended to sorteverything out - that for the first time in his life he was disappointed to see Sirius'sA PECK OF OWLS 37handwriting. Ignoring Uncle Vernon's ongoing rant about owls, and narrowing his eyesagainst a second cloud of dust as the most recent owl took off back up the chimney,Harry read Sirius's message.
Arthur has just told us what's happened. Don't leave the house again, whatever you do.
Harry found this such an inadequate response to everything that had happened tonightthat he turned the piece of parchment over, looking for the rest of the letter, but there wasnothing else.
And now his temper was rising again. Wasn't anybody going to say 'well done' forfighting off two Dementors single-handed? Both Mr Weasley and Sirius were acting as though he'd misbehaved, and were saving their tellings-off until they could ascertain howmuch damage had been done.
'... a peck, I mean, pack of owls shooting in and out of my house. I won't have it, boy, Iwon't -'

'I can't stop the owls coming,' Harry snapped, crushing Sirius's letter in his fist.
'1 want the truth about what happened tonight!' barked Uncle Vernon. 'If it wasDemenders who hurt Dudley, how come you've been expelled? You did you-know-what,you've admitted it!'
Harry took a deep, steadying breath. His head was beginning to ache again. He wantedmore than anything to get out of the kitchen, and away from the Dursleys.
'I did the Patronus Charm to get rid of the Dementors,' he said, forcing himself to remaincalm. 'It's the only thing that works against them.'
'But what were Dementoids doing in Little Whinging?' said Uncle Vernon in an outragedtone.
'Couldn't tell you,' said Harry wearily. 'No idea.'
His head was pounding in the glare of the strip-lighting now. His anger was ebbing away.
He felt drained, exhausted. The Dursleys were all staring at him.
'It's you,' said Uncle Vernon forcefully. 'It's got something to do with you, boy, I know it.
Why else would they turn up here? Why else would they be down that alleyway? You'vegot to be the only - the only -' Evidently, he couldn't bring himself to say the word'wizard'. The only you-know-what for miles.'
38 HARRY POTTER'I don't know why they were here.'
But at Uncle Vernon's words, Harry's exhausted brain had ground back into action. Whyhad the Dementors come to Little Whinging? How could it be coincidence that they hadarrived in the alleyway where Harry was? Had they been sent? Had the Ministry ofMagic lost control of the Dementors? Had they deserted Azkaban and joined Voldemort,as Dumbledore had predicted they would?
These Demembers guard some weirdo prison?' asked Uncle Vernon, lumbering along inthe wake of Harry's train of thought.
'Yes,' said Harry.

If only his head would stop hurting, if only he could just leave the kitchen and get to hisdark bedroom and think ...
'Oho! They were coming to arrest you!' said Uncle Vernon, with the triumphant air of aman reaching an unassailable conclusion. That's it, isn't it, boy? You're on the run fromthe law!'
'Of course I'm not,' said Harry, shaking his head as though to scare off a fly, his mindracing now.
Then why —?'
'He must have sent them,' said Harry quietly, more to himself than to Uncle Vernon.
'What's that? Who must have sent them?'
'Lord Voldemort,' said Harry.
He registered dimly how strange it was that the Dursleys, who flinched, winced andsquawked if they heard words like 'wizard', 'magic' or 'wand', could hear the name of themost evil wizard of all time without the slightest tremor.
'Lord - hang on,' said Uncle Vernon, his face screwed up, a look of dawningcomprehension coming into his piggy eyes. 'I've heard that name ... that was the one who-'
'Murdered my parents, yes,' Harry said dully.
'But he's gone,' said Uncle Vernon impatiently, without the slightest sign that the murderof Harry's parents might be a painful topic. That giant bloke said so. He's gone.'
'He's back,' said Harry heavily.
It felt very strange to be standing here in Aunt Petunia's surgically clean kitchen, besidethe top-of-the-range fridge and theA PECK OF OWLS 39wide-screen television, talking calmly of Lord

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Voldemort to Uncle Vernon. The arrival ofthe Dementors in Little Whinging seemed to have breached the great, invisible wall thatdivided the relentlessly non-magical world of Privet Drive and the world beyond. Harry'stwo lives had somehow become fused and everything had been turned upside-down; theDursleys were asking for details about the magical world, and Mrs Figg knew AlbusDumbledore; Dementors were soaring around Little Whinging, and he might never returnto Hogwarts. Harrys head throbbed more painfully.

'Back?' whispered Aunt Petunia.
She was looking at Harry as she had never looked at him before. And all of a sudden, forthe very first time in his life, Harry fully appreciated that Aunt Petunia was his mother'ssister. He could not have said why this hit him so very powerfully at this moment. All heknew was that he was not the only person in the room who had an inkling of what LordVoldemort being back might mean. Aunt Petunia had never in her life looked at him likethat before. Her large, pale eyes (so unlike her sisters) were not narrowed in dislike oranger, they were wide and fearful. The furious pretence that Aunt Petunia had maintainedall Harry's life - that there was no magic and no world other than the world she inhabitedwith Uncle Vernon - seemed to have fallen away.
'Yes,' Harry said, talking directly to Aunt Petunia now. 'He came back a month ago. I sawhim.'
Her hands found Dudley's massive leather-clad shoulders and clutched them.
'Hang on,' said Uncle Vernon, looking from his wife to Harry and back again, apparentlydazed and confused by the unprecedented understanding that seemed to have sprung upbetween them. 'Hang on. This Lord Voldything's back, you say.'
'Yes.'
The one who murdered your parents.'
'Yes.'
'And now he's sending Dismembers after you?'
'Looks like it,' said Harry.
'I see,' said Uncle Vernon, looking from his white-faced wife to Harry and hitching up histrousers. He seemed to be swelling, his40 HARRY POTTERgreat purple face stretching before Harry's eyes. 'Well, that settles it,' he said, his shirtfront straining as he inflated himself, 'you can get out of this house, boy!'
'What?' said Harry.
'You heard me - OUT!' Uncle Vernon bellowed, and even Aunt Petunia and Dudleyjumped. 'OUT! OUT! I should've done this years ago! Owls treating the place like a resthome, puddings exploding, half the lounge destroyed, Dudley's tail, Marge bobbingaround on the ceiling and that flying Ford Anglia - OUT! OUT! You've had it! You'rehistory! You're not staying here if some loony's after you, you're not endangering my wife and son, you're not bringing trouble down on us. If you're going the same way asyour useless parents, I've had it! OUT!'
Harry stood rooted to the spot. The letters from the Ministry, Mr Weasley and Sirius wereall crushed in his left hand. Don't leave the house again, whatever you do. DO NOTLEAVE YOUR AUNT AND UNCLE'S HOUSE.
'You heard me!' said Uncle Vernon, bending forwards now, his massive purple facecoming so close to Harry's, he actually felt flecks of spit hit his face. 'Get going! Youwere all keen to leave half an hour ago! I'm right behind you! Get out and never darkenour doorstep again! Why we ever kept you in the first place, I don't know, Marge wasright, it should have been the orphanage. We were too damn soft for our own good,thought we could squash it out of you, thought we could turn you normal, but you'vebeen rotten from the beginning and I've had enough - owls!'

The fifth owl zoomed down the chimney so fast it actually hit the floor before zoominginto the air again with a loud screech. Harry raised his hand to seize the letter, which wasin a scarlet envelope, but it soared straight over his head, flying directly at Aunt Petunia,who let out a scream and ducked, her arms over her face. The owl dropped the redenvelope on her head, turned, and flew straight back up the chimney.
Harry darted forwards to pick up the letter, but Aunt Petunia beat him to it.
'You can open it if you like,' said Harry, 'but I'll hear what it says anyway. That's aHowler.'
A PECK OF OWLS 41'Let go of it, Petunia!' roared Uncle Vernon. 'Don't touch it, it could be dangerous!'
'It's addressed to me,' said Aunt Petunia in a shaking voice. 'It's addressed to me, Vernon,look! Mrs Petunia Dursley, The Kitchen, Number Four, Privet Drive -
She caught her breath, horrified. The red envelope had begun to smoke.
'Open it!' Harry urged her. 'Get it over with! It'll happen anyway.'
'No.'
Aunt Petunia's hand was trembling. She looked wildly around the kitchen as thoughlooking for an escape route, but too late -the envelope burst into flames. Aunt Petuniascreamed and dropped it.
An awful voice filled the kitchen, echoing in the confined space, issuing from the burningletter on the table.

'Remember my last, Petunia.'
Aunt Petunia looked as though she might faint. She sank into the chair beside Dudley, herface in her hands. The remains of the envelope smouldered into ash in the silence.
'What is this?' Uncle Vernon said hoarsely. 'What - I don't -Petunia?'
Aunt Petunia said nothing. Dudley was staring stupidly at his mother, his mouth hangingopen. The silence spiralled horribly. Harry was watching his aunt, utterly bewildered, hishead throbbing fit to burst.
'Petunia, dear?' said Uncle Vernon timidly. 'P-Petunia?'
She raised her head. She was still trembling. She swallowed.
The boy - the boy will have to stay, Vernon,' she said weakly.
'W-what?'
'He stays,' she said. She was not looking at Harry. She got to her feet again.
'He ... but Petunia ...'
'If we throw him out, the neighbours will talk,' she said. She was rapidly regaining herusual brisk, snappish manner, though she was still very pale. They'll ask awkwardquestions, they'll want to know where he's gone. We'll have to keep him.'
Uncle Vernon was deflating like an old tyre.
42 HARRY POTTER'But Petunia, dear —'
Aunt Petunia ignored him. She turned to Harry. 'You're to stay in your room,' she said.
'You're not to leave the house. Now get to bed.' Harry didn't move. 'Who was that Howlerfrom?' 'Don't ask questions,' Aunt Petunia snapped. 'Are you in touch with wizards?' 'Itold you to get to bed!' 'What did it mean? Remember the last what?' 'Go to bed!' 'Howcome -?' 'YOU HEARD YOUR AUNT, NOW GO UP TO BED!'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

— CHAPTER THREE —

The Advance GuardI've just been attacked by Dementors and I might be expelled from Hogwarts. I want toknow what's going on and when I'm going to get out of here.

Harry copied these words on to three separate pieces of parchment the moment hereached the desk in his dark bedroom. He addressed the first to Sirius, the second to Ronand the third to Hermione. His owl, Hedwig, was off hunting; her cage stood empty onthe desk. Harry paced the bedroom waiting for her to come back, his head pounding, hisbrain too busy for sleep even though his eyes stung and itched with tiredness. His backached from hauling Dudley home, and the two lumps on his head where the window andDudley had hit him were throbbing painfully.

Up and down he paced, consumed with anger and frustration, grinding his teeth andclenching his fists, casting angry looks out at the empty, star-strewn sky every time hepassed the window. Dementors sent to get him, Mrs Figg and Mundungus Fletcher tailinghim in secret, then suspension from Hogwarts and a hearing at the Ministry of Magic - and still no one was telling him what was going on.

And what, what, had that Howler been about? Whose voice had echoed so horribly, somenacingly, through the kitchen?

Why was he still trapped here without information? Why was everyone treating him likesome naughty kid? Don't do any more "logic, stay in the house ...

He kicked his school trunk as he passed it, but far from relieving his anger he felt worse,as he now had a sharp pain in his toe to deal with in addition to the pain in the rest of hisbody.

42HARRY POTTER'But Petunia, dear -'

Aunt Petunia ignored him. She turned to Harry.

'You're to stay in your room,' she said. 'You're not to leave thehouse. Now get to bed.'

Harry didn't move.

'Who was that Howler from?'

'Don't ask questions,' Aunt Petunia snapped.

'Are you in touch with wizards?'

'I told you to get to bed!'

'What did it mean? Remember the last what?'

'Go to bed!'

'How come -?'

'YOU HEARD YOUR AUNT, NOW GO UP TO BED!'

The Advance GuardI've just been attacked by Dementors and I might be expelled from Hogwarts. I want to knowwhat's going on and when I'm going to get out of here.

Harry copied these words on to three separate pieces of parchment the moment he reached thedesk in his dark bedroom. He addressed the first to Sirius, the second to Ron and the third toHermione. His owl, Hedwig, was off hunting; her cage stood empty on the desk. Harry pacedthe bedroom waiting for her to come back, his head pounding, his brain too busy for sleep eventhough his eyes stung and itched with tiredness. His back ached from hauling Dudley home, andthe two lumps on his head where the window and Dudley had hit him were throbbing painfully.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Up and down he paced, consumed with anger and frustration, grinding his teeth and clenchinghis fists, casting angry looks out at the empty, star-strewn sky every time he passed the window.
Dementors sent to get him, Mrs Figg and Mundungus Fletcher tailing him in secret, thensuspension from Hogwarts and a hearing at the Ministry of Magic - and still no one was tellinghim what was going on.
And what, what, had that Howler been about? Whose voice had echoed so horribly, somenacingly, through the kitchen?
Why was he still trapped here without information? Why was everyone treating him like somenaughty kid? Don't do any more roagic, stay in the house ...
He kicked his school trunk as he passed it, but far from relieving his anger he felt worse, as henow had a sharp pain in his toe to deal with in addition to the pain in the rest of his body.

44 HARRY POTTERJust as he limped past the window, Hedwig soared through it with a soft rustle of wings like asmall ghost.
'About time!' Harry snarled, as she landed lightly on top of her cage. 'You can put that down,I've got work for you!'
Hedwig's large, round, amber eyes gazed at him reproachfully over the dead frog clamped inher beak.
'Come here,' said Harry picking up the three small rolls of parchment and a leather thong andtying the scrolls to her scaly leg. 'Take these straight to Sirius, Ron and Hermione and don'tcome back here without good long replies. Keep pecking them till they've written decentlengthanswers if you've got to. Understand?'
Hedwig gave a muffled hooting noise, her beak still full of frog.
'Get going, then,' said Harry.
She took off immediately. The moment she'd gone, Harry threw himself down on his bedwithout undressing and stared at the dark ceiling. In addition to every other miserable feeling,he now felt guilty that he'd been irritable with Hedwig; she was the only friend he had atnumber four, Privet Drive. But he'd make it up to her when she came back with the answersfrom Sirius, Ron and Hermione.
They were bound to write back quickly; they couldn't possibly ignore a Dementor attack. He'dprobably wake up tomorrow to three fat letters full of sympathy and plans for his immediateremoval to The Burrow. And with that comforting idea, sleep rolled over him, stifling allfurther thought.
*But Hedwig didn't return next morning. Harry spent the day in his bedroom, leaving it only togo to the bathroom. Three times that day Aunt Petunia shoved food into his room through thecat-flap Uncle Vernon had installed three summers ago. Every time Harry heard herapproaching he tried to question her about the Howler, but he might as well have interrogatedthe doorknob for all the answers he got. Otherwise, the Dursleys kept well clear of hisbedroom. Harry couldn't see the point of forcing his company on them; another row wouldachieve nothing except perhaps make him so angry he'd perform more illegal magic.
So it went on for three whole days. Harry was alternately filled
THE ADVANCE GUARD 45with restless energy that made him unable to settle to anything, during which time he paced hisbedroom, furious at the whole lot of them for leaving him to stew in this mess; and with alethargy so complete that he could lie on his bed for an hour at a time, staring dazedly intospace, aching with dread at the thought of the Ministry hearing.
What if they ruled against him? What if he was expelled and his wand was snapped in half?
What would he do, where would he go? He could not return to living full-time with theDursleys, not now he knew the other world, the one to which he really belonged. Might he beable to move into Sirius's house, as Sirius had suggested a year ago, before he had been forcedto flee from the Ministry? Would Harry be allowed to live there alone, given that he was stillunderage? Or would the matter of where he went next be decided for him? Had his breach ofthe International Statute of Secrecy been severe enough to land him in a cell in Azkaban?

Whenever this thought occurred, Harry invariably slid off his bed and began pacing again.
On the fourth night after Hedwig's departure Harry was lying in one of his apathetic phases,staring at the ceiling, his exhausted mind quite blank, when his uncle entered his bedroom.
Harry looked slowly around at him. Uncle Vernon was wearing his best suit and an expressionof enormous smugness.
'We're going out,' he said.
'Sorry?'
'We - that is to say, your aunt, Dudley and I - are going out.'
'Fine,' said Harry dully, looking back at the ceiling.
'You are not to leave your bedroom while we are away.'
'OK.'
'You are not to touch the television, the stereo, or any of our possessions.'
'Right.'
"You are not to steal food from the fridge.'
'OK.'
'I am going to lock your door.'
'You do that.'
Uncle Vernon glared at Harry, clearly suspicious of this lack of 46 HARRY POTTERargument, then stomped out of the room and closed the door behind him. Harry heard the keyturn in the lock and Uncle Vernon's footsteps walking heavily down the stairs. A few minuteslater he heard the slamming of car doors, the rumble of an engine, and the unmistakeablesound of the car sweeping out of the drive.
Harry had no particular feeling about the Dursleys leaving. It made no difference to himwhether they were in the house or not. He could not even summon the energy to get up andturn on his bedroom light. The room grew steadily darker around him as he lay listening to thenight sounds through the window he kept open all the time, waiting for the blessed momentwhen Hedwig returned.
The empty house creaked around him. The pipes gurgled. Harry lay there in a kind of stupor,thinking of nothing, suspended in misery.
Then, quite distinctly, he heard a crash in the kitchen below.
He sat bolt upright, listening intently. The Dursleys couldn't be back, it was much too soon,and in any case he hadn't heard their car.
There was silence for a few seconds, then voices.
Burglars, he thought, sliding off the bed on to his feet - but a split second later it occurred tohim that burglars would keep their voices down, and whoever was moving around in thekitchen was certainly not troubling to do so.
He snatched up his wand from the bedside table and stood facing his bedroom door, listeningwith all his might. Next moment, he jumped as the lock gave a loud click and his door swungopen.
Harry stood motionless, staring through the open doorway at the dark upstairs landing,straining his ears for further sounds, but none came. He hesitated for a moment, then movedswiftly and silently out of his room to the head of the stairs.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

His heart shot upwards into his throat. There were people standing in the shadowy hall below,silhouetted against the streetlight glowing through the glass door; eight or nine of them, all, asfar as he could see, looking up at him.

'Lower your wand, boy, before you take someone's eye out,' said a low, growling voice.

48 HARRY POTTERMad-Eye Moody, who had long grizzled grey hair and a large chunk missing from his nose,was squinting suspiciously at Harry through his mismatched eyes. One eye was small, darkand beady, the other large, round and electric blue - the magical eye that could see throughwalls, doors and the back of Moody's own head.

'Are you quite sure it's him, Lupin?' he growled. 'It'd be a nice lookout if we bring back someDeath Eater impersonating him. We ought to ask him something only the real Potter wouldknow. Unless anyone brought any Veritaserum?'

'Harry, what form does your Patronus take?' Lupin asked.

'A stag,' said Harry nervously.

That's him, Mad-Eye,' said Lupin.

Very conscious of everybody still staring at him, Harry descended the stairs, stowing his wandin the back pocket of his jeans as he came.

'Don't put your wand there, boy!' roared Moody. 'What if it ignited? Better wizards than youhave lost buttocks, you know!'

'Who d'you know who's lost a buttock?' the violet-haired woman asked Mad-Eye interestedly.

'Never you mind, you just keep your wand out of your back pocket!' growled Mad-Eye.

'Elementary wand-safety, nobody bothers about it any more.' He stumped off towards thekitchen. 'And I saw that,' he added irritably, as the woman rolled her eyes towards the ceiling.

Lupin held out his hand and shook Harry's.

'How are you?' he asked, looking closely at Harry.

'F-fineHarry could hardly believe this was real. Four weeks with nothing, not the tiniest hint of a planto remove him from Privet Drive, and suddenly a whole bunch of wizards was standing matteroffactly in the house as though this was a long-standing arrangement. He glanced at thepeople surrounding Lupin; they were still gazing avidly at him. He felt very conscious of thefact that he had not combed his hair for four days.

'I'm - you're really lucky the Dursleys are out ..." he mumbled.

'Lucky, ha!' said the violet-haired woman. 'It was me who lured them out of the way. Sent aletter by Muggle post telling them

THE ADVANCE GUARD 49they'd been short-listed for the All-England Best Kept Suburban Lawn Competition. They'reheading off to the prize-giving right now ... or they think they are.'

Harry had a fleeting vision of Uncle Vernon's face when he realised there was no All-EnglandBest Kept Suburban Lawn Competition.

'We are leaving, aren't we?' he asked. 'Soon?'

'Almost at once,' said Lupin, 'we're just waiting for the all-clear.'

'Where are we going? The Burrow?' Harry asked hopefully.

'Not The Burrow, no,' said Lupin, motioning Harry towards the kitchen; the little knot ofwizards followed, all still eyeing Harry curiously. Too risky. We've set up Headquarterssomewhere un-detectable. It's taken a while ...'

Mad-Eye Moody was now sitting at the kitchen table swigging from a hip flask, his magical eyespinning in all directions, taking in the Dursleys' many labour-saving appliances.
This is Alastor Moody, Harry' Lupin continued, pointing towards Moody.
'Yeah, I know,' said Harry uncomfortably. It felt odd to be introduced to somebody he'd thoughthe'd known for a year.
'And this is Nymphadora -'
'Don't call me Nymphadora, Remus,' said the young witch with a shudder, 'it's Tonks.'
'Nymphadora Tonks, who prefers to be known by her surname only' finished Lupin.
'So would you if your fool of a mother had called you Nymphadora,1 muttered Tonks.
'And this is Kingsley Shacklebolt.' He indicated the tall black wizard, who bowed. 'ElphiasDoge.' The wheezy-voiced wizard nodded. 'Dedalus Diggle —'
'We've met before,' squeaked the excitable Diggle, dropping his violet-coloured top hat.
'Emmeline Vance.' A stately-looking witch in an emerald green shawl inclined her head.
'Sturgis Podmore.' A square-jawed wizard with thick straw-coloured hair winked. 'And HestiaJones.' A pink-cheeked, black-haired witch waved from next to the toaster.
Harry inclined his head awkwardly at each of them as they were introduced. He wished theywould look at something other than 50 HARRY POTTERhim; it was as though he had suddenly been ushered on-stage. Healso wondered why so many of them were there.
'A surprising number of people volunteered to come and get you,' said Lupin, as though he hadread Harry's mind; the corners of his mouth twitched slightly.
'Yeah, well, the more the better,' said Moody darkly. 'We're your guard, Potter.'
'We're just waiting for the signal to tell us it's safe to set off,' said Lupin, glancing out of thekitchen window. 'We've got about fifteen minutes.'
'Very clean, aren't they, these Muggles?' said the witch called Tonks, who was looking aroundthe kitchen with great interest. 'My dad's Muggle-born and he's a right old slob. I suppose itvaries, just as it does with wizards?'
'Er - yeah,' said Harry. 'Look -' he turned back to Lupin, 'what's going on, I haven't heardanything from anyone, what's Vol—?'
Several of the witches and wizards made odd hissing noises; Dedalus Diggle dropped his hatagain and Moody growled, 'Shut up!'
'What?' said Harry.
'We're not discussing anything here, it's too risky,' said Moody, .
turning his normal eye on Harry. His magical eye remained focusedon the ceiling. 'Damn it,' he added angrily, putting a hand up tothe magical eye, 'it keeps getting stuck — ever since that scum woreit.'
And with a nasty squelching sound much like a plunger being pulled from a sink, he poppedout his eye.
'Mad-Eye, you do know that's disgusting, don't you?' said Tonks conversationally.
'Get me a glass of water, would you, Harry,' requested Moody.
Harry crossed to the dishwasher, took out a clean glass and filled it with water at the sink, stillwatched eagerly by the band of wizards. Their relentless staring was starting to annoy him.
'Cheers,' said Moody, when Harry handed him the glass. He dropped the magical eyeball intothe water and prodded it up and down; the eye whizzed around, staring at them all in turn. Twant three hundred and sixty degrees visibility on the return journey.'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'How're we getting - wherever we're going?' Harry asked.

52 HARRY POTTERdirections. 'It means I can change my appearance at will,' she added, spotting Harry's puzzledexpression in the mirror behind her. 'I was born one. I got top marks in Concealment andDisguise during Auror training without any study at all, it was great.'

'You're an Auror?' said Harry, impressed. Being a Dark-wizard-catcher was the only careerhe'd ever considered after Hogwarts.

'Yeah,' said Tonks, looking proud. 'Kingsley is as well, he's a bit higher up than me, though. Ionly qualified a year ago. Nearly failed on Stealth and Tracking. I'm dead clumsy, did you hearme break that plate when we arrived downstairs?'

'Can you learn how to be a Metamorphmagus?' Harry asked her, straightening up, completelyforgetting about packing.

Tonks chuckled.

'Bet you wouldn't mind hiding that scar sometimes, eh?'

Her eyes found the lightning-shaped scar on Harrys forehead.

'No, I wouldn't mind,' Harry mumbled, turning away. He did not like people staring at his scar.

'Well, you'll have to learn the hard way, I'm afraid,' said Tonks. 'Metamorphmagi are reallyrare, they're born, not made. Most wizards need to use a wand, or potions, to change theirappearance. But we've got to get going, Harry, we're supposed to be packing,' she addedguiltily, looking around at all the mess on the floor.

'Oh - yeah,' said Harry, grabbing a few more books.

'Don't be stupid, it'll be much quicker if I - pack!' cried Tonks, waving her wand in a long,sweeping'movement over the floor.

Books, clothes, telescope and scales all soared into the air and flew pell-mell into the trunk.

'It's not very neat,' said Tonks, walking over to the trunk and looking down at the jumbleinside. 'My mum's got this knack of getting stuff to fit itself in neatly - she even gets the socksto fold themselves - but I've never mastered how she does it - it's a kind of flick -' She flickedher wand hopefully.

One of Harry's socks gave a feeble sort of wiggle and flopped back on top of the mess in thetrunk.

'Ah, well,' said Tonks, slamming the trunk's lid shut, 'at least it's all in. That could do with a bitof cleaning, too.' She pointed her wand at Hedwig's cage. 'Scourgify.' A few feathers anddroppings

THE ADVANCE GUARD 53vanished. 'Well, that's a bit better - I've never quite got the hang of these householdy sort ofspells. Right - got everything? Cauldron? Broom? Wow! - A FireboltTHer eyes widened as they fell on the broomstick in Harrys right hand. It was his pride and joy, agift from Sirius, an international-standard broomstick.

'And I'm still riding a Comet Two Sixty' said Tonks enviously. 'Ah well ... wand still in yourjeans? Both buttocks still on? OK, let's go. Locomotor trunk.'

Harry's trunk rose a few inches into the air. Holding her wand like a conductor's baton, Tonksmade the trunk hover across the room and out of the door ahead of them, Hedwig's cage in herleft hand. Harry followed her down the stairs carrying his broomstick.

Back in the kitchen Moody had replaced his eye, which was spinning so fast after its cleaning itmade Harry feel sick to look at it. Kingsley Shacklebolt and Sturgis Podmore were examiningthe microwave and Hestia Jones was laughing at a potato peeler she had come across whilerummaging in the drawers. Lupin was sealing a letter addressed to the Dursleys.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Excellent,' said Lupin, looking up as Tonks and Harry entered. We've got about a minute, Ithink. We should probably get out into the garden so we're ready. Harry, I've left a letter tellingyour aunt and uncle not to worry -'
They won't,' said Harry.
'- that you're safe -'
That'll just depress them.'
'- and you'll see them next summer.'
'Do I have to?'
Lupin smiled but made no answer.
'Come here, boy,' said Moody gruffly, beckoning Harry towards him with his wand. 'I need toDisillusion you.'
'You need to what?' said Harry nervously.
'Disillusionment Charm,' said Moody, raising his wand. 'Lupin says you've got an InvisibilityCloak, but it won't stay on while we're flying; this'll disguise you better. Here you go -'
He rapped him hard on the top of the head and Harry felt a curious sensation as though Moodyhad just smashed an egg there;

THE ADVANCE GUARD 55and felt it vibrating very slightly, as though it was as keen as he was to be up in the air oncemore.
'Second signal, let's go!' said Lupin loudly as more sparks, green this time, exploded highabove them.
Harry kicked off hard from the ground. The cool night air rushed through his hair as the neatsquare gardens of Privet Drive fell away, shrinking rapidly into a patchwork of dark greens andblacks, and every thought of the Ministry hearing was swept from his mind as though the rushof air had blown it out of his head. He felt as though his heart was going to explode withpleasure; he was flying again, flying away from Privet Drive as he'd been fantasising about allsummer, he was going home ... for a few glorious moments, all his problems seemed to recedeto nothing, insignificant in the vast, starry sky.
'Hard left, hard left, there's a Muggle looking up!' shouted Moody from behind him. Tonksswerved and Harry followed her, watching his trunk swinging wildly beneath her broom. 'Weneed more height ... give it another quarter of a mile!'
Harry's eyes watered in the chill as they soared upwards; he could see nothing below now buttiny pinpricks of light that were car headlights and streetlamps. Two of those tiny lights mightbelong to Uncle Vernon's car ... the Dursleys would be heading back to their empty house rightnow, full of rage about the nonexistent Lawn Competition ... and Harry laughed aloud at thethought, though his voice was drowned by the flapping robes of the others, the creaking of theharness holding his trunk and the cage, and the whoosh of the wind in their ears as they spedthrough the air. He had not felt this alive in a month, or this happy.
'Bearing south!' shouted Mad-Eye. Town ahead!'
They soared right to avoid passing directly over the glittering spider's web of lights below.
'Bear southeast and keep climbing, there's some low cloud ahead we can lose ourselves in!'
called Moody.
'We're not going through clouds!' shouted Tonks angrily, 'we'll get soaked, Mad-Eye!'
Harry was relieved to hear her say this; his hands were growing 56 HARRY POTTERnumb on the Firebolt's handle. He wished he had thought to put on a coat; he was starting toshiver.

They altered their course every now and then according to Mad-Eyes instructions. Harrys eyeswere screwed up against the rush of icy wind that was starting to make his ears ache; he couldremember being this cold on a broom only once before, during the Quidditch match againstHufflepuff in his third year, which had taken place in a storm. The guard around him wascircling continuously like giant birds of prey. Harry lost track of time. He wondered how longthey had been flying, it felt like an hour at least.
Turning southwest!' yelled Moody 'We want to avoid the motorway!'
Harry was now so chilled he thought longingly of the snug, dry interiors of the cars streamingalong below, then, even more longingly, of travelling by Floo powder; it might beuncomfortable to spin around in fireplaces but it was at least warm in the flames ... KingsleyShacklebolt swooped around him, bald pate and earring gleaming slightly in the moonlight ...
now Emmeline Vance was on his right, her wand out, her head turning left and right ... thenshe, too, swooped over him, to be replaced by Sturgis Podmore ...
'We ought to double back for a bit, just to make sure we're not being followed!' Moodyshouted.
'ARE YOU MAD, MAD-EYE?' Tonks screamed from the front. 'We're all frozen to ourbrooms! If we keep going off-course we're not going to get there until next week! Besides,we're nearly there now!'
Time to start the descent!' came Lupin's voice. 'Follow Tonks, Harry!'
Harry followed Tonks into a dive. They were heading for the largest collection of lights he hadyet seen, a huge, sprawling crisscrossing mass, glittering in lines and grids, interspersed withpatches of deepest black. Lower and lower they flew, until Harry could see individualheadlights and streetlamps, chimneys and television aerials. He wanted to reach the groundvery much, though he felt sure someone would have to unfreeze him from his broom.
'Here we go!' called Tonks, and a few seconds later she had landed.

THE ADVANCE GUARD 57Harry touched down right behind her and dismounted on a patch of unkempt grass in themiddle of a small square. Tonks was already unbuckling Harry's trunk. Shivering, Harry lookedaround. The grimy fronts of the surrounding houses were not welcoming; some of them hadbroken windows, glimmering dully in the light from the streetlamps, paint was peeling frommany of the doors and heaps of rubbish lay outside several sets of front steps.
'Where are we?' Harry asked, but Lupin said quietly, 'In a minute.'
Moody was rummaging in his cloak, his gnarled hands clumsy with cold.
'Got it,' he muttered, raising what looked like a silver cigarette lighter into the air and clicking it.
The nearest streetlamp went out with a pop. He clicked the unlighter again; the next lamp wentout; he kept clicking until every lamp in the square was extinguished and the only remaininglight came from curtained windows and the sickle moon overhead.
'Borrowed it from Dumbledore,' growled Moody, pocketing the Put-Outer. That'll take care ofany Muggles looking out of the window, see? Now come on, quick.'
He took Harry by the arm and led him from the patch of grass, across the road and on to thepavement; Lupin and Tonks followed, carrying Harry's trunk between them, the rest of theguard, all with their wands out, flanking them.
The muffled pounding of a stereo was coming from an upper window in the nearest house. Apungent smell of rotting rubbish came from the pile of bulging bin-bags just inside the brokengate.
'Here,' Moody muttered, thrusting a piece of parchment towards Harrys Disillusioned hand andholding his lit wand close to it, so as to illuminate the writing. 'Read quickly and memorise.'
Harry looked down at the piece of paper. The narrow handwriting was vaguely familiar. It said:

The Headquarters of the Order of the Phoenix may be found at number twelve, Grimmauld Place,London.

— CHAPTER FOUR —

Number Twelve,Grimmauld Place'What's the Order of the -?' Harry began.

'Not here, boy!' snarled Moody. 'Wait till we're inside!'

He pulled the piece of parchment out of Harry's hand and set fire to it with his wand-tip. As themessage curled into flames and floated to the ground, Harry looked around at the houses again.

They were standing outside number eleven; he looked to the left and saw number ten; to theright, however, was number thirteen.

'But where's -?'

Think about what you've just memorised,' said Lupin quietly.

Harry thought, and no sooner had he reached the part about number twelve, Grimmauld Place,than a battered door emerged out of nowhere between numbers eleven and thirteen, followedswiftly by dirty walls and grimy windows. It was as though an extra house had inflated,pushing those on either side out of its way. Harry gaped at it. The stereo in number eleventhudded on. Apparently the Muggles inside hadn't felt anything.

'Come on, hurry,' growled Moody, prodding Harry in the back.

Harry walked up the worn stone steps, staring at the newly materialised door. Its black paintwas shabby and scratched. The silver doorknocker was in the form of a twisted serpent. Therewas no keyhole or letterbox.

Lupin pulled out his wand and tapped the door once. Harry heard many loud, metallic clicksand what sounded like the clatter of a chain. The door creaked open.

'Get in quick, Harry,' Lupin whispered, 'but don't go far inside and don't touch anything.'

NUMBER TWELVE, GRIMMAULD PLACE 59Harry stepped over the threshold into the almost total darkness of the hall. He could smelldamp, dust and a sweetish, rotting smell; the place had the feeling of a derelict building. Helooked over his shoulder and saw the others filing in behind him, Lupin and Tonks carrying histrunk and Hedwig's cage. Moody was standing on the top step releasing the balls of light thePut-Outer had stolen from the streetlamps; they flew back to their bulbs and the square glowedmomentarily with orange light before Moody limped inside and closed the front door, so thatthe darkness in the hall became complete.

'Here -'

He rapped Harry hard over the head with his wand; Harry felt as though something hot wastrickling down his back this time and knew that the Disillusionment Charm must have lifted.

'Now stay still, everyone, while I give us a bit of light in here,' Moody whispered.

The others' hushed voices were giving Harry an odd feeling of foreboding; it was as thoughthey had just entered the house of a dying person. He heard a soft hissing noise and then oldfashionedgas lamps sputtered into life all along the walls, casting a flickering insubstantiallight over the peeling wallpaper and threadbare carpet of a long, gloomy hallway, where acobwebby chandelier glimmered overhead and age-blackened portraits hung crooked on thewalls. Harry heard something scuttling behind the skirting board. Both the chandelier and thecandelabra on a rickety table nearby were shaped like serpents.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

There were hurried footsteps and Rons mother, Mrs Weasley, emerged from a door at the farend of the hall. She was beaming in welcome as she hurried towards them, though Harrynoticed that she was rather thinner and paler than she had been last time he had seen her.
'Oh, Harry, it's lovely to see you!' she whispered, pulling him into a rib-cracking hug beforeholding him at arm's length and examining him critically. 'You're looking peaky; you needfeeding up, but you'll have to wait a bit for dinner, I'm afraid.'
She turned to the gang of wizards behind him and whispered urgently, 'He's just arrived, themeeting's started.'

60 HARRY POTTERThe wizards behind Harry all made noises of interest and excitement and began filing past himtowards the door through which Mrs Weasley had just come. Harry made to follow Lupin, butMrs Weasley held him back.
'No, Harry, the meetings only for members of the Order. Ron and Hermione are upstairs, youcan wait with them until the meetings over, then we'll have dinner. And keep your voice downin the hall,' she added in an urgent whisper.
'Why?'
'I don't want anything to wake up.'
'What d'you -?'
Til explain later, I've got to hurry, I'm supposed to be at the meeting - I'll just show you whereyou're sleeping.'
Pressing her finger to her lips, she led him on tiptoe past a pair of long, moth-eaten curtains,behind which Harry supposed there must be another door, and after skirting a large umbrellastand that looked as though it had been made from a severed troll's leg they started up the darkstaircase, passing a row of shrunken heads mounted on plaques on the wall. A closer lookshowed Harry that the heads belonged to house-elves. All of them had the same rather snoutlikenose.
Harry's bewilderment deepened with every step he took. What on earth were they doing in ahouse that looked as though it belonged to the Darkest of wizards?
'Mrs Weasley, why -?'
'Ron and Hermione will explain everything, dear, I've really got to dash,' Mrs Weasleywhispered distractedly. There -' they had reached the second landing, '- you're the door on theright. I'll call you when it's over.'
And she hurried off downstairs again.
Harry crossed the dingy landing, turned the bedroom doorknob, which was shaped like aserpents head, and opened the door.
He caught a brief glimpse of a gloomy high-ceilinged, twin-bedded room; then there was a loudtwittering noise, followed by an even louder shriek, and his vision was completely obscured bya large quantity of very bushy hair. Hermione had thrown herself on to him in a hug that nearlyknocked him flat, while Ron's NUMBER TWELVE, GRIMMAULD PLACE 61tiny owl, Pigwidgeon, zoomed excitedly round and round their heads.
'HARRY! Ron, he's here, Harrys here! We didn't hear you arrive! Oh, how are you? Are youall right? Have you been furious with us? I bet you have, I know our letters were useless - butwe couldn't tell you anything, Dumbledore made us swear we wouldn't, oh, we've got so muchto tell you, and you've got things to tell us -the Dementors! When we heard - and that Ministryhearing - it's just outrageous,

I've looked it all up, they can't expel you, they just can't, there'sprovision in the Decree for the Reasonable Restriction of Underage Sorcery for the use ofmagic in life-threatening situations -'
'Let him breathe, Hermione,' said Ron, grinning as he closed the door behind Harry. Heseemed to have grown several more inches during their month apart, making him taller andmore gangly looking than ever, though the long nose, bright red hair and freckles were thesame.
Still beaming, Hermione let go of Harry, but before she could say another word there was asoft whooshing sound and something white soared from the top of a dark wardrobe and landedgently on Harrys shoulder.
'Hedwig!'
The snowy owl clicked her beak and nibbled his ear affectionately as Harry stroked herfeathers.
'She's been in a right state,' said Ron. 'Pecked us half to death when she brought your lastletters, look at this -'
He showed Harry the index finger ol his right hand, which sported a half-healed but clearlydeep cut.
'Oh, yeah,' Harry said. 'Sorry about that, but I wanted answers, you know -'
'We wanted to give them to you, mate,' said Ron. 'Hermione was going spare, she kept sayingyou'd do something stupid if you were stuck all on your own without news, but Dumbledoremade us -'
'— swear not to tell me,' said Harry. 'Yeah, Hermione's already said.'
The warm glow that had flared inside him at the sight of his 62 HARRY POTTERtwo best friends was extinguished as something icy flooded the pit of his stomach. All of asudden - after yearning to see them for a solid month — he felt he would rather Ron andHermione left him alone.
There was a strained silence in which Harry stroked Hedwig automatically, not looking ateither of the others.
'He seemed to think it was best,' said Hermione rather breathlessly. 'Dumbledore, I mean.'
'Right,' said Harry. He noticed that her hands, too, bore the marks of Hedwigs beak and foundthat he was not at all sorry.
'I think he thought you were safest with the Muggles -' Ron began.
'Yeah?' said Harry, raising his eyebrows. 'Have either of you been attacked by Dementors thissummer?'
'Well, no - but that's why he's had people from the Order of the Phoenix tailing you all the time-'
Harry felt a great jolt in his guts as though he had just missed a step going downstairs. Soeveryone had known he was being followed, except him.
'Didn't work that well, though, did it?' said Harry, doing his utmost to keep his voice even.
'Had to look after myself after all, didn't I?'
'He was so angry,' said Hermione, in an almost awestruck voice. 'Dumbledore. We saw him.
When he found out Mundungus had left before his shift had ended. He was scary.'
'Well, I'm glad he left,' Harry said coldly. 'If he hadn't, I wouldn't have done magic andDumbledore would probably have left me at Privet Drive all summer.'
'Aren't you ... aren't you worried about the Ministry of Magic hearing?' said Hermione quietly.
'No,' Harry lied defiantly. He walked away from them, looking around, with Hedwig nestledcontentedly on his shoulder, but this room was not likely to raise his spirits. It was dank anddark. A blank stretch of canvas in an ornate picture frame was all that relieved the bareness ofthe peeling walls, and as Harry passed it he thought he heard someone, who was lurking out ofsight, snigger.
'So why's Dumbledore been so keen to keep me in the dark?'

NUMBER TWELVE, GRIMMAULD PLACE 63Harry asked, still trying hard to keep his voice casual. 'Did you -er - bother to ask him at all?'

He glanced up just in time to see them exchanging a look that told him he was behaving just asthey had feared he would. It did nothing to improve his temper.

'We told Dumbledore we wanted to tell you what was going on,' said Ron. 'We did, mate. Buthe's really busy now, we've only seen him twice since we came here and he didn't have muchtime, he just made us swear not to tell you important stuff when we wrote, he said the owlsmight be intercepted.'

'He could still've kept me informed if he'd wanted to,' Harry said shortly. 'You're not telling mehe doesn't know ways to send messages without owls.'

Hermione glanced at Ron and then said, '1 thought that, too. But he didn't want you to knowanything.'

'Maybe he thinks 1 can't be trusted,' said Harry, watching their expressions.

'Don't be thick,' said Ron, looking highly disconcerted.

'Or that I can't take care of myself.'

'Of course he doesn't think that!' said Hermione anxiously.

'So how come I have to stay at the Dursleys' while you two get to join in everything that'sgoing on here?' said Harry, the words tumbling over one another in a rush, his voice growinglouder with every word. 'How come you two are allowed to know everything that's going on?'

'We're not!' Ron interrupted. 'Mum won't let us near the meetings, she says we're too young -'

But before he knew it, Harry was shouting.

'SO YOU HAVEN'T BEEN IN THE MEETINGS, BIG DEAL! YOU'VE STILL BEENHERE, HAVEN'T YOU? YOU'VE STILL BEEN TOGETHER! ME, I'VE BEEN STUCK ATTHE DURSLEYS' FOR A MONTH! AND I'VE HANDLED MORE THAN YOU TWO'VEEVER MANAGED AND DUMBLEDORE KNOWS IT -WHO SAVED THEPHILOSOPHER'S STONE? WHO GOT RID OF RIDDLE? WHO SAVED BOTH YOURSKINS FROM THE DEMENTORS?'

Every bitter and resentful thought Harry had had in the past

64 HARRY POTTERmonth was pouring out of him: his frustration at the lack of news, the hurt that they had allbeen together without him, his fury at being followed and not told about it - all the feelings hewas half-ashamed of finally burst their boundaries. Hedwig took fright at the noise and soaredoff to the top of the wardrobe again; Pigwidgeon twittered in alarm and zoomed even tasteraround their heads.

'WHO HAD TO GET PAST DRAGONS AND SPHINXES AND EVERY OTHER FOULTHING LAST YEAR? WHO SAW HIM COME BACK? WHO HAD TO ESCAPE FROMHIM? ME!'

Ron was standing there with his mouth half-open, clearly stunned and at a loss for anything tosay, whilst Hermione looked on the verge of tears.

'BUT WHY SHOULD I KNOW WHAT'S GOING ON? WHY SHOULD ANYONEBOTHER TO TELL ME WHAT'S BEEN HAPPENING?'

'Harry, we wanted to tell you, we really did -' Hermione began.

'CANT'VE WANTED TO THAT MUCH, CAN YOU, OR YOU'D HAVE SENT ME ANOWL, BUT Dl/MBLEDORE MADE YOU SWEAR -

Well, he did -'

'FOUR WEEKS I'VE BEEN STUCK IN PRIVET DRIVE, NICKING PAPERS OUT OFBINS TO TRY AND FIND OUT WHAT'S BEEN GOING ON -'

We wanted to -'

'I SUPPOSE YOU'VE BEEN HAVING A REAL LAUGH, HAVEN'T YOU, ALL HOLEDUP HERE TOGETHER -'
'No, honest -'
'Harry we're really sorry!' said Hermione desperately, her eyes now sparkling with tears.
'You're absolutely right, Harry - I'd be furious if it was me!'
Harry glared at her, still breathing deeply, then turned away from them again, pacing up anddown. Hedwig hooted glumly from the top of the wardrobe. There was a long pause, brokenonly by the mournful creak of the floorboards below Harry's feet.
'What is this place, anyway?' he shot at Ron and Hermione.
'Headquarters of the Order of the Phoenix,' said Ron at once.

NUMBER TWELVE, GRIMMAULD PLACE 65'Is anyone going to bother telling me what the Order of the Phoenix -?'
'It's a secret society,' said Hermione quickly. 'Dumbledore's in charge, he founded it. It's thepeople who fought against You-Know-Who last time.'
'Who's in it?' said Harry, coming to a halt with his hands in his pockets.
'Quite a few people -'
'We've met about twenty of them,' said Ron, 'but we think there are more.'
Harry glared at them.
'Well?' he demanded, looking from one to the other.
'Er,' said Ron. 'Well what?'
'Voldemort!' said Harry furiously, and both Ron and Hermione winced. 'What's happening?
What's he up to? Where is he? What are we doing to stop him?'
'We've told you, the Order don't let us in on their meetings,' said Hermione nervously. 'So wedon't know the details - but we've got a general idea,' she added hastily, seeing the look onHarry's face.
'Fred and George have invented Extendable Ears, see,' said Ron. They're really useful.'
'Extendable -?'
'Ears, yeah. Only we've had to stop using them lately because Mum found out and wentberserk. Fred and George had to hide them all to stop Mum binning them. But we got a goodbit of use out of them before Mum realised what was going on. We know some of the Order arefollowing known Death Eaters, keeping tabs on them, you know -'
'Some of them are working on recruiting more people to the Order -' said Hermione.
'And some of them are standing guard over something,' said Ron. They're always talking aboutguard duty.'
'Couldn't have been me, could it?' said Harry sarcastically.
'Oh, yeah,' said Ron, with a look of dawning comprehension.
Harry snorted. He walked around the room again, looking anywhere but at Ron and Hermione.
'So, what have you two been 66 HARRY POTTERdoing, if you're not allowed in meetings?' he demanded. 'You saidyou'd been busy.'
'We have,' said Hermione quickly. 'We've been decontaminating this house, it's been empty forages and stuff's been breeding in here. We've managed to clean out the kitchen, most of thebedrooms and I think we're doing the drawing room tomo— AARGH!'
With two loud cracks, Fred and George, Ron's elder twin brothers, had materialised out of thinair in the middle of the room. Pigwidgeon twittered more wildly than ever and zoomed off tojoin Hedwig on top of the wardrobe.

'Stop doing that!' Hermione said weakly to the twins, who were as vividly red-haired as Ron,though stockier and slightly shorter.
'Hello, Harry,' said George, beaming at him. 'We thought we heard your dulcet tones.'
'You don't want to bottle up your anger like that, Harry, let it all out,' said Fred, also beaming.
There might be a couple of people fifty miles away who didn't hear you.'
'You two passed your Apparation tests, then?' asked Harry grumpily.
'With distinction,' said Fred, who was holding what looked like a piece of very long, fleshcolouredstring.
'It would have taken you about thirty seconds longer to walk down the stairs,' said Ron.
Time is Galleons, little brother,' said Fred. 'Anyway, Harry, you're interfering with reception.
Extendable Ears,' he added in response" to Harry's raised eyebrows, and held up the stringwhich Harry now saw was trailing out on to the landing. We're trying to hear what's going ondownstairs.'
'You want to be careful,' said Ron, staring at the Ear, 'if Mum sees one of them again ..."
'It's worth the risk, that's a major meeting they're having,' said Fred.
The door opened and a long mane of red hair appeared.
'Oh, hello, Harry!' said Ron's younger sister, Ginny, brightly. 'I thought I heard your voice.'
Turning to Fred and George, she said, 'It's no-go with the Extendable Ears, she's gone and putan Imperturbable Charm on the kitchen door.'

NUMBER TWELVE, GRIMMAULD PLACE 67'How d'you know?' said George, looking crestfallen.
Tonks told me how to find out,' said Ginny. 'You just chuck stuff at the door and if it can'tmake contact the door's been Imperturbed. I've been flicking Dungbombs at it from the top ofthe stairs and they just soar away from it, so there's no way the Extendable Ears will be able toget under the gap.'
Fred heaved a deep sigh.
'Shame. I really fancied finding out what old Snape's been up to.'
'Snape!' said Harry quickly. 'Is he here?'
'Yeah,' said George, carefully closing the door and sitting down on one of the beds; Fred andGinny followed. 'Giving a report. Top secret.'
'Git,' said Fred idly.
'He's on our side now,' said Hermione reprovingly.
Ron snorted. 'Doesn't stop him being a git. The way he looks at us when he sees us.'
'Bill doesn't like him, either,' said Ginny, as though that settled the matter.
Harry was not sure his anger had abated yet; but his thirst for information was now overcominghis urge to keep shouting. He sank on to the bed opposite the others.
Ts Bill here?' he asked. 'I thought he was working in Egypt?'
'He applied for a desk job so he could come home and work for the Order,' said Fred. 'He sayshe misses the tombs, but; he smirked, 'there are compensations.'
'What d'you mean?'
'Remember old Fleur Delacour?' said George. 'She's got a job at Gringotts to eempwve 'erEeenglish -'
'And Bill's been giving her a lot of private lessons,' sniggered Fred.
'Charlie's in the Order, too,' said George, 'but he's still in Romania. Dumbledore wants as manyforeign wizards brought in as possible, so Charlie's trying to make contacts on his days off.'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Couldn't Percy do that?' Harry asked. The last he had heard, the third Weasley brother wasworking in the Department of International Magical Co-operation at the Ministry of Magic.
At Harry's words, all the Weasleys and Hermione exchanged darkly significant looks.

68 HARRY POTTER'Whatever you do, don't mention Percy in front of Mum and Dad,' Ron told Harry in a tensevoice.
'Why not?'
'Because every time Percy's name's mentioned, Dad breaks whatever he's holding and Mumstarts crying,' Fred said.
'It's been awful,' said Ginny sadly.
'I think we're well shot of him,' said George, with an uncharacteristically ugly look on his face.
'What's happened?' Harry said.
'Percy and Dad had a row,' said Fred. 'I've never seen Dad row with anyone like that. It'snormally Mum who shouts.'
'It was the first week back after term ended,' said Ron. 'We were about to come and join theOrder. Percy came home and told us he'd been promoted.'
'You're kidding?' said Harry.
Though he knew perfectly well that Percy was highly ambitious, Harry's impression was thatPercy had not made a great success of his first job at the Ministry of Magic. Percy hadcommitted the fairly large oversight of failing to notice that his boss was being controlled byLord Voldemort (not that the Ministry had believed it - they all thought Mr Crouch had gonemad).
'Yeah, we were all surprised,' said George, 'because Percy got into a load of trouble aboutCrouch, there was an inquiry and everything. They said Percy ought to have realised Crouchwas off his rocker and informed a superior. But you know Percy, Crouch left him in charge, hewasn't going to complain.'
'So how come they promoted him?'
That's exactly what we wondered,' said Ron, who seemed very keen to keep normalconversation going now that Harry had stopped yelling. 'He came home really pleased withhimself -even more pleased than usual, if you can imagine that — and told Dad he'd beenoffered a position in Fudge's own office. A really good one for someone only a year out ofHogwarts: Junior Assistant to the Minister. He expected Dad to be all impressed, I think.'
'Only Dad wasn't,' said Fred grimly.
'Why not?' said Harry. .f
NUMBER TWELVE, GRIMMAULD PLACE 69'Well, apparently Fudge has been storming round the Ministry checking that nobody's havingany contact with Dumbledore,' said George.
'Dumbledore's name is mud with the Ministry these days, see,' said Fred. They all think he'sjust making trouble saying You-Know-Whos back.'
'Dad says Fudge has made it clear that anyone who's in league with Dumbledore can clear outtheir desks,' said George.
'Trouble is, Fudge suspects Dad, he knows he's friendly with Dumbledore, and he's alwaysthought Dad's a bit of a weirdo because of his Muggle obsession.'
'But what's that got to do with Percy?' asked Harry, contused.
'I'm coming to that. Dad reckons Fudge only wants Percy in his office because he wants to usehim to spy on the family - and Dumbledore.'
Harry let out a low whistle.

'Bet Percy loved that.'

Ron laughed in a hollow sort of way.

'He went completely berserk. He said — well, he said loads of terrible stuff. He said he's beenhaving to struggle against Dad's lousy reputation ever since he joined the Ministry and thatDad's got no ambition and that's why we've always been - you know -not had a lot of money, Imean -'

'What?' said Harry in disbelief, as Ginny made a noise like an angry cat.

T know,' said Ron in a low voice. 'And it got worse. He said Dad was an idiot to run aroundwith Dumbledore, that Dumbledore was heading for big trouble and Dad was going to godown with him, and that he - Percy - knew where his loyalty lay and it was with the Ministry.

And if Mum and Dad were going to become traitors to the Ministry he was going to make sureeveryone knew he didn't belong to our family any more. And he packed his bags the samenight and left. He's living here in London now.'

Harry swore under his breath. He had always liked Percy least of Ron's brothers, but he hadnever imagined he would say such things to Mr Weasley.

70 HARRY POTTER'Mum's been in a right state,' said Ron dully. 'You know - crying and stuff. She came up toLondon to try and talk to Percy but he slammed the door in her face. I dunno what he does if hemeets Dad at work - ignores him, I s'pose.'

'But Percy must know Voldemort's back,' said Harry slowly. 'He's not stupid, he must knowyour mum and dad wouldn't risk everything without proof.'

'Yeah, well, your name got dragged into the row,' said Ron, shooting Harry a furtive look.

'Percy said the only evidence was your word and ... I dunno ... he didn't think it was goodenough.'

'Percy takes the Daily Prophet seriously,' said Hermione tartly, and the others all nodded.

'What are you talking about?' Harry asked, looking around at them all. They were all regardinghim warily.

'Haven't - haven't you been getting the Daily Prophet!' Hermione asked nervously.

'Yeah, I have!' said Harry.

'Have you - er - been reading it thoroughly?' Hermione asked, still more anxiously.

'Not cover to cover,' said Harry defensively. 'If they were going to report anything aboutVoldemort it would be headline news, wouldn't it?'

The others flinched at the sound of the name. Hermione hurried on, 'Well, you'd need to read itcover to cover to pick it up, but they - um - they mention you a couple of times a week.'

'But I'd have seen -'

'Not if you've only been reading the front page, you wouldn't,' said Hermione, shaking herhead. 'I'm not talking about big articles. They just slip you in, like you're a standing joke.'

'What d'you -?'

'It's quite nasty, actually,' said Hermione in a voice of forced calm. They're just building onRita's stuff.'

'But she's not writing for them any more, is she?'

'Oh, no, she's kept her promise — not that she's got any choice,' Hermione added withsatisfaction. 'But she laid the foundation for what they're trying to do now.'

'Which is what?' said Harry impatiently.

NUMBER TWELVE, GRIMMAULD PLACE 71'OK, you know she wrote that you were collapsing all over the place and saying your scar washurting and all that?'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Yeah,' said Harry, who was not likely to forget Rita Skeeter's stories about him in a hurry.

'Well, they're writing about you as though you're this deluded, attention-seeking person whothinks he's a great tragic hero or something,' said Hermione, very fast, as though it would beless unpleasant for Harry to hear these facts quickly. They keep slipping in snide commentsabout you. If some far-fetched story appears, they say something like, "A tale worthy of HarryPotter", and if anyone has a funny accident or anything it's, "Let's hope he hasn't got a scar onhis forehead or we'll be asked to worship him next" -'

'I don't want anyone to worship —' Harry began hotly.

'I know you don't,' said Hermione quickly, looking frightened. 'I know, Harry. But you see whatthey're doing? They want to turn you into someone nobody will believe. Fudge is behind it, I'llbet anything. They want wizards on the street to think you're just some stupid boy who's a bitof a joke, who tells ridiculous tall stories because he loves being famous and wants to keep itgoing.'

T didn't ask - 1 didn't want - Voldemort killed my parents!' Harry spluttered. T got famousbecause he murdered my family but couldn't kill me! Who wants to be famous for that? Don'tthey think I'd rather it'd never -'

'We know, Harry,' said Ginny earnestly.

'And of course, they didn't report a word about the Dementors attacking you,' said Hermione.

'Someone's told them to keep that quiet. That should've been a really big story, out-of-controlDementors. They haven't even reported that you broke the International Statute of Secrecy. Wethought they would, it would tie in so well with this image of you as some stupid show-off. Wethink they're biding their time until you're expelled, then they're really going to go to town - Imean, if you're expelled, obviously,' she went on hastily. 'You really shouldn't be, not if theyabide by their own laws, there's no case against you.'

They were back on the hearing and Harry did not want to think about that. He cast around foranother change of subject, but was 72 HARRY POTTERsaved the necessity of finding one by the sound of footsteps comingup the stairs.

'Uh oh.'

Fred gave the Extendable Ear a hearty tug; there was another loud crack and he and Georgevanished. Seconds later, Mrs Weasley appeared in the bedroom doorway.

The meeting's over, you can come down and have dinner now. Everyone's dying to see you,Harry. And who's left all those Dungbombs outside the kitchen door?'

'Crookshanks,' said Ginny unblushmgly. 'He loves playing with them.'

'Oh,' said Mrs Weasley, 'I thought it might have been Kreacher, he keeps doing odd thingslike that. Now don't forget to keep your voices down in the hall. Ginny, your hands arefilthy, what have you been doing? Go and wash them before dinner, please.'

Ginny grimaced at the others and followed her mother out of the room, leaving Harry alonewith Ron and Hermione. Both of them were watching him apprehensively, as though theyfeared he would start shouting again now that everyone else had gone. The sight of themlooking so nervous made him feel slightly ashamed.

'Look ...' he muttered, but Ron shook his head, and Hermione said quietly, 'We knew you'dbe angry, Harry, we really don't blame you, but you've got to understand, we did try topersuade Dumbledore -'

'Yeah, 1 know,' said Harry shortly.

He cast around for a topic that didn't involve his headmaster, because the very thought ofDumbledore made Harry's insides burn with anger again.

'Who's Kreacher?' he asked.
The house-elf who lives here,' said Ron. 'Nutter. Never met one like him.'
Hermione frowned at Ron.
'He's not a nutter, Ron.'
'His life's ambition is to have his head cut off and stuck up on a plaque just like his mother,' said Ron irritably. 'Is that normal, Hermione?'
'Well - well, if he is a bit strange, it's not his fault.'

NUMBER TWELVE, GRIMMAULD PLACE 73Ron rolled his eyes at Harry.
'Hermione still hasn't given up on SPEW'It's not SPEW!' said Hermione heatedly. 'It's the Society for the Promotion of Elfish Welfare.
And it's not just me, Dumbledore says we should be kind to Kreacher too.'
'Yeah, yeah,' said Ron. 'C'mon, I'm starving.'
He led the way out of the door and on to the landing, but before they could descend the stairs -
'Hold it!' Ron breathed, flinging out an arm to stop Harry and Hermione walking any further.
They're still in the hall, we might be able to hear something.'
The three of them looked cautiously over the banisters. The gloomy hallway below waspacked with witches and wizards, including all of Harrys guard. They were whisperingexcitedly together. In the very centre of the group Harry saw the dark, greasy-haired head andprominent nose of his least favourite teacher at Hogwarts, Professor Snape. Harry leant furtherover the banisters. He was very interested in what Snape was doing for the Order of thePhoenix ...
A thin piece of flesh-coloured string descended in front of Harrys eyes. Looking up, he sawEred and George on the landing above, cautiously lowering the Extendable Ear towards thedark knot of people below. A moment later, however, they all began to move towards the frontdoor and out of sight.
'Dammit,' Harry heard Fred whisper, as he hoisted the Extendable Ear back up again.
They heard the front door open, then close.
'Snape never eats here,' Ron told Harry quietly. Thank God. C'mon.'
'And don't forget to keep your voice down in the hall, Harry,' Hermione whispered.
As they passed the row of house-elf heads on the wall, they saw Lupin, Mrs Weasley andTonks at the front door, magically sealing its many locks and bolts behind those who had justleft.
'We're eating down in the kitchen,' Mrs Weasley whispered, meeting them at the bottom of thestairs. 'Harry, dear, if you'll just tiptoe across the hall it's through this door here -' CRASH.

74 HARRY POTTER'Tonks!' cried Mrs Weasley in exasperation, turning to look behind her.
Tm sorry!' wailed Tonks, who was lying flat on the floor. 'It's that stupid umbrella stand, that'sthe second time I've tripped over -'
But the rest of her words were drowned by a horrible, ear-splitting, blood-curdling screech.
The moth-eaten velvet curtains Harry had passed earlier had flown apart, but there was no doorbehind them. For a split second, Harry thought he was looking through a window, a windowbehind which an old woman in a black cap was screaming and screaming as though she werebeing tortured - then he realised it was simply a life-size portrait, but the most realistic, and themost unpleasant, he had ever seen in his life.
The old woman was drooling, her eyes were rolling, the yellowing skin of her face stretched tautas she screamed; and all along the hall behind them, the other portraits awoke and began to yell,too, so that Harry actually screwed up his eyes at the noise and clapped his hands over his ears.

Lupin and Mrs Weasley darted forward and tried to tug the curtains shut over the old woman,but they would not close and she screeched louder than ever, brandishing clawed hands asthough trying to tear at their faces.
'Filth! Scum! By-products of dirt and vileness! Half-breeds, mutants, freaks, begone from thisplace! How dare you befoul the house of my fathers -'
Tonks apologised over and over again, dragging the huge, heavy troll's leg back off the floor;
Mrs Weasley abandoned the attempt to close the curtains and hurried up and down the hall,Stunning all the other portraits with her wand; and a man with long black hair came charging outof a door facing Harry.
'Shut up, you horrible old hag, shut UP!' he roared, seizing the curtain Mrs Weasley hadabandoned.
The old woman's face blanched.
'Yoooou!' she howled, her eyes popping at the sight of the man. 'Blood traitor, abomination,shame of my flesh!'
'I said - shut - UP!' roared the man, and with a stupendous effort he and Lupin managed to forcethe curtains closed again.
NUMBER TWELVE, GRIMMAULD PLACE 75
The old woman's screeches died and an echoing silence fell.
Panting slightly and sweeping his long dark hair out of his eyes,Harry's godfather Sirius turned to face him.
'Hello, Harry,' he said grimly, 'I see you've met my mother.'

—CHAPTER FIVE —

The Order of the Phoenix'Your -?'
'My dear old mum, yeah,' said Sirius. 'We've been trying to get her down for a month but wethink she put a Permanent Sticking Charm on the back of the canvas. Let's get downstairs,quick, before they all wake up again.'
'But what's a portrait of your mother doing here?' Harry asked, bewildered, as they wentthrough the door from the hall and led the way down a flight of narrow stone steps, the othersjust behind them.
'Hasn't anyone told you? This was my parents' house,' said Sirius. 'But I'm the last Black left,so it's mine now. I offered it to Dumbledore for Headquarters - about the only useful thing I'vebeen able to do.'
Harry, who had expected a better welcome, noted how hard and bitter Sirius's voice sounded.
He followed his godfather to the bottom of the steps and through a door leading into thebasement kitchen.
It was scarcely less gloomy than the hall above, a cavernous room with rough stone walls.
Most of the light was coming from a large fire at the far end of the room. A haze of pipe smokehung in the air like battle fumes, through which loomed the menacing shapes of heavy ironpots and pans hanging from the dark ceiling. Many chairs had been crammed into the room forthe meeting and a long wooden table stood in the middle of them, littered with rolls ofparchment, goblets, empty wine bottles, and a heap of what appeared to be rags. Mr Weasleyand his eldest son Bill were talking quietly with their heads together at the end of the table.
Mrs Weasley cleared her throat. Her husband, a thin, balding,

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

THE ORDER OF THE PHOENIX 77red-haired man who wore horn-rimmed glasses, looked around and jumped to his feet.
'Harry!' Mr Weasley said, hurrying forward to greet him, and shaking his hand vigorously.
'Good to see you!'
Over his shoulder Harry saw Bill, who still wore his long hair in a ponytail, hastily rolling upthe lengths of parchment left on the table.
'Journey all right, Harry?' Bill called, trying to gather up twelve scrolls at once. 'Mad-Eye didn'tmake you come via Greenland, then?'
'He tried,' said Tonks, striding over to help Bill and immediately toppling a candle on to the lastpiece of parchment. 'Oh no - sorry -
'Here, dear,' said Mrs Weasley, sounding exasperated, and she repaired the parchment with awave of her wand. In the flash of light caused by Mrs Weasley's charm Harry caught a glimpseof what looked like the plan of a building.
Mrs Weasley had seen him looking. She snatched the plan off the table and stuffed it into Bill'salready overladen arms.
'This sort of thing ought to be cleared away promptly at the end of meetings,' she snapped,before sweeping off towards an ancient dresser from which she started unloading dinner plates.
Bill took out his wand, muttered, 'Evanesco!' and the scrolls vanished.
'Sit down, Harry,' said Sirius. 'You've met Mundungus, haven't you?'
The thing Harry had taken to be a pile of rags gave a prolonged, grunting snore, then jerkedawake.
'Some'n say m'name?' Mundungus mumbled sleepily. T 'gree with Sirius ...' He raised a verygrubby hand in the air as though voting, his droopy, bloodshot eyes unfocused.
Ginny giggled.
'The meeting's over, Dung,' said Sirius, as they all sat down around him at the table. 'Harry'sarrived.'
'Eh?' said Mundungus, peering balefully at Harry through his matted ginger hair. 'Blimey, so 'e'as. Yeah ... you all right, 'Any?'
'Yeah,' said Harry.

78 HARRY POTTERMundungus fumbled nervously in his pockets, still staring at Harry, and pulled out a grimyblack pipe. He stuck it in his mouth, ignited the end of it with his wand and took a deep pullon it. Great billowing clouds of greenish smoke obscured him within seconds.
'Owe you a 'pology,' grunted a voice from the middle of the smelly cloud.
'For the last time, Mundungus,' called Mrs Weasley, 'will you please not smoke that thing inthe kitchen, especially not when we're about to eat!'
'Ah,' said Mundungus. 'Right. Sorry, Molly.'
The cloud of smoke vanished as Mundungus stowed his pipe back in his pocket, but an acridsmell of burning socks lingered.
'And if you want dinner before midnight I'll need a hand,' Mrs Weasley said to the room atlarge. 'No, you can stay where you are, Harry dear, you've had a long journey.'
'What can I do, Molly?' said Tonks enthusiastically, bounding forwards.
Mrs Weasley hesitated, looking apprehensive.
'Er - no, it's all right, Tonks, you have a rest too, you've done enough today.'
'No, no, I want to help!' said Tonks brightly, knocking over a chair as she hurried towardsthe dresser, from which Ginny was collecting cutlery.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Soon, a series of heavy knives were chopping meat and vegetables of their own accord,supervised by Mr Weasley, while Mrs Weasley stirred a cauldron dangling over the fire andthe others took out plates, more goblets and food from the pantry. Harry was left at the tablewith Sirius and Mundungus, who was still blinking at him mournfully.
'Seen old Figgy since?' he asked.
'No,' said Harry, T haven't seen anyone.'
'See, I wouldn't 'ave left,' said Mundungus, leaning forward, a pleading note in his voice, 'butI 'ad a business opportunity -'
Harry felt something brush against his knees and started, but it was only Crookshanks,Hermione's bandy-legged ginger cat, who wound himself once around Harry's legs, purring,then jumped on THEORDEROFTHEPHOENIX 79to Sirius's lap and curled up. Sirius scratched him absent-mindedly behind the ears as heturned, still grim-faced, to Harry.
'Had a good summer so far?'
'No, it's been lousy,' said Harry.
For the first time, something like a grin flitted across Sirius's face.
'Don't know what you're complaining about, myself.'
'What?' said Harry incredulously.
'Personally, I'd have welcomed a Dementor attack. A deadly struggle for my soul would havebroken the monotony nicely. You think you've had it bad, at least you've been able to get outand about, stretch your legs, get into a few fights ... I've been stuck inside for a month.'
'How come?' asked Harry, frowning.
'Because the Ministry of Magic's still after me, and Voldemort will know all about me beingan Animagus by now, Wormtail will have told him, so my big disguise is useless. There's notmuch I can do for the Order of the Phoenix ... or so Dumbledore feels.'
There was something about the slightly flattened tone of voice in which Sirius utteredDumbledore's name that told Harry that Sirius, too, was not very happy with the Headmaster.
Harry felt a sudden upsurge of affection for his godfather.
At least you've known what's been going on,' he said bracingly.
'Oh yeah,' said Sirius sarcastically. 'Listening to Snape's reports, having to take all his snidehints that he's out there risking his life while I'm sat on my backside here having a nicecomfortable time ... asking me how the cleanings going -'
'What cleaning?' asked Harry.
Trying to make this place fit for human habitation,' said Sirius, waving a hand around thedismal kitchen. 'No one's lived here for ten years, not since my dear mother died, unless youcount her old house-elf, and he's gone round the twist - hasn't cleaned anything in ages.'
'Sirius,' said Mundungus, who did not appear to have paid any attention to the conversation,but had been closely examining an empty goblet. 'This solid silver, mate?'
'Yes,' said Sirius, surveying it with distaste. 'Finest fifteenth-century goblin-wrought silver,embossed with the Black family crest.'

80 HARRY POTTERThat'd come orf, though,' muttered Mundungus, polishing it with his cuff.
'Fred - George - NO, JUST CARRY THEM!' Mrs Weasley shrieked.
Harry, Sirius and Mundungus looked round and, within a split second, they had dived awayfrom the table. Fred and George had bewitched a large cauldron of stew, an iron flagon ofButterbeer and a heavy wooden breadboard, complete with knife, to hurtle through the airtowards them. The stew skidded the length of the table and came to a halt just before the end,leaving a long black burn on the wooden surface; the flagon of Butterbeer fell with a crash,spilling its contents everywhere; the bread knife slipped off the board and landed, point downand quivering ominously, exactly where Sirius's right hand had been seconds before.

'FOR HEAVEN'S SAKE!' screamed Mrs Weasley. THERE WAS NO NEED - I'VE HADENOUGH OF THIS - JUST BECAUSE YOU'RE ALLOWED TO USE MAGIC NOW, YOUDON'T HAVE TO WHIP YOUR WANDS OUT FOR EVERY TINY LITTLE THING!'
'We were just trying to save a bit of time!' said Fred, hurrying forward to wrench the breadknife out of the table. 'Sorry, Sirius, mate - didn't mean to -'
Harry and Sirius were both laughing; Mundungus, who had toppled backwards off his chair,was swearing as he got to his feet; Crookshanks had given an angry hiss and shot off underthe dresser, from where his large yellow eyes glowed in the darkness.
'Boys,' Mr Weasley said, lifting the stew back into the middle of the table, 'your mother'sright, you're supposed to show a sense of responsibility now you've come of age -'
'None of your brothers caused this sort of trouble!' Mrs Weasley raged at the twins as sheslammed a fresh flagon of Butterbeer on to the table, and spilling almost as much again. 'Billdidn't feel the need to Apparate every few feet! Charlie didn't charm everything he met! Percy-'
She stopped dead, catching her breath with a frightened look at her husband, whoseexpression was suddenly wooden.
'Let's eat,' said Bill quickly.
'It looks wonderful, Molly,' said Lupin, ladling stew on to a plate for her and handing it acrossthe table.

THE ORDER OF THE PHOENIX 81For a few minutes there was silence but for the chink of plates and cutlery and the scraping ofchairs as everyone settled down to their food. Then Mrs Weasley turned to Sirius.
'I've been meaning to tell you, Sirius, there's something trapped in that writing desk in thedrawing room, it keeps rattling and shaking. Of course, it could just be a Boggart, but I thoughtwe ought to ask Alastor to have a look at it before we let it out.'
'Whatever you like,' said Sirius indifferently.
'The curtains in there are full of Doxys, too,' Mrs Weasley went on. 'I thought we might try andtackle them tomorrow.'
'I look forward to it,' said Sirius. Harry heard the sarcasm in his voice, but he was not sure thatanyone else did.
Opposite Harry, Tonks was entertaining Hermione and Ginny by transforming her nosebetween mouthfuls. Screwing up her eyes each time with the same pained expression she hadworn back in Harry's bedroom, her nose swelled to a beak-like protuberance that resembledSnape's, shrank to the size of a button mushroom and then sprouted a great deal of hair fromeach nostril. Apparently this was a regular mealtime entertainment, because Hermione andGinny were soon requesting their favourite noses.
'Do that one like a pig snout, Tonks.'
Tonks obliged, and Harry, looking up, had the fleeting impression that a female Dudley wasgrinning at him from across the table.
Mr Weasley, Bill and Lupin were having an intense discussion about goblins.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

They're not giving anything away yet,' said Bill. 'I still can't work out whether or not theybelieve he's back. Course, they might prefer not to take sides at all. Keep out of it.'
'I'm sure they'd never go over to You-Know-Who,' said Mr Weasley, shaking his head. They'vesuffered losses too; remember that goblin family he murdered last time, somewhere nearNottingham?'
'I think it depends what they're offered,' said Lupin. 'And I'm not talking about gold. If they'reoffered the freedoms we've been denying them for centuries they're going to be tempted. Haveyou still not had any luck with Ragnok, Bill?'

82 HARRY POTTER'He's feeling pretty anti-wizard at the moment,' said Bill, 'he hasn't stopped raging about theBagman business, he reckons the Ministry did a cover-up, those goblins never got their goldfrom him, you know -'
A gale of laughter from the middle of the table drowned the rest of Bill's words. Fred, George,Ron and Mundungus were rolling around in their seats.
'... and then,' choked Mundungus, tears running down his face, 'and then, if you'll believe it, 'esays to me, 'e says, "'Ere, Dung, where didja get all them toads from? 'Cos some son of aBludger's gone and nicked all mine!" And I says, "Nicked all your toads, Will, what next? Soyou'll be wanting some more, then?" And if you'll believe me, lads, the gormless gargoyle buysall 'is own toads back orf me for a lot more'n what 'e paid in the first place -'
'1 don't think we need to hear any more of your business dealings, thank you very much,Mundungus,' said Mrs Weasley sharply, as Ron slumped forwards on to the table, howlingwith laughter.
'Beg pardon, Molly,' said Mundungus at once, wiping his eyes and winking at Harry. 'But, youknow, Will nicked 'em orf Warty Harris in the first place so I wasn't really doing nothingwrong.'
'I don't know where you learned about right and wrong, Mundungus, but you seem to havemissed a few crucial lessons,' said Mrs Weasley coldly.
Fred and George buried their faces in their goblets of Butterbeer; George was hiccoughing. Forsome reason, Mrs Weasley threw a very nasty look at Sirius before getting to her feet andgoing to fetch a large rhubarb crumble for pudding. Harry looked round at his godfather.
'Molly doesn't approve of Mundungus,' said Sirius in an undertone.
'How come he's in the Order?' Harry said, very quietly.
'He's useful,' Sirius muttered. 'Knows all the crooks - well, he would, seeing as he's onehimself. But he's also very loyal to Dumbledore, who helped him out of a tight spot once. Itpays to have someone like Dung around, he hears things we don't. But Molly thinks invitinghim to stay for dinner is going too far. She
THE ORDER OF THE PHOENIX 83hasn't forgiven him for slipping off duty when he was supposed to be tailing you.'
Three helpings of rhubarb crumble and custard later and the waistband on Harrys jeans wasfeeling uncomfortably tight (which was saying something as the jeans had once been Dudley's).
As he laid down his spoon there was a lull in the general conversation: Mr Weasley was leaningback in his chair, looking replete and relaxed; Tonks was yawning widely, her nose now back tonormal; and Ginny who had lured Crookshanks out from under the dresser, was sitting crossleggedon the floor, rolling Butterbeer corks for him to chase.
'Nearly time for bed, I think,' said Mrs Weasley with a yawn.
'Not just yet, Molly' said Sirius, pushing away his empty plate and turning to look at Harry.
'You know, I'm surprised at you. I thought the first thing you'd do when you got here would beto start asking questions about Voldemort.'

The atmosphere in the room changed with the rapidity Harry associated with the arrival ofDementors. Where seconds before it had been sleepily relaxed, it was now alert, even tense. Afrisson had gone around the table at the mention of Voldemort's name. Lupin, who had beenabout to take a sip of wine, lowered his goblet slowly, looking wary.
T did!' said Harry indignantly. T asked Ron and Hermione but they said we're not allowed inthe Order, so -'
'And they're quite right,' said Mrs Weasley. 'You're too young.'
She was sitting bolt upright in her chair, her fists clenched on its arms, every trace ofdrowsiness gone.
'Since when did someone have to be in the Order of the Phoenix to ask questions?' asked Sirius.
'Harry's been trapped in that Muggle house for a month. He's got the right to know what's beenhappen—'
'Hang on!' interrupted George loudly.
'How come Harry gets his questions answered?' said Fred angrily.
'We've been trying to get stuff out of you for a month and you haven't told us a single stinkingthing!' said George.
'"You're too young, you're not in the Order,"' said Fred, in a high-pitched voice that soundeduncannily like his mother's. 'Harry's not even of age!'

84 ' HARRY POTTER'It's not my fault you haven't been told what the Order's doing,' said Sirius calmly, 'that's yourparents' decision. Harry, on the other hand -'
'It's not down to you to decide what's good for Harry!' said Mrs Weasley sharply. Theexpression on her normally kind face looked dangerous. 'You haven't forgotten whatDumbledore said, I suppose?'
'Which bit?' Sirius asked politely, but with the air of a man readying himself for a fight.
The bit about not telling Harry more than he needs to know,' said Mrs Weasley, placing aheavy emphasis on the last three words.
Ron, Hermione, Fred and George's heads swivelled from Sirius to Mrs Weasley as thoughthey were following a tennis rally. Ginny was kneeling amid a pile of abandoned Butterbeercorks, watching the conversation with her mouth slightly open. Lupin's eyes were fixed onSirius.
'I don't intend to tell him more than he needs to know, Molly,' said Sirius. 'But as he was theone who saw Voldemort come back' (again, there was a collective shudder around the tableat the name) 'he has more right than most to -'
'He's not a member of the Order of the Phoenix!' said Mrs Weasley. 'He's only fifteen and -'
'And he's dealt with as much as most in the Order,' said Sirius, 'and more than some.'
'No one's denying what he's done!' said Mrs Weasley, her voice rising, her fists trembling onthe arms of her chair. 'But he's still -'
'He's not a child!' said Sirius impatiently.
'He's not an adult either!' said Mrs Weasley, the colour rising in her cheeks. 'He's not James,Sirius!'
'I'm perfectly clear who he is, thanks, Molly,' said Sirius coldly.
'I'm not sure you are!' said Mrs Weasley. 'Sometimes, the way you talk about him, it's asthough you think you've got your best friend back!'
'What's wrong with that?' said Harry.
'What's wrong, Harry, is that you are not your father, however much you might look likehim!' said Mrs Weasley, her eyes still

THE ORDER OF THE PHOENIX 85boring into Sirius. 'You are still at school and adults responsible for you should not forget it!'
'Meaning I'm an irresponsible godfather?' demanded Sirius, his voice rising.
'Meaning you have been known to act rashly, Sirius, which is why Dumbledore keepsreminding you to stay at home and -'
'We'll leave my instructions from Dumbledore out of this, if you please!' said Sirius loudly.
'Arthur!' said Mrs Weasley, rounding on her husband. 'Arthur, back me up!'
Mr Weasley did not speak at once. He took off his glasses and cleaned them slowly on hisrobes, not looking at his wife. Only when he had replaced them carefully on his nose did hereply.
'Dumbledore knows the position has changed, Molly. He accepts that Harry will have to befilled in, to a certain extent, now that he is staying at Headquarters.'
'Yes, but there's a difference between that and inviting him to ask whatever he likes!'
'Personally,' said Lupin quietly, looking away from Sirius at last, as Mrs Weasley turnedquickly to him, hopeful that finally she was about to get an ally, 'I think it better that Harrygets the facts -not all the facts, Molly, but the general picture - from us, rather than a garbledversion from ... others.'
His expression was mild, but Harry felt sure Lupin, at least, knew that some Extendable Earshad survived Mrs Weasley's purge.
'Well,' said Mrs Weasley, breathing deeply and looking around the table for support that didnot come, 'well ... I can see I'm going to be overruled. I'll just say this: Dumbledore must havehad his reasons for not wanting Harry to know too much, and speaking as someone who hasHarry's best interests at heart -'
'He's not your son,' said Sirius quietly.
'He's as good as,' said Mrs Weasley fiercely. 'Who else has he got?'
'He's got me!'
'Yes,' said Mrs Weasley, her lip curling, 'the thing is, it's been rather difficult for you to lookafter him while you've been locked UP in Azkaban, hasn't it?'

86HARRY POTTERSirius started to rise from his chair.
'Molly, you're not the only person at this table who cares about Harry,' said Lupin sharply.
'Sirius, sit down.'
Mrs Weasley's lower lip was trembling. Sirius sank slowly back into his chair, his face white.
'I think Harry ought to be allowed a say in this,' Lupin continued, 'he's old enough to decidefor himself.'
'I want to know what's been going on,' Harry said at once.
He did not look at Mrs Weasley. He had been touched by what she had said about his beingas good as a son, but he was also impatient with her mollycoddling. Sirius was right, he wasnot a child.
'Very well,' said Mrs Weasley, her voice cracking. 'Ginny - Ron - Hermione - Fred - George -
I want you out of this kitchen, now.'
There was instant uproar.
'We're of age!' Fred and George bellowed together.
'If Harry's allowed, why can't I?' shouted Ron.
'Mum, I want to hear!' wailed Ginny.
'NO!' shouted Mrs Weasley, standing up, her eyes overbright. 'I absolutely forbid -'
'Molly, you can't stop Fred and George,' said Mr Weasley wearily. They are of age.'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

They're still at school.'
'But they're legally adults now,' said Mr Weasley, in the same tired voice.
Mrs Weasley was now scarlet in the face.
'I - oh, all right then, Fred and George can stay, but Ron -'
'Harry'll tell me and Hermione everything you say anyway!' said Ron hotly. 'Won't - won'tyou?' he added uncertainly, meeting Harry's eyes.
For a split second, Harry considered telling Ron that he wouldn't tell him a single word, thathe could try a taste of being kept in the dark and see how he liked it. But the nasty impulsevanished as they looked at each other.
'Course I will,' Harry said.
Ron and Hermione beamed.
'Fine!' shouted Mrs Weasley. 'Fine! Ginny - BED!'

THE ORDER OF THE PHOENIX 87Ginny did not go quietly. They could hear her raging and storming at her mother all the way upthe stairs, and when she reached the hall Mrs Blacks ear-splitting shrieks were added to the din.
Lupin hurried off to the portrait to restore calm. It was only after he had returned, closing thekitchen door behind him and taking his seat at the table again, that Sirius spoke.
'OK, Harry ... what do you want to know?'
Harry took a deep breath and asked the question that had obsessed him for the last month.
'Where's Voldemort?' he said, ignoring the renewed shudders and winces at the name. 'What'she doing? I've been trying to watch the Muggle news, and there hasn't been anything that lookslike him yet, no funny deaths or anything.'
That's because there haven't been any funny deaths yet,' said Sirius, 'not as far as we know,anyway ... and we know quite a lot.'
'More than he thinks we do, anyway,' said Lupin.
'How come he's stopped killing people?' Harry asked. He knew Voldemort had murdered morethan once in the last year alone.
'Because he doesn't want to draw attention to himself,' said Sirius. 'It would be dangerous forhim. His comeback didn't come off quite the way he wanted it to, you see. He messed it up.'
'Or rather, you messed it tip for him,' said Lupin, with a satisfied smile.
'How?' Harry asked, perplexed.
'You weren't supposed to survive!' said Sirius. 'Nobody apart from his Death Eaters wassupposed to know he'd come back. But you survived to bear witness.'
'And the very last person he wanted alerted to his return the moment he got back wasDumbledore,' said Lupin. 'And you made sure Dumbledore knew at once.'
'How has that helped?' Harry asked.
'Are you kidding?' said Bill incredulously. 'Dumbledore was the only one You-Know-Who wasever scared of!'
Thanks to you, Dumbledore was able to recall the Order of the Phoenix about an hour afterVoldemort returned,' said Sirius.
'So, what's the Order been doing?' said Harry, looking around at them all.

88 HARRY POTTER'Working as hard as we can to make sure Voldemort can't carry out his plans,' said

Sirius.
'How d'you know what his plans are?' Harry asked quickly.
'Dumbledore's got a shrewd idea,' said Lupin, 'and Dumbledore's shrewd ideas normally turnout to be accurate.'
'So what does Dumbledore reckon he's planning?'
'Well, firstly, he wants to build up his army again,' said Sirius. 'In the old days he had hugenumbers at his command: witches and wizards he'd bullied or bewitched into following him,his faithful Death Eaters, a great variety of Dark creatures. You heard him planning to recruitthe giants; well, they'll be just one of the groups he's after. He's certainly not going to try andtake on the Ministry of Magic with only a dozen Death Eaters.'
'So you're trying to stop him getting more followers?'
'We're doing our best,' said Lupin.
'How?'
'Well, the main thing is to try and convince as many people as possible that You-Know-Whoreally has returned, to put them on their guard,' said Bill. 'It's proving tricky, though.'
'Why?'
'Because of the Ministry's attitude,' said Tonks. 'You saw Cornelius Fudge after You-Know-
Who came back, Harry. Well, he hasn't shifted his position at all. He's absolutely refusing tobelieve it's happened.'
'But why?' said Harry desperately. Why's he being so stupid? If Dumbledore -'
'Ah, well, you've put your finger on the problem,' said Mr Weasley with a wry smile.
'Dumbledore.'
'Fudge is frightened of him, you see,' said Tonks sadly.
'Frightened of Dumbledore?' said Harry incredulously.
'Frightened of what he's up to,' said Mr Weasley. 'Fudge thinks Dumbledore's plotting tooverthrow him. He thinks Dumbledore wants to be Minister for Magic.'
'But Dumbledore doesn't want -'
'Of course he doesn't,' said Mr Weasley. 'He's never wanted the Minister's job, even though alot of people wanted him to take it when Millicent Bagnold retired. Fudge came to powerinstead, but

THEORDEROFTHEPHOENIX - 89he's never quite forgotten how much popular support Dumbledore had, even thoughDumbledore never applied for the job.'
'Deep down, Fudge knows Dumbledore's much cleverer than he is a much more powerfulwizard, and in the early days of his Ministry he was forever asking Dumbledore for help andadvice,' said Lupin. 'But it seems he's become fond of power, and much more confident. Heloves being Minister for Magic and he's managed to convince himself that he's the clever oneand Dumbledore's simply stirring up trouble for the sake of it.'
'How can he think that?' said Harry angrily. 'How can he think Dumbledore would just make itall up - that I'd make it all up?'
'Because accepting that Voldemort's back would mean trouble like the Ministry hasn't had tocope with for nearly fourteen years,' said Sirius bitterly. 'Fudge just can't bring himself to faceit. It's so much more comfortable to convince himself Dumbledore's lying to destabilise him.'
'You see the problem,' said Lupin. 'While the Ministry insists there is nothing to fear fromVoldemort it's hard to convince people he's back, especially as they really don't want to believeit in the first place.

What's more, the Ministry's leaning heavily on the Daily Prophet not toreport any of what they're calling Dumbledore's rumour-mongering, so most of the wizardingcommunity are completely unaware any things happened, and that makes them easy targets forthe Death Eaters if they're using the Imperius Curse.'
'But you're telling people, aren't you?' said Harry, looking around at Mr Weasley, Sirius, Bill,Mundungus, Lupin and Tonks. 'You're letting people know he's back?'
They all smiled humourlessly.
'Well, as everyone thinks I'm a mad mass-murderer and the Ministry's put a ten thousandGalleon price on my head, I can hardly stroll up the street and start handing out leaflets, can I?'
said Sirius restlessly.
'And I'm not a very popular dinner guest with most of the community,' said Lupin. 'It's anoccupational hazard of being a werewolf.'
'Tonks and Arthur would lose their jobs at the Ministry if they started shooting their mouthsoff,' said Sirius, 'and it's very important 90 HARRY POTTERfor us to have spies inside the Ministry, because you can bet Voldemort will have them.'
'We've managed to convince a couple of people, though,' said Mr Weasley. Tonks here, forone - she's too young to have been in the Order of the Phoenix last time, and having Aurors onour side is a huge advantage - Kingsley Shacklebolt's been a real asset, too; he's in charge ofthe hunt for Sirius, so he's been feeding the Ministry information that Sirius is in Tibet.'
'But if none of you are putting the news out that Voldemorts back -' Harry began.
'Who said none of us are putting the news out?' said Sirius. Why d'you think Dumbledore's insuch trouble?'
'What d'you mean?' Harry asked.
They're trying to discredit him,' said Lupin. 'Didn't you see the Daily Prophet last week? Theyreported that he'd been voted out of the Chairmanship of the International Confederation ofWizards because he's getting old and losing his grip, but it's not true; he was voted out byMinistry wizards after he made a speech announcing Voldemorts return. They've demoted himfrom Chief Warlock on the Wizengamot - that's the Wizard High Court - and they're talkingabout taking away his Order of Merlin, First Class, too.'
'But Dumbledore says he doesn't care what they do as long as they don't take him off theChocolate Frog Cards,' said Bill, grinning.
'It's no laughing matter,' said Mr Weasley sharply. 'If he carries on defying the Ministry likethis he could end up in Azkaban, and the last thing we want is to have Dumbledore locked up.
While You-Know-Who knows Dumbledore's out there and wise to what he's up to he's goingto go cautiously. If Dumbledore's out ol the way - well, You-Know-Who will have a clearfield.'
'But if Voldemort s trying to recruit more Death Eaters it's bound to get out that he's comeback, isn't it?' asked Harry desperately.
'Voldemort doesn't march up to people's houses and bang on their front doors, Harry,' saidSirius. 'He tricks, jinxes and blackmails them. He's well-practised at operating in secret. In anycase, gathering followers is only one thing he's interested in. He's got THE ORDER OF THE PHOENIX 91other plans too, plans he can put into operation very quietly indeed, and he's concentrating onthose for the moment.'
'What's he after apart from followers?' Harry asked swiftly. He thought he saw Sirius and Lupinexchange the most fleeting of looks before Sirius answered.

'Stuff he can only get by stealth.'
When Harry continued to look puzzled, Sirius said, 'Like a weapon. Something he didn't havelast time.'
'When he was powerful before?'
'Yes.'
'Like what kind of weapon?' said Harry. 'Something worse than the Avada Kedavra -?'
'That's enough!'
Mrs Weasley spoke from the shadows beside the door. Harry hadn't noticed her return fromtaking Ginny upstairs. Her arms were crossed and she looked furious.
'I want you in bed, now. All of you,' she added, looking around at Fred, George, Ron andHermione.
'You can't boss us -' Fred began.
'Watch me,' snarled Mrs Weasley. She was trembling slightly as she looked at Sirius. 'You'vegiven Harry plenty of information. Any more and you might just as well induct him into theOrder straightaway.'
'Why not?' said Harry quickly. Til join, I want to join, I want to fight.'
'No.'
It was not Mrs Weasley who spoke this time, but Lupin.
The Order is comprised only of overage wizards,' he said. 'Wizards who have left school,' headded, as Fred and Georg^ opened their mouths. There are dangers involved of which you canhave no idea, any of you ... I think Molly's right, Sirius. We've said enough.'
Sirius half-shrugged but did not argue. Mrs Weasley beckoned imperiously to her sons andHermione. One by one they stood up and Harry, recognising defeat, followed suit.

— CHAPTER SIX—

The Noble and MostAncient House of BlackMrs Weasley followed them upstairs looking grim.
'I want you all to go straight to bed, no talking,' she said as they reached the first landing,'we've got a busy day tomorrow. I expect Ginny's asleep,' she added to Hermione, 'so try not towake her up.'
'Asleep, yeah, right,' said Fred in an undertone, after Hermione bade them goodnight and theywere climbing to the next floor. 'If Ginny's not lying awake waiting for Hermione to tell hereverything they said downstairs then I'm a Flobberworm ...'
'All right, Ron, Harry,' said Mrs Weasley on the second landing, pointing them into theirbedroom. 'Off to bed with you.'
"Night,' Harry and Ron said to the twins.
'Sleep tight,' said Fred, winking.
Mrs Weasley closed the door behind Harry with a sharp snap. The bedroom looked, ifanything, even danker and gloomier than it had on first sight. The blank picture on the wallwas now breathing very slowly and deeply, as though its invisible occupant was asleep. Harryput on his pyjamas, took off his glasses and climbed into his chilly bed while Ron threw OwlTreats up on top of the wardrobe to pacify Hedwig and Pigwidgeon, who were clatteringaround and rustling their wings restlessly.
'We can't let them out to hunt every night,' Ron explained as he pulled on his maroon pyjamas.
'Dumbledore doesn't want too many owls swooping around the square, thinks it'll looksuspicious. Oh yeah ... I forgot ...'
He crossed to the door and bolted it.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

THE NOBLE AND MOST ANCIENT HOUSE OF BLACK 93'What're you doing that for?'
'Kreacher,' said Ron as he turned off the light. 'First night I was here he came wandering in atthree in the morning. Trust me, you don't want to wake up and find him prowling around yourroom. Anyway ...' he got into his bed, settled down under the covers then turned to look atHarry in the darkness; Harry could see his outline by the moonlight filtering in through thegrimy window, 'what d'you reckon?'
Harry didn't need to ask what Ron meant.
'Well, they didn't tell us much we couldn't have guessed, did they?' he said, thinking of all thathad been said downstairs. T mean, all they've really said is that the Order's trying to stop peoplejoining Vol—'
There was a sharp intake of breath from Ron.
'—demort,' said Harry firmly. 'When are you going to start using his name? Sirius and Lupindo.'
Ron ignored this last comment.
'Yeah, you're right,' he said, 'we already knew nearly everything they told us, from using theExtendable Ears. The only new bit was -'
Crack.
'OUCH!'
'Keep your voice down, Ron, or Mum'll be back up here.'
'You two just Apparated on my knees!'
'Yeah, well, it's harder in the dark.'
Harry saw the blurred outlines of Fred and George leaping down from Ron's bed. There was agroan of bedsprings and Harry's mattress descended a few inches as George sat down near hisfeet.
'So, got there yet?' said George eagerly.
The weapon Sirius mentioned?' said Harry.
'Let slip, more like,' said Fred with relish, now sitting next to Ron. 'We didn't hear about thaton the old Extendables, did we?'
'What d'you reckon it is?' said Harry.
'Could be anything,' said Fred.
'But there can't be anything worse than the Avada Kedavra Curse, can there?' said Ron. What'sworse than death?'

94 HARRY POTTER'Maybe it's something that can kill loads of people at once,' suggested George.
'Maybe it's some particularly painful way of killing people,' said Ron fearfully.
'He's got the Cruciatus Curse for causing pain,' said Harry, 'he doesn't need anything moreefficient than that.'
There was a pause and Harry knew that the others, like him, were wondering what horrors thisweapon could perpetrate.
'So who d'you think's got it now?' asked George.
'I hope it's our side,' said Ron, sounding slightly nervous.
'If it is, Dumbledore's probably keeping it,' said Fred. *!
'Where?' said Ron quickly. 'Hogwarts?' .'
'Bet it is!' said George. That's where he hid the Philosopher's Stone.'
'A weapons going to be a lot bigger than the Stone, though!' said Ron.
'Not necessarily' said Fred.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Yeah, size is no guarantee of power,' said George. 'Look at Ginny.'
'What d'you mean?' said Harry.
'You've never been on the receiving end of one of her Bat-Bogey Hexes, have you?'
'Shhh!' said Fred, half-rising irom the bed. 'Listen!'
They fell silent. Footsteps were coming up the stairs.
'Mum,' said George and without further ado there was a loud crack and Harry felt the weightvanish from the end of his bed. A few seconds later, they heard the floorboard creak outsidetheir door; Mrs Weasley was plainly listening to check whether or not they were talking.
Hedwig and Pigwidgeon hooted dolefully. The floorboard creaked again and they heard herheading upstairs to check on Fred and George.
'She doesn't trust us at all, you know,' said Ron regretfully.
Harry was sure he would not be able to fall asleep; the evening had been so packed with thingsto think about that he fully expected to lie awake for hours mulling it all over. He wanted tocontinue talking to Ron, but Mrs Weasley was now creaking back downstairs
THE NOBLE AND MOST ANCIENT HOUSE OF BLACK 95again, and once she had gone he distinctly heard others making their way upstairs ... in fact,many-legged creatures were cantering softly up and down outside the bedroom door, andHagrid the Care of Magical Creatures teacher was saying, 'Beauties, arm they, eh, Harry? We'llbe studyin' weapons this term ..." and Harry saw that the creatures had cannons for heads andwere wheeling to face him ... he ducked ...
The next thing he knew, he was curled into a warm ball under his bedclothes and Georges loudvoice was filling the room.
'Mum says get up, your breakfast is in the kitchen and then she needs you in the drawing room,there are loads more Doxys than she thought and she's found a nest of dead Puffskeins underthe sofa.'
Half an hour later Harry and Ron, who had dressed and breakfasted quickly, entered thedrawing room, a long, high-ceilinged room on the first floor with olive green walls covered indirty tapestries. The carpet exhaled little clouds of dust every time someone put their foot on itand the long, moss green velvet curtains were buzzing as though swarming with invisible bees.
It was around these that Mrs Weasley, Hermione, Ginny, Fred and George were grouped, alllooking rather peculiar as they had each tied a cloth over their nose and mouth. Each of themwas also holding a large bottle of black liquid with a nozzle at the end.
'Cover your faces and take a spray,' Mrs Weasley said to Harry and Ron the moment she sawthem, pointing to two more bottles of black liquid standing on a spindle-legged table. 'It'sDoxycide. I've never seen an infestation this bad - what that house-elf's been doing for the lastten years -' Hermione's face was half concealed by a tea towel but Harry distinctly saw her throw areproachful look at Mrs Weasley.
'Kreacher's really old, he probably couldn't manage -'
'You'd be surprised what Kreacher can manage when he wants to, Hermione,' said Sirius, whohad just entered the room carrying a bloodstained bag of what appeared to be dead rats. 'I'vejust been feeding Buckbeak,' he added, in reply to Harrys enquiring look. 'I keep him upstairs inmy mothers bedroom. Anyway ... this writing desk ...'

96 HARRY POTTERHe dropped the bag of rals into an armchair, then bent over Jo examine the locked cabinetwhich, Harry now noticed for the fiilst time, was shaking slightly.
'Well, Molly, I'm pretty sure this is a Boggart,' said Sirius, peering through the keyhole, 'butperhaps we ought to let Mad-Eye have a shifty at it before we let it out - knowing my mother,it could be something much worse.'

'Right you are, Sirius,' said Mrs Weasley.
They were both speaking in carefully light, polite voices that told Harry quite plainly thatneither had forgotten their disagreement of the night before.
A loud, clanging bell sounded from downstairs, followed at once by the cacophony of screamsand wails that had been triggered the previous night by Tonks knocking over the umbrellastand.
'I keep telling them not to ring the doorbell!' said Sirius exas-peratedly, hurrying out of theroom. They heard him thundering down the stairs as Mrs Black's screeches echoed up throughthe house once more: 'Stains, of dishonour, filthy half-breeds, blood traitors, children of filth'Close the door, please, Harry,' said Mrs Weasley.
Harry took as much time as he dared to close the drawing-room door; he wanted to listen towhat was going on downstairs. Sirius had obviously managed to shut the curtains over hismother's portrait because she had stopped screaming. He heard Sirius walking down the hall,then the clattering of the chain on the front door, and then a deep voice he recognised asKingsley Shacklebolt's saying, 'Hestia's just relieved me, so she's got Moody's Cloak now,thought I'd leave a report for Dumbledore ...'
Feeling Mrs Weasley's eyes on the back of his head, Harry regretfully closed the drawingroomdoor and rejoined the Doxy party.
Mrs Weasley was bending over to check the page on Doxys in Gilderoy Lockhart's Guide toHousehold Pests, which was lying open on the sofa.
'Right, you lot, you need to be careful, because Doxys bite and their teeth are poisonous. I'vegot a bottle of antidote here, but I'd rather nobody needed it.'

THE NOBLE AND MOST ANCIENT HOUSE OF BLACK 97She straightened up, positioned herself squarely in front of the curtains and beckoned them allforward.
'When I say the word, start spraying immediately,' she said. They'll come Hying out at us, Iexpect, but it says on the sprays one good squirt will paralyse them. When they're immobilised,just throw them in this bucket.'
She stepped carefully out of their line of fire, and raised her own spray.
'All right - squirt!'
Harry had been spraying only a few seconds when a fully-grown Doxy came soaring out of afold in the material, shiny beetle-like wings whirring, tiny needle-sharp teeth bared, its fairylikebody covered with thick black hair and its four tiny lists clenched with fury. Harry caughtit full in the face with a blast of Doxycide. It froze in midair and fell, with a surprisingly loudthunk, on to the worn carpet below. Harry picked it up and threw it in the bucket.
'Fred, what are you doing?' said Mrs Weasley sharply. 'Spray that at once and throw it away!'
Harry looked round. Fred was holding a struggling Doxy between his forefinger and thumb.
'Right-o,' Fred said brightly, spraying the Doxy quickly in the face so that it fainted, but themoment Mrs Weasley's back was turned he pocketed it with a wink.
'We want to experiment with Doxy venom for our Skiving Snackboxes,' George told Harryunder his breath.
Deftly spraying two Doxys at once as they soared straight for his nose, Harry moved closer toGeorge and muttered out of the corner of his mouth, 'What are Skiving Snackboxes?'
'Range of sweets to make you ill,' George whispered, keeping a wary eye on Mrs Weasley'sback. 'Not seriously ill, mind, just ill enough to get you out of a class when you feel like it.

Fred and I have been developing them this summer. They're double-ended, colour-codedchews. If you eat the orange half of the Puking Pastilles, you throw up. Moment you've beenrushed out of the lesson for the hospital wing, you swallow the purple half -'
"'- which restores you to full fitness, enabling you to pursue the leisure activity of your ownchoice during an hour that would 98 HARRY POTTERotherwise have been devoted to unprofitable boredom." That's what we're putting in theadverts, anyway,' whispered Fred, who had edged over out of Mrs Weasley's line of vision andwas now sweeping a few stray Doxys from the floor and adding them to his pocket. 'But theystill need a bit of work. At the moment our testers are having a bit of trouble stoppingthemselves puking long enough to swallow the purple end.'
Testers?'
'Us,' said Fred. 'We take it in turns. George did the Fainting Fancies - we both tried theNosebleed Nougat -'
'Mum thought we'd been duelling,' said George.
'Joke shop still on, then?' Harry muttered, pretending to be adjusting the nozzle on his spray.
'Well, we haven't had a chance to get premises yet,' said Fred, dropping his voice even loweras Mrs Weasley mopped her brow with her scarf before returning to the attack, 'so we'rerunning it as a mail-order service at the moment. We put advertisements in the Daily Prophetlast week.'
'All thanks to you, mate,' said George. 'But don't worry ... Mum hasn't got a clue. She won'tread the Daily Prophet any more, 'cause of it telling lies about you and Dumbledore.'
Harry grinned. He had forced the Weasley twins to take the thousand Galleons prize money hehad won in the Triwizard Tournament to help them realise their ambition to open a joke shop,but he was still glad to know that his part in furthering their plans was unknown to MrsWeasley. She did not think running a joke shop was a suitable career for two of her sons.
The de-Doxying of the curtains took most of the morning. It was past midday when MrsWeasley finally removed her protective scarf, sank into a sagging armchair and sprang upagain with a cry of disgust, having sat on the bag of dead rats. The curtains were no longerbuzzing; they hung limp and damp from the intensive spraying. At the foot of themunconscious Doxys lay crammed in the bucket beside a bowl of their black eggs, at whichCrook-shanks was now sniffing and Fred and George were shooting covetous looks.
'I think we'll tackle those after lunch.' Mrs Weasley pointed at
THE NOBLE AND MOST ANCIENT HOUSE OF BLACK 99the dusty glass-fronted cabinets standing on either side of the mantelpiece. They were crammedwith an odd assortment of objects: a selection of rusty daggers, claws, a coiled snakeskin, anumber of tarnished silver boxes inscribed with languages Harry could not understand and,least pleasant of all, an ornate crystal bottle with a large opal set into the stopper, full of whatHarry was quite sure was blood.
The clanging doorbell rang again. Everyone looked at Mrs Weasley.
'Stay here,' she said firmly, snatching up the bag of rats as Mrs Black's screeches started upagain from down below. I'll bring up some sandwiches.'
She left the room, closing the door carefully behind her. At once, everyone dashed over to thewindow to look down on the doorstep. They could see the top of an unkempt gingery head anda stack of precariously balanced cauldrons.
'Mundungus!' said Hermione. 'What's he brought all those cauldrons for?'

'Probably looking for a sale place to keep them,' said Harry. 'Isn't that what he was doing thenight he was supposed to be tailing me? Picking up dodgy cauldrons?'
'Yeah, you're right!' said Fred, as the front door opened; Mundungus heaved his cauldronsthrough it and disappeared from view. 'Blimey, Mum won't like that ...'
He and George crossed to the door and stood beside it, listening closely. Mrs Black's screaminghad stopped.
'Mundungus is talking to Sirius and Kingsley,' Fred muttered, frowning with concentration.
'Can't hear properly ... d'you reckon we can risk the Extendable Ears?'
'Might be worth it,' said George. 'I could sneak upstairs and get a pair -'
But at that precise moment there was an explosion of sound from downstairs that renderedExtendable Ears quite unnecessary. All of them could hear exactly what Mrs Weasley wasshouting at the top of her voice.
WE ARE NOT RUNNING A HIDEOUT FOR STOLEN GOODS!'
I love hearing Mum shouting at someone else,' said Fred, with 100 HARRY POTTERa satisfied smile on his face as he opened the door an inch or so to allow Mrs Weasley's voiceto permeate the room better, 'it makes such a nice change.'
'- COMPLETELY IRRESPONSIBLE, AS IF WE HAVEN'T GOT ENOUGH TO WORRYABOUT WITHOUT YOU DRAGGING STOLEN CAULDRONS INTO THE HOUSE -'
The idiots are letting her get into her stride,' said George, shaking his head. 'You've got to headher off early otherwise she builds up a head of steam and goes on for hours. And she's beendying to have a go at Mundungus ever since he sneaked off when he was supposed to befollowing you, Harry - and there goes Sirius's mum again.'
Mrs Weasley's voice was lost amid fresh shrieks and screams from the portraits in the hall.
George made to shut the door to drown the noise, but before he could do so, a house-elf edgedinto the room.
Except for the filthy rag tied like a loincloth around its middle, it was completely naked. Itlooked very old. Its skin seemed to be several times too big for it and, though it was bald likeall house-elves, there was a quantity of white hair growing out of its large, batlike ears. Its eyeswere a bloodshot and watery grey and its fleshy nose was large and rather snoutlike.
The elf took absolutely no notice of Harry and the rest. Acting as though it could not see them,it shuffled hunchbacked, slowly and doggedly, towards the far end of the room, all the whilemuttering under its breath in a hoarse, deep voice like a bullfrogs.
'... smells like a drain and a criminal to boot, but she's no better, nasty old blood traitor with herbrats messing up my mistress's house, oh, my poor mistress, if she knew, if she knew the scumthey've let into her house, what would she say to old Kreacher, oh, the shame of it, Mudbloodsand werewolves and traitors and thieves, poor old Kreacher, what can he do ...'
'Hello, Kreacher,' said Fred very loudly, closing the door with a snap.
The house-elf froze in his tracks, stopped muttering, and gave a very pronounced and veryunconvincing start of surprise.
'Kreacher did not see young master,' he said, turning around
THE NOBLE AND MOST ANCIENT HOUSE OF BLACK 101and bowing to Fred. Still facing the carpet, he added, perfectly audibly, 'Nasty little brat of ablood traitor it is.'
'Sorry?' said George. 'Didn't catch that last bit.'
'Kreacher said nothing,' said the elf, with a second bow to George, adding in a clearundertone, 'and there's its twin, unnatural little beasts they are.'

Harry didn't know whether to laugh or not. The elf straightened up, eyeing them allmalevolently, and apparently convinced that they could not hear him as he continued tomutter.
'... and there's the Mudblood, standing there bold as brass, oh, if my mistress knew, oh, howshe'd cry, and there's a new boy, Kreacher doesn't know his name. What is he doing here?
Kreacher doesn't know ..."
This is Harry, Kreacher,' said Herrmone tentatively. 'Harry Potter.'
Kreacher's pale eyes widened and he muttered faster and more furiously than ever.
The Mudblood is talking to Kreacher as though she is my friend, if Kreacher's mistress sawhim in such company, oh, what would she say -'
'Don't call her a Mudblood!' said Ron and Ginny together, very angrily.
'It doesn't matter,' Hermione whispered, 'he's not in his right mind, he doesn't know what he's-'
'Don't kid yourself, Hermione, he knows exactly what he's saying,' said Fred, eyeing Kreacherwith great dislike.
Kreacher was still muttering, his eyes on Harry.
'Is it true? Is it Harry Potter? Kreacher can see the scar, it must be true, that's the boy whostopped the Dark Lord, Kreacher wonders how he did it -'
'Don't we all, Kreacher,' said Fred.
'What do you want, anyway?' George asked.
Kreacher's huge eyes darted towards George.
'Kreacher is cleaning,' he said evasively.
'A likely story,' said a voice behind Harry.
Sirius had come back; he was glowering at the elf from the doorway. The noise in the hall hadabated; perhaps Mrs Weasley and Mundungus had moved their argument down into thekitchen.

THE NOBLE AND MOST ANCIENT HOUSE OF BLACK 103'Keep muttering and I will be a murderer!' said Sirius irritably as he slammed the door shut onthe elf.
'Sirius, he's not right in the head,' Hermione pleaded, '1 don't think he realises we can hearhim.'
'He's been alone too long,' said Sirius, 'taking mad orders from my mother's portrait andtalking to himself, but he was always a foul little -'
'If you could just set him free,' said Hermione hopefully, 'maybe -'
'We can't set him free, he knows too much about the Order,' said Sirius curtly. 'And anyway,the shock would kill him. You suggest to him that he leaves this house, see how he takes it.'
Sirius walked across the room to where the tapestry Kreacher had been trying to protect hungthe length of the wall. Harry and the others followed.
The tapestry looked immensely old; it was faded and looked as though Doxys had gnawed itin places. Nevertheless, the golden thread with which it was embroidered still glinted brightlyenough to show them a sprawling family tree dating back (as far as Harry could tell) to theMiddle Ages. Large words at the very top of the tapestry read:
The Noble and Most Ancient House oj BlackToujours pur'
'You're not on here!' said Harry, after scanning the bottom of the tree closely.
'I used to be there,' said Sirius, pointing at a small, round, charred hole in the tapestry, ratherlike a cigarette burn. 'My sweet old mother blasted me off after I ran away from home -
Kreacher's quite fond of muttering the story under his breath.'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'You ran away from home?'
'When I was about sixteen,' said Sirius. 'I'd had enough.'
'Where did you go?' asked Harry, staring at him.
'Your dad's place,' said Sirius. 'Your grandparents were really good about it; they sort ofadopted me as a second son. Yeah, I camped out at your dad's in the school holidays, andwhen I was 104 HARRY POTTERseventeen I got a place of my own. My Uncle Alphard had left me a decent bit of gold - he'sbeen wiped off here, too, that's probably why - anyway, after that I looked after myself. I wasalways welcome at Mr and Mrs Potter's for Sunday lunch, though.'

'But ... why did you ... ?'
'Leave?' Sirius smiled bitterly and ran his fingers through his long, unkempt hair. 'Because Ihated the whole lot of them: my parents, with their pure-blood mania, convinced that to be aBlack made you practically royal ... my idiot brother, soft enough to believe them ... that's him.'
Sirius jabbed a finger at the very bottom of the tree, at the name 'Regulus Black'. A date ofdeath (some fifteen years previously) followed the date of birth.
'He was younger than me,' said Sirius, 'and a much better son, as 1 was constantly reminded.'
'But he died,' said Harry.
'Yeah,' said Sirius. 'Stupid idiot ... he joined the Death Eaters.'
'You're kidding!'
'Come on, Harry, haven't you seen enough of this house to tell what kind of wizards my familywere?' said Sirius testily.
'Were - were your parents Death Eaters as well?'
'No, no, but believe me, they thought Voldemort had the right idea, they were all for thepurification of the wizarding race, getting rid of Muggle-borns and having pure-bloods incharge. They weren't alone, either, there were quite a few people, before Voldemort showed histrue colours, who thought he had the right idea about things ... they got cold feet when theysaw what he was prepared to do to get power, though. But I bet my parents thought Reguluswas a right little hero for joining up at first.'
'Was he killed by an Auror?' Harry asked tentatively.
'Oh, no,' said Sirius. 'No, he was murdered by Voldemort. Or on Voldemort's orders, morelikely; I doubt Regulus was ever important enough to be killed by Voldemort in person. Fromwhat I found out after he died, he got in so far, then panicked about what he was being asked todo and tried to back out. Well, you don't just hand in your resignation to Voldemort. It's alifetime of service or death.'

THE NOBLE AND MOST ANCIENT HOUSE OF BLACK 105'Lunch,' said Mrs Weasleys voice.
She was holding her wand high in front of her, balancing a huge tray loaded with sandwichesand cake on its tip. She was very red in the face and still looked angry. The others moved overto her, eager for some food, but Harry remained with Sirius, who had bent closer to the tapestry.
'I haven't looked at this for years. There's Phineas Nigellus ... my great-great-grandfather,see? ... least popular Headmaster Hogwarts ever had ... and Araminta Mehflua ... cousin of mymothers ... tried to force through a Ministry Bill to make Muggle-hunting legal ... and dearAunt Elladora ... she started the family tradition of beheading house-elves when they got tooold to carry tea trays ... of course, any time the family produced someone halfway decent theywere disowned. I see Tonks isn't on here. Maybe that's why Kreacher won't take orders fromher - he's supposed to do whatever anyone in the family asks him -'

'You and Tonks are related?' Harry asked, surprised.

'Oh, yeah, her mother Andromeda was my favourite cousin,' said Sirius, examining the tapestryclosely. 'No, Andromeda's not on here either, look -'

He pointed to another small round burn mark between two names, Bellatrix and Narcissa.

'Andromeda's sisters are still here because they made lovely, respectable pure-blood marriages,but Andromeda married a Muggle-born, Ted Tonks, so -'

Sirius mimed blasting the tapestry with a wand and laughed sourly. Harry, however, did notlaugh; he was too busy staring at the names to the right of Andromeda's burn mark. A doubleline of gold embroidery linked Narcissa Black with Lucius Malfoy and a single vertical goldline from their names led to the name Draco.

'You're related to the Malfoys!'

The pure-blood families are all interrelated,' said Sirius. Tf you're only going to let your sonsand daughters marry pure-bloods your choice is very limited; there are hardly any of us left.

Molly and I are cousins by marriage and Arthur's something like my second cousin onceremoved. But there's no point looking for them on here - if ever a family was a bunch of bloodtraitors it's the Weasleys.'

106 HARRY POTTERBut Harry was now looking at the name to the left of Andromeda's burn: Bellatrix Black, whichwas connected by a double line to Rodolphus Lestrange.

'Lestrange ...' Harry said aloud. The name had stirred something in his memory; he knew it fromsomewhere, but for a moment he couldn't think where, though it gave him an odd, creepingsensation in the pit of his stomach.

They're in Azkaban,' said Sirius shortly.

Harry looked at him curiously.

'Bellatrix and her husband Rodolphus came in with Barty Crouch junior,' said Sirius, in thesame brusque voice. 'Rodolphuss brother Rabastan was with them, too.'

Then Harry remembered. He had seen Bellatrix Lestrange inside Dumbledore's Pensieve, thestrange device in which thoughts and memories could be stored: a tall dark woman with heavyliddedeyes, who had stood at her trial and proclaimed her continuing allegiance to LordVoldemort, her pride that she had tried to find him after his downfall and her conviction that shewould one day be rewarded for her loyalty.

'You never said she was your -'

'Does it matter if she's my cousin?' snapped Sirius. 'As far as I'm concerned, they're not myfamily. She's certainly not my family. I haven't seen her since I was your age, unless you counta glimpse of her coming into Azkaban. D'you think I'm proud of having a relative like her?'

'Sorry,' said Harry quickly, 'I didn't mean - I was just surprised, that's all -'

'It doesn't matter, don't apologise,' Sirius mumbled. He turned away from the tapestry, his handsdeep in his pockets. T don't like being back here,' he said, staring across the drawing room. 'Inever thought I'd be stuck in this house again.'

Harry understood completely. He knew how he would feel, when he was grown up and thoughthe was free of the place for ever, to return and live at number four, Privet Drive.

'It's ideal for Headquarters, of course,' Sirius said. 'My father put every security measure knownto wizardkind on it when he lived here. It's unplottable, so Muggles could never come and call - as if

THE NOBLE AND MOST ANCIENT HOUSE OF BLACK 107they'd ever have wanted to - and now Dumbledore's added his protection, you'd be hard put tofind a safer house anywhere. Dumbledore is Secret Keeper for the Order, you know - nobodycan find Headquarters unless he tells them personally where it is - that note Moody showedyou last night, that was from Dumbledore ...' Sirius gave a short, bark-like laugh. 'If myparents could see the use their house was being put to now ... well, my mothers portraitshould give you some ideaHe scowled for a moment, then sighed.

'I wouldn't mind if I could just get out occasionally and do something useful. I've askedDumbledore whether I can escort you to your hearing - as Snuffles, obviously - so I can giveyou a bit of moral support, what d'you think?'

Harry felt as though his stomach had sunk through the dusty carpet. He had not thought aboutthe hearing once since dinner the previous evening; in the excitement of being back with thepeople he liked best, and hearing everything that was going on, it had completely flown hismind. At Sirius's words, however, the crushing sense of dread returned to him. He stared atHermione and the Weasleys, all tucking into their sandwiches, and thought how he would feelif they went back to Hogwarts without him.

'Don't worry,' Sirius said. Harry looked up and realised that Sirius had been watching him.

'I'm sure they'll clear you, there's definitely something in the International Statute of Secrecyabout being allowed to use magic to save your own life.'

'But if they do expel me,' said Harry quietly, 'can I come back here and live with you?'

Sirius smiled sadly.

'We'll see.'

'I'd feel a lot better about the hearing if I knew I didn't have to go back to the Dursleys',' Harry pressed him.

'They must be bad if you prefer this place,' said Sirius gloomily.

'Hurry up, you two, or there won't be any food left,' Mrs Weasley called.

Sirius heaved another great sigh, cast a dark look at the tapestry, then he and Harry went tojoin the others.

Harry tried his best not to think about the hearing while they 108 HARRY POTTERemptied the glass-fronted cabinets that afternoon. Fortunately for him, it was a job thatrequired a lot of concentration, as many of the objects in there seemed very reluctant to leavetheir dusty shelves. Sirius sustained a bad bite from a silver snuffbox; within seconds hisbitten hand had developed an unpleasant crusty covering like a tough brown glove.

'Its OK,' he said, examining the hand with interest before tapping it lightly with his wand andrestoring its skin to normal, 'must be Wartcap powder in there.'

He threw the box aside into the sack where they were depositing the debris from the cabinets;

Harry saw George wrap his own hand carefully in a cloth moments later and sneak the boxinto his already Doxy-filled pocket.

They found an unpleasant-looking silver instrument, something like a many-legged pair oftweezers, which scuttled up Harrys arm like a spider when he picked it up, and attempted topuncture his skin. Sirius seized it and smashed it with a heavy book entitled Nature's Nobility:

A Wizarding Genealogy. There was a musical box that emitted a faintly sinister, tinkling tunewhen wound, and they all found themselves becoming curiously weak and sleepy, until Ginnyhad the sense to slam the lid shut; a heavy locket that none of them could open; a number ofancient seals; and, in a dusty box, an Order of Merlin, First Class, that had been awarded toSirius's grandfather for 'services to the Ministry'.

'It means he gave them a load of gold,' said Sirius contemptuously, throwing the medal intothe rubbish sack.
Several times Kreacher sidled into the room and attempted to smuggle things away under hisloincloth, muttering horrible curses every time they caught him at it. When Sirius wrested alarge golden ring bearing the Black crest from his grip, Kreacher actually burst into furioustears and left the room sobbing under his breath and calling Sirius names Harry had neverheard before.
'It was my father's,' said Sirius, throwing the ring into the sack. 'Kreacher wasn't quite asdevoted to him as to my mother, but 1 still caught him snogging a pair of my father's oldtrousers last week.'

THE NOBI.F AND MOST ANCIENT HOUSE OF BLACK 109Weasley kept them all working very hard over the next few days. The drawing room took threedays to decontaminate. Finally, the only undesirable things left in it were the tapestry of theBlack family tree, which resisted all their attempts to remove it from the wall, and the rattlingwriting desk. Moody had not dropped by Headquarters yet, so they could not be sure what wasinside it.
They moved from the drawing room to a dining room on the ground floor where they foundspiders as large as saucers lurking in the dresser (Ron left the room hurriedly to make a cup oftea and did not return for an hour and a half). The china, which bore the Black crest and motto,was all thrown unceremoniously into a sack by Sirius, and the same fate met a set of oldphotographs in tarnished silver frames, all of whose occupants squealed shrilly as the glasscovering them smashed.
Snape might refer to their work as 'cleaning', but in Harrys opinion they were really waging waron the house, which was putting up a very good fight, aided and abetted by Kreacher. Thehouse-elf kept appearing wherever they were congregated, his muttering becoming more andmore offensive as he attempted to remove anything he could from the rubbish sacks. Siriuswent as far as to threaten him with clothes, but Kreacher fixed him with a watery stare and said,'Master must do as Master wishes,' before turning away and muttering very loudly, 'but Masterwill not turn Kreacher away, no, because Kreacher knows what they are up to, oh yes, he isplotting against the Dark Lord, yes, with these Mudbloods and traitors and scum ...'
At which Sirius, ignoring Hermione's protests, seized Kreacher by the back of his loincloth andthrew him bodily from the room.
The doorbell rang several times a day, which was the cue for Sirius's mother to start shriekingagain, and for Harry and the others to attempt to eavesdrop on the visitor, though they gleanedvery little from the brief glimpses and snatches of conversation they were able to sneak beforeMrs Weasley recalled them to their tasks. Snape flitted in and out of the house several timesmore, though to Harry's relief they never came face to face; Harry also caught sight of hisTransfiguration teacher Professor McGonagall, looking very odd in a Muggle dress and coat,and she also seemed too busy 110HARRY POTTERto linger. Sometimes, however, the visitors stayed to help. Tonks joined them for amemorable afternoon in which they found a murderous old ghoul lurking in an upstairstoilet, and Lupin, who was staying in the house with Sirius but who left it for long periodsto do mysterious work for the Order, helped them repair a grandfather clock that haddeveloped the unpleasant habit of shooting heavy bolts at passers-by. Mundungusredeemed himself slightly in Mrs Weasley's eyes by rescuing Ron from an ancient set ofpurple robes that had tried to strangle him when he removed them from their wardrobe.

Despite the fact that he was still sleeping badly, still having dreams about corridors andlocked doors that made his scar prickle, Harry was managing to have fun for the first timeall summer. As long as he was busy he was happy; when the action abated, however,whenever he dropped his guard, or lay exhausted in bed watching blurred shadows moveacross the ceiling, the thought of the looming Ministry hearing returned to him. Fear jabbedat his insides like needles as he wondered what was going to happen to him if he wasexpelled. The idea was so terrible that he did not dare voice it aloud, not even to Ron andHermione, who, though he often saw them whispering together and casting anxious looks inhis direction, followed his lead in not mentioning it. Sometimes, he could not prevent hisimagination showing him a faceless Ministry official who was snapping his wand in twoand ordering him back to the Dursleys' ... but he would not go. He was determined on that.
He would come back here to Grimmauld Place and live with Sirius.
He felt as though a brick had dropped into his stomach when Mrs Weasley turned to himduring dinner on Wednesday evening and said quietly, 'I've ironed your best clothes fortomorrow morning, Harry, and I want you to wash your hair tonight, too. A good firstimpression can work wonders.'
Ron, Hermione, Fred, George and Ginny all stopped talking and looked over at him. Harrynodded and tried to keep eating his chop, but his mouth had become so dry he could notchew.
'How am I getting there?' he asked Mrs Weasley, trying to sound unconcerned.

THE NOBLE AND MOST ANCIENT HOUSE OF BLACK 111'Arthurs taking you to work with him,' said Mrs Weasley gently.
Mr Weasley smiled encouragingly at Harry across the table.
'You can wait in my office until it's time for the hearing,' he said.
Harry looked over at Sirius, but before he could ask the question, Mrs Weasley had answeredit.
'Professor Dumbledore doesn't think it's a good idea for Sirius to go with you, and I must sayI -'
'- think he's quite right,' said Sirius through clenched teeth.
Mrs Weasley pursed her lips.
'When did Dumbledore tell you that?' Harry said, staring at Sirius.
'He came last night, when you were in bed,' said Mr Weasley.
Sirius stabbed moodily at a potato with his fork. Harry lowered his own eyes to his plate. Thethought that Dumbledore had been in the house on the eve of his hearing and not asked to seehim made him feel, if it were possible, even worse.

— CHAPTER SEVEN —

The Ministry ofMagicHarry awoke at half past five the nextmorning as abruptly and completely as ifsomebody had yelled in his ear. For a fewmoments he lay immobile as the prospect ofthe disciplinary hearing filled every tinyparticle of his brain, then, unable to bear it,he leapt out of bed and put on his glasses.
Mrs Weasley had laid out his freshlylaundered jeans and T-shirt at the foot of hisbed. Harry scrambled into them. The blankpicture on the wall sniggered.
Ron was lying sprawled on his back withhis mouth wide open, fast asleep. He did notstir as Harry crossed the room, stepped outon to the landing and closed the door softlybehind him. Trying not to think of the nexttime he would see Ron, when they might nolonger be fellow students at Hogwarts,Harry walked quietly down the stairs, pastthe heads of Kreacher's ancestors, and downinto the kitchen.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

He had expected it to be empty, but whenhe reached the door he heard the soft rumbleof voices on the other side. He pushed itopen and saw Mr and Mrs Weasley, Sirius,Lupin and Tonks sitting there almost asthough they were waiting for him. All werefully dressed except Mrs Weasley, who waswearing a quilted purple dressing gown. Sheleapt to her feet the moment Harry entered.
'Breakfast,' she said as she pulled out herwand and hurried over to the fire.
'M - m - morning, Harry,' yawned Tonks.
Her hair was blonde and curly this morning.
'Sleep all right?'
'Yeah,' said Harry.
'I've b - b - been up all night,' she said,with another shuddering yawn. 'Come andsit down ...'

THE MINISTRY OF MAGIC 113She drew out a chair, knocking over the one beside it in the process.
'What do you want, Harry?' Mrs Weasley called. 'Porridge? Muffins? Kippers?
Bacon and eggs? Toast?'
'Just - just toast, thanks,' said Harry.
Lupin glanced at Harry, then said to Tonks, 'What were you saying aboutScrimgeour?'
'Oh ... yeah ... well, we need to be a bit more careful, he's been asking Kmgsleyand me funny questions ...'
Harry felt vaguely grateful that he was not required to join in the conversation.
His insides were squirming. Mrs Weasley placed a couple of pieces of toast andmarmalade in front of him; he tried to eat, but it was like chewing carpet. MrsWeasley sat down on his other side and started fussing with his T-shirt, tucking inthe label and smoothing out the creases across his shoulders. He wished shewouldn't.
'... and I'll have to tell Dumbledore I can't do night duty tomorrow, I'm just t -1- too tired,' Tonks finished, yawning hugely again.
I'll cover for you,' said Mr Weasley. 'I'm OK, I've got a report to finish anywayMr Weasley was not wearing wizards' robes but a pair of pinstriped trousersand an old bomber jacket. He turned from Tonks to Harry.
'How are you feeling?'
Harry shrugged.
'It'll all be over soon,' Mr Weasley said bracingly. Tn a few hours' time you'llbe cleared.'
Harry said nothing.
The hearing's on my floor, in Amelia Bones's office. She's Head of theDepartment of Magical Law Enforcement, and the one who'll be questioningyou.'
'Amelia Bones is OK, Harry,' said Tonks earnestly. 'She's fair, she'll hear youout.'
Harry nodded, still unable to think of anything to say.
'Don't lose your temper,' said Sirius abruptly. 'Be polite and stick to the facts.'

114 HARRY POTTERHarry nodded again.
The law's on your side,' said Lupin quietly. 'Even underage wizards areallowed to use magic in life-threatening situations.'
Something very cold trickled down the back of Harrys neck; for a moment hethought someone was putting a Disillusionment Charm on him, then he realisedthat Mrs Weasley was attacking his hair with a wet comb. She pressed hard onthe top of his head.

'Doesn't it ever lie flat?' she said desperately.
Harry shook his head.
Mr Weasley checked his watch and looked up at Harry.
'I think we'll go now,' he said. 'We're a bit early but I think you'll be better offat the Ministry than hanging around here.'
'OK,' said Harry automatically, dropping his toast and getting to his feet.
'You'll be all right, Harry,' said Tonks, patting him on the arm.
'Good luck,' said Lupin. Tm sure it will be fine.'
'And if it's not,' said Sirius grimly 'I'll see to Amelia Bones for you ...'
Harry smiled weakly. Mrs Weasley hugged him.
'We've all got our fingers crossed,' she said.
'Right,' said Harry. 'Well ... see you later then.'
He followed Mr Weasley upstairs and along the hall. He could hear Sirius'smother grunting in her sleep behind her curtains. Mr Weasley unbolted the doorand they stepped out into the cold, grey dawn.
'You don't normally walk to work, do you?' Harry asked him, as they set offbriskly around the square.
'No, I usually Apparate,' said Mr Weasley, 'but obviously you can't, and I thinkit's best we arrive in a thoroughly non-magical fashion ... makes a betterimpression, given what you're being disciplined for ...'
Mr Weasley kept his hand inside his jacket as they walked. Harry knew it wasclenched around his wand. The run-down streets were almost deserted, but whenthey arrived at the miserable little underground station they found it already fullof early-morning commuters. As ever when he found himself in close proximityto

THE MINISTRY OF MAGIC 115Muggles going about their daily business, Mr Weasley was hardput to contain his enthusiasm.
'Simply fabulous,' he whispered, indicating the automatic ticket machines.
'Wonderfully ingenious.'
They're out of order,' said Harry, pointing at the sign.
'Yes, but even so ...' said Mr Weasley, beaming at them fondlyThey bought their tickets instead from a sleepy-looking guard (Harry handledthe transaction, as Mr Weasley was not very good with Muggle money) and fiveminutes later they were boarding an underground train that rattled them offtowards the centre of London. Mr Weasley kept anxiously checking and recheckingthe Underground Map above the windows.
'Four more stops, Harry ... Three stops left now ... Two stops to go, Harry ...'
They got off at a station in the very heart of London, and were swept from thetrain in a tide of besuited men and women carrying briefcases. Up the escalatorthey went, through the ticket barrier (Mr Weasley delighted with the way the stileswallowed his ticket), and emerged on to a broad street lined with imposinglookingbuildings and already full of traffic.
'Where are we?' said Mr Weasley blankly, and for one heart-stopping momentHarry thought they had got off at the wrong station despite Mr Weasley'scontinual references to the map; but a second later he said, 'Ah yes ... this way,Harry,' and led him down a side road.
'Sorry,' he said, 'but I never come by train and it all looks rather different froma Muggle perspective. As a matter of fact, I've never even used the visitors' entrance before.'

The further they walked, the smaller and less imposing the buildings became,until finally they reached a street that contained several rather shabby-lookingoffices, a pub and an overflowing skip. Harry had expected a rather moreimpressive location for the Ministry of Magic.
'Here we are,' said Mr Weasley brightly, pointing at an old red telephone box,which was missing several panes of glass and stood before a heavily graffitiedwall. 'After you, Harry.'
He opened the telephone-box door.

116 HARRY POTTERHarry stepped inside, wondering what on earth this was about. Mr Weasleyfolded himself in beside Harry and closed the door. It was a tight fit; Harry wasjammed against the telephone apparatus, which was hanging crookedly from thewall as though a vandal had tried to rip it off. Mr Weasley reached past Harry forthe receiver.
'Mr Weasley, I think this might be out of order, too,' Harry said.
'No, no, I'm sure it's fine,' said Mr Weasley, holding the receiver above hishead and peering at the dial. 'Let's see ... six ..." he dialled the number, 'two ... four ... and another four ... and another two ..."
As the dial whirred smoothly back into place, a cool female voice soundedinside the telephone box, not from the receiver in Mr Weasley s hand, but asloudly and plainly as though an invisible woman were standing right beside them.
'Welcome to the Ministry of Magic. Please state your name and business.'
'Er ...' said Mr Weasley, clearly uncertain whether or not he should talk into thereceiver. He compromised by holding the mouthpiece to his ear, 'Arthur Weasley,Misuse of Muggle Artefacts Office, here to escort Harry Potter, who has beenasked to attend a disciplinary hearing ...'
Thank you,' said the cool female voice. 'Visitor, please take the badge andattach it to the front of your robes.'
There was a click and a rattle, and Harry saw something slide out of the metalchute where returned coins usually appeared. He picked it up: it was a squaresilver badge with Harry Potter, Disciplinary Hearing on it. He pinned it to thefront of his T-shirt as the female voice spoke again.
'Visitor to the Ministry, you are required to submit to a search and present yourwand for registration at the security desk, which is located at the far end of theAtrium.'
The floor of the telephone box shuddered. They were sinking slowly into theground. Harry watched apprehensively as the pavement seemed to rise up past theglass windows of the telephone box until darkness closed over their heads. Thenhe could see nothing at all; he could hear only a dull grinding noise as the tele
THE MINISTRY OF MAGIC 117phone box made its way down through the earth. After about a minute, though itfelt much longer to Harry, a chink of golden light illuminated his feet and,widening, rose up his body, until it hit him in the face and he had to blink to stophis eyes watering.
The Ministry of Magic wishes you a pleasant day,' said the woman's voice.
The door of the telephone box sprang open and Mr Weasley stepped out of it,followed by Harry, whose mouth had fallen open.
They were standing at one end of a very long and splendid hall with a highlypolished, dark wood floor. The peacock blue ceiling was inlaid with gleaminggolden symbols that kept moving and changing like some enormous heavenlynoticeboard. The walls on each side were panelled in shiny dark wood and hadmany gilded fireplaces set into them. Every few seconds a witch or wizard wouldemerge from one of the left-hand fireplaces with a soft whoosh. On the righthandside, short queues were forming before each fireplace, waiting to depart.

Halfway down the hall was a fountain. A group of golden statues, larger thanlife-size, stood in the middle of a circular pool. Tallest of them all was a noblelookingwizard with his wand pointing straight up in the air. Grouped around himwere a beautiful witch, a centaur, a goblin and a house-elf. The last three were alllooking adoringly up at the witch and wizard. Glittering jets of water were flyingfrom the ends of their wands, the point of the centaur's arrow, the tip of thegoblins hat and each of the house-elf's ears, so that the tinkling hiss of fallingwater was added to the pops and cracks of the Apparators and the clatter offootsteps as hundreds of witches and wizards, most of whom were wearing glum,early-morning looks, strode towards a set of golden gates at the far end of thehall.
This way,' said Mr Weasley.
They joined the throng, wending their way between the Ministry workers,some of whom were carrying tottering piles of parchment, others batteredbriefcases; still others were reading the Daily Prophet while they walked. As theypassed the fountain Harry saw silver Sickles and bronze Knuts glinting up at himfrom the bottom of the pool. A small smudged sign beside it read:

118 HARRY POTTERALL PROCEEDS FROM THE FOUNTAIN OF MAGICAL BRETHRENWILLBE GIVEN TO ST MUNGO'S HOSPITAL FOR MAGICAL MALADIESAND INJURIES.
If I'm not expelled from Hogwarts, I'll put in ten Galleons, Harry found himselfthinking desperately.
'Over here, Harry,' said Mr Weasley, and they stepped out of the stream ofMinistry employees heading for the golden gates. Seated at a desk to the left,beneath a sign saying Security, a badly-shaven wizard in peacock blue robeslooked up as they approached and put down his Daily Prophet.
Tm escorting a visitor,' said Mr Weasley, gesturing towards Harry.
'Step over here,' said the wizard in a bored voice.
Harry walked closer to him and the wizard held up a long golden rod, thinand flexible as a car aerial, and passed it up and down Harrys front and back.
'Wand,' grunted the security wizard at Harry, putting down the goldeninstrument and holding out his hand.
Harry produced his wand. The wizard dropped it on to a strange brassinstrument, which looked something like a set of scales with only one dish. Itbegan to vibrate. A narrow strip of parchment came speeding out of a slit in thebase. The wizard tore this off and read the writing on it.
'Eleven inches, phoenix-feather core, been in use four years. That correct?'
'Yes,' said Harry nervously.
'I keep this,' said the wizard, impaling the slip of parchment on a small brassspike. 'You get this back,' he added, thrusting the wand at Harry.
Thank you.'
'Hang on ...' said the wizard slowly.
His eyes had darted from the silver visitors badge on Harry's chest to hisforehead.
Thank you, Eric,' said Mr Weasley firmly, and grasping Harry by theshoulder he steered him away from the desk and back into the stream ofwizards and witches walking through the golden gates.

THE MINISTRY OF MAGIC 119Jostled slightly by the crowd, Harry followed Mr Weasley through the gatesinto the smaller hall beyond, where at least twenty lifts stood behind wroughtgolden grilles. Harry and Mr Weasley joined the crowd around one of them.

Nearby, stood a big bearded wizard holding a large cardboard box which wasemitting rasping noises.
'All right, Arthur?' said the wizard, nodding at Mr Weasley.
'What've you got there, Bob?' asked Mr Weasley, looking at the box.
'We're not sure,' said the wizard seriously. 'We thought it was a bog-standardchicken until it started breathing fire. Looks like a serious breach of the Ban onExperimental Breeding to me.'
With a great jangling and clattering a lift descended in front of them; thegolden grille slid back and Harry and Mr Weasley stepped into the lift with therest of the crowd and Harry found himself jammed against the back wall. Severalwitches and wizards were looking at him curiously; he stared at his feet to avoidcatching anyone's eye, flattening his fringe as he did so. The grilles slid shut witha crash and the lift ascended slowly, chains rattling, while the same cool femalevoice Harry had heard in the telephone box rang out again.
'Level Seven, Department of Magical Games and Sports, incorporating theBritish and Irish Quidditch League Headquarters, Official Gobstones Club andLudicrous Patents Office.'
The lift doors opened. Harry glimpsed an untidy-looking corridor, with variousposters of Quidditch teams tacked lopsidedly on the walls. One of the wizards inthe lift, who was carrying an armful of broomsticks, extricated himself withdifficulty and disappeared down the corridor. The doors closed, the lift juddéredupwards again and the woman's voice announced:
'Level Six, Department of Magical Transportation, incorporating the FlooNetwork Authority, Broom Regulatory Control, Portkey Office and ApparationTest Centre.'
Once again the lift doors opened and four or five witches and wizards got out; at the same time, several paper aeroplanes swooped into the lift. Harry stared up atthem as they flapped idly around above his head; they were a pale violet colourand he could see Ministry of Magic stamped along the edge of their wings.

120 HARRY POTTER'Just inter-departmental memos,' Mr Weasley muttered to him. 'We used touse owls, but the mess was unbelievable ... droppings all over the desks ...'
As they clattered upwards again the memos flapped around ihe lamp swayingfrom the lift's ceiling.
'Level Five, Department of International Magical Co-operation, incorporatingthe International Magical Trading Standards Body, the International MagicalOffice of Law and the International Confederation of Wizards, British Seats.'
When the doors opened, two of the memos zoomed out with a few more ofthe witches and wizards, but several more memos zoomed in, so that the lightfrom the lamp flickered and flashed overhead as they darted around it.
'Level Four, Department for the Regulation and Control of Magical Creatures,incorporating Beast, Being and Spirit Divisions, Goblin Liaison Office and PestAdvisory Bureau.'
"S'cuse,' said the wizard carrying the fire-breathing chicken and he left the liftpursued by a little flock of memos. The doors clanged shut yet again.
'Level Three, Department of Magical Accidents and Catastrophes, includingthe Accidental Magic Reversal Squad, Obliviator Headquarters and Muggle-Worthy Excuse Committee.'
Everybody left the lift on this floor except Mr Weasley, Harry and a witchwho was reading an extremely long piece of parchment that was trailing on thefloor. The remaining memos continued to soar around the lamp as the liftjuddered upwards again, then the doors opened and the voice made itsannouncement.

'Level Two, Department of Magical Law Enforcement, including theImproper Use of Magic Office, Auror Headquarters and WizengamotAdministration Services.'
This is us, Harry,' said Mr Weasley, and they followed the witch out of the liftinto a corridor lined with doors. 'My office is on the other side of the floor.'
'Mr Weasley' said Harry, as they passed a window through which sunlightwas streaming, 'aren't we still underground?'
'Yes, we are,' said Mr Weasley. Those are enchanted windows. MagicalMaintenance decide what weather we'll get every day. We
THE MINISTRY OF MAGIC 121had two months of hurricanes last time they were angling for a pay rise ... Justround here, Harry.'
They turned a corner, walked through a pair of heavy oak doors and emerged ina cluttered open area divided into cubicles, which was buzzing with talk andlaughter. Memos were zooming in and out of cubicles like miniature rockets. Alopsided sign on the nearest cubicle read: Auror Headquarters.
Harry looked surreptitiously through the doorways as they passed. The Aurorshad covered their cubicle walls with everything from pictures of wanted wizardsand photographs of their families, to posters of their favourite Quidditch teamsand articles Irom the Daily Prophet. A scarlet-robed man with a ponytail longerthan Bill's was sitting with his boots up on his desk, dictating a report to his quill.
A little further along, a witch with a patch over one eye was talking over the topof her cubicle wall to Kingsley Shacklebolt.
'Morning, Weasley,' said Kingsley carelessly, as they drew nearer. 'I've beenwanting a word with you, have you got a second?'
'Yes, if it really is a second,' said Mr Weasley, "I'm in rather a hurry.'
They were talking as though they hardly knew each other and when Harryopened his mouth to say hello to Kingsley, Mr Weasley stood on his foot. Theyfollowed Kingsley along the row and into the very last cubicle.
Harry received a slight shock; blinking down at him from every direction wasSirius's face. Newspaper cuttings and old photographs - even the one of Siriusbeing best man at the Potters' wedding -papered the walls. The only Sirius-freespace was a map of the world in which little red pins were glowing like jewels.
'Here,' said Kingsley brusquely to Mr Weasley, shoving a sheaf of parchmentinto his hand. 'I need as much information as possible on flying Muggle vehiclessighted in the last twelve months. We've received information that Black mightstill be using his old motorcycle.'
Kingsley tipped Harry an enormous wink and added, in a whisper, 'Give himthe magazine, he might find it interesting.' Then he said in normal tones, 'Anddon't take too long, Weasley, the delay on that firelegs report held ourinvestigation up for a month.'
'If you had read my report you would know that the term is 122 HARRY POTTERfirearms,' said Mr Weasley coolly. 'And I'm afraid you'll have to wait forinformation on motorcycles; we're extremely busy at the moment.' He droppedhis voice and said, 'If you can get away before seven, Molly's makingmeatballs.'
He beckoned to Harry and led him out of Kingsley's cubicle, through asecond set of oak doors, into another passage, turned left, marched alonganother corridor, turned right into a dimly lit and distinctly shabby corridor, andfinally reached a dead end, where a door on the left stood ajar, revealing abroom cupboard, and a door on the right bore a tarnished brass plaque reading:
Misuse of Muggle Artefacts.

Mr Weasley's dingy office seemed to be slightly smaller than the broomcupboard. Two desks had been crammed inside it and there was barely space tomove around them because of all the overflowing filing cabinets lining thewalls, on top of which were tottering piles of files. The little wall spaceavailable bore witness to Mr Weasley's obsessions: several posters of cars,including one of a dismantled engine; two illustrations of postboxes he seemedto have cut out of Muggle children's books; and a diagram showing how to wirea plug.
Sitting on top of Mr Weasley's overflowing in-tray was an old toaster thatwas hiccoughing in a disconsolate way and a pair of empty leather gloves thatwere twiddling their thumbs. A photograph of the Weasley family stood besidethe in-tray. Harry noticed that Percy appeared to have walked out of it.
'We haven't got a window,' said Mr Weasley apologetically, taking off hisbomber jacket and placing it on the back of his chair. 'We've asked, but theydon't seem to think we need one. Have a seat, Harry, doesn't look as if Perkins isin yet.'
Harry squeezed himself into the chair behind Perkins's desk while MrWeasley riffled through the sheaf of parchment Kingsley Shacklebolt had givenhim.
'Ah,' he said, grinning, as he extracted a copy of a magazine entitled TheQuibbler from its midst, 'yes ...'
He flicked through it. 'Yes, he's right, I'm sureSinus will find that very amusing - oh dear, what's this now?'
A memo had just zoomed in through the open door and fluttered
THE MINISTRY OF MAGIC 123to rest on top of the hiccoughing toaster. Mr Weasley unfolded it and read italoud.
"Third regurgitating public toilet reported in Bethnal Green, kindly investigateimmediately." This is getting ridiculous ...'
'A regurgitating toilet?'
'Anti-Muggle pranksters,' said Mr Weasley, frowning. 'We had two last week,one in Wimbledon, one in Elephant and Castle. Muggles are pulling the flush andinstead of everything disappearing - well, you can imagine. The poor things keepcalling in those - pumbles, I think they're called - you know, the ones who mendpipes and things.'
'Plumbers?'
'Exactly, yes, but of course they're flummoxed. I only hope we can catchwhoever's doing it.'
'Will it be Aurors who catch them?'
'Oh no, this is too trivial for Aurors, it'll be the ordinary Magical LawEnforcement Patrol - ah, Harry, this is Perkins.'
A stooped, timid-looking old wizard with fluffy white hair had just entered theroom, panting.
'Oh, Arthur!' he said desperately, without looking at Harry. Thank goodness, 1didn't know what to do for the best, whether to wait here for you or not. I've justsent an owl to your home but you've obviously missed it - an urgent messagecame ten minutes ago -'
'I know about the regurgitating toilet,' said Mr Weasley.
'No, no, it's not the toilet, it's the Potter boy's hearing - they've changed thetime and venue - it starts at eight o'clock now and it's down in old Courtroom Ten-'
'Down in old - but they told me - Merlin's beard!'
Mr Weasley looked at his watch, let out a yelp and leapt from his chair.
'Quick, Harry, we should have been there five minutes ago!'
Perkins flattened himself against the filing cabinets as Mr Weasley left theoffice at a run, Harry close on his heels.

'Why have they changed the time?' Harry said breathlessly, as they hurtled pastthe Auror cubicles; people poked out their heads and stared as they streaked past.
Harry felt as though he'd left all his insides back at Perkins's desk.

124 HARRY POTTERTve no idea, but thank goodness we got here so early, if you'd missed it, itwould have been catastrophic!'
Mr Weasley skidded to a halt beside the lifts and jabbed impatiently at the'down' button.
'Come ON!'
The lift clattered into view and they hurried inside. Every time it stopped MrWeasley cursed furiously and pummelled the number nine button.
Those courtrooms haven't been used in years,' said Mr Weasley angrily. 'Ican't think why they're doing it down there - unless -but no -'
A plump witch carrying a smoking goblet entered the lift at that moment, andMr Weasley did not elaborate.
The Atrium,' said the cool female voice and the golden grilles slid open,showing Harry a distant glimpse of the golden statues in the fountain. Theplump witch got out and a sallow-skinned wizard with a very mournful face gotin.
'Morning, Arthur,' he said in a sepulchral voice as the lift began to descend.
'Don't often see you down here.'
'Urgent business, Bode,' said Mr Weasley, who was bouncing on the balls ofhis feet and throwing anxious looks over at Harry.
'Ah, yes,' said Bode, surveying Harry unblinkingly. 'Of course.'
Harry barely had emotion to spare for Bode, but his unfaltering gaze did notmake him feel any more comfortable.
'Department of Mysteries,' said the cool female voice, and left it at that.
'Quick, Harry,' said Mr Weasley as the lift doors rattled open, and they spedup a corridor that was quite different from those above. The walls were bare; there were no windows and no doors apart from a plain black one set at the veryend of the corridor. Harry expected them to go through it, but instead MrWeasley seized him by the arm and dragged him to the left, where there was anopening leading to a flight of steps.
'Down here, down here,' panted Mr Weasley, taking two steps at a time. Thelift doesn't even come down this far ... why they're doing it down there I ...'
They reached the bottom of the steps and ran along yet anotherTHE MINISTRY OF MAGIC125 corridor, which bore a great resemblance to the one that led to Snape's dungeon atHogwarts, with rough stone walls and torches in brackets. The doors they passedhere were heavy wooden ones with iron bolts and keyholes.

'Courtroom ... Ten ... I think ... we're nearly ... yes.'
Mr Weasley stumbled to a halt outside a grimy dark door with an immenseiron lock and slumped against the wall, clutching at a stitch in his chest.
'Go on,' he panted, pointing his thumb at the door. 'Get in there.'
'Aren't - aren't you coming with -?'
'No, no, I'm not allowed. Good luck!'
Harry's heart was beating a violent tattoo against his Adam's apple. Heswallowed hard, turned the heavy iron door handle and stepped inside the courtroom.

— CHAPTER EIGHT —

The HearingHarry gasped; he could not help himself.

The large dungeon he had entered washorribly familiar. He had not only seen itbefore, he had been here before. This wasthe place he had visited inside Dumbledore'sPensieve, the place where he had watchedthe Lestranges sentenced to lifeimprisonment in Azkaban.

The walls were made of dark stone, dimlylit by torches. Empty benches rose on eitherside of him, but ahead, in the highestbenches of all, were many shadowy figures.

They had been talking in low voices, but asthe heavy door swung closed behind Harryan ominous silence fell.

A cold male voice rang across thecourtroom.

'You're late.'

'Sorry,' said Harry nervously 'I — I didn'tknow the time had been changed.'

That is not the Wizengamot's fault,' saidthe voice. 'An owl was sent to you thismorning. Take your seat.'

Harry dropped his gaze to the chair in thecentre of the room, the arms of which werecovered in chains. He had seen those chainsspring to life and bind whoever sat betweenthem. His footsteps echoed loudly as hewalked across the stone floor. When he satgingerly on the edge of the chair the chainsclinked threateningly, but did not bind him.

Feeling rather sick, he looked up at thepeople seated at the bench above.

There were about fifty of them, all, as faras he could see, wearing plum-colouredrobes with an elaborately worked silver 'Won the left-hand side of the chest and allstaring down their noses at him, some withvery austere expressions, others looks offrank curiosity.

THE HE A RING 127In the very middle of the front row sat Cornelius Fudge, the Minister forMagic. Fudge was a portly man who often sported a lime-green bowler hat,though today he had dispensed with it; he had dispensed, too, with the indulgentsmile he had once worn when he spoke to Harry. A broad, square-jawed witchwith very short grey hair sat on Fudge's left; she wore a monocle and lookedforbidding. On Fudge's right was another witch, but she was sitting so far backon the bench that her face was in shadow.

'Very well,' said Fudge. The accused being present - finally -let us begin. Areyou ready?' he called down the row.

'Yes, sir,' said an eager voice Harry knew. Ron's brother Percy was sitting atthe very end of the front bench. Harry looked at Percy, expecting some sign ofrecognition from him, but none came. Percy's eyes, behind his horn-rimmedglasses, were fixed on his parchment, a quill poised in his hand.

'Disciplinary hearing of the twelfth of August,' said Fudge in a ringing voice,and Percy began taking notes at once, 'into offences committed under the Decreefor the Reasonable Restriction of Underage Sorcery and the International Statuteof Secrecy by Harry James Potter, resident at number four, Privet Drive, LittleWhinging, Surrey.

'Interrogators: Cornelius Oswald Fudge, Minister for Magic; Amelia SusanBones, Head of the Department of Magical Law Enforcement; Dolores JaneUmbridge, Senior Undersecretary to the Minister. Court Scribe, Percy IgnatiusWeasley -'

'Witness for the defence, Albus Percival Wulfric Brian Dumble-dore,' said aquiet voice from behind Harry, who turned his head so fast he cricked his neck.

Dumbledore was striding serenely across the room wearing long midnightbluerobes and a perfectly calm expression. His long silver beard and hairgleamed in the torchlight as he drew level with Harry and looked up at Fudgethrough the half-moon spectacles that rested halfway down his very crookednose.

The members of the Wizengamot were muttering. All eyes were now onDumbledore. Some looked annoyed, others slightly frightened; two elderlywitches in the back row, however, raised their hands and waved in welcome.

128 HARRY POTTERA powerful emotion had risen in Harry's chest at the sight of Dumbledore, afortified, hopeful feeling rather like that which phoenix song gave him. Hewanted to catch Dumbledore's eye, but Dumbledore was not looking his way; hewas continuing to look up at the obviously flustered Fudge.

'Ah,' said Fudge, who looked thoroughly disconcerted. 'Dumbledore. Yes.

You - er - got our - er - message that the time and -er - place of the hearing hadbeen changed, then?'

'I must have missed it,' said Dumbledore cheerfully. 'However, due to a luckymistake I arrived at the Ministry three hours early, so no harm done.'

'Yes - well - I suppose we'll need another chair - I - Weasley, could you -?'

'Not to worry, not to worry,' said Dumbledore pleasantly; he took out hiswand, gave it a little flick, and a squashy chintz armchair appeared out ofnowhere next to Harry. Dumbledore sat down, put the tips of his long fingerstogether and surveyed Fudge over them with an expression of polite interest. TheWizengamot was still muttering and fidgeting restlessly; only when Fudge spokeagain did they settle down.

'Yes,' said Fudge again, shuffling his notes. 'Well, then. So. The charges. Yes.'

He extricated a piece of parchment from the pile before him, took a deepbreath, and read out, The charges against the accused are as follows:

That he did knowingly, deliberately and in full awareness of the illegality ofhis actions, having received a previous written warning from the Ministry ofMagic on a similar charge, produce a Patronus Charm in a Muggle-inhabitedarea, in the presence of a Muggle, on the second of August at twenty-threeminutes past nine, which constitutes an offence under Paragraph C of the Decreefor the Reasonable Restriction of Underage Sorcery, 1875, and also underSection 13 of the International Confederation of Warlocks' Statute of Secrecy.

'You are Harry James Potter, of number four, Privet Drive, Little Whinging,Surrey?' Fudge said, glaring at Harry over the top of his parchment.

THE HEARING 129'Yes,' Harry said.

'You received an official warning from the Ministry for using illegal magicthree years ago, did you not?'

'Yes, but -'

'And yet you conjured a Patronus on the night of the second of August?' saidFudge.

'Yes,' said Harry, 'but -'

'Knowing that you are not permitted to use magic outside school while you areunder the age of seventeen?'

'Yes, but -'
'Knowing that you were in an area full of Muggles?'
'Yes, but -'
'Fully aware that you were in close proximity to a Muggle at the time?'
'Yes,' said Harry angrily, 'but 1 only used it because we were -'
The witch with the monocle cut across him in a booming voice.
'You produced a fully-fledged Patronus?'
'Yes,' said Harry, 'because -'
'A corporeal Patronus?'
'A - what?' said Harry.
'Your Patronus had a clearly defined form? I mean to say, it was more thanvapour or smoke?'
'Yes,' said Harry, feeling both impatient and slightly desperate, 'it's a stag, it'salways a stag.'
'Always?' boomed Madam Bones. 'You have produced a Patronus beforenow?'
'Yes,' said Harry, 'I've been doing it for over a year.'
'And you are fifteen years old?'
'Yes, and -'
'You learned this at school?'
'Yes, Professor Lupin taught me in my third year, because of the -'
'Impressive,' said Madam Bones, staring down at him, 'a true Patronus at hisage ... very impressive indeed.'
Some of the wizards and witches around her were muttering again; a fewnodded, but others were frowning and shaking their heads.

130 HARRY POTTER'It's not a question of how impressive the magic was,' said Fudge in a testyvoice, 'in fact, the more impressive the worse it is, I would have thought, giventhat the boy did it in plain view of a Muggle!'
Those who had been frowning now murmured in agreement, but it was thesight of Percy's sanctimonious little nod that goaded Harry into speech.
'I did it because of the Dementors!' he said loudly, before anyone couldinterrupt him again.
He had expected more muttering, but the silence that fell seemed to besomehow denser than before.
'Dementors?' said Madam Bones after a moment, her thick eyebrows risinguntil her monocle looked in danger of falling out. 'What do you mean, boy?'
'I mean there were two Dementors down that alleyway and they went for meand my cousin!'
'Ah,' said Fudge again, smirking unpleasantly as he looked around at theWizengamot, as though inviting them to share the joke. 'Yes. Yes, I thoughtwe'd be hearing something like this.'
'Dementors in Little Whinging?' Madam Bones said, in a tone of greatsurprise. 'I don't understand -'
'Don't you, Amelia?' said Fudge, still smirking. 'Let me explain. He's beenthinking it through and decided Dementors would make a very nice little coverstory, very nice indeed. Muggles can't see Dementors, can they, boy? Highlyconvenient, highly convenient ... so it's just your word and no witnesses ...'
'I'm not lying!' said Harry loudly, over another outbreak of muttering fromthe court. There were two of them, coming from opposite ends of the alley,everything went dark and cold and my cousin felt them and ran for it -'
'Enough, enough!' said Fudge, with a very supercilious look on his face. 'I'msorry to interrupt what I'm sure would have been a very well-rehearsed story -' Dumbledore cleared his throat. The Wizengamot fell silent again.

'We do, in fact, have a witness to the presence of Dementors in thatalleyway,' he said, 'other than Dudley Dursley, I mean.'
Fudge's plump face seemed to slacken, as though somebody had let air out ofit. He stared down at Dumbledore for a moment or
THE HEARING 131two, then, with the appearance of a man pulling himself back together, said, 'Wehaven't got time to listen to more tarradiddles, I'm afraid, Dumbledore. I want thisdealt with quickly -'
'I may be wrong,' said Dumbledore pleasantly, 'but I am sure that under theWizengamot Charter of Rights, the accused has the right to present witnesses forhis or her case? Isn't that the policy of the Department of Magical LawEnforcement, Madam Bones?' he continued, addressing the witch in the monocle.
'True,' said Madam Bones. 'Perfectly true.'
'Oh, very well, very well,' snapped Fudge. 'Where is this person?'
T brought her with me,' said Dumbledore. 'She's just outside the door. Should 1-?'
'No — Weasley, you go,' Fudge barked at Percy, who got up at once, ran downthe stone steps from the judge's balcony and hurried past Dumbledore and Harrywithout glancing at them.
A moment later, Percy returned, followed by Mrs Figg. She looked scared andmore batty than ever. Harry wished she had thought to change out of her carpetslippers.
Dumbledore stood up and gave Mrs Figg his chair, conjuring a second one forhimself.
'Full name?' said Fudge loudly, when Mrs Figg had perched herself nervouslyon the very edge of her seal.
'Arabella Doreen Figg,' said Mrs Figg in her quavery voice.
'And who exactly are you?' said Fudge, in a bored and lofty voice.
Tm a resident of Little Whinging, close to where Harry Potter lives,' said MrsFigg.
'We have no record of any witch or wizard living in Little Whinging, otherthan Harry Potter,' said Madam Bones at once. That situation has always beenclosely monitored, given ... given past events.'
'I'm a Squib,' said Mrs Figg. 'So you wouldn't have me registered, would you?'
'A Squib, eh?' said Fudge, eyeing her closely. 'We'll be checking that. You'llleave details of your parentage with my assistant Weasley. Incidentally, canSquibs see Dementors?' he added, looking left and right along the bench.
'Yes, we can!' said Mrs Figg indignantly.

132 HARRY POTTERFudge looked back down at her, his eyebrows raised. 'Very well,' he saidaloofly. 'What is your story?'
'I had gone out to buy cat food from the corner shop at the end of WisteriaWalk, around about nine o'clock, on the evening of the second of August,' gabbled Mrs Figg at once, as though she had learned what she was saying byheart, 'when I heard a disturbance down the alleyway between MagnoliaCrescent and Wisteria Walk. On approaching the mouth of the alleyway I sawDementors running -'
'Running?' said Madam Bones sharply. 'Dementors don't run, they glide.'
That's what 1 meant to say,' said Mrs Figg quickly, patches of pink appearingin her withered cheeks. 'Gliding along the alley towards what looked like twoboys.'

'What did they look like?' said Madam Bones, narrowing her eyes so that theedge of the monocle disappeared into her flesh.
'Well, one was very large and the other one rather skinny -'
'No, no,' said Madam Bones impatiently. 'The Dementors ... describe them.'
'Oh, said Mrs Figg, the pink flush creeping up her neck now. They were big.
Big and wearing cloaks.'
1Harry felt a horrible sinking in the pit of his stomach. Whatever Mrs Figgmight say, it sounded to him as though the most she had ever seen was a pictureof a Dementor, and a picture could never convey the truth of what these beingswere like: the eerie way they moved, hovering inches over the ground; or therotting smell of them; or that terrible rattling noise they made as they sucked onthe surrounding air ...
In the second row, a dumpy wizard with a large black moustache leaned closeto whisper in the ear of his neighbour, a frizzy-haired witch. She smirked andnodded.
'Big and wearing cloaks,' repeated Madam Bones coolly, while Fudge snortedderisively. 'I see. Anything else?'
'Yes,' said Mrs Figg. 'I felt them. Everything went cold, and this was a verywarm summer's night, mark you. And I felt ... as though all happiness had gonefrom the world ... and I remembered ... dreadful things ...'

THE HEARING 133Her voice shook and died.
Madam Bones's eyes widened slightly. Harry could see red marks under hereyebrow where the monocle had dug into it.
'What did the Dementors do?' she asked, and Harry felt a rush of hope.
They went for the boys,' said Mrs Figg, her voice stronger and more confidentnow, the pink flush ebbing away from her face. 'One of them had fallen. Theother was backing away, trying to repel the Dementor. That was Harry. He triedtwice and produced only silver vapour. On the third attempt, he produced aPatronus, which charged down the first Dementor and then, with hisencouragement, chased the second one away from his cousin. And thatthat is what happened,' Mrs Figg finished, somewhat lamely.
Madam Bones looked down at Mrs Figg in silence. Fudge was not looking ather at all, but fidgeting with his papers. Finally, he raised his eyes and said,rather aggressively, That's what you saw, is it?'
That is what happened,' Mrs Figg repeated.
'Very well,' said Fudge. 'You may go.'
Mrs Figg cast a frightened look from Fudge to Dumbledore, then got up andshuffled otf towards the door. Harry heard it thud shut behind her.
'Not a very convincing witness,' said Fudge loftily.
'Oh, I don't know,' said Madam Bones, in her booming voice. 'She certainlydescribed the effects of a Dementor attack very accurately. And I can't imaginewhy she would say they were there if they weren't.'
'But Dementors wandering into a Muggle suburb and just happening to comeacross a wizard?' snorted Fudge. The odds on that must be very, very long. EvenBagman wouldn't have bet -'
'Oh, 1 don't think any of us believe the Dementors were there by coincidence,' said Dumbledore lightly.
The witch sitting to the right of Fudge, with her face in shadow, movedslightly but everyone else was quite still and silent.

And what is that supposed to mean?' Fudge asked icily.
'It means that I think they were ordered there,' said Dumbledore.
'I think we might have a record of it if someone had ordered a 134 HARRY POTTERpair of Dementors to go strolling through Little Whanging!' barked Fudge.
'Not if the Dementors are taking orders from someone other than the Ministryof Magic these days,' said Dumbledore calmly. 'I have already given you myviews on this matter, Cornelius.'
'Yes, you have,' said Fudge forcefully, 'and I have no reason to believe thatyour views are anything other than bilge, Dumbledore. The Dementors remainin place in Azkaban and are doing everything we ask them to.'
Then,' said Dumbledore, quietly but clearly, 'we must ask ourselves whysomebody within the Ministry ordered a pair of Dementors into that alleywayon the second of August.'
In the complete silence that greeted these words, the witch to the right ofFudge leaned forwards so that Harry saw her for the first time.
He thought she looked just like a large, pale toad. She was rather squat with abroad, flabby face, as little neck as Uncle Vernon and a very wide, slack mouth.
Her eyes were large, round and slightly bulging. Even the little black velvetbow perched on top of her short curly hair put him in mind of a large fly shewas about to catch on a long sticky tongue.
The Chair recognises Dolores Jane Umbridge, Senior Undersecretary to theMinister,' said Fudge.
The witch spoke in a fluttery, girlish, high-pitched voice that took Harryaback; he had been expecting a croak.
'I'm sure I must have misunderstood you, Professor Dumbledore,' she said,with a simper that left her big, round eyes as cold as ever. 'So silly of me. But itsounded for a teensy moment as though you were suggesting that the Ministryof Magic had ordered an attack on this boy!'
She gave a silvery laugh that made the hairs on the back of Harry's neckstand up. A few other members of the Wizengamot laughed with her. It couldnot have been plainer that not one of them was really amused.
'If it is true that the Dementors are taking orders only from the Ministry ofMagic, and it is also true that two Dementors attacked Harry and his cousin aweek ago, then it follows logically that
THE HEARING 135somebody at the Ministry might have ordered the attacks,' said Dumbledorepolitely. 'Of course, these particular Dementors may have been outside Ministrycontrol -'
'There are no Dementors outside Ministry control!' snapped Fudge, who hadturned brick red.
Dumbledore inclined his head in a little bow.
Then undoubtedly the Ministry will be making a full inquiry into why twoDementors were so very far from Azkaban and why they attacked withoutauthorisation.'
'It is not for you to decide what the Ministry of Magic does or does not do,Dumbledore!' snapped Fudge, now a shade of magenta of which Uncle Vernonwould have been proud.
'Of course it isn't,' said Dumbledore mildly. 'I was merely expressing myconfidence that this matter will not go uninvesti-gated.'
He glanced at Madam Bones, who readjusted her monocle and stared back athim, frowning slightly.
T would remind everybody that the behaviour of these Dementors, if indeedthey are not figments of this boy's imagination, is not the subject of this hearing!'
said Fudge. 'We are here to examine Harry Potter's offences under the Decree forthe Reasonable Restriction of Underage Sorcery!'

'Of course we are,' said Dumbledore, 'but the presence of Dementors in thatalleyway is highly relevant. Clause Seven of the Decree states that magic may beused before Muggles in exceptional circumstances, and as those exceptionalcircumstances include situations which threaten the life of the wizard or witchhim- or herself, or any witches, wizards or Muggles present at the time of the -'

'We are familiar with Clause Seven, thank you very much!' snarled Fudge.

'Of course you are,' said Dumbledore courteously. Then we are in agreementthat Harrys use of the Patronus Charm in these circumstances falls precisely intothe category of exceptional circumstances the clause describes?'

'If there were Dementors, which I doubt.'

'You have heard it from an eyewitness,' Dumbledore interrupted.

136 HARRY POTTER'If you still doubt her truthfulness, call her back, question her again. 1 am sureshe would not object.'

'I - that - not -' blustered Fudge, fiddling with the papers before him. 'It's - Iwant this over with today, Dumbledore!'

'But naturally, you would not care how many times you heard from awitness, if the alternative was a serious miscarriage of justice,' saidDumbledore.

'Serious miscarriage, my hat!' said Fudge at the top of his voice. 'Have youever bothered to tot up the number of cock-and-bull stories this boy has comeout with, Dumbledore, while trying to cover up his flagrant misuse of magic outof school? I suppose you've forgotten the Hover Charm he used three years ago-'

That wasn't me, it was a house-elf!' said Harry.

'YOU SEE?' roared Fudge, gesturing flamboyantly in Harry's direction. 'Ahouse-elf! In a Muggle house! I ask you.'

The house-elfin question is currently in the employ of Hogwarts School,' said Dumbledore. 'I can summon him here in an instant to give evidence if youwish."

'I - not - I haven't got time to listen to house-elves! Anyway, that's not theonly - he blew up his aunt, for God's sake!' Fudge shouted, banging his fist onthe judge's bench and upsetting a bottle of ink.

'And you very kindly did not press charges on that occasion, accepting, Ipresume, that even the best wizards cannot always control their emotions,' saidDumbledore calmly, as Fudge attempted to scrub the ink off his notes.

'And I haven't even started on what he gets up to at school.'

'But, as the Ministry has no authority to punish Hogwarts students formisdemeanours at school, Harry's behaviour there is not relevant to thishearing,' said Dumbledore, as politely as ever, but now with a suggestion ofcoolness behind his words.

'Oho!' said Fudge. 'Not our business what he does at school, eh? You thinkso?'

The Ministry does not have the power to expel Hogwarts students,Cornelius, as I reminded you on the night of the second of August,' saidDumbledore. 'Nor does it have the right to confiscate wands until charges havebeen successfully proven; again, as

THE HEARING 137I reminded you on the night of the second of August. In your admirable haste toensure that the law is upheld, you appear, inadvertently I am sure, to haveoverlooked a few laws yourself.'

'Laws can be changed,' said Fudge savagely.

'Of course they can,' said Dumbledore, inclining his head. 'And vou certainlyseem to be making many changes, Cornelius. Why, in the few short weeks since Iwas asked to leave the Wizengamot, it has already become the practice to hold afull criminal trial to deal with a simple matter of underage magic!'

A few of the wizards above them shifted uncomfortably in their seats. Fudgeturned a slightly deeper shade of puce. The toadlike witch on his right, however,merely gazed at Dumbledore, her face quite expressionless.
'As far as I am aware,' Dumbledore continued, 'there is no law yet in place thatsays this court's job is to punish Harry for every bit of magic he has everperformed. He has been charged with a specific offence and he has presented hisdefence. All he and I can do now is to await your verdict.'
Dumbledore put his fingertips together again and said no more. Fudge glaredat him, evidently incensed. Harry glanced sideways at Dumbledore, seekingreassurance; he was not at all sure that Dumbledore was right in telling theWizengamot, in effect, that it was about time they made a decision. Again,however, Dumbledore seemed oblivious to Harry's attempt to catch his eye. Hecontinued to look up at the benches where the entire Wizengamot had fallen intourgent, whispered conversations.
Harry looked at his feet. His heart, which seemed to have swollen to anunnatural size, was thumping loudly under his ribs. He had expected the hearingto last longer than this. He was not at all sure that he had made a goodimpression. He had not really said very much. He ought to have explained morefully about the Dementors, about how he had fallen over, about how both he andDudley had nearly been kissed ...
Twice he looked up at Fudge and opened his mouth to speak, but his swollenheart was now constricting his air passages and both times he merely took a deepbreath and looked back down at his shoes.

138HARRY POTTERThen the whispering stopped. Harry wanted to look up atthe judges, but found that it was really much, much easier tokeep examining his laces.
Those in favour of clearing the witness of all charges?'
said Madam Boness booming voice.
Harrys head jerked upwards. There were hands in the air,many of them ... more than half! Breathing very fast, he triedto count, but before he could finish, Madam Bones had said,'And those in favour of conviction?'
Fudge raised his hand; so did half a dozen others,including the witch on his right and the heavily-moustachedwizard and the frizzy-haired witch in the second row.
Fudge glanced around at them all, looking as though therewas something large stuck in his throat, then lowered his ownhand. He took two deep breaths and said, in a voice distortedby suppressed rage, 'Very well, very well ... cleared of allcharges.'
'Excellent,' said Dumbledore briskly, springing to his feet,pulling out his wand and causing the two chintz armchairs tovanish. 'Well, I must be getting along. Good-day to you all.'
And without looking once at Harry, he swept from the dungeon.

— CHAPTER NINE —

The Woes of Mrs WeaskyDumbledore's abrupt departure took Harry completely by surprise. He remainedsitting where he was in the chained chair, struggling with his feelings of shockand relief. The Wizengamot were all getting to their feet, talking, gathering uptheir papers and packing them away. Harry stood up. Nobody seemed to bepaying him the slightest bit of attention, except the toadlike witch on Fudge'sright, who was now gazing down at him instead of at Dumbledore. Ignoring her,he tried to catch Fudge's eye, or Madam Bones's, wanting to ask whether he wasfree to go, but Fudge seemed quite determined not to notice Harry, and MadamBones was busy with her briefcase, so he took a few tentative steps towards theexit and, when nobody called him back, broke into a very fast walk.

He took the last few steps at a run, wrenched open the door and almostcollided with Mr Weasley, who was standing right outside, looking pale andapprehensive.

'Dumbledore didn't say -'

'Cleared,' Harry said, pulling the door closed behind him, 'of all charges!'

Beaming, Mr Weasley seized Harry by the shoulders.

'Harry, that's wonderful! Well, of course, they couldn't have found you guilty,not on the evidence, but even so, 1 can't pretend I wasn't -'

But Mr Weasley broke off, because the courtroom door had just openedagain. The Wizengamot were filing out.

'Merlin's beard!' exclaimed Mr Weasley wonderingly, pulling Harry aside tolet them all pass. 'You were tried by the full court?'

'I think so,' said Harry quietly.

140 HARRY POTTEROne or two of the wizards nodded to Harry as they passed and a few,including Madam Bones, said, 'Morning, Arthur,' to Mr Weasley, but mostaverted their eyes. Cornelius Fudge and the toadlike witch were almost the lastto leave the dungeon. Fudge acted as though Mr Weasley and Harry were part ofthe wall, but again, the witch looked almost appraisingly at Harry as she passed.

Last of all to pass was Percy. Like Fudge, he completely ignored his father andHarry; he marched past clutching a large roll of parchment and a handful ofspare quills, his back rigid and his nose in the air. The lines around Mr Weasleysmouth tightened slightly, but other than this he gave no sign that he had seen histhird son.

'I'm going to take you straight back so you can tell the others the good news,' he said, beckoning Harry forwards as Percy's heels disappeared up the steps toLevel Nine. Til drop you off on the way to that toilet in Bethnal Green. Come on..."

'So, what will you have to do about the toilet?' Harry asked, grinning.

Everything suddenly seemed five times funnier than usual. It was starting to sinkin: he was cleared, he was going back to Hogwarts.

'Oh, its a simple enough anti-jinx,' said Mr Weasley as they mounted thestairs, 'but it's not so much having to repair the damage, its more the attitudebehind the vandalism, Harry. Muggle-baiting might strike some wizards asfunny, but it's an expression of something much deeper and nastier, and I for one-'

Mr Weasley broke off in mid-sentence. They had just reached the ninth-levelcorridor and Cornelius Fudge was standing a few feet away from them, talkingquietly to a tall man with sleek blond hair and a pointed, pale face.

The second man turned at the sound of their footsteps. He, too, broke off inmid-conversation, his cold grey eyes narrowed and fixed upon Harry's face.

'Well, well, well ... Patronus Potter,' said Lucius Malfoy coolly.

Harry felt winded, as though he had just walked into something solid. He hadlast seen those cold grey eyes through slits in a Death Eaters hood, and lastheard that man's voice jeering in a dark graveyard while Lord Voldemorttortured him. Harry could not believe

THE WOES OF MRS WEASLEY 141that Lucius Malfoy dared look him in the face; he could not believe that he washere, in the Ministry of Magic, or that Cornelius Fudge was talking to him, whenHarry had told Fudge mere weeks ago that Malfoy was a Death Eater.
'The Minister was just telling me about your lucky escape, Potter,' drawled MrMalfoy. 'Quite astonishing, the way you continue to wriggle out of very tightholes ... snakelike, in fact.'
Mr Weasley gripped Harry's shoulder in warning.
'Yeah,' said Harry, 'yeah, I'm good at escaping.'
Lucius Malfoy raised his eyes to Mr Weasley s face.
'And Arthur Weasley too! What are you doing here, Arthur?'
T work here,' said Mr Weasley curtly.
'Not here, surely?' said Mr Malfoy, raising his eyebrows and glancing towardsthe door over Mr Weasley's shoulder. T thought you were up on the second floor... don't you do something that involves sneaking Muggle artefacts home andbewitching them?'
'No,' Mr Weasley snapped, his fingers now biting into Harrys shoulder.
What are you doing here, anyway?' Harry asked Lucius Malfoy.
T don't think private matters between myself and the Minister are any concernof yours, Potter,' said Malfoy, smoothing the front of his robes. Harry distinctlyheard the gentle clinking of what sounded like a full pocket of gold. 'Really, justbecause you are Dumbledore's favourite boy, you must not expect the sameindulgence from the rest of us ... shall we go up to your office, then, Minister?'
'Certainly' said Fudge, turning his back on Harry and Mr Weasley. This way,Lucius.'
They strode off together, talking in low voices. Mr Weasley did not let go ofHarry's shoulder until they had disappeared into the lift.
Why wasn't he waiting outside Fudge's office if they've got business to dotogether?' Harry burst out furiously. What was he doing down here?'
'Trying to sneak down to the courtroom, if you ask me,' said Mr Weasley,looking extremely agitated and glancing over his shoulder as though making surethey could not be overheard. Trying 140 HARRY POTTEROne or two of the wizards nodded to Harry as they passed and a few,including Madam Bones, said, 'Morning, Arthur,' to Mr Weasley, but mostaverted their eyes. Cornelius Fudge and the toadlike witch were almost the lastto leave the dungeon. Fudge acted as though Mr Weasley and Harry were part ofthe wall, but again, the witch looked almost appraisingly at Harry as she passed. Last of all to pass was Percy. Like Fudge, he completely ignored his father andHarry; he marched past clutching a large roll of parchment and a handful ofspare quills, his back rigid and his nose in the air. The lines around Mr Weasley'smouth tightened slightly, but other than this he gave no sign that he had seen histhird son.
'I'm going to take you straight back so you can tell the others the good news,' he said, beckoning Harry forwards as Percy's heels disappeared up the steps toLevel Nine. Til drop you off on the way to that toilet in Bethnal Green. Come on..."
'So, what will you have to do about the toilet?' Harry asked, grinning.
Everything suddenly seemed five times funnier than usual. It was starting to sinkin: he was cleared, he was going back to Hogwarts.
'Oh, it's a simple enough anti-jinx,' said Mr Weasley as they mounted thestairs, 'but it's not so much having to repair the damage, it's more the attitudebehind the vandalism, Harry. Muggle-baiting might strike some wizards asfunny, but it's an expression of something much deeper and nastier, and I for one-'

Mr Weasley broke off in mid-sentence. They had just reached the ninth-levelcorridor and Cornelius Fudge was standing a few feet away from them, talkingquietly to a tall man with sleek blond hair and a pointed, pale face.
The second man turned at the sound of their footsteps. He, too, broke off inmid-conversation, his cold grey eyes narrowed and fixed upon Harry's face.
'Well, well, well ... Patronus Potter,' said Lucius Malfoy coolly.
Harry felt winded, as though he had just walked into something solid. He hadlast seen those cold grey eyes through slits in a Death Eaters hood, and last heardthat man's voice jeering in a dark graveyard while Lord Voldemort tortured him.
Harry could not believe
THE WOES OF MRS WEASLEY 141that Lucius Malfoy dared look him in the face; he could not believe that he washere, in the Ministry of Magic, or that Cornelius Fudge was talking to him, whenHarry had told Fudge mere weeks ago that Malfoy was a Death Eater.
The Minister was just telling me about your lucky escape, Potter,' drawled MrMalfoy. 'Quite astonishing, the way you continue to wriggle out of very tightholes ... snakdike, in fact.'
Mr Weasley gripped Harry's shoulder in warning.
'Yeah,' said Harry, 'yeah, I'm good at escaping.'
Lucius Malfoy raised his eyes to Mr Weasley's face.
'And Arthur Weasley too! What are you doing here, Arthur?'
'I work here,' said Mr Weasley curtly.
'Not here, surely?' said Mr Malfoy, raising his eyebrows and glancing towardsthe door over Mr Weasley's shoulder. 'I thought you were up on the second floor... don't you do something that involves sneaking Muggle artefacts home andbewitching them?'
'No,' Mr Weasley snapped, his fingers now biting into Harry's shoulder.
'What are you doing here, anyway?' Harry asked Lucius Malfoy.
'I don't think private matters between myself and the Minister are any concernof yours, Potter,' said Malfoy, smoothing the front of his robes. Harry distinctlyheard the gentle clinking of what sounded like a full pocket of gold. 'Really, justbecause you are Dumbledore's favourite boy, you must not expect the sameindulgence from the rest of us ... shall we go up to your office, then, Minister?'
'Certainly' said Fudge, turning his back on Harry and Mr Weasley. This way,Lucius.'
They strode off together, talking in low voices. Mr Weasley did not let go ofHarry's shoulder until they had disappeared into the lift.
'Why wasn't he waiting outside Fudge's office if they've got business to dotogether?' Harry burst out furiously. 'What was he doing down here?'
'Trying to sneak down to the courtroom, if you ask me,' said Mr Weasley,looking extremely agitated and glancing over his shoulder as though making surethey could not be overheard. Trying 142 HARRY POTTERto find out whether you'd been expelled or not. I'll leave a note for Dumbledorewhen I drop you off, he ought to know Malfoys been talking to Fudge again.'
'What private business have they got together, anyway?'
'Gold, I expect,' said Mr Weasley angrily. 'Malfoy's been giving generously toall sorts of things for years ... gets him in with the right people ... then he can askfavours ... delay laws he doesn't want passed ... oh, he's very well-connected,Lucius Malfoy.'
The lift arrived; it was empty except for a flock of memos that flapped aroundMr Weasley's head as he pressed the button for the Atrium and the doors clangedshut. He waved them away irritably.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Mr Weasley' said Harry slowly, 'if Fudge is meeting Death Eaters likeMalfoy, if he's seeing them alone, how do we know they haven't put the ImperiusCurse on him?'
'Don't think it hasn't occurred to us, Harry' said Mr Weasley quietly. 'ButDumbledore thinks Fudge is acting of his own accord at the moment - which, asDumbledore says, is not a lot of comfort. Best not talk about it any more justnow, Harry.'
The doors slid open and they stepped out into the now almost-deserted Atrium.
Eric the watchwizard was hidden behind his Daily Prophet again. They hadwalked straight past the golden fountain before Harry remembered.
'Wait ...' he told Mr Weasley, and, pulling his moneybag Irom his pocket, heturned back to the fountain. He looked up into the handsome wizard's face, but close-to Harry thought helooked rather weak and foolish. The witch was wearing a vapid smile like abeauty contestant, and from what Harry knew of goblins and centaurs, they weremost unlikely to be caught staring so soppily at humans of any description. Onlythe house-elf's attitude of creeping servility looked convincing. With a grin at thethought of what Hermione would say if she could see the statue of the elf, Harryturned his moneybag upside-down and emptied not just ten Galleons, but thewhole contents into the pool.
*'I knew it!' yelled Ron, punching the air. 'You always get away with stuff!'

THE WOES OF MRS WEASLEY 143They were bound to clear you,' said Hermione, who had looked positivelyfaint with anxiety when Harry had entered the kitchen and was now holding ashaking hand over her eyes, 'there was no case against you, none at all.'
'Everyone seems quite relieved, though, considering you all knew I'd get off,' said Harry, smiling.
Mrs Weasley was wiping her face on her apron, and Fred, George and Ginnywere doing a kind of war dance to a chant that went: 'He got off, he got off, hegot off ..."
That's enough! Settle down!' shouted Mr Weasley, though he too was smiling.
'Listen, Sirius, Lucius Malfoy was at the Ministry -'
'What?' said Sirius sharply.
'He got off, he got off, he got off ..."
'Be quiet, you three! Yes, we saw him talking to Fudge on Level Nine, thenthey went up to Fudge's office together. Dumbledore ought to know.'
'Absolutely,' said Sirius. 'We'll tell him, don't worry.'
'Well, I'd better get going, there's a vomiting toilet waiting for me in BethnalGreen. Molly, I'll be late, I'm covering for Tonks, but Kingsley might bedropping in for dinner -'
'He got off, he got off, he got off ..."
That's enough - Fred - George - Ginny!' said Mrs Weasley, as Mr Weasleyleft the kitchen. 'Harry, dear, come and sit down, have some lunch, you hardlyate breakfast.'
Ron and Hermione sat themselves down opposite him, looking happier thanthey had done since he had first arrived at Grimmauld Place, and Harry's feelingof giddy relief, which had been somewhat dented by his encounter with LuciusMalfoy, swelled again. The gloomy house seemed warmer and more welcomingall of a sudden; even Kreacher looked less ugly as he poked his snoutlike noseinto the kitchen to investigate the source of all the noise.
'Course, once Dumbledore turned up on your side, there was no way theywere going to convict you,' said Ron happily, now dishing great mounds ofmashed potato on to everyone's plates.

'Yeah, he swung it for me,' said Harry. He felt it would sound highlyungrateful, not to mention childish, to say, 'I wish he'd talked to me, though. Oreven looked at me.'

144 HARRY POTTERAnd as he thought this, the scar on his forehead burned so badly that heclapped his hand to it.

'What's up?' said Hermione, looking alarmed.

'Scar,' Harry mumbled. 'But it's nothing ... it happens all the time now ...'

None of the others had noticed a thing; all of them were now helpingthemselves to food while gloating over Harrys narrow escape; Fred, George andGinny were still singing. Hermione looked rather anxious, but before she couldsay anything, Ron had said happily, 'I bet Dumbledore turns up this evening, tocelebrate with us, you know.'

'I don't think he'll be able to, Ron,' said Mrs Weasley, setting a huge plate ofroast chicken down in front of Harry. 'He's really very busy at the moment.'

'HE GOT OFF, HE GOT OFF, HE GOT OFF'SHUT UP!' roared Mrs Weasley.

*Over the next few days Harry could not help noticing that there was one personwithin number twelve, Grimmauld Place, who did not seem wholly overjoyedthat he would be returning to Hogwarts. Sirius had put up a very good show ofhappiness on first hearing the news, wringing Harry's hand and beaming just likethe rest of them. Soon, however, he was moodier and surlier than before, talkingless to everybody, even Harry, and spending increasing amounts of time shut upin his mother's room with Buckbeak.

'Don't you go feeling guilty!' said Hermione sternly, after Harry had confidedsome of his feelings to her and Ron while they scrubbed out a mouldy cupboardon the third floor a few days later. 'You belong at Hogwarts and Sirius knows it.

Personally, I think he's being selfish.'

That's a bit harsh, Hermione,' said Ron, frowning as he attempted to prise off abit of mould that had attached itself firmly to his finger, 'you wouldn't want to bestuck inside this house without any company.'

'He'll have company!' said Hermione. 'It's Headquarters to the Order of thePhoenix, isn't it? He just got his hopes up that Harry would be coming to livehere with him.'

THE WOES OF MRS WEASLEY 1451 don't think that's true/ said Harry, wringing out his cloth. 'He wouldn't giveme a straight answer when I asked him if 1 could.'

'He just didn't want to get his own hopes up even more,' said Hermione wisely.

'And he probably felt a bit guilty himself, because I think a part of him was reallyhoping you'd be expelled. Then you'd both be outcasts together.'

'Come off it!' said Harry and Ron together, but Hermione merely shrugged.

'Suit yourselves. But I sometimes think Rons mums right and Sirius getsconfused about whether you're you or your father, Harry.'

'So you think he's touched in the head?' said Harry heatedly.

'No, I just think he's been very lonely for a long time,' said Hermione simply.

At this point, Mrs Weasley entered the bedroom behind them.

'Still not finished?' she said, poking her head into the cupboard.

'I thought you might be here to tell us to have a break!' said Ron bitterly. 'D'youknow how much mould we've got rid of since we arrived here?'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'You were so keen to help the Order,' said Mrs Weasley, 'you can do your bit bymaking Headquarters fit to live in.'
'I feel like a house-elf,' grumbled Ron.
'Well, now you understand what dreadful lives they lead, perhaps you'll be a bitmore active in SPEW!' said Hermione hopefully, as Mrs Weasley left them to it.
'You know, maybe it wouldn't be a bad idea to show people exactly how horribleit is to clean all the time - we could do a sponsored scrub ol Gryffindor commonroom, all proceeds to SPEW, it would raise awareness as well as funds.'
'I'll sponsor you to shut up about SPEW,' Ron muttered irritably, but only soHarry could hear him.
*Harry found himself daydreaming about Hogwarts more and more as the end ofthe holidays approached; he could not wait to see Hagrid again, to play Quidditch,even to stroll across the vegetable patches to the Herbology greenhouses; it wouldbe a treat just to leave this dusty, musty house, where half of the cupboards werestill bolted shut and Kreacher wheezed insults out of the shadows 146 HARRY POTTERas you passed, though Harry was careful not to say any of this within earshot ofSirius.
The fact was that living at the Headquarters of the anti-Voldemort movementwas not nearly as interesting or exciting as Harry would have expected beforehe'd experienced it. Though members of the Order of the Phoenix came and wentregularly, sometimes staying for meals, sometimes only for a few minutes ofwhispered conversation, Mrs Weasley made sure that Harry and the others werekept well out of earshot (whether Extendable or normal) and nobody, not evenSirius, seemed to feel that Harry needed to know anything more than he hadheard on the night of his arrival.
On the very last day of the holidays Harry was sweeping up Hedwigs owldroppings from the top of the wardrobe when Ron entered their bedroomcarrying a couple of envelopes.
'Booklists have arrived,' he said, throwing one of the envelopes up to Harry,who was standing on a chair. 'About time, I thought they'd forgotten, theyusually come much earlier than this ..."
Harry swept the last of the droppings into a rubbish bag and threw the bagover Ron's head into the wastepaper basket in the corner, which swallowed it andbelched loudly. He then opened his letter. It contained two pieces of parchment:
one the usual reminder that term started on the first of September; the othertelling him which books he would need for the coming year.
'Only two new ones,' he said, reading the list, The Standard Book of Spells,Grade 5, by Miranda Goshawk, and Defensive Magical Theory, by WilbertSlinkhard.'
Crack.
Fred and George Apparated right beside Harry. He was so used to them doingthis by now that he didn't even fall off his chair.
'We were just wondering who set the Slinkhard book,' said Fredconversationally.
'Because it means Dumbledore's found a new Defence Against the Dark Artsteacher,' said George.
'And about time too,' said Fred.
'What d'you mean?' Harry asked, jumping down beside them.
'Well, we overheard Mum and Dad talking on the Extendable Ears a fewweeks back,' Fred told Harry, 'and from what they were THEWOESOFMRSWEASLEY 147saying, Dumbledore was having real trouble finding anyone to do the job thisyear.1'Not surprising, is it, when you look at what's happened to the last four?' saidGeorge.
'One sacked, one dead, one's memory removed and one locked in a trunk fornine months,' said Harry, counting them off on his fingers. 'Yeah, I see what youmean.'

'What's up with you, Ron?' asked Fred.
Ron did not answer. Harry looked round. Ron was standing very still with hismouth slightly open, gaping at his letter from Hogwarts.
'What's the matter?' said Fred impatiently, moving around Ron to look over hisshoulder at the parchment.
Fred's mouth fell open, too.
'Prefect?' he said, staring incredulously at the letter. 'Prefect?'
George leapt forwards, seized the envelope in Ron's other hand and turned itupside-down. Harry saw something scarlet and gold fall into George's palm.
'No way,' said George in a hushed voice.
There's been a mistake,' said Fred, snatching the letter out of Ron's grasp andholding it up to the light as though checking for a watermark. 'No one in theirright mind would make Ron a prefect.'
The twins' heads turned in unison and both of them stared at Harry.
"We thought you were a cert!' said Fred, in a tone that suggested Harry hadtricked them in some way.
'We thought Dumbledore was bound to pick you!' said George indignantly.
'Winning the Triwizard and everything!' said Fred.
'I suppose all the mad stuff must've counted against him,' said George to Fred.
'Yeah,' said Fred slowly. 'Yeah, you've caused too much trouble, mate. Well, atleast one of you's got their priorities right.'
He strode over to Harry and clapped him on the back while giving Ron ascathing look.
'Prefect ... ickle Ronnie the Prefect.'
'Ohh, Mum's going to be revolting,' groaned George, thrusting 148 HARRY POTTERthe prefect badge back at Ron as though it might contaminate him.
Ron, who still had not said a word, took the badge, stared at it for a moment,then held it out to Harry as though asking mutely for confirmation that it wasgenuine. Harry took it. A large T' was superimposed on the Gryffindor lion. Hehad seen a badge just like this on Percys chest on his very first day at Hogwarts.
The door banged open. Hermione came tearing into the room, her cheeksflushed and her hair flying. There was an envelope in her hand.
'Did you - did you get -?'
She spotted the badge in Harry's hand and let out a shriek.
'] knew it!' she said excitedly, brandishing her letter. 'Me too, Harry, me too!'
'No,' said Harry quickly, pushing the badge back into Ron's hand. 'It's Ron,not me.' :
'It - what?' i-
'Ron's prefect, not me,' Harry said.
'Ron?' said Hermione, her jaw dropping. 'But ... are you sure? I mean -'
She turned red as Ron looked round at her with a defiant expression on hisface.
'Its my name on the letter,' he said.
'I ...' said Hermione, looking thoroughly bewildered. '1 ... well ... wow! Welldone, Ron! That's really -'
'Unexpected,' said George, nodding.
'No,' said Hermione, blushing harder than ever, 'no it's not ... Ron's doneloads of ... he's really ...'
The door behind her opened a little wider and Mrs Weasley backed into theroom carrying a pile of freshly laundered robes.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Ginny said the booklists had come at last,' she said, glancing around at allthe envelopes as she made her way over to the bed and started sorting the robesinto two piles. 'If you give them to me I'll take them over to Diagon Alley thisafternoon and get your books while you're packing. Ron, I'll have to get youmore pyjamas, these are at least six inches too short, I can't believe how fastyou're growing ... what colour would you like?'

Tut WOES OF MRS WEASLEY 149'Get him red and gold to match his badge,' said George, smirking.
'Match his what?' said Mrs Weasley absently, rolling up a pair of maroon socksand placing them on Ron's pile.
'His badge,' said Fred, with the air of getting the worst over quickly. 'Hislovely shiny new prefect's badge.'
Fred's words took a moment to penetrate Mrs Weasley's preoccupation withpyjamas.
'His ... but ... Ron, you're not ...?'
Ron held up his badge.
Mrs Weasley let out a shriek just like Hermione's.
'I don't believe it! I don't believe it! Oh, Ron, how wonderful! A prefect! That'severyone in the family!'
'What are Fred and I, next-door neighbours?' said George indignantly, as hismother pushed him aside and flung her arms around her youngest son.
'Wait until your father hears! Ron, I'm so proud of you, what wonderful news,you could end up Head Boy just like Bill and Percy, it's the first step! Oh, what athing to happen in the middle of all this worry, I'm just thrilled, oh, Ronnie —Fred and George were both making loud retching noises behind her back butMrs Weasley did not notice; arms tight around Ron's neck, she was kissing himall over his face, which had turned a brighter scarlet than his badge.
'Mum ... don't ... Mum, get a grip ...' he muttered, trying to push her away.
She let go of him and said breathlessly, 'Well, what will it be? We gave Percyan owl, but you've already got one, of course.'
W-what do you mean?' said Ron, looking as though he did not dare believe hisears.
'You've got to have a reward for this!' said Mrs Weasley fondly. 'How about anice new set of dress robes?'
'We've already bought him some,' said Fred sourly, who looked as though hesincerely regretted this generosity.
'Or a new cauldron, Charlies old one's rusting through, or a new rat, youalways liked Scabbers -'
'Mum,' said Ron hopefully, 'can I have a new broom?'
Mrs Weasley's face fell slightly; broomsticks were expensive.

150 HARRY POTTER'Not a really good one!' Ron hastened to add. 'Just -just a new one for achange ..."
Mrs Weasley hesitated, then smiled.
'Of course you can ... well, I'd better get going if I've got a broom to buy too.
I'll see you all later ... little Ronnie, a prefect! And don't forget to pack yourtrunks ... a prefect ... oh, I'm all of a dither!'
She gave Ron yet another kiss on the cheek, sniffed loudly, and bustled fromthe room.
Fred and George exchanged looks.
'You don't mind if we don't kiss you, do you, Ron?' said Fred in a falselyanxious voice.
'We could curtsey, if you like,' said George.

'Oh, shut up,' said Ron, scowling at them.
'Or what?' said Fred, an evil grin spreading across his face. 'Going to put us indetention?'
Td love to see him try,' sniggered George.
'He could if you don't watch out!' said Hermione angrily.
Fred and George burst out laughing, and Ron muttered, 'Drop it, Hermione.'
'We're going to have to watch our step, George,' said Fred, pretending totremble, 'with these two on our case ...'
'Yeah, it looks like our law-breaking days are finally over,' said George,shaking his head.
And with another loud crack, the twins Disapparated.
Those two!' said Hermione furiously, staring up at the ceiling, through whichthey could now hear Fred and George roaring with laughter in the room upstairs.
'Don't pay any attention to them, Ron, they're only jealous!'
'I don't think they are,' said Ron doubtfully, also looking up at the ceiling.
They've always said only prats become prefects ... still,' he added on a happiernote, 'they've never had new brooms! I wish I could go with Mum and choose ... she'll never be able to afford a Nimbus, but there's the new Cleansweep out,that'd be great ... yeah, I think I'll go and tell her I like the Cleansweep, just soshe knowsHe dashed from the room, leaving Harry and Hermione alone.
For some reason, Harry found he did not want to look at THE WOES OF MRS WE A SLEY 1^1Hermione. He turned to his bed, picked up the pile of clean robes Mrs Weasleyhad laid on it and crossed the room to his trunk.
'Harry?' said Hermione tentatively.
'Well done, Hermione,' said Harry, so heartily it did not sound like his voice atall, and, still not looking at her, 'brilliant. Prefect. Great.'
Thanks,' said Hermione. 'Erm - Harry - could I borrow Hedwig so I can tellMum and Dad? They'll be really pleased - I mean prefect is something they canunderstand.'
'Yeah, no problem,' said Harry, still in the horrible hearty voice that did notbelong to him. Take her!'
He leaned over his trunk, laid the robes on the bottom of it and pretended to berummaging for something while Hermione crossed to the wardrobe and calledHedwig down. A few moments passed; Harry heard the door close but remainedbent double, listening; the only sounds he could hear were the blank picture on thewall sniggering again and the wastepaper basket in the corner coughing up the owldroppings.
He straightened up and looked behind him. Hermione had left and Hedwig hadgone. Harry hurried across the room, closed the door, then returned slowly to hisbed and sank on to it, gazing unseeingly at the foot of the wardrobe.
He had forgotten completely about prefects being chosen in the fifth year. Hehad been too anxious about the possibility of being expelled to spare a thought forthe fact that badges must be winging their way towards certain people. But if hehad remembered ... if he had thought about it ... what would he have expected?
Not this, said a small and truthful voice inside his head.
Harry screwed up his face and buried it in his hands. He could not lie tohimself; if he had known the prefect badge was on its way, he would haveexpected it to come to him, not Ron. Did this make him as arrogant as DracoMalfoy? Did he think himself superior to everyone else? Did he really believe hewas better than Ron?

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

No, said the small voice defiantly.
Was that true? Harry wondered, anxiously probing his own feelings.

152 HARRY POTTERI'm better at Quidditch, said the voice. But I'm not better at anything else.
That was definitely true, Harry thought; he was no better than Ron in lessons.
But what about outside lessons? What about those adventures he, Ron andHermione had had together since starting at Hogwarts, often risking much worsethan expulsion?
Well, Ron and Hermione were with me most of the time, said the voice inHarry's head.
Not all the time, though, Harry argued with himself. They didn't fight Quirrellwith me. They didn't take on Riddle and the Basilisk. They didn't get rid of allthose Dementors the night Sirius escaped. They weren't in that graveyard withme, the night Voldemort returned ...
And the same feeling of ill-usage that had overwhelmed him on the night hehad arrived rose again. I've definitely done more, Harry thought indignantly. I'vedone more than either of them!
But maybe, said the small voice fairly, maybe Dumbledore doesn't chooseprefects because they've got themselves into a load of dangerous situations ...
maybe he chooses them for other reasons ... Ron must have something you don't...
Harry opened his eyes and stared through his fingers at the wardrobe's clawedfeet, remembering what Fred had said: 'No one in their right mind would makeRon a prefect ...'
Harry gave a small snort of laughter. A second later he felt sickened withhimself.
Ron had not asked Dumbledore to give him the prefect badge. This was notRon's fault. Was he, Harry, Ron's best friend in the world, going to sulk becausehe didn't have a badge, laugh with the twins behind Ron's back, ruin this for Ronwhen, for the first time, he had beaten Harry at something?
At this point Harry heard Ron's footsteps on the stairs again. He stood up,straightened his glasses, and hitched a grin on to his face as Ron bounded backthrough the door.
'Just caught her!' he said happily. 'She says she'll get the Cleansweep if shecan.'
'Cool,' Harry said, and he was relieved to hear that his voice had stoppedsounding hearty. 'Listen - Ron - well done, mate.'

THE WOES OF MRS WEASLEY 153The smile faded off Ron's face.
'I never thought it would be me!' he said, shaking his head. 'I thought it wouldbe you!'
'Nah, I've caused too much trouble,' Harry said, echoing Fred.
'Yeah,' said Ron, 'yeah, I suppose ... well, we'd better get our trunks packed,hadn't we?'
It was odd how widely their possessions seemed to have scattered themselvessince they had arrived. It took them most of the afternoon to retrieve their booksand belongings from all over the house and stow them back inside their schooltrunks. Harry noticed that Ron kept moving his prefects badge around, firstplacing it on his bedside table, then putting it into his jeans pocket, then taking itout and lying it on his folded robes, as though to see the effect of the red on theblack. Only when Fred and George dropped in and offered to attach it to hisforehead with a Permanent Sticking Charm did he wrap it tenderly in his maroonsocks and lock it in his trunk.
Mrs Weasley returned from Diagon Alley around six o'clock, laden withbooks and carrying a long package wrapped in thick brown paper that Ron tookfrom her with a moan of longing.
'Never mind unwrapping it now, people are arriving for dinner, 1 want you alldownstairs,' she said, but the moment she was out of sight Ron ripped off thepaper in a frenzy and examined every inch of his new broom, an ecstaticexpression on his face.

Down in the basement Mrs Weasley had hung a scarlet banner over theheavily laden dinner table, which read:
CONGRATULATIONSRON AND HERMIONENEW PREFECTSShe looked in a better mood than Harry had seen her all holiday.
'I thought we'd have a little party, not a sit-down dinner,' she told Harry, Ron,Hermione, Fred, George and Ginny as they entered the room. 'Your father andBill are on their way, Ron. I've sent them both owls and they're thrilled,' sheadded, beaming.
Fred rolled his eyes.
Sirius, Lupin, Tonks and Kingsley Shacklebolt were already 154 HARRY POTTERthere and Mad-Eye Moody stumped in shortly after Harry had got himself aButterbeer.
'Oh, Alastor, I am glad you're here,' said Mrs Weasley brightly, as Mad-Eyeshrugged off his travelling cloak. 'We've been wanting to ask you for ages - could you have a look in the writing desk in the drawing room and tell us what'sinside it? We haven't wanted to open it just in case it's something really nasty.'
'No problem, Molly ...'
Moody's electric-blue eye swivelled upwards and stared fixedly through theceiling of the kitchen.
'Drawing room ...' he growled, as the pupil contracted. 'Desk in the corner?
Yeah, I see it ... yeah, it's a Boggart ... want me to go up and get rid of it, Molly?'
'No, no, I'll do it myself later,' beamed Mrs Weasley, 'you have your drink.
We're having a little bit of a celebration, actually ...' She gestured at the scarletbanner. 'Fourth prefect in the family!' she said fondly, ruffling Ron's hair.
'Prefect, eh?' growled Moody, his normal eye on Ron and his magical eyeswivelling around to gaze into the side of his head. Harry had the veryuncomfortable feeling it was looking at him and moved away towards Sirius andLupin.
Well, congratulations,' said Moody, still glaring at Ron with his normal eye,'authority figures always attract trouble, but I suppose Dumbledore thinks youcan withstand most major jinxes or he wouldn't have appointed you ...'
Ron looked rather startled at this view of the matter but was saved the troubleof responding by the arrival of his father and eldest brother. Mrs Weasley was insuch a good mood she did not even complain that they had brought Mundunguswith them; he was wearing a long overcoat that seemed oddly lumpy in unlikelyplaces and declined the offer to remove it and put it with Moody's travellingcloak.
Well, I think a toast is in order,' said Mr Weasley, when everyone had a drink.
He raised his goblet. To Ron and Hermione, the new Gryffindor prefects!'
Ron and Hermione beamed as everyone drank to them, and then applauded.

THEWOESOFMRSWEASLEY 155'I was never a prefect myself,' said Tonks brightly from behind Harry aseverybody moved towards the table to help themselves to food. Her hair wastomato red and waist-length today; she looked like Ginny's older sister. 'MyHead of House said I lacked certain necessary qualities.'
'Like what?' said Ginny, who was choosing a baked potato.
'Like the ability to behave myself,' said Tonks.
Ginny laughed; Hermione looked as though she did not know whether tosmile or not and compromised by taking an extra large gulp of Butterbeer andchoking on it.

'What about you, Sirius?' Ginny asked, thumping Hermione on the back.
Sirius, who was right beside Harry, let out his usual bark-like laugh.
'No one would have made me a prefect, I spent too much time in detentionwith James. Lupin was the good boy, he got the badge.'
'I think Dumbledore might have hoped I would be able to exercise somecontrol over my best friends,' said Lupin. 'I need scarcely say that 1 faileddismally.'
Harry's mood suddenly lifted. His father had not been a prefect either. All atonce the party seemed much more enjoyable; he loaded up his plate, feelingdoubly fond of everyone in the room.
Ron was rhapsodising about his new broom to anybody who would listen.
'... nought to seventy in ten seconds, not bad, is it? When you think the CometTwo Ninety's only nought to sixty and that's with a decent tailwind according toWhich Broomstick?'
Hermione was talking very earnestly to Lupin about her view of elf rights.
T mean, it's the same kind of nonsense as werewolf segregation, isn't it? It allstems from this horrible thing wizards have of thinking they're superior to othercreatures ..."
Mrs Weasley and Bill were having their usual argument about Bill's hair.
'... getting really out of hand, and you're so good-looking, it would look muchbetter shorter, wouldn't it, Harry?'
'Oh - I dunno -' said Harry, slightly alarmed at being asked his 156 HARRY POTTERopinion; he slid away from them in the direction of Fred and George, who werehuddled in a corner with Mundungus.
Mundungus stopped talking when he saw Harry, but Fred winked andbeckoned Harry closer.
'Its OK,' he told Mundungus, 'we can trust Harry, he's our financial backer.'
'Look what Dung's got us,' said George, holding out his hand to Harry. It wasfull of what looked like shrivelled black pods. A faint rattling noise was comingfrom them, even though they were completely stationary.
'Venomous Tentacula seeds,' said George. 'We need them for the SkivingSnackboxes but they're a Class C Non-Tradeable Substance so we've beenhaving a bit of trouble getting hold of them.'
Ten Galleons the lot, then. Dung?' said Fred.
'Wiv all the trouble 1 went to to get 'em?' said Mundungus, his saggy,bloodshot eyes stretching even wider. 'I'm sorry, lads, but I'm not taking a Knutunder twenty.'
'Dung likes his little joke,' Fred said to Harry.
'Yeah, his best one so far has been six Sickles for a bag of Knarl quills,' saidGeorge.
'Be careful,' Harry warned them quietly.
'What?' said Fred. 'Mum's busy cooing over Prefect Ron, we're OK.'
'But Moody could have his eye on you,' Harry pointed out.
Mundungus looked nervously over his shoulder.
'Good point, that,' he grunted. 'All right, lads, ten it is, if you'll take 'emquick;
'Cheers, Harry!' said Fred delightedly, when Mundungus had emptied hispockets into the twins' outstretched hands and scuttled off towards the food.
'We'd better get these upstairs ...'
Harry watched them go, feeling slightly uneasy. It had just occurred to himthat Mr and Mrs Weasley would want to know how Fred and George werefinancing their joke shop business when, as was inevitable, they finally foundout about it. Giving l he twins his Triwizard winnings had seemed a simplething to do at the time, but what if it led to another family row and a Percy-likeestrangement? Would Mrs Weasley still feel that Harry was as Tut Woi - OF MR-- WEASIEY 157good as her son il she lound out he had made it possible for Fredand George to start a career she thought quite unsuitable?

Standing where the twins had left him, with nothing but a guilty weight in thepit ol his stomaeh tor eompany, Harry caught the sound ol his own name.
Kingsley Shacklebolt's deep voice was audible even over the surrounding chatter.
'... why Dumbledore didn't make Potter a prefect?' said Kingsley.
'He'll have had his reasons,' replied Lupin.
'But it would've shown confidence in him. It's what I'd've done,' persistedKingsley, 'specially with the Daily Prophet having a go at him every few days ..."
Harry did not look round; he did not want Lupin or Kingsley to know he hadheard. Though not remotely hungry, he followed Mundungus back towards thetable. His pleasure in the party had evaporated as quickly as it had come; hewished he were upstairs in bed.
Mad-Eye Moody was sniffing at a chicken-leg with what remained of his nose; evidently he could not detect any trace of poison, because he then tore a strip off itwith his teeth.
'... the handles made of Spanish oak with anti-jinx varnish and in-built vibrationcontrol -' Ron was saying to Tonks.
Mrs Weasley yawned widely.
'Well, I think I'll sort out that Boggart before I turn in ... Arthur, 1 don't wantthis lot up too late, all right? Night, Harry, dear.'
She left the kitchen. Harry set down his plate and wondered whether he couldfollow her without attracting attention.
'You all right, Potter?' grunted Moody.
'Yeah, fine,' lied Harry.
Moody took a swig from his hipflask, his electric-blue eye staring sideways atHarry.
'Come here, I've got something that might interest you,' he said.
From an inner pocket of his robes Moody pulled a very tattered old wizardingphotograph.
'Original Order of the Phoenix,' growled Moody. 'Found it last night when Iwas looking for my spare Invisibility Cloak, seeing as Podmore hasn't had themanners to return my best one ... thought people might like to see it.'

158 HARRY POTTERHarry took the photograph. A small crowd of people, some waving at him,others lifting their glasses, looked back up at him.
There's me,' said Moody, unnecessarily pointing at himself. The Moody in thepicture was unmistakeable, though his hair was slightly less grey and his nosewas intact. 'And there's Dumbledore beside me, Dedalus Diggle on the other side... that's Marlene McKinnon, she was killed two weeks after this was taken, theygot her whole family. That's Frank and Alice Longbottom -'
Harrys stomach, already uncomfortable, clenched as he looked at AliceLongbottom; he knew her round, friendly face very well, even though he hadnever met her, because she was the image of her son, Neville.
'— poor devils,' growled Moody. 'Better dead than what happened to them ... and that's Emmeline Vance, you've met her, and that there's Lupin, obviously ...
Benjy Fenwick, he copped it too, we only ever found bits of him ... shift asidethere,' he added, poking the picture, and the little photographic people edgedsideways, so that those who were partially obscured could move to the front.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

That's Edgar Bones ... brother of Amelia Bones, they got him and his family,too, he was a great wizard ... Sturgis Podmore, blimey, he looks young ...
Caradoc Dearborn, vanished six months after this, we never found his body ...
Hagrid, of course, looks exactly the same as ever ... Elphias Doge, you've methim, I'd forgotten he used to wear that stupid hat ... Gideon Prewett, it took fiveDeath Eaters to kill him and his brother Fabian, they fought like heroes ... budgealong, budge along ...'
The little people in the photograph jostled among themselves and those hiddenright at the back appeared at the forefront of the picture.
That's Dumbledore s brother Aberforth, only time 1 ever met him, strangebloke ... that's Dorcas Meadowes, Voldemort killed her personally ... Sirius,when he still had short hair ... and ... there you go, thought that would interestyou!'
Harry's heart turned over. His mother and father were beaming up at him,sitting on either side of a small, watery-eyed man whom Harry recognised atonce as Wormtail, the one who had betrayed THEWOESOFMRSWEASLEY 159his parents' whereabouts to Voldemort and so helped to bring about their deaths.
'Eh?' said Moody.
Harry looked up into Moody's heavily scarred and pitted face. EvidentlyMoody was under the impression he had just given Harry a bit of a treat.
'Yeah,' said Harry, once again attempting to grin. 'Er ... listen, I've justremembered, I haven't packed my ...'
He was spared the trouble of inventing an object he had not packed. Sirius hadjust said, 'What's that you've got there, Mad-Eye?' and Moody had turnedtowards him. Harry crossed the kitchen, slipped through the door and up thestairs before anyone could call him back.
He did not know why it had been such a shock; he had seen pictures of hisparents before, after all, and he had met Wormtailbut to have them sprung on him like that, when he was least expecting it ... noone would like that, he thought angrily ...
And then, to see them surrounded by all those other happy faces ... BenjyEenwick, who had been found in bits, and Gideon Prewett, who had died like ahero, and the Longbottoms, who had been tortured into madness ... all wavinghappily out of the photograph forever more, not knowing that they were doomed... well, Moody might find that interesting ... he, Harry, found it disturbing ...
Harry tiptoed up the stairs in the hall past the stuffed elf-heads, glad to be onhis own again, but as he approached the first landing he heard noises. Someonewas sobbing in the drawing room.
'Hello?' Harry said.
There was no answer but the sobbing continued. He climbed the remainingstairs two at a time, walked across the landing and opened the drawing-roomdoor.
Someone was cowering against the dark wall, her wand in her hand, her wholebody shaking with sobs. Sprawled on the dusty old carpet in a patch ofmoonlight, clearly dead, was Ron.
All the air seemed to vanish from Harry's lungs; he felt as though he werefalling through the floor; his brain turned icy cold - Ron dead, no, it couldn't be -
But wait a moment, it couldn't be - Ron was downstairs -

160 HARRY Po i TER'Mrs Weasley?' Harry croaked.

'R - r - riddikulus!' Mrs Weasley sobbed, pointing her shaking wand at Ron'sbody.
Crack.
Ron's body turned into Bill's, spread-eagled on his back, his eyes wide openand empty. Mrs Weasley sobbed harder than ever.
'R - riddikulus!' she sobbed again.
Crack.
Mr Weasley's body replaced Bill's, his glasses askew, a trickle of bloodrunning down his face.
'No!' Mrs Weasley moaned. 'No ... riddikulus] Riddikulus! RID-DlKULUSrCrack. Dead twins. Crack. Dead Percy. Crack. Dead Harry ...
'Mrs Weasley, just get out of here!' shouted Harry, staring down at his owndead body on the floor. 'Let someone else -'
'What's going on?'
Lupin had come running into the room, closely followed by Sirius, withMoody stumping along behind them. Lupin looked from Mrs Weasley to thedead Harry on the tloor and seemed to understand in an instant. Pulling out hisown wand, he said, very iirmly and clearly:
'Riddikulus!'
Harry's body vanished. A silvery orb hung in the air over the spot where ithad lain. Lupin waved his wand once more and the orb vanished in a puff ofsmoke.
'Oh - oh - oh!' gulped Mrs Weasley, and she broke into a storm of crying, herface in her hands.
'Molly,' said Lupin bleakly, walking over to her. 'Molly don't ..."
Next second, she was sobbing her heart out on Lupin's shoulder.
'Molly, it was just a Boggart,' he said soothingly, patting her on the head, 'justa stupid Boggart ...'
'I see them d-d - dead all the time!' Mrs Weasley moaned into his shoulder.
'All the t - t - time! 1 d - d - dream about it ...'
Sirius was staring at the patch of carpet where the Boggart, pretending to beHarry's body, had lain. Moody was looking at Harry, who avoided his gaze. Hehad a funny feeling Moody's magical eye had followed him all the way out ofthe kitchen.

THEWOFS OF MRS WEASLEY 161'D-d - don't tell Arthur,' Mrs Weasley was gulping now, mopping her eyesfrantically with her cuffs. 'I d - d - don't want him to know ... being silly ...'
Lupin handed her a handkerchief and she blew her nose.
'Harry, I'm so sorry. What must you think of me?' she said shakily. 'Not evenable to get rid of a Boggart ...'
'Don't be stupid,' said Harry, trying to smile.
Tm just s - s - so worried,' she said, tears spilling out of her eyes again. 'Halfthe f - f - family's in the Order, it'll b - b - be a miracle if we all come throughthis ... and P - P - Percys not talking to us ... what if something d-d - dreadfulhappens and we've never m - m - made it up with him? And what's going tohappen if Arthur and I get killed, who's g - g - going to look after Ron andGinny?'
'Molly that's enough; said Lupin firmly. 'This isn't like last time. The Orderare better prepared, we've got a head start, we know what Voldemorts up to -'
Mrs Weasley gave a little squeak of fright at the sound of the name.
'Oh, Molly, come on, it's about time you got used to hearing his name - look, Ican't promise no one's going to get hurt, nobody can promise that, but we'remuch better off than we were last time. You weren't in the Order then, you don'tunderstand. Last time we were outnumbered twenty to one by the Death Eatersand they were picking us off one by one ...'

Harry thought of the photograph again, of his parents' beaming faces. Heknew Moody was still watching him.
'Don't worry about Percy' said Sirius abruptly. 'He'll come round. It's only amatter of time before Voldemort moves into the open; once he does, the wholeMinistry's going to be begging us to forgive them. And I'm not sure I'll beaccepting their apology,' he added bitterly.
'And as for who's going to look after Ron and Ginny if you and Arthur died,' said Lupin, smiling slightly, 'what do you think we'd do, let them starve?'
Mrs Weasley smiled tremulously.
'Being silly,' she muttered again, mopping her eyes.
But Harry, closing his bedroom door behind him some ten162HARRY Pun ER minutes later, could not think Mrs Weasley silly. He could still see his parentsbeaming up at him from the tattered old photograph, unaware that their lives, likeso many of those around them, were drawing to a close. The image of theBoggart posing as the corpse of each member of Mrs Weasley s family in turnkept flashing before his eyes.

Without warning, the scar on his forehead seared with pain again and hisstomach churned horribly.
'Cut it out,' he said firmly, rubbing the scar as the pain receded.
'First sigh of madness, talking to your own head,' said a sly voice from theempty picture on the wall.
Harry ignored it. He felt older than he had ever felt in his lite and it seemedextraordinary to him that barely an hour ago he had been worried about a jokeshop and who had got a prefects badge.

— CHAPTER TEN —

Luna LovegoodHarry had a troubled nights sleep. His parentswove in and out of his dreams, neverspeaking; Mrs Weasley sobbed overKreachers dead body, watched by Ron andHermione who were wearing crowns, and yetagain Harry found himself walking down acorridor ending in a locked door. He awokeabruptly with his scar prickling to find Ronalready dressed and talking to him.
'... better hurry up, Mum's going ballistic,she says we're going to miss the tramThere was a lot of commotion in thehouse. From what he heard as he dressed attop speed, Harry gathered that Fred andGeorge had bewitched their trunks to flydownstairs to save the bother of carryingthem, with the result that they had hurtledstraight into Ginny and knocked her downtwo flights of stairs into the hall; Mrs Blackand Mrs Weasley were both screaming at thetop of their voices.
'- COULD HAVE DONE HER ASERIOUS INJURY, YOU IDIOTS -'
'- FILTHY HALF-BREEDS,BESMIRCHING THE HOUSE OF MYFATHERS -' Hermione came hurrying into the roomlooking flustered, just as Harry was puttingon his trainers. Hedwig was swaying on hershoulder, and she was carrying a squirmingCrookshanks in her arms.
'Mum and Dad just sent Hedwig back.'
The owl fluttered obligingly over andperched on top of her cage. 'Are you readyyet?'
'Nearly. Is Ginny all right?' Harry asked,shoving on his glasses.
'Mrs Weasley's patched her up,' saidHermione. 'But now Mad 164 HARRY POTEREye's complaining that we can't leave unless Sturgis Podmore's here, otherwisethe guard will be one short.'
'Guard?' said Harry. 'We have to go to King's Cross with a guard?'
'You have to go to King's Cross with a guard,' Hermione corrected him.

'Why?' said Harry irritably. 'I thought Voldemort was supposed to be lyinglow, or are you telling me he's going to jump out from behind a dustbin to tryand do me in?'

'I don't know, it's just what Mad-Eye says,' said Hermione distractedly,looking at her watch, 'but if we don't leave soon we're definitely going to missthe train ...'

WILL YOU LOT GET DOWN HERE NOW, PLEASE!' Mrs Weasleybellowed and Hermione jumped as though scalded and hurried out of the room.

Harry seized Hedwig, stuffed her unceremoniously into her cage, and set offdownstairs after Hermione, dragging his trunk.

Mrs Black's portrait was howling with rage but nobody was bothering toclose the curtains over her; all the noise in the hall was bound to rouse heragain, anyway.

'Harry, you're to come with me and Tonks,' shouted Mrs Weasley - over therepeated screeches of 'MUDBLOODS! SCUM! CREATURES OF DIRT!' -

'Leave your trunk and your owl, Alastor's going to deal with the luggage ... oh,for heaven's sake, Sinus, Dumbledore said no!'

A bear-like black dog had appeared at Harry's side as he was clambering overthe various trunks cluttering the hall to get to Mrs Weasley.

'Oh honestly ...' said Mrs Weasley despairingly. 'Well, on your own head beit!'

She wrenched open the front door and stepped out into the weak Septembersunlight. Harry and the dog followed her. The door slammed behind them andMrs Blacks screeches were cut off instantly.

Where's Tonks?' Harry said, looking round as they went down the stone stepsof number twelve, which vanished the moment they reached the pavement.

'She's waiting for us just up here,' said Mrs Weasley stiffly, averting her eyesfrom the lolloping black dog beside Harry.

LUNA LOVEGOOD 165An old woman greeted them on the corner. She had tightly curled grey hair andwore a purple hat shaped like a pork pie.

'Wotcher, Harry,' she said, winking. 'Better hurry up, hadn't we, Molly?' sheadded, checking her watch.

'I know, I know,' moaned Mrs Weasley, lengthening her stride, 'but Mad-Eyewanted to wait for Sturgis ... if only Arthur could have got us cars from theMinistry again ... but Fudge won't let him borrow so much as an empty ink bottlethese days ... how Muggles can stand travelling without magicBut the great black dog gave a joyful bark and gambolled around them,snapping at pigeons and chasing its own tail. Harry couldn't help laughing. Siriushad been trapped inside for a very long time.

Mrs Weasley pursed her lips in analmost Aunt Petunia-ish way.

It took them twenty minutes to reach King's Cross on foot and nothing moreeventful happened during that time than Sirius scaring a couple of cats for Harry'sentertainment. Once inside the station they lingered casually beside the barrierbetween platforms nine and ten until the coast was clear, then each of them leanedagainst it in turn and fell easily through on to platform nine and three-quarters,where the Hogwarts Express stood belching sooty steam over a platform packedwith departing students and their families. Harry inhaled the familiar smell andfelt his spirits soar ... he was really going back ...

'1 hope the others make it in time,' said Mrs Weasley anxiously, staring behindher at the wrought-iron arch spanning the platform, through which new arrivalswould come.

'Nice dog, Harry!' called a tall boy with dreadlocks.

'Thanks, Lee,' said Harry, grinning, as Sirius wagged his tail frantically.

'Oh good,' said Mrs Weasley, sounding relieved, 'here's Alastor with theluggage, look ...'

A porter's cap pulled low over his mismatched eyes, Moody came limpingthrough the archway pushing a trolley loaded with their trunks.

'All OK,' he muttered to Mrs Weasley and Tonks, 'don't think we were followed...'

Seconds later, Mr Weasley emerged on to the platform with Ron 166 HARRY POTTERand Hermione. They had almost unloaded Moody's luggage trolley when Fred,George and Ginny turned up with Lupin.

'No trouble?' growled Moody.

'Nothing,' said Lupin.

Til still be reporting Sturgis to Dumbledore,' said Moody, 'that's the secondtime he's not turned up in a week. Getting as unreliable as Mundungus.'

'Well, look after yourselves,' said Lupin, shaking hands all round. He reachedHarry last and gave him a clap on the shoulder. 'You too. Harry. Be careful.'

'Yeah, keep your head down and your eyes peeled,' said Moody, shakingHarry's hand too. 'And don't forget, all of you - careful what you put in writing. Ifin doubt, don't put it in a letter at all.'

'It's been great meeting all of you,' said Tonks, hugging Hermione and Ginny'We'll see you soon, I expect.'

A warning whistle sounded; the students still on the platform started hurryingon to the train.

'Quick, quick,' said Mrs Weasley distractedly, hugging them at random andcatching Harry twice. 'Write ... be good ... if you've forgotten anything we'll sendit on ... on to the train, now, hurry ..."

For one brief moment, the great black dog reared on to its hind legs andplaced its front paws on Harry's shoulders, but Mrs Weasley shoved Harry awaytowards the train door, hissing, 'For heaven's sake, act more like a dog, Sirius!'

'See you!' Harry called out of the open window as the train began to move,while Ron, Hermione and Ginny waved beside him. The figures of Tonks, Lupin,Moody and Mr and Mrs Weasley shrank rapidly but the black dog was boundingalongside the window, wagging its tail; blurred people on the platform werelaughing to see it chasing the train, then they rounded a bend, and Sirius wasgone.

'He shouldn't have come with us,' said Hermione in a worried voice.

"Oh, lighten up,' said Ron, 'he hasn't seen daylight for months, poor bloke.'

'Well,' said Fred, clapping his hands together, 'can't stand around

LUNA LOVEGOOD 167chatting all day, we've got business to discuss with Lee. See you later,' and heand George disappeared down the corridor to the right.

The train was gathering still more speed, so that the houses outside thewindow flashed past, and they swayed where they stood.

'Shall we go and find a compartment, then?' Harry asked.

Ron and Hermione exchanged looks.

'Er,' said Ron.

'We're - well - Ron and I are supposed to go into the prefect carriage,' Hermione said awkwardly.

Ron wasn't looking at Harry; he seemed to have become intensely interestedin the fingernails on his left hand.

'Oh,' said Harry. 'Right. Fine.'

'I don't think we'll have to stay there all journey,' said Hermione quickly. 'Ourletters said we just get instructions from the Head Boy and Girl and then patrolthe corridors from time to time.'

'Fine,' said Harry again. 'Well, I - I might see you later, then.'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Yeah, definitely,' said Ron, casting a shifty, anxious look at Harry. 'It's a painhaving to go down there, I'd rather - but we have to -I mean, I'm not enjoying it,I'm not Percy,' he finished defiantly.

'I know you're not,' said Harry and he grinned. But as Hermione and Rondragged their trunks, Crookshanks and a caged Pigwidgeon off towards theengine end of the train, Harry felt an odd sense of loss. He had never travelled onthe Hogwarts Express without Ron.

'Come on,' Ginny told him, 'if we get a move on we'll be able to save themplaces.'

'Right,' said Harry, picking up Hedwig's cage in one hand and the handle ofhis trunk in the other. They struggled off down the corridor, peering through theglass-panelled doors into the compartments they passed, which were already full.

Harry could not help noticing that a lot of people stared back at him with greatinterest and that several of them nudged their neighbours and pointed him out.

After he had met this behaviour in five consecutive carriages he remembered thatthe Daily Prophet had been telling its readers all summer what a lying show-offhe was. He wondered dully whether the people now staring and whisperingbelieved the stories.

168 HARRY POTTERIn the very last carriage they met Neville Longbottom, Harry's fellow fifthyearGryffindor, his round face shining with the effort of pulling his trunk alongand maintaining a one-handed grip on his struggling toad, Trevor.

'Hi, Harry' he panted. 'Hi, Ginny ... everywhere's full ... 1 can't find a seat ...'

'What are you talking about?' said Ginny, who had squeezed past Neville topeer into the compartment behind him. There's room in this one, there's onlyLoony Lovegood in here —'

Neville mumbled something about not wanting to disturb anyone.

'Don't be silly,' said Ginny, laughing, 'she's all right.'

She slid the door open and pulled her trunk inside. Harry and Nevillefollowed.

'Hi, Luna,' said Ginny, 'is it OK if we take these seats?'

The girl beside the window looked up. She had straggly, waist-length, dirtyblonde hair, very pale eyebrows and protuberant eyes that gave her apermanently surprised look. Harry knew at once why Neville had chosen topass this compartment by. The girl gave off an aura of distinct dottiness.

Perhaps it was the fact that she had stuck her wand behind her left ear forsafekeeping, or that she had chosen to wear a necklace of Butterbeer corks, orthat she was reading a magazine upside-down. Her eyes ranged over Nevilleand came to rest on Harry. She nodded.

Thanks,' said Ginny, smiling at her.

Harry and Neville stowed the three trunks and Hedwig's cage in the luggagerack and sat down. Luna watched them over her upside-down magazine, whichwas called The Quibbler. She did not seem to need to blink as much as normalhumans. She stared and stared at Harry, who had taken the seat opposite herand now wished he hadn't.

'Had a good summer, Luna?' Ginny asked.

'Yes,' said Luna dreamily, without taking her eyes off Harry. 'Yes, it wasquite enjoyable, you know. You're Harry Potter,' she added.

'1 know I am,' said Harry.

Neville chuckled. Luna turned her pale eyes on him instead.

'And I don't know who you are.'

'I'm nobody,' said Neville hurriedly.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

LUNA LOVEGOOD 169'No you're not,' said Ginny sharply. 'Neville Longbottom - Luna Lovegood. Luna's in my year, but in Ravenclaw.'
'Wit beyond measure is man's greatest treasure,' said Luna in asingsong voice.
She raised her upside-down magazine high enough to hide her face andfell silent. Harry and Neville looked at each other with their eyebrowsraised. Ginny suppressed a giggle.
The train rattled onwards, speeding them out into open country. It was anodd, unsettled sort of day; one moment the carriage was full of sunlight andthe next they were passing beneath ominously grey clouds.
'Guess what I got for my birthday?' said Neville.
'Another Remembrall?' said Harry, remembering the marble-like deviceNeville's grandmother had sent him in an effort to improve his abysmalmemory.
'No,' said Neville. 'I could do with one, though, 1 lost the old one agesago ... no, look at this ..."
He dug the hand that was not keeping a firm grip on Trevor into hisschoolbag and after a little bit of rummaging pulled out what appeared to bea small grey cactus in a pot, except that it was covered with what lookedlike boils rather than spines.
'Mimbulus mimbletonia,' he said proudly.
Harry stared at the thing. It was pulsating slightly, giving it the rathersinister look of some diseased internal organ.
'It's really, really rare,' said Neville, beaming. T don't know it there's onein the greenhouse at Hogwarts, even. 1 can't wait to show it to ProfessorSprout. My Great Uncle Algie got it for me in Assyria. I'm going to see if Ican breed from it.'
Harry knew that Neville's favourite subject was Herbology but for thelife of him he could not see what he would want with this stunted littleplant.
'Does it - er - do anything?' he asked.
'Loads of stuff!' said Neville proudly. 'It's got an amazing defensivemechanism. Here, hold Trevor for me ...'
He dumped the toad into Harry's lap and took a quill from his schoolbag.
Luna Lovegood's popping eyes appeared over the top of her upside-downmagazine again, to watch what Neville was 170 HARRY POTTERdoing. Neville held the Mimbulus mimbletonia up to his eyes, his tonguebetween his teeth, chose his spot, and gave the plant a sharp prod with the tip ofhis quill.
Liquid squirted from every boil on the plant; thick, stinking, dark green jetsof it. They hit the ceiling, the windows, and spattered Luna Lovegood'smagazine; Ginny, who had flung her arms up in front of her face just in time,merely looked as though she was wearing a slimy green hat, but Harry, whosehands had been busy preventing Trevor's escape, received a faceful. It smelledlike rancid manure.
Neville, whose face and torso were also drenched, shook his head to get theworst out of his eyes.
'S - sorry,' he gasped. T haven't tried that before ... didn't realise it would bequite so ... don't worry, though, Stinksap's not poisonous,' he added nervously,as Harry spat a mouthful on to the floor.
At that precise moment the door of their compartment slid open.
'Oh ... hello, Harry,' said a nervous voice. 'Urn ... bad time?'
Harry wiped the lenses of his glasses with his Trevor-free hand. A verypretty girl with long, shiny black hair was standing in the doorway smiling athim: Cho Chang, the Seeker on the Ravenclaw Quidditch team.
'Oh ... hi,' said Harry blankly.

'Urn ..." said Cho. 'Well ... just thought I'd say hello ... bye then.'

Rather pink in the face, she closed the door and departed. Harry slumpedback in his seat and groaned. He would have liked Cho to discover him sittingwith a group of very cool people laughing their heads off at a joke he had justtold; he would not have chosen to be sitting with Neville and Loony Lovegood,clutching a toad and dripping in Stinksap.

'Never mind,' said Ginny bracingly. 'Look, we can easily get rid of all this.'

She pulled out her wand. 'Scourgify!'

The Stinksap vanished.

'Sorry,' said Neville again, in a small voice.

Ron and Hermione did not turn up for nearly an hour, by which time thefood trolley had already gone by. Harry, Ginny and Neville

LlJNALOVEGOOD 171had finished their pumpkin pasties and were busy swapping Chocolate Frog Cardswhen the compartment door slid open and they walked in, accompanied byCrookshanks and a shrilly hooting Pigwidgeon in his cage.

'I'm starving,' said Ron, stowing Pigwidgeon next to Hedwig, grabbing aChocolate Frog from Harry and throwing himself into the seat next to him. Heripped open the wrapper, bit off the frog's head and leaned back with his eyesclosed as though he had had a very exhausting morning.

'Well, there are two fifth-year prefects from each house,' said Hermione,looking thoroughly disgruntled as she took her seat. 'Boy and girl from each.'

'And guess who's a Slytherin prefect?' said Ron, still with his eyes closed.

'Malfoy,' replied Harry at once, certain his worst fear would be confirmed.

'Course,' said Ron bitterly, stuffing the rest of the Frog into his mouth andtaking another.

'And that complete cow Pansy Parkinson,' said Hermione viciously. 'How shegot to be a prefect when she's thicker than a concussed troll ...'

'Who are Hufflepuff's?' Harry asked.

'Ernie Macmillan and Hannah Abbott,' said Ron thickly.

'And Anthony Goldstein and Padma Patil for Ravenclaw,' said Hermione.

'You went to the Yule Ball with Padma Patil,' said a vague voice.

Everyone turned to look at Luna Lovegood, who was gazing unblinkingly atRon over the top of The Quibbler. He swallowed his mouthful of Frog.

'Yeah, I know I did,' he said, looking mildly surprised.

'She didn't enjoy it very much,' Luna informed him. 'She doesn't think youtreated her very well, because you wouldn't dance with her. I don't think I'd haveminded,' she added thoughtfully, '1 don't like dancing very much.'

She retreated behind The Quibbler again. Ron stared at the cover with hismouth hanging open for a few seconds, then looked around at Ginny for somekind of explanation, but Ginny had 172 HARRY POTTERstuffed her knuckles in her mouth to stop herself giggling. Ron shook his head,bemused, then checked his watch.

'We're supposed to patrol the corridors every so often,' he told Harry andNeville, 'and we can give out punishments if people are misbehaving. I can'twait to get Crabbe and Goyle for something'You're not supposed to abuse your position, Ron!' said Hermione sharply.

'Yeah, right, because Malfoy won't abuse it at all,' said Ron sarcastically.

'So you're going to descend to his level?'

'No, I'm just going to make sure I get his mates before he gets mine.'

'For heaven's sake, Ron -'

Til make Goyle do lines, it'll kill him, he hates writing,' said Ron happily. Helowered his voice to Goyle's low grunt and, screwing up his face in a look ofpained concentration, mimed writing in midair. 'I... must ... not... look ...like ... a... baboon's ... backside.'

Everyone laughed, but nobody laughed harder than Luna Lovegood. She letout a scream of mirth that caused Hedwig to wake up and flap her wingsindignantly and Crookshanks to leap up into the luggage rack, hissing. Lunalaughed so hard her magazine slipped out of her grasp, slid down her legs andon to the floor.

That was funny!'

Her prominent eyes swam with tears as she gasped for breath, staring at Ron.

Utterly nonplussed, he looked around at the others, who were now laughing atthe expression on Ron's face and at the ludicrously prolonged laughter of LunaLovegood, who was rocking backwards and forwards, clutching her sides.

'Are you taking the mickey?' said Ron, frowning at her.

'Baboon's ... backside!' she choked, holding her ribs.

Everyone else was watching Luna laughing, but Harry glancing at themagazine on the floor, noticed something that made him dive for it. Upsidedownit had been hard to tell what the picture on the front was, but Harry nowrealised it was a fairly bad cartoon of Cornelius Fudge; Harry only recognisedhim because of the lime-green bowler hat. One of Fudge's hands was clenchedaround a LUNA LOVEGOOD 173bag of gold; the other hand was throttling a goblin. The cartoon was captioned: HowFar Will Fudge Go to Gain Gringotts?

Beneath this were listed the titles of other articles inside the magazine.

Corruption in the Quidditch League:

How the Tornados are Taking ControlSecrets of the Ancient Runes RevealedSirius Black: Villain or Victim?

'Can I have a look at this?' Harry asked Luna eagerly.

She nodded, still gazing at Ron, breathless with laughter.

Harry opened the magazine and scanned the index. Until this moment he hadcompletely forgotten the magazine Kingsley had handed Mr Weasley to give toSirius, but it must have been this edition of The Quibbler.

He found the page, and turned excitedly to the article.

This, too, was illustrated by a rather bad cartoon; in fact, Harry would not haveknown it was supposed to be Sirius if it hadn't been captioned. Sirius was standing ona pile of human bones with his wand out. The headline on the article said:

SIRIUS - BLACK AS HE'S PAINTED?

Notorious mass murderer or innocent singing sensation?

Harry had to read this first sentence several times before he was convinced that hehad not misunderstood it. Since when had Sirius been a singing sensation?

For fourteen years Sirius Black has been believed guilty of the mass murder of twelveinnocent Muggles and one wizard. Black's audacious escape from Azkaban two years agohas led to the widest manhunt ever conducted by the Ministry of Magic. None of us hasever questioned that he deserves to be recaptured and handed back to the Dementors.

BUT DOES HE?

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Startling new evidence has recently come to light that Sirius

174 HARRY POTTERBlack may not have committed the crimes for which he was sent to Azkaban. In fact, saysDoris Purkiss, of 18 Acanthia Way, Little Norton, Black may not even have been presentat the killings.

'What people don't realise is that Sirius Black is a false name,' says Mrs Purkiss. 'Theman people believe to be Sirius Black is actually Stubby Boardman, lead singer ofpopular singing group The Hobgoblins, who retired from public life after being struck onthe ear by a turnip at a concert in Little Norton Church Hall nearly fifteen years ago. Irecognised him the moment I saw his picture in the paper. Now, Stubby couldn't possiblyhave committed those crimes, because on the day in question he happened to be enjoyinga romantic candlelit dinner with me. I have written to the Minister for Magic and amexpecting him to give Stubby, alias -Sirius, a full pardon any day now.'

Harry finished reading and stared at the page in disbelief. Perhaps it was a joke,he thought, perhaps the magazine often printed spoof Hems. He flicked back afew pages and found the piece on Fudge.

Cornelius Fudge, the Minister for Magic, denied that he had any plans to take over therunning of the Wizarding Bank, Gringotts, when he was elected Minister for Magic fiveyears ago. Fudge has always insisted that he wants nothing more than to 'co-operatepeacefully' with the guardians of our gold.

BUT DOES HE?

Sources close to the Minister have recently disclosed that Fudge's dearest ambition isto seize control of the goblin gold supplies and that he will not hesitate to use force ifneed be.

Tt wouldn't be the first time, either,' said a Ministry insider. 'Cornelius "Goblin-
Crusher" Fudge, that's what his friends call him. If you could hear him when he thinks noone's listening, oh, he's always talking about the goblins he's had done in; he's had themdrowned, he's had them dropped off buildings, he's had them poisoned, he's had themcooked in pies ..."

Harry did not read any further. Fudge might have many faults but Harry found itextremely hard to imagine him ordering goblins to LUNA LOVEGOOD 175be cooked in pies. He flicked through the rest of the magazine. Pausing everyfew pages, he read: an accusation that the Tutshill Tornados were winning theQuidditch League by a combination of blackmail, illegal broom-tampering andtorture; an interview with a wizard who claimed to have flown to the moon on aCleansweep Six and brought back a bag of moon frogs to prove it; and an articleon ancient runes which at least explained why Luna had been reading TheQuibbler upside-down. According to the magazine, if you turned the runes ontheir heads they revealed a spell to make your enemy's ears turn into kumquats.

In fact, compared to the^rest of the articles in The Quibbler, the suggestion thatSirius might really be the lead singer of The Hobgoblins was quite sensible.

'Anything good in there?' asked Ron as Harry closed the magazine.

'Of course not,' said Hermione scathingly, before Harry could answer. TheQuibbler's rubbish, everyone knows that.'

'Excuse me,' said Luna; her voice had suddenly lost its dreamy quality. 'Myfather's the editor.'

T - oh,' said Hermione, looking embarrassed. 'Well ... it's got some interesting... 1 mean, it's quite ..."

'I'll have it back, thank you,' said Luna coldly, and leaning forwards shesnatched it out of Harry's hands. Riffling through it to page fifty-seven, sheturned it resolutely upside-down again and disappeared behind it, just as thecompartment door opened for the third time.

Harry looked around; he had expected this, but that did not make the sight ofDraco Malfoy smirking at him from between his cronies Crabbe and Goyle anymore enjoyable-.

'What?' he said aggressively, before Malfoy could open his mouth.
'Manners, Potter, or I'll have to give you a detention,' drawled Malfoy, whosesleek blond hair and pointed chin were just like his fathers. 'You see, 1, unlikeyou, have been made a prefect, which means that I, unlike you, have the powerto hand out punishments.'
'Yeah,' said Harry, 'but you, unlike me,-are a git, so get out and leave usalone.'
Ron, Hermione, Ginny and Neville laughed. Malfoy's lip curled.
'Tell me, how does it feel being second-best to Weasley, Potter?' he asked.

176 HARRY POTTER'Shut up, Malfoy,' said Hermione sharply.
'I seem to have touched a nerve,' said Malfoy, smirking. 'Well, just watchyourself, Potter, because I'll be dogging your footsteps in case you step out ofline.'
'Get out!' said Hermione, standing up.
Sniggering, Malfoy gave Harry a last malicious look and departed, withCrabbe and Goyle lumbering along in his wake. Hermione slammed thecompartment door behind them and turned to look at Harry, who knew at oncethat she, like him, had registered what Malfoy had said and been just asunnerved by it.
'Chuck us another Frog,' said Ron, who had clearly noticed nothing.
Harry could not talk freely in front of Neville and Luna. He exchangedanother nervous look with Hermione, then stared out of the window.
He had thought Sirius coming with him to the station was a bit of a laugh, butsuddenly it seemed reckless, if not downright dangerous ... Hermione had beenright ... Sirius should not have come. What if Mr Malfoy had noticed the blackdog and told Draco? What if he had deduced that the Weasleys, Lupin, Tonksand Moody knew where Sirius was hiding? Or had Malfoy's use of the word'dogging' been a coincidence?
The weather remained undecided as they travelled further and further north.
Rain spattered the windows in a half-hearted way, then the sun put in a feebleappearance before clouds drifted over it once more. When darkness fell andlamps came on inside the carriages, Luna rolled up The Quibbler, put it carefullyaway in her bag and took to staring at everyone in the compartment instead.
Harry was sitting with his forehead pressed against the train window, tryingto get a first distant glimpse of Hogwarts, but it was a moonless night and therain-streaked window was grimy.
'We'd better change,' said Hermione at last, and all of them opened theirtrunks with difficulty and pulled on their school robes. She and Ron pinned theirprefect badges carefully to their chests. Harry saw Ron checking his reflection inthe black window.
At last, the train began to slow down and they heard the usual racket up anddown it as everybody scrambled to get their luggage
LUNA LOVEGOOD 177and pets assembled, ready to get off. As Ron and Hermione were supposed tosupervise all this, they disappeared from the carriage again, leaving Harry andthe others to look after Crookshanks and Pigwidgeon.
Til carry that owl, if you like,' said Luna to Harry, reaching out forPigwidgeon as Neville stowed Trevor carefully in an inside pocket.
'Oh - er - thanks,' said Harry, handing her the cage and hoisting Hedwig'smore securely into his arms.
They shuffled out of the compartment feeling the first sting of the night air ontheir faces as they joined the crowd in the corridor. Slowly, they moved towardsthe doors. Harry could smell the pine trees that lined the path down to the lake.

He stepped down on to the platform and looked around, listening for the familiarcall of 'firs'-years over 'ere ... firs'-years ...'
But it did not come. Instead, a quite different voice, a brisk female one, wascalling out, "First-years line up over here, please! All first-years to me!'
A lantern came swinging towards Harry and by its light he saw the prominentchin and severe haircut of Professor Grubbly-Plank, the witch who had takenover Hagrid's Care of Magical Creatures lessons for a while the previous year.
'Where's Hagrid?' he said out loud.
'I don't know,' said Ginny, 'but we'd better get out of the way, we're blockingthe door.'
'Oh, yeah ...'
Harry and Ginny became separated as they moved off along the platform andout through the station. Jostled by the crowd, Harry squinted through thedarkness for a glimpse of Hagrid; he had to be here, Harry had been relying on it- seeing Hagrid again was one of the things he'd been looking forward to most.
But there was no sign of him.
He can't have left, Harry told himself as he shuffled slowly through a narrowdoorway on to the road outside with the rest of the crowd. He's just got a cold orsomething ...
He looked around for Ron or Hermione, wanting to know what they thoughtabout the reappearance of Professor Grubbly-Plank, but neither of them wasanywhere near him, so he allowed himself 178 HARRY POTTERto be shunted forwards on to the dark rain-washed road outside HogsmeadeStation.
Here stood the hundred or so horseless stagecoaches that always took thestudents above first year up to the castle. Harry glanced quickly at them, turnedaway to keep a lookout for Ron and Hermione, then did a double-take.
The coaches were no longer horseless. There were creatures standingbetween the carriage shafts. If he had had to give them a name, he supposed hewould have called them horses, though there was something reptilian aboutthem, too. They were completely fleshless, their black coats clinging to theirskeletons, of which every bone was visible. Their heads were dragonish, andtheir pupil-less eyes white and staring. Wings sprouted from each wither - vast,black leathery wings that looked as though they ought to belong to giant bats.
Standing still and quiet in the gathering gloom, the creatures looked eerie andsinister. Harry could not understand why the coaches were being pulled by thesehorrible horses when they were quite capable of moving along by themselves.
'Where's Pig?' said Ron's voice, right behind Harry.
'That Luna girl was carrying him,' said Harry, turning quickly, eager toconsult Ron about Hagrid. 'Where d'you reckon -'
'- Hagrid is? I dunno,' said Ron, sounding worried. 'He'd better be OK ...'
A short distance away, Draco Malfoy, followed by a small gang of croniesincluding Crabbe, Goyle and Pansy Parkinson, was pushing some timid-lookingsecond-years out of the way so that he and his friends could get a coach tothemselves. Seconds later, Hermione emerged panting from the crowd.
'Malfoy was being absolutely foul to a first-year back there. I swear I'mgoing to report him, he's only had his badge three minutes and he's using it tobully people worse than ever ... where's Crookshanks?'
'Ginny's got him,' said Harry. There she is ...'

Ginny had just emerged from the crowd, clutching a squirming Crookshanks.
Thanks,' said Hermione, relieving Ginny of the cat. 'Come on, let's get acarriage together before they all fill up ..."

LUNA LOVEGOOD 179'I haven't got Pig yet!' Ron said, but Hermione was already heading offtowards the nearest unoccupied coach. Harry remained behind with Ron.
'What are those things, d'you reckon?' he asked Ron, nodding at the horriblehorses as the other students surged past them.
'What things?'
Those horse -'
Luna appeared holding Pigwidgeon's cage in her arms; the tiny owl wastwittering excitedly as usual.
'Here you are,' she said. 'He's a sweet little owl, isn't he?'
'Er ... yeah ... he's all right,' said Ron gruffly. 'Well, come on then, let's get in ... what were you saying, Harry?'
'I was saying, what are those horse things?' Harry said, as he, Ron and Lunamade for the carriage in which Hermione and Ginny were already sitting.
'What horse things?'
The horse things pulling the carriages!' said Harry impatiently. They were,after all, about three feet from the nearest one; it was watching them with emptywhite eyes. Ron, however, gave Harry a perplexed look.
'What are you talking about?'
'I'm talking about - look!'
Harry grabbed Ron's arm and wheeled him about so that he was face to facewith the winged horse. Ron stared straight at it for a second, then looked back atHarry.
'What am I supposed to be looking at?'
'At the - there, between the shafts! Harnessed to the coach! It's right there infront -'
But as Ron continued to look bemused, a strange thought occurred to Harry.
'Can't ... can't you see them?'
'See what?'
'Can't you see what's pulling the carriages?'
Ron looked seriously alarmed now.
'Are you feeling all right, Harry?'
'I ... yeah ...'
Harry felt utterly bewildered. The horse was there in front of180HARRY POTTER him, gleaming solidly in the dim light issuing from the station windows behindthem, vapour rising from its nostrils in the chilly night air. Yet, unless Ron wasfaking - and it was a very feeble joke if he was - Ron could not see it at all.

'Shall we get in, then?' said Ron uncertainly, looking at Harry as thoughworried about him.
'Yeah,' said Harry. 'Yeah, go on ...'
'It's all right,' said a dreamy voice from beside Harry as Ron vanished into thecoach's dark interior. 'You're not going mad or anything. I can see them, too.'
'Can you?' said Harry desperately, turning to Luna. He could see the batwingedhorses reflected in her wide silvery eyes.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Oh, yes,' said Luna, 'I've been able to see them ever since my first day here.
They've always pulled the carriages. Don't worry. You're just as sane as I am:
Smiling faintly, she climbed into the musty interior of the carriage after Ron.
Not altogether reassured, Harry followed her.

— CHAPTER ELEVEN —

e Sorting Hat'sNew SongHarry did not want to tell the others that he and Luna were having the samehallucination, if that was what it was, so he said nothing more about the horsesas he sal down inside the carriage and slammed the door behind him.
Nevertheless, he could not help watching the silhouettes of the horses movingbeyond the window.
'Did everyone see that Grubbly-Plank woman?' asked Ginny. 'What's shedoing back here? Hagrid can't have left, can he?'
Til be quite glad if he has,' said Luna, 'he isn't a very good teacher, is he?'
'Yes, he is!' said Harry, Ron and Ginny angrily.
Harry glared at Hermione. She cleared her throat and quickly said, 'Erin ... yes ... he's very good.'
'Well, we in Ravenclaw think he's a bit of a joke,' said Luna, unlazed.
'You've got a rubbish sense of humour then,' Ron snapped, as the wheelsbelow them creaked into motion.
Luna did not seem perturbed by Ron's rudeness; on the contrary, she simplywatched him for a while as though he were a mildly interesting televisionprogramme.
Rattling and swaying, the carriages moved in convoy up the road. When theypassed between the tall stone pillars topped with winged boars on either side ofthe gates to the school grounds, Harry leaned forwards to try and see whetherthere were any lights on m Hagrid s cabin by the Forbidden Forest, but thegrounds were in complete darkness. Hogwarts Castle, however, loomed ever 182 HARRY POTTERcloser: a towering mass of turrets, jet blackagainst the dark sky, here and there awindow blazing fiery bright above them.
The carriages jingled to a halt near thestone steps leading up to the oak front doorsand Harry got out of the carriage first. Heturned again to look for lit windows down bythe Forest, but there was definitely no sign oflife within Hagrids cabin. Unwillingly,because he had half-hoped they would havevanished, he turned his eyes instead upon thestrange, skeletal creatures standing quietly inthe chill night air, their blank white eyesgleaming.
Harry had once before had the experienceof seeing something that Ron could not, butthat had been a reflection in a mirror,something much more insubstantial than ahundred very solid-looking beasts strongenough to pull a fleet of carriages. If Lunawas to be believed, the beasts had alwaysbeen there but invisible. Why, then, couldHarry suddenly see them, and why couldRon not?
'Are you coming or what?' said Ron besidehim.
'Oh ... yeah,' said Harry quickly and theyjoined the crowd hurrying up the stone stepsinto the castle.
The Entrance Hall was ablaze withtorches and echoing with footsteps as thestudents crossed the flagged stone floor forthe double doors to the right, leading to theGreat Hall and the start-of-term feast.
The four long house tables in the GreatHall were filling up under the starless blackceiling, which was just like the sky theycould glimpse through the high windows.
Candles floated in midair all along the tables,illuminating the silvery ghosts who weredotted about the Hall and the faces of thestudents talking eagerly, exchanging summernews, shouting greetings at friends fromother houses, eyeing one another's newhaircuts and robes. Again, Harry noticedpeople putting their heads together towhisper as he passed; he gritted his teeth andtried to act as though he neither noticed norcared.

Luna drifted away from them at the Ravenclaw table. The moment they reachedGryffindors, Ginny was hailed by somefellow fourth-years and left to sit with them;
Harry, Ron, Hermione and Neville foundseats together about halfway down the tablebetween Nearly
THE SORTING HAT'S NEW SONG 183Headless Nick, the Gryffindor house ghost, and Parvati Patil and LavenderBrown, the last two of whom gave Harry airy, overly-friendly greetings thatmade him quite sure they had stopped talking about him a split second before.
He had more important things to worry about, however: he was looking over thestudents' heads to the staff table that ran along the top wall of the Hall.
'He's not there.'
Ron and Hermione scanned the staff table too, though there was no real need;
Hagrid's size made him instantly obvious in any lineup.
'He can't have left,' said Ron, sounding slightly anxious.
'Of course he hasn't,' said Harry firmly.
'You don't think he's ... hurt, or anything, do you?' said Hermione uneasily.
'No,' said Harry at once.
'But where is he, then?'
There was a pause, then Harry said very quietly, so that Neville, Parvati andLavender could not hear, 'Maybe he's not back yet. You know - from his mission- the thing he was doing over the summer for Dumbledore.'
'Yeah ... yeah, that'll be it,' said Ron, sounding reassured, but Hermione bither lip, looking up and down the staff table as though hoping for someconclusive explanation of Hagrid's absence.
'Who's that?' she said sharply, pointing towards the middle of the staff table.
Harry's eyes followed hers. They lit first upon Professor Dumbledore, sittingin his high-backed golden chair at the centre of the long staff table, wearingdeep-purple robes scattered with silvery stars and a matching hat. Dumbledore'shead was inclined towards the woman sitting next to him, who was talking intohis ear. She looked, Harry thought, like somebody's maiden aunt: squat, withshort, curly, mouse-brown hair in which she had placed a horrible pink Aliceband that matched the fluffy pink cardigan she wore over her robes. Then sheturned her face slightly to take a sip from her goblet and he saw, with a shock ofrecognition, a pallid, toadlike face and a pair of prominent, pouchy eyes.

184 HARRY POTTER'It's that Umbridge woman!'
'Who?' said Hermione.
'She was at my hearing, she works for Fudge!'
'Nice cardigan,' said Ron, smirking.
'She works for Fudge!' Hermione repeated, frowning. 'What on earth's shedoing here, then?'
'Dunno ...'
Hermione scanned the staff table, her eyes narrowed.
'No,' she muttered, 'no, surely not ...'
Harry did not understand what she was talking about but did not ask; hisattention had been caught by Professor Grubbly-Plank who had justappeared behind the staff table; she worked her way along to the very endand took the seat that ought to have been Hagrids. That meant the first-yearsmust have crossed the lake and reached the castle, and sure enough, a fewseconds later, the doors from the Entrance Hall opened. A long line ofscared-looking first-years entered, led by Professor McGonagall, who wascarrying a stool on which sat an ancient wizard's hat, heavily patched anddarned with a wide rip near the frayed brim.

The buzz of talk in the Great Hall faded away. The first-years lined up infront of the staff table facing the rest of the students, and ProfessorMcGonagall placed the stool carefully in front of them, then stood back.
The first-years' faces glowed palely in the candlelight. A small boy rightin the middle of the row looked as though he was trembling. Harry recalled,fleetingly, how terrified he had felt when he had stood there, waiting for theunknown test that would determine to which house he belonged.
The whole school waited with bated breath. Then the rip near the hat'sbrim opened wide like a mouth and the Sorting Hat burst into song:
In times of old when I was newAnd Hogwarts barely startedThe founders of our noble schoolThought never to be parted:
United by a common goal,
THE SORTING HAT'S NEW SONG 185They had the selfsame yearning,To make the world's best magic schoolAnd pass along their learning.
'Together we will build and teach!'
The four good friends decidedAnd never did they dream that theyMight some day be divided,For were there such friends anywhereAs Slytherin and Gryffindor?
Unless it was the second pairOf Hufflepuff and Ravenclaw?
So how could it have gone so wrong?
How could such friendships fail?
Why, I was there and so can tellThe whole sad, sorry tale.
Said Slytherin, 'We'll teach just thoseWhose ancestry is purest.'
Said Ravenclaw, 'We'll teach those whoseIntelligence is surest.'
Said Gryffindor, 'We'll teach all thoseWith brave deeds to their name,'
Said Hufflepuff, Til teach the lot,And treat them just the same.'
These differences caused little strifeWhen first they came to light,For each of the four founders hadA house in which they mightTake only those they wanted, so,For instance, SlytherinTook only pure-blood wizardsOf great cunning, just like him,And only those of sharpest mindWere taught by RavenclawWhile the bravest and the boldestWent to daring Gryffindor.
Good Hufflepuff, she took the rest,And taught them all she knew, 186 HARRY POTTERThus the houses and their foundersRetained friendships firm and true.
So Hogwarts worked in harmonyFor several happy years,But then discord crept among usFeeding on our faults and fears.
The houses that, like pillars four,Had once held up our school,Now turned upon each other and,Divided, sought to rule.
And for a while it seemed the schoolMust meet an early end,What with duelling and with jightingAnd the clash of friend on friendAnd at last there came a morningWhen old Slytherin departedAnd though the fighting then died outHe left us quite downhearted.
And never since the founders fourWere whittled down to threeHave the houses been unitedAs they once were meant to be.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

And now the Sorting Hat is hereAnd you all know the score:
I sort you into housesBecause that is what I'm for,But this year I'll go further,Listen closely to my song:
Though condemned I am to split youStill I worry that it's wrong,Though / must fulfil my dutyAnd must quarter everv yearStill I wonder whether SortingMay not bring the end I fear.
Oh, know the perils, read the signs,The warning history shows,For our Hogwarts is in danger
THE SORTING HAT'S NEW SONG 187From external, deadly foesAnd we must unite inside herOr we'll crumble from withinI have told you, I have warned you ...
Let the Sorting now begin.
The Hat became motionless once more; applause broke out, though it waspunctured, for the first time in Harrys memory, with muttering and whispers.
All across the Great Hall students were exchanging remarks with theirneighbours, and Harry, clapping along with everyone else, knew exactly whatthey were talking about.
'Branched out a bit this year, hasn't it?' said Ron, his eyebrows raised.
Too right it has,' said Harry.
The Sorting Hat usually confined itself to describing the different qualitieslooked for by each of the four Hogwarts houses and its own role in Sortingthem. Harry could not remember it ever trying to give the school advice before.
T wonder if it's ever given warnings before?' said Hermione, soundingslightly anxious.
'Yes, indeed,' said Nearly Headless Nick knowledgeably, leaning acrossNeville towards her (Neville winced; it was very uncomfortable to have a ghostlean through you). The Hat feels itself honour-bound to give the school duewarning whenever il feels - But Professor McGonagall, who was waiting to read out the list of firstyears' names, was giving the whispering students the sort of look that scorches.
Nearly Headless Nick placed a see-through finger to his lips and sat primlyupright again as the muttering came to an abrupt end. With a last frowning lookthat swept the four house tables, Professor McGonagall lowered her eyes to herlong piece of parchment and called out the first name.
'Abercrombie, Euan.'
The terrified-looking boy Harry had noticed earlier stumbled forwards andput the Hat on his head; it was only prevented from falling right down to hisshoulders by his very prominent ears. The Hat considered for a moment, thenthe rip near the brim opened again and shouted:

188 HARRY POTTER'Gryffindor!'
Harry clapped loudly with the rest of Gryffindor house as Euan Abercrombiestaggered to their table and sat down, looking as though he would like very muchto sink through the floor and never be looked at again.
Slowly, the long line of first-years thinned. In the pauses between the namesand the Sorting Hat's decisions, Harry could hear Rons stomach rumbling loudly.
Finally, 'Zeller, Rose' was Sorted into Hufflepuff, and Professor McGonagallpicked up the Hat and stool and marched them away as Professor Dumbledorerose to his feet.
Whatever his recent bitter feelings had been towards his Headmaster, Harrywas somehow soothed to see Dumbledore standing before them all. Between theabsence of Hagrid and the presence of those dragonish horses, he had felt that hisreturn to Hogwarts, so long anticipated, was full of unexpected surprises, likejarring notes in a familiar song. But this, at least, was how it was supposed to be: their Headmaster rising to greet them all before the start-of-term feast.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

To our newcomers,' said Dumbledore in a ringing voice, his arms stretchedwide and a beaming smile on his lips, 'welcome! To our old hands - welcomeback! There is a time for speech-making, but this is not it. Tuck in!'
There was an appreciative laugh and an outbreak of applause as Dumbledoresat down neatly and threw his long beard over his shoulder so as to keep it out ofthe way of his plate - for food had appeared out of nowhere, so that the five longtables were groaning under joints and pies and dishes of vegetables, bread andsauces and flagons of pumpkin juice.
'Excellent,' said Ron, with a kind of groan of longing, and he seized thenearest plate of chops and began piling them on to his plate, watched wistfully byNearly Headless Nick.
'What were you saying before the Sorting?' Hermione asked the ghost. 'Aboutthe Hat giving warnings?'
'Oh, yes,' said Nick, who seemed glad of a reason to turn away from Ron, whowas now eating roast potatoes with almost indecent enthusiasm. 'Yes, I haveheard the Hat give several warnings before, always at times when it detectsperiods of great danger for the
THE SORTING HAT'S NEW SONG 189school. And always, of course, its advice is the same: stand together, be strongfrom within.'
'Ow kunnit nofe skusin danger ifzat?' said Ron.
His mouth was so full Harry thought it was quite an achievement for him tomake any noise at all.
'I beg your pardon?' said Nearly Headless Nick politely, while Hermionelooked revolted. Ron gave an enormous swallow and said, 'How can it know ifthe school's in danger if it's a Hat?'
'I have no idea,' said Nearly Headless Nick. 'Of course, it lives inDumbledore's office, so I daresay it picks things up there.'
'And it wants all the houses to be friends?' said Harry, looking over at theSlytherin table, where Draco Malfoy was holding court. 'Fat chance.'
'Well, now, you shouldn't take that attitude,' said Nick reprovingly. 'Peacefulco-operation, that's the key. We ghosts, though we belong to separate houses,maintain links of friendship. In spite of the competitiveness between Gryffindorand Slytherin, 1 would never dream of seeking an argument with the BloodyBaron.'
'Only because you're terrified of him,' said Ron.
Nearly Headless Nick looked highly affronted.
Terrified? I hope I, Sir Nicholas de Mimsy-Porpington, have never beenguilty of cowardice in my life! The noble blood that runs in my veins -'
'What blood?' asked Ron. 'Surely you haven't still got -?'
'Its a figure of speech!' said Nearly Headless Nick, now so annoyed his headwas trembling ominously on his partially severed neck. T assume I am stillallowed to enjoy the use of whichever words I like, even if the pleasures ofeating and drinking are denied me! But I am quite used to students poking fun atmy death, I assure you!'
'Nick, he wasn't really laughing at you!' said Hermione, throwing a furiouslook at Ron.
Unfortunately, Ron's mouth was packed to exploding point again and all hecould manage was 'Node iddum eentup sechew,' which Nick did not seem tothink constituted an adequate apology. Rising into the air, he straightened hisfeathered hat and swept away from them to the other end of the table, coming torest between the Creevey brothers, Colin and Dennis.

190 HARRY POTTER'Well done, Ron,' snapped Hermione.

'What?' said Ron indignantly, having managed, finally, to swallow his tood.
'I'm not allowed to ask a simple question?'
"Oh, forget it,' said Hermione irritably, and the pair of them spent the rest ofthe meal in huffy silence.
Harry was too used to their bickering to bother trying to reconcile them; hefelt it was a better use of his time to eat his way steadily through his steak andkidney pie, then a large plateful of his favourite treacle tart.
When all the students had finished eating and the noise level in the Hall wasstarting to creep upwards again, Dumbledore got to his feet once more. Talkingceased immediately as all turned to lace the Headmaster. Harry was feelingpleasantly drowsy now. His lour-poster bed was waiting somewhere above,wonderfully warm and soft ...
'Well, now that we are all digesting another magnificent feast, 1 beg a fewmoments of your attention for the usual start-of-term notices,' said Dumbledore.
'First-years ought to know that the Forest in the grounds is out-of-bounds tostudents - and a few of our older students ought to know by now, too.' (Harry,Ron and Hermione exchanged smirks.)
'Mr Filch, the caretaker, has asked me, for what he tells me is the lourhundredand-sixty-second time, to remind you all that magic is not permitted incorridors between classes, nor are a number of other things, all of which can bechecked on the extensive list now fastened to Mr Filch's office door.
'We have had two changes in staffing this year. We are very pleased towelcome back Professor Grubbly-Plank, who will be taking Care of MagicalCreatures lessons; we are also delighted to introduce Professor Umbridge, ournew Defence Against the Dark Arts teacher.'
There was a round of polite but fairly unenthusiastic applause, during whichHarry, Ron and Hermione exchanged slightly panicked looks; Dumbledore hadnot said for how long Grubbly-Plank would be teaching.
Dumbledore continued, Tryouts for the house Quidditch teams will take placeon the -'

THE SORTING HAT'S NEW SONG 191He broke off, looking enquiringly at Professor Umbridge. As she was notmuch taller standing than sitting, there was a moment when nobody understoodwhy Dumbledore had stopped talking, but then Professor Umbridge cleared herthroat, 'Hem, hem,' and it became clear that she had got to her feet and wasintending to make a speech.
Dumbledore only looked taken aback for a moment, then he sat down smartlyand looked alertly at Professor Umbridge as though he desired nothing betterthan to listen to her talk. Other members of staff were not as adept at hiding theirsurprise. Professor Sprout's eyebrows had disappeared into her flyaway hair andProfessor McGonagall's mouth was as thin as Harry had ever seen it. No newteacher had ever interrupted Dumbledore before. Many of the students weresmirking; this woman obviously did not know how things were done atHogwarts.
Thank you, Headmaster,' Professor Umbridge simpered, 'for those kind wordsof welcome.'
Her voice was high-pitched, breathy and little-girlish and, again, Harry felt apowerful rush of dislike that he could not explain to himself; all he knew wasthat he loathed everything about her, from her stupid voice to her fluffy pinkcardigan. She gave another little throat-clearing cough ('hem, hem') andcontinued.
'Well, it is lovely to be back at Hogwarts, I must say!' She smiled, revealingvery pointed teeth. 'And to see such happy little faces looking up at me!'
Harry glanced around. None of the faces he could see looked happy. On thecontrary, they all looked rather taken-aback at being addressed as though theywere five years old.

'I am very much looking forward to getting to know you all and I'm sure we'llbe very good friends!'
Students exchanged looks at this; some of them were barely concealing grins.
'I'll be her friend as long as I don't have to borrow that cardigan,' Parvatiwhispered to Lavender, and both of them lapsed into silent giggles.
Professor Umbridge cleared her throat again ('hem, hem'), but when shecontinued, some of the breathiness had vanished from 192 HARRY POTTERher voice. She sounded much more businesslike and now her words had a dulllearned-by-heart sound to them.
The Ministry of Magic has always considered the education of young witchesand wizards to be of vital importance. The rare gifts with which you were bornmay come to nothing if not nurtured and honed by careful instruction. Theancient skills unique to the wizarding community must be passed down thegenerations lest we lose them tor ever. The treasure trove of magical knowledgeamassed by our ancestors must be guarded, replenished and polished by thosewho have been called to the noble profession of teaching.'
Professor Umbridge paused here and made a little bow to her fellow staffmembers, none of whom bowed back to her. Professor McGonagall's darkeyebrows had contracted so that she looked positively hawklike, and Harrydistinctly saw her exchange a significant glance with Professor Sprout asUmbridge gave another little 'hem, hem' and went on with her speech.
Every headmaster and headmistress o(Hogwarts has brought something newto the weighty task of governing this historic school, and that is as it should be,lor without progress there will be stagnation and decay. There again, progress forprogress's sake must be discouraged, for our tried and tested traditions oftenrequire no tinkering. A balance, then, between old and new, between permanenceand change, between tradition and innovation ..."
Harry lound his attentiveness ebbing, as though his brain was slipping in andout of tune. The quiet that always filled the Hall when Dumbledore was speakingwas breaking up as students put their heads together, whispering and giggling.
Over on the Ravenclaw table Cho Chang was chatting animatedly with herfriends. A few seats along from Cho, Luna Lovegood had got out The Quibbleragain. Meanwhile, at the Hufflepuff table Ernie Macmillan was one of the fewstill staring at Professor Umbridge, but he was glassy-eyed and Harry was sure hewas only pretending to listen in an attempt to live up to the new prefect's badgegleaming on his chest.
Professor Umbridge did not seem to notice the restlessness of her audience.
Harry had the impression that a full-scale riot could have broken out under hernose and she would have ploughed on with her speech. The teachers, however,were still listening very
THE SORTING HAT'S NEW SONG 193attentively, and Hermione seemed to be drinking in every word Umbridge spoke,though, judging by her expression, they were not at all to her taste.
'... because some changes will be for the better, while others will come, in thefullness of time, to be recognised as errors of judgement. Meanwhile, some oldhabits will be retained, and rightly so, whereas others, outmoded and outworn,must be abandoned. Let us move forward, then, into a new era of openness,effectiveness and accountability, intent on preserving what ought to bepreserved, perfecting what needs to be perfected, and pruning wherever we findpractices that ought to be prohibited.'
She sat down. Dumbledore clapped. The staff followed his lead, though Harrynoticed that several of them brought their hands together only once or twicebefore stopping. A few students joined in, but most had been taken unawares bythe end of the speech, not having listened to more than a few words of it, andbefore they could start applauding properly, Dumbledore had stood up again.

Thank you very much, Professor Umbridge, that was most illuminating,' hesaid, bowing to her. 'Now, as I was saying, Quidditch tryouts will be held ..."
'Yes, it certainly was illuminating,' said Hermione in a low voice.
'You're not telling me you enjoyed it?' Ron said quietly, turning a glazed facetowards Hermione. That was about the dullest speech I've ever heard, and I grewup with Percy.'
'I said illuminating, not enjoyable,' said Hermione. 'It explained a lot.'
'Did it?' said Harry in surprise. 'Sounded like a load of waffle to me.'
There was some important stuff hidden in the waffle,' said Hermione grimly.
'Was there?' said Ron blankly.
'How about: "progress for progress's sake must be discouraged"? How about:
"pruning wherever we find practices that ought to be prohibited"?'
'Well, what does that mean?' said Ron impatiently.
Til tell you what it means,' said Hermione through gritted teeth. 'It means theMinistry's interfering at Hogwarts.'

194 HARRY POTTERThere was a great clattering and banging all around them; Dumbledore hadobviously just dismissed the school, because everyone was standing up ready toleave the Hall. Hermione jumped up, looking flustered.
'Ron, we're supposed to show the first-years where to go!'
'Oh yeah,' said Ron, who had obviously forgotten. 'Hey - hey, you lot!
Midgets!'
'Ron!'
'Well, they are, they're titchy ...'
'I know, but you can't call them midgets! - First-years!' Hermione calledcommandingly along the table. This way, please!'
A group of new students walked shyly up the gap between the Gryffindor andHufflepuff tables, all of them trying hard not to lead the group. They did indeedseem very small; Harry was sure he had not appeared that young when he hadarrived here. He grinned at them. A blond boy next to Euan Abercrombie lookedpetrified; he nudged Euan and whispered something in his ear. EuanAbercrombie looked equally frightened and stole a horrified look at Harry, whofelt the grin slide off his face like Stinksap.
'See you later,' he said dully to Ron and Hermione and he made his way out ofthe Great Hall alone, doing everything he could to ignore more whispering,staring and pointing as he passed. He kept his eyes fixed ahead as he wove hisway through the crowd in the Entrance Hall, then he hurried up the marblestaircase, took a couple of concealed short cuts and had soon left most of thecrowds behind.
He had been stupid not to expect this, he thought angrily as he walked throughthe much emptier upstairs corridors. Of course everyone was staring at him; hehad emerged from the Triwizard maze two months previously clutching the deadbody of a fellow student and claiming to have seen Lord Voldemort return topower. There had not been time last term to explain himself before they'd all hadto go home - even if he had felt up to giving the whole school a detailed accountof the terrible events in that graveyard.
Harry had reached the end of the corridor to the Gryffindor common room andcome to a halt in front of the portrait of the Fat Lady before he realised that hedid not know the new password.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

THE SORTING HAT'S NEW SONG 195'Er ...' he said glumly, staring up at the Fat Lady, who smoothed the folds ofher pink satin dress and looked sternly back at him.
'No password, no entrance,' she said loftily.
'Harry, I know it!' Someone panted up behind him and he turned to see Nevillejogging towards him. 'Guess what it is? I'm actually going to be able to rememberit for once -' He waved the stunted little cactus he had shown them on the train.
'Mimbulus mimble-tonifl!'
'Correct,' said the Fat Lady, and her portrait swung open towards them like adoor, revealing a circular hole in the wall behind, through which Harry andNeville now climbed.
The Gryffindor common room looked as welcoming as ever, a cosy circulartower room full of dilapidated squashy armchairs and rickety old tables. A firewas crackling merrily in the grate and a few people were warming their hands byit before going up to their dormitories; on the other side of the room Fred andGeorge Weasley were pinning something up on the noticeboard. Harry wavedgoodnight to them and headed straight for the door to the boys' dormitories; hewas not in much of a mood for talking at the moment. Neville followed him.
Dean Thomas and Seamus Finnigan had reached the dormitory first and werein the process of covering the walls beside their beds with posters andphotographs. They had been talking as Harry pushed open the door but stoppedabruptly the moment they saw him. Harry wondered whether they had beentalking about him, then whether he was being paranoid.
'Hi,' he said, moving across to his own trunk and opening it.
'Hey, Harry,' said Dean, who was putting on a pair of pyjamas in the WestHam colours. 'Good holiday?'
'Not bad,' muttered Harry, as a true account of his holiday would have takenmost of the night to relate and he could not face it. 'You?'
'Yeah, it was OK,' chuckled Dean. 'Better than Seamus's, anyway, he was justtelling me.'
'Why, what happened, Seamus?' Neville asked as he placed his Mimbulusmimbletonia tenderly on his bedside cabinet.
Seamus did not answer immediately; he was making rather a 196 HARRY POTTERmeal of ensuring that his poster of the Kenmare Kestrels Quidditch team wasquite straight. Then he said, with his back still turned to Harry, 'Me mam didn'twant me to come back.'
'What?' said Harry, pausing in the act of pulling off his robes.
'She didn't want me to come back to Hogwarts.'
Seamus turned away from his poster and pulled his own pyjamas out of histrunk, still not looking at Harry.
'But - why?' said Harry, astonished. He knew that Seamus's mother was awitch and could not understand, therefore, why she should have come over soDursleyish.
Seamus did not answer until he had finished buttoning his pyjamas.
'Well,' he said in a measured voice, 'I suppose ... because of you.'
'What d'you mean?' said Harry quickly.
His heart was beating rather fast. He felt vaguely as though something wasclosing in on him.
'Well,' said Seamus again, still avoiding Harrys eye, 'she ... er ... well, it's notjust you, it's Dumbledore, too ...'

'She believes the Daily Prophet?' said Harry. 'She thinks I'm a liar andDumbledore's an old fool?'
Seamus looked up at him.
'Yeah, something like that.'
Harry said nothing. He threw his wand down on to his bedside table, pulledoff his robes, stuffed them angrily into his trunk and pulled on his pyjamas. Hewas sick of it; sick of being the person who is stared at and talked about all thetime. If any of them knew, if any of them had the faintest idea what it felt like tobe the one all these things had happened to ... Mrs Finnigan had no idea, thestupid woman, he thought savagely.
He got into bed and made to pull the hangings closed around him, but beforehe could do so, Seamus said, 'Look ... what did happen that night when ... youknow, when ... with Cedric Diggory and all?'
Seamus sounded nervous and eager at the same time. Dean, who had beenbending over his trunk trying to retrieve a slipper, went oddly still and Harryknew he was listening hard.

THE SORTING HAT'S NEW SONG 197'What are you asking me for?' Harry retorted. 'Just read the Daily Prophet likeyour mother, why don't you? That'll tell you all you need to know.'
'Don't you have a go at my mother,' Seamus snapped.
Til have a go at anyone who calls me a liar,' said Harry.
'Don't talk to me like that!'
Til talk to you how I want,' said Harry, his temper rising so fast he snatchedhis wand back from his bedside table. 'If you've got a problem sharing adormitory with me, go and ask McGonagall if you can be moved ... stop yourmummy worrying -'
'Leave my mother out of this, Potter!'
'What's going on?'
Ron had appeared in the doorway. His wide eyes travelled from Harry, whowas kneeling on his bed with his wand pointing at Seamus, to Seamus, who wasstanding there with his fists raised.
'He's having a go at my mother!' Seamus yelled.
'What?' said Ron. 'Harry wouldn't do that — we met your mother, we likedher ..."
That's before she started believing every word the stinking Daily Prophetwrites about me!' said Harry at the top of his voice.
'Oh,' said Ron, comprehension dawning across his freckled face. 'Oh ... right.'
'You know what?' said Seamus heatedly, casting Harry a venomous look.
'He's right, I don't want to share a dormitory with him any more, he's mad.'
'That's out of order, Seamus,' said Ron, whose ears were starting to glow red - always a danger sign.
'Out of order, am I?' shouted Seamus, who in contrast with Ron was goingpale. 'You believe all the rubbish he's come out with about You-Know-Who, doyou, you reckon he's telling the truth?'
'Yeah, I do!' said Ron angrily.
Then you're mad, too,' said Seamus in disgust.
'Yeah? Well, unfortunately for you, pal, I'm also a prefect!' said Ron, jabbinghimself in the chest with a finger. 'So unless you want detention, watch yourmouth!'
Seamus looked for a few seconds as though detention would be a reasonableprice to pay to say what was going through his mind;

198 HARRY POTTERbut with a noise of contempt he turned on his heel, vaulted into bed andpulled the hangings shut with such violence that they were ripped fromthe bed and fell in a dusty pile to the floor. Ron glared at Seamus, thenlooked at Dean and Neville.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Anyone else's parents got a problem with Harry?' he saidaggressively.
'My parents are Muggles, mate,' said Dean, shrugging. They don'tknow nothing about no deaths at Hogwarts, because I'm not stupidenough to tell them.'
'You don't know my mother, she'd weasel anything out of anyone!'
Seamus snapped at him. 'Anyway your parents don't get the DailyProphet. They don't know our Headmaster's been sacked from theWizengamot and the International Confederation of Wizards becausehe's losing his marbles -'
'My gran says that's rubbish,' piped up Neville. 'She says it's the DailyProphet that's going downhill, not Dumbledore. She's cancelled oursubscription. We believe Harry' said Neville simply. He climbed into bedand pulled the covers up to his chin, looking owlishly over them atSeamus. 'My gran's always said You-Know-Who would come back oneday. She says if Dumbledore says he's back, he's back.'
Harry felt a rush of gratitude towards Neville. Nobody else saidanything. Seamus got out his wand, repaired the bed hangings andvanished behind them. Dean got into bed, rolled over and fell silent.
Neville, who appeared to have nothing more to say either, was gazingfondly at his moonlit cactus.
Harry lay back on his pillows while Ron bustled around the next bed,putting his things away. He felt shaken by the argument with Seamus,whom he had always liked very much. How many more people weregoing to suggest that he was lying, or unhinged?
Had Dumbledore suffered like this all summer, as first theWizengamot, then the International Confederation of Wizards had thrownhim from their ranks? Was it anger at Harry, perhaps, that had stoppedDumbledore getting in touch with him for months? The two of them werein this together, after all; Dumbledore had believed Harry, announced hisversion of events to the whole school and then to the wider wizardingcommunity. Anyone who thought1 HE SORTING HAT'S NEW SONG199Harry was a liar had to think that Dumbledore was, too, or elsethat Dumbledore had been hoodwinked ...
They'll know we're right in the end, thought Harry miserably, as Ron got intobed and extinguished the last candle in the dormitory. But he wondered howmany more attacks like Seamus's he would have to endure before that time came.

— CHAPTER TWELVE —

ProfessorUmbridgeSeamus dressed at top speed next morning andleft the dormitory before Harry had even puton his socks.
'Does he think he'll turn into a nutter if hestays in a room with me too long?' askedHarry loudly, as the hem of Seamus's robeswhipped out of sight.
'Don't worry about it, Harry,' Deanmuttered, hoisting his schoolbag on to hisshoulder, 'he's just ...'
But apparently he was unable to say exactlywhat Seamus was, and after a slightlyawkward pause followed him out of the room.
Neville and Ron both gave Harry an it'shisproblem-not-yours look, but Harry was notmuch consoled. How much more of this wouldhe have to take?
'What's the matter?' asked Hermione fiveminutes later, catching up with Harry and Ronhalfway across the common room as they allheaded towards breakfast. 'You lookabsolutely - Oh for heaven's sake.'

She was staring at the common-roomnoticeboard, where a large new sign had beenput up.
GALLONS OF GALLEONS.'
Pocket money failing to keep pace with youroutgoings?
Like to earn a little extra gold?
Contact Fred and George Weasley, Gryffindorcommon room,for simple, part-time, virtually painlessjobs.
(We regret that all work is undertaken atapplicant's own risk.)
They are the limit,' said Hermione grimly,taking down the sign, which Fred and Georgehad pinned up over a poster giving the PROFESSOR UMBRIDGE 201date of the first Hogsmeade weekend, which was to be in October.
'We'll have to talk to them, Ron.'
Ron looked positively alarmed.
'Why?'
'Because we're prefects!' said Hermione, as they climbed out throughthe portrait hole. 'It's up to us to stop this kind of thing!'
Ron said nothing; Harry could tell from his glum expression that theprospect of stopping Fred and George doing exactly what they likedwas not one he found inviting.
'Anyway, what's up, Harry?' Hermione continued, as they walkeddown a flight of stairs lined with portraits of old witches and wizards,all of whom ignored them, being engrossed in their own conversation.
'You look really angry about something.'
'Seamus reckons Harry's lying about You-Know-Who,' said Ronsuccinctly, when Harry did not respond.
Hermione, who Harry had expected to react angrily on his behalf,sighed.
'Yes, Lavender thinks so too,' she said gloomily.
'Been having a nice little chat with her about whether or not I'm alying, attention-seeking prat, have you?' Harry said loudly.
'No,' said Hermione calmly. 'I told her to keep her big fat mouth shutabout you, actually. And it would be quite nice if you stopped jumpingdown our throats, Harry, because in case you haven't noticed, Ron and Iare on your side.'
There was a short pause.
'Sorry,' said Harry in a low voice.
That's quite all right,' said Hermione with dignity. Then she shookher head. 'Don't you remember what Dumbledore said at the last endof-term feast?'
Harry and Ron both looked at her blankly and Hermione sighedagain.
'About You-Know-Who. He said his "gift for spreading discord andenmity is very great. We can fight it only by showing an equally strongbond of friendship and trust —"'
'How do you remember stuff like that?' asked Ron, looking at her inadmiration.
'I listen, Ron,' said Hermione, with a touch of asperity.

202 HARRY POTTER'So do I, but I still couldn't tell you exactly what -'
The point,' Hermione pressed on loudly, 'is that this sort of thing is exactlywhat Dumbledore was talking about. You-Know-Who's only been back twomonths and we've already started fighting among ourselves. And the Sorting Hatswarning was the same: stand together, be united —'

'And Harry got it right last night,' retorted Ron. 'If that means we're supposedto get matey with the Slytherins -fat chance.'
'Well, I think it's a pity we're not trying for a bit of inter-house unity,' saidHermione crossly.
They had reached the foot of the marble staircase. A line of fourth-yearRavenclaws was crossing the Entrance Hall; they caught sight of Harry andhurried to form a tighter group, as though frightened he might attack stragglers.
'Yeah, we really ought to be trying to make friends with people like that,' saidHarry sarcastically.
They followed the Ravenclaws into the Great Hall, all looking instinctively atthe staff table as they entered. Professor Grubbly-Plank was chatting to ProfessorSinistra, the Astronomy teacher, and Hagrid was once again conspicuous only byhis absence. The enchanted ceiling above them echoed Harry's mood; it was amiserable rain-cloud grey.
'Dumbledore didn't even mention how long that Grubbly-Plank woman'sstaying,' he said, as they made their way across to the Gryffindor table. *. .
'Maybe ...' said Hermione thoughtfully. '.'..'
'What?' said both Harry and Ron together.
'Well ... maybe he didn't want to draw attention to Hagrid not being here.'
'What d'you mean, draw attention to it?' said Ron, half-laughing. 'How couldwe not notice?'
Before Hermione could answer, a tall black girl with long braided hair hadmarched up to Harry.
'Hi, Angelina.'
'Hi,' she said briskly, 'good summer?' And without waiting for an answer,'Listen, I've been made Gryffindor Quidditch Captain.'

'Nice one,' said Harry, grinning at her; he suspected Angelina's pep talksmight not be as long-winded as Oliver Wood's had been, which could only be animprovement.
'Yeah, well, we need a new Keeper now Oliver's left. Tryouts are on Friday atfive o'clock and I want the whole team there, all right? Then we can see how thenew person'll fit in.'
'OK,' said Harry.
Angelina smiled at him and departed.
'I'd forgotten Wood had left,' said Hermione vaguely as she sat down besideRon and pulled a plate of toast towards her. 'I suppose that will make quite adifference to the team?'
'I s'pose,' said Harry, taking the bench opposite. 'He was a good Keeper ...'
'Still, it won't hurt to have some new blood, will it?' said Ron.
With a whoosh and a clatter, hundreds of owls came soaring in through theupper windows. They descended all over the Hall, bringing letters and packagesto their owners and showering the breakfasters with droplets of water; it wasclearly raining hard outside. Hedwig was nowhere to be seen, but Harry washardly surprised; his only correspondent was Sirius, and he doubted Sirius wouldhave anything new to tell him after only twenty-four hours apart. Hermione,however, had to move her orange juice aside quickly to make way for a largedamp barn owl bearing a sodden Daily Prophet in its beak.
'What are you still getting that for?' said Harry irritably, thinking of Seamusas Hermione placed a Knut in the leather pouch on the owl's leg and it took offagain. Tm not bothering ... load of rubbish.'
'It's best to know what the enemy is saying,' said Hermione darkly, and sheunfurled the newspaper and disappeared behind it, not emerging until Harry andRon had finished eating.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Nothing,' she said simply, rolling up the newspaper and laying it down by herplate. 'Nothing about you or Dumbledore or anything.'
Professor McGonagall was now moving along the table handing outtimetables.
'Look at today!' groaned Ron. 'History of Magic, double Potions, 204 HARRY POTTERDivination and double Defence Against the Dark Arts ... Binns, Snape,Trelawney and that Umbridge woman all in one day! I wish Fred and George'dhurry up and get those Skiving Snackboxes sorted ...'
'Do mine ears deceive me?' said Fred, arriving with George and squeezing onto the bench beside Harry. 'Hogwarts prefects surely don't wish to skive offlessons?'
'Look what we've got today,' said Ron grumpily, shoving his timetable underFred's nose. That's the worst Monday I've ever seen.'
'Fair point, little bro,' said Fred, scanning the column. 'You can have a bit ofNosebleed Nougat cheap if you like.'
'Why's it cheap?' said Ron suspiciously.
'Because you'll keep bleeding till you shrivel up, we haven't got an antidoteyet,' said George, helping himself to a kipper.
'Cheers,' said Ron moodily, pocketing his timetable, 'but I think I'll take thelessons.'
'And speaking of your Skiving Snackboxes,' said Hermione, eyeing Fred andGeorge beadily, 'you can't advertise for testers on the Gryffindor noticeboard.'
'Says who?' said George, looking astonished.
'Says me,' said Hermione. 'And Ron.'
'Leave me out of it,' said Ron hastily.
Hermione glared at him. Fred and George sniggered.
'You'll be singing a different tune soon enough, Hermione,' said Fred, thicklybuttering a crumpet. 'You're starting your fifth year, you'll be begging us for aSnackbox before long.'
'And why would starting fifth year mean I want a Skiving Snackbox?' askedHermione.
'Fifth year's OWL year,' said George.
'So?'
'So you've got your exams coming up, haven't you? They'll be keeping yournoses so hard to that grindstone they'll be rubbed raw,' said Fred withsatisfaction.
'Half our year had minor breakdowns coming up to OWLs,' said Georgehappily. Tears and tantrums ... Patricia Stimpson kept coming over faint ..."

PROFESSOR UMBRIDGE 205'Kenneth Towler came out in boils, d'you remember?' said Fred reminiscently.
That's 'cause you put Bulbadox powder in his pyjamas,' said George.
'Oh yeah,' said Fred, grinning. 'I'd forgotten ... hard to keep track sometimes,isn't it?'
'Anyway, it's a nightmare of a year, the fifth,' said George. 'If you care aboutexam results, anyway. Fred and I managed to keep our peckers up somehow.'
'Yeah ... you got, what was it, three OWLs each?' said Ron.
'Yep,' said Fred unconcernedly. 'But we feel our futures lie outside the worldof academic achievement.'
'We seriously debated whether we were going to bother coming back for ourseventh year,' said George brightly, 'now that we'vegot-'
He broke off at a warning look from Harry, who knew Georgehad been about to mention the Triwizard winnings he had given them.

'- now that we've got our OWLs,' George said hastily. 'I mean, do we reallyneed NEWTs? But we didn't think Mum could take us leaving school early, noton top of Percy turning out to be the world's biggest prat.'
'We're not going to waste our last year here, though,' said Fred, lookingafiectionately around at the Great Hall. 'We're going to use it to do a bit ofmarket research, find out exactly what the average Hogwarts student requiresfrom a joke shop, carefully evaluate the results of our research, then produceproducts to fit the demand.'
'But where are you going to get the gold to start a joke shop?' Hermione askedsceptically. 'You're going to need all the ingredients and materials - and premisestoo, I suppose ..."
Harry did not look at the twins. His face felt hot; he deliberately dropped hisfork and dived down to retrieve it. He heard Fred say overhead, 'Ask us noquestions and we'll tell you no lies, Hermione. C'mon, George, if we get thereearly we might be able to sell a few Extendable Ears before Herbology.'
Harry emerged from under the table to see Fred and George walking away,each carrying a stack of toast.

206 HARRY POTTER'What did that mean?' said Hermione, looking from Harry to Ron. '"Ask us noquestions ..." Does that mean they've already got some gold to start a joke shop?'
'You know, I've been wondering about that,' said Ron, his brow furrowed.
They bought me a new set of dress robes this summer and I couldn't understandwhere they got the Galleons ..."
Harry decided it was time to steer the conversation out of these dangerouswaters.
'D'you reckon it's true this year's going to be really tough? Because of theexams?'
'Oh, yeah,' said Ron. 'Bound to be, isn't it? OWLs are really important, affectthe jobs you can apply for and everything. We get career advice, too, later thisyear, Bill told me. So you can choose what NEWTs you want to do next year.'
'D'you know what you want to do after Hogwarts?' Harry asked the other two,as they left the Great Hall shortly afterwards and set off towards their History ofMagic classroom.
'Not really,' said Ron slowly. 'Except ... well ...'
He looked slightly sheepish.
'What?' Harry urged him.
'Well, it'd be cool to be an Auror,' said Ron in an off-hand voice.
'Yeah, it would,' said Harry fervently.
'But they're, like, the elite,' said Ron. 'You've got to be really good. Whatabout you, Hermione?'
'I don't know,' she said. 'I think I'd like to do something really worthwhile.'
'An Auror's worthwhile!' said Harry.
'Yes, it is, but it's not the only worthwhile thing,' said Hermione thoughtfully,'I mean, if I could take SPEW further ...'
Harry and Ron carefully avoided looking at each other.
History of Magic was by common consent the most boring subject everdevised by wizardkind. Professor Binns, their ghost teacher, had a wheezy,droning voice that was almost guaranteed to cause severe drowsiness within tenminutes, five in warm weather. He never varied the form of their lessons, butlectured them without pausing while they took notes, or rather, gazed sleepilyinto space. Harry and Ron had so far managed to scrape passes in this subject

PROFESSOR UMBRIDGE 207only by copying Hermione's notes before exams; she alone seemed able to resistthe soporific power of Binns's voice.
Today, they suffered an hour and a half's droning on the subject of giant wars.
Harry heard just enough within the first ten minutes to appreciate dimly that inanother teacher's hands this subject might have been mildly interesting, but thenhis brain disengaged, and he spent the remaining hour and twenty minutesplaying hangman on a corner of his parchment with Ron, while Hermione shotthem filthy looks out of the corner of her eye.
'How would it be,' she asked them coldly, as they left the classroom for break(Binns drifting away through the blackboard), 'if I refused to lend you my notesthis year?'
'We'd fail our OWL,' said Ron. 'If you want that on your conscience,Hermione ...'
'Well, you'd deserve it,' she snapped. 'You don't even try to listen to him, doyou?'
'We do try' said Ron. 'We just haven't got your brains or your memory or yourconcentration - you're just cleverer than we are - is it nice to rub it in?'
'Oh, don't give me that rubbish,' said Hermione, but she looked slightlymollified as she led the way out into the damp courtyard.
A fine misty drizzle was falling, so that the people standing in huddles aroundthe edges of the yard looked blurred at the edges. Harry, Ron and Hermionechose a secluded corner under a heavily dripping balcony, turning up the collarsof their robes against the chilly September air and talking about what Snape waslikely to set them in the first lesson of the year. They had got as far as agreeingthat it was likely to be something extremely difficult, just to catch them off guardafter a two-month holiday, when someone walked around the corner towardsthem.
'Hello, Harry!'
It was Cho Chang and, what was more, she was on her own again. This wasmost unusual: Cho was almost always surrounded by a gang of giggling girls;
Harry remembered the agony of trying to get her by herself to ask her to the YuleBall.
'Hi,' said Harry, feeling his face grow hot. At least you're not 208 HARRY POTTERcovered in Stinksap this time, he told himself. Cho seemed to bethinking along the same lines.
'You got that stuff off, then?'
'Yeah,' said Harry, trying to grin as though the memory of their last meetingwas funny as opposed to mortifying. 'So, did you ... er ... have a good summer?'
The moment he had said this he wished he hadn't - Cedric had been Cho'sboyfriend and the memory of his death must have affected her holiday almost asbadly as it had affected Harrys. Something seemed to tauten in her face, but shesaid, 'Oh, it was all right, you know ...'
'Is that a Tornados badge?' Ron demanded suddenly, pointing to the front ofCho's robes, where a sky-blue badge emblazoned with a double gold T' waspinned. 'You don't support them, do you?'
'Yeah, I do,' said Cho.
'Have you always supported them, or just since they started winning theleague?' said Ron, in what Harry considered an unnecessarily accusatory tone ofvoice.
'I've supported them since I was six,' said Cho coolly. 'Anyway ... see you,Harry.'
She walked away. Hermione waited until Cho was halfway across thecourtyard before rounding on Ron.
'You are so tactless!'
'What? I only asked her if -'

'Couldn't you tell she wanted to talk to Harry on her own?'
'So? She could've done, I wasn't stopping -'
'Why on earth were you attacking her about her Quidditch team?'
'Attacking? I wasn't attacking her, I was only -'
'Who cares if she supports the Tornados?'
'Oh, come on, half the people you see wearing those badges only bought themlast season -'
'But what does it matter!'
'It means they're not real fans, they're just jumping on the bandwagon -'
That's the bell,' said Harry dully, because Ron and Hermione were bickeringtoo loudly to hear it. They did not stop arguing all
PROFESSOR UMBRIDGE 209the way down to Snape's dungeon, which gave Harry plenty of time to reflectthat between Neville and Ron he would be lucky ever to have two minutes ofconversation with Cho that he could look back on without wanting to leave thecountry.
And yet, he thought, as they joined the queue lining up outside Snape'sclassroom door, she had chosen to come and talk to him, hadn't she? She hadbeen Cedric's girlfriend; she could easily have hated Harry for coming out of theTriwizard maze alive when Cedric had died, yet she was talking to him in aperfectly friendly way, not as though she thought him mad, or a liar, or in somehorrible way responsible for Cedric's death ... yes, she had definitely chosen tocome and talk to him, and that made the second time in two days ... and at thisthought, Harry's spirits rose. Even the ominous sound of Snape's dungeon doorcreaking open did not puncture the small, hopeful bubble that seemed to haveswelled in his chest. He filed into the classroom behind Ron and Hermione andfollowed them to their usual table at the back, where he sat down between Ronand Hermione and ignored the huffy, irritable noises now issuing from both ofthem.
'Settle down,' said Snape coldly, shutting the door behind him.
There was no real need for the call to order; the moment the class had heardthe door close, quiet had fallen and all fidgeting stopped. Snape's mere presencewas usually enough to ensure a class's silence.
'Before we begin today's lesson,' said Snape, sweeping over to his desk andstaring around at them all, 'I think it appropriate to remind you that next Juneyou will be sitting an important examination, during which you will prove howmuch you have learned about the composition and use of magical potions.
Moronic though some of this class undoubtedly are, I expect you to scrape an"Acceptable" in your OWL, or suffer my ... displeasure.'
His gaze lingered this time on Neville, who gulped.
'After this year, of course, many of you will cease studying with me,' Snapewent on. '1 take only the very best into my NEWT Potions class, which meansthat some of us will certainly be saying goodbye.'
His eyes rested on Harry and his lip curled. Harry glared back, 210 HARRY POTTERfeeling a grim pleasure at the idea that he would be able to giveup Potions after fifth year.
'But we have another year to go before that happy moment of farewell,' saidSnape softly, 'so, whether or not you are intending to attempt NEWT, I advise allof you to concentrate your efforts upon maintaining the high pass level I havecome to expect from my OWL students.
Today we will be mixing a potion that often comes up at Ordinary WizardingLevel: the Draught of Peace, a potion to calm anxiety and soothe agitation. Bewarned: if you are too heavy-handed with the ingredients you will put the drinkerinto a heavy and sometimes irreversible sleep, so you will need to pay closeattention to what you are doing.' On Harry's left, Hermione sat up a littlestraighter, her expression one of utmost attention. The ingredients and method -'

Snape flicked his wand '- are on the blackboard -' (they appeared there) '- you willfind everything you need —' he flicked his wand again '- in the store cupboard —'
(the door of the said cupboard sprang open) '- you have an hour and a half ... start.'
Just as Harry, Ron and Hermione had predicted, Snape could hardly have setthem a more difficult, fiddly potion. The ingredients had to be added to thecauldron in precisely the right order and quantities; the mixture had to be stirredexactly the right number of times, firstly in clockwise, then in anti-clockwisedirections; the heat of the flames on which it was simmering had to be lowered toexactly the right level for a specific number of minutes before the final ingredientwas added.
'A light silver vapour should now be rising from your potion,' called Snape,with ten minutes left to go.
Harry, who was sweating profusely, looked desperately around the dungeon.
His own cauldron was issuing copious amounts of dark grey steam; Ron's wasspitting green sparks. Seamus was feverishly prodding the flames at the base ofhis cauldron with the tip of his wand, as they seemed to be going out. The surfaceof Hermione's potion, however, was a shimmering mist of silver vapour, and asSnape swept by he looked down his hooked nose at it without comment, whichmeant he could find nothing to criticise.

PROFESSOR UMBRIDGE 211At Harry's cauldron, however, Snape stopped, and looked down at it with ahorrible smirk on his face.
'Potter, what is this supposed to be?'
The Slytherins at the front of the class all looked up eagerly; they lovedhearing Snape taunt Harry.
The Draught of Peace,' said Harry tensely.
Tell me, Potter,' said Snape softly, 'can you read?'
Draco Malfoy laughed.
'Yes, I can,' said Harry, his fingers clenched tightly around his wand.
'Read the third line of the instructions for me, Potter.'
Harry squinted at the blackboard; it was not easy to make out the instructionsthrough the haze of multi-coloured steam now filling the dungeon.
'"Add powdered moonstone, stir three times counter-clockwise, allow tosimmer for seven minutes then add two drops of syrup of hellebore."'
His heart sank. He had not added syrup of hellebore, but had proceededstraight to the fourth line of the instructions after allowing his potion to simmerfor seven minutes.
'Did you do everything on the third line, Potter?'
'No,' said Harry very quietly.
'I beg your pardon?'
'No,' said Harry, more loudly. 'I forgot the hellebore.'
'I know you did, Potter, which means that this mess is utterly worthless.
Evanesce.'
The contents of Harry's potion vanished; he was left standing foolishly besidean empty cauldron.
Those of you who have managed to read the instructions, fill one flagon witha sample of your potion, label it clearly with your name and bring it up to mydesk for testing,' said Snape. 'Homework: twelve inches of parchment on theproperties of moonstone and its uses in potion-making, to be handed in onThursday.'
While everyone around him filled their flagons, Harry cleared away histhings, seething. His potion had been no worse than Ron's, which was nowgiving off a foul odour of bad eggs; or Neville's, which had achieved theconsistency of just-mixed cement and which 212 HARRY POTTERNeville was now having to gouge out of his cauldron; yet it was he, Harry, whowould be receiving zero marks for the day's work. He stuffed his wand back intohis bag and slumped down on to his seat, watching everyone else march up toSnape's desk with filled and corked flagons. When at long last the bell rang,Harry was first out of the dungeon and had already started his lunch by the timeRon and Hermione joined him in the Great Hall. The ceiling had turned an evenmurkier grey during the morning. Rain was lashing the high windows.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

That was really unfair,' said Hermione consolingly, sitting down next to Harryand helping herself to shepherd's pie. 'Your potion wasn't nearly as bad asGoyle's; when he put it in his flagon the whole thing shattered and set his robeson fire.'
'Yeah, well,' said Harry, glowering at his plate, 'since when has Snape everbeen fair to me?'
Neither of the others answered; all three of them knew that Snape and Harry'smutual enmity had been absolute from the moment Harry had set foot inHogwarts.
'I did think he might be a bit better this year,' said Hermione in a disappointedvoice. 'I mean ... you know ...' she looked around carefully; there were half adozen empty seats on either side of them and nobody was passing the table ' ...
now he's in the Order and everything.'
'Poisonous toadstools don't change their spots,' said Ron sagely. 'Anyway I'vealways thought Dumbledore was cracked to trust Snape. Where's the evidence heever really stopped working for You-Know-Who?'
'I think Dumbledore's probably got plenty of evidence, even if he doesn't shareit with you, Ron,' snapped Hermione.
'Oh, shut up, the pair of you,' said Harry heavily, as Ron opened his mouth toargue back. Hermione and Ron both froze, looking angry and offended. 'Can'tyou give it a rest?' said Harry. 'You're always having a go at each other, it'sdriving me mad.' And abandoning his shepherd's pie, he swung his schoolbagback over his shoulder and left them sitting there.
He walked up the marble staircase two steps at a time, past the many studentshurrying towards lunch. The anger that had just PROFESSOR UMBRIDGE 213flared so unexpectedly still blazed inside him, and the vision of Ron and Hermione'sshocked faces afforded him a sense of deep satisfaction. Serve them right, hethought, why can't they give it a rest ... bickering all the time ... it's enough to driveanyone up the wall ...
He passed the large picture of Sir Cadogan the knight on a landing; Sir Cadogandrew his sword and brandished it fiercely at Harry, who ignored him.
'Come back, you scurvy dog! Stand fast and fight!' yelled Sir Cadogan in amuffled voice from behind his visor, but Harry merely walked on and when SirCadogan attempted to follow him by running into a neighbouring picture, he wasrebuffed by its inhabitant, a large and angry-looking wolfhound.
Harry spent the rest of the lunch hour sitting alone underneath the trapdoor at thetop of North Tower. Consequently, he was the first to ascend the silver ladder thatled to Sybill Trelawney's classroom when the bell rang.
After Potions, Divination was Harrys least favourite class, which was due mainlyto Professor Trelawney's habit of predicting his premature death every few lessons.
A thin woman, heavily draped in shawls and glittering with strings of beads, shealways reminded Harry of some kind of insect, with her glasses hugely magnifyingher eyes. She was busy putting copies of battered leather-bound books on each of thespindly little tables with which her room was littered when Harry entered the room,but the light cast by the lamps covered by scarves and the low-burning, sicklyscentedfire was so dim she appeared not to notice him as he took a seat in theshadows. The rest of the class arrived over the next five minutes. Ron emerged fromthe trapdoor, looked around carefully, spotted Harry and made directly for him, or asdirectly as he could while having to wend his way between tables, chairs andoverstuffed pouffes.

'Hermione and me have stopped arguing,' he said, sitting down beside Harry.

'Good,' grunted Harry.

'But Hermione says she thinks it would be nice if you stopped taking out yourtemper on us,' said Ron.

Tm not -'

214 HARRY POTTERTm just passing on the message,' said Ron, talking over him. 'But I reckonshe's right. It's not our fault how Seamus and Snape treat you.'

'I never said it -'

'Good-day,' said Professor Trelawney in her usual misty, dreamy voice, andHarry broke off, again feeling both annoyed and slightly ashamed of himself.

'And welcome back to Divination. I have, of course, been following yourfortunes most carefully over the holidays, and am delighted to see that you haveall returned to Hogwarts safely - as, of course, I knew you would.

'You will find on the tables before you copies of The Dream Oracle, by InigoImago. Dream interpretation is a most important means of divining the future andone that may very probably be tested in your OWL. Not, of course, that I believeexamination passes or failures are of the remotest importance when it comes tothe sacred art of divination. If you have the Seeing Eye, certificates and gradesmatter very little. However, the Headmaster likes you to sit the examination, so...'

Her voice trailed away delicately, leaving them all in no doubt that ProfessorTrelawney considered her subject above such sordid matters as examinations.

Turn, please, to the introduction and read what Imago has to say on the matterof dream interpretation. Then, divide into pairs. Use The Dream Oracle tointerpret each others most recent dreams. Carry on.'

The one good thing to be said for this lesson was that it was not a doubleperiod. By the time they had all finished reading the introduction of the book,they had barely ten minutes left for dream interpretation. At the table next toHarry and Ron, Dean had paired up with Neville, who immediately embarked ona long-winded explanation of a nightmare involving a pair of giant scissorswearing his grandmother's best hat; Harry and Ron merely looked at each otherglumly.

'I never remember my dreams,' said Ron, 'you say one.'

'You must remember one of them,' said Harry impatiently.

He was not going to share his dreams with anyone. He knew perfectly wellwhat his regular nightmare about a graveyard meant,

PROFESSOR UMBRIDGE 215he did not need Ron or Professor Trelawney or the stupid Dream Oracle to tellhim.

'Well, I dreamed I was playing Quidditch the other night,' said Ron, screwingup his face in an effort to remember. 'What d'you reckon that means?'

'Probably that you're going to be eaten by a giant marshmallow or something,' said Harry, turning the pages of The Dream Oracle without interest. It was verydull work looking up bits of dreams in the Oracle and Harry was not cheered upwhen Professor Trelawney set them the task of keeping a dream diary for amonth as homework. When the bell went, he and Ron led the way back down theladder, Ron grumbling loudly.

'D'you realise how much homework we've got already? Binns set us a footanda-half-long essay on giant wars, Snape wants a foot on the use ofmoonstones, and now we've got a month's dream diary from Trelawney! Fredand George weren't wrong about OWL year, were they? That Umbridge womanhad better not give us any ..."
When they entered the Defence Against the Dark Arts classroom they foundProfessor Umbridge already seated at the teacher's desk, wearing the fluffy pinkcardigan of the night before and the black velvet bow on top of her head. Harrywas again reminded forcibly of a large fly perched unwisely on top of an evenlarger toad.
The class was quiet as it entered the room; Professor Umbridge was, as yet,an unknown quantity and nobody knew how strict a disciplinarian she was likelyto be.
'Well, good afternoon!' she said, when finally the whole class had sat down.
A few people mumbled 'good afternoon' in reply.
Tut, tut,' said Professor Umbridge. 'That won't do, now, will it? I should likeyou, please, to reply "Good afternoon, Professor Umbridge". One more time,please. Good afternoon, class!'
'Good afternoon, Professor Umbridge,' they chanted back at her.
There, now,' said Professor Umbridge sweetly. That wasn't too difficult, wasit? Wands away and quills out, please.'
Many of the class exchanged gloomy looks; the order 'wands away' had neveryet been followed by a lesson they had found 216 HARRY POTTERinteresting. Harry shoved his wand back inside his bag and pulled out quill, inkand parchment. Professor Umbridge opened her handbag, extracted her ownwand, which was an unusually short one, and tapped the blackboard sharply withit; words appeared on the board at once:
Defence Against the Dark ArtsA Return to Basic Principles'Well now, your teaching in this subject has been rather disrupted andfragmented, hasn't it?' stated Professor Umbridge, turning to face the class withher hands clasped neatly in front of her. The constant changing of teachers, manyof whom do not seem to have followed any Ministry-approved curriculum, hasunfortunately resulted in your being far below the standard we would expect tosee in your OWL year.
'You will be pleased to know, however, that these problems are now to berectified. We will be following a carefully structured, theory-centred, Ministryapprovedcourse of defensive magic this year. Copy down the following, please.'
She rapped the blackboard again; the first message vanished and was replacedby the 'Course Aims'.
1. Understanding the principles underlying defensive magic.
Learning to recognise situations in which defensive magic can legallybe used.
3. Placing the use of defensive magic in a context for practical use.
For a couple of minutes the room was full of the sound of scratching quills onparchment. When everyone had copied down Professor Umbridge's three courseaims she asked, 'Has everybody got a copy of Defensive Magical Theory byWilbert Slinkhard?'
There was a dull murmur of assent throughout the class.
'I think we'll try that again,' said Professor Umbridge. 'When I ask you aquestion, I should like you to reply, "Yes, Professor Umbridge", or "No,Professor Umbridge". So: has everyone got a copy of Defensive Magical Theoryby Wilbert Slinkhard?'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

PROFESSOR UMBRIDGE 217'Yes, Professor Umbridge,' rang through the room.
'Good,' said Professor Umbridge. 'I should like you to turn to page five andread "Chapter One, Basics for Beginners". There will be no need to talk.'
Professor Umbridge left the blackboard and settled herself in the chair behindthe teacher's desk, observing them all closely with those pouchy toad's eyes.
Harry turned to page five of his copy of Defensive Magical Theory and started toread.
It was desperately dull, quite as bad as listening to Professor Binns. He felthis concentration sliding away from him; he had soon read the same line half adozen times without taking in more than the first few words. Several silentminutes passed. Next to him, Ron was absent-mindedly turning his quill overand over in his fingers, staring at the same spot on the page. Harry looked rightand received a surprise to shake him out of his torpor. Hermione had not evenopened her copy of Defensive Magical Theory. She was staring fixedly atProfessor Umbridge with her hand in the air.
Harry could not remember Hermione ever neglecting to read when instructedto, or indeed resisting the temptation to open any book that came under her nose.
He looked at her enquiringly, but she merely shook her head slightly to indicatethat she was not about to answer questions, and continued to stare at ProfessorUmbridge, who was looking just as resolutely in another direction.
After several more minutes had passed, however, Harry was not the only onewatching Hermione. The chapter they had been instructed to read was so tediousthat more and more people were choosing to watch Hermione's mute attempt tocatch Professor Umbridge's eye rather than struggle on with 'Basics forBeginners'.
When more than half the class were staring at Hermione rather than at theirbooks, Professor Umbridge seemed to decide that she could ignore the situationno longer.
'Did you want to ask something about the chapter, dear?' she askedHermione, as though she had only just noticed her.
'Not about the chapter, no,' said Hermione.
'Well, we're reading just now,' said Professor Umbridge, showing her smallpointed teeth. 'If you have other queries we can deal with them at the end ofclass.'

218 HARRY POTTER'I've got a query about your course aims,' said Hermione.
Professor Umbridge raised her eyebrows.
'And your name is?'
'Hermione Granger,' said Hermione.
'Well, Miss Granger, I think the course aims are perfectly clear if you readthem through carefully' said Professor Umbridge in a voice of determinedsweetness.
'Well, I don't,' said Hermione bluntly. There's nothing written up there aboutusing defensive spells.'
There was a short silence in which many members of the class turned theirheads to frown at the three course aims still written on the blackboard.
'Using defensive spells?' Professor Umbridge repeated with a little laugh.
'Why, I can't imagine any situation arising in my classroom that would requireyou to use a defensive spell, Miss Granger. You surely aren't expecting to beattacked during class?'
'We're not going to use magic?' Ron exclaimed loudly.
'Students raise their hands when they wish to speak in my class, Mr-?'
'Weasley,' said Ron, thrusting his hand into the air.

Professor Umbridge, smiling still more widely, turned her back on him. Harryand Hermione immediately raised their hands too. Professor Umbridge's pouchyeyes lingered on Harry for a moment before she addressed Hermione.
'Yes, Miss Granger? You wanted to ask something else?'
'Yes,' said Hermione. 'Surely the whole point of Defence Against the DarkArts is to practise defensive spells?'
'Are you a Ministry-trained educational expert, Miss Granger?' askedProfessor Umbridge, in her falsely sweet voice.
'No, but -'
'Well then, I'm afraid you are not qualified to decide what the "whole point" ofany class is. Wizards much older and cleverer than you have devised our newprogramme of study. You will be learning about defensive spells in a secure,risk-free way -'
'What use is that?' said Harry loudly. 'If we're going to be attacked, it won't bein a -'
'Hand, Mr Potter!' sang Professor Umbridge.

PROFESSOR UMBRIDGE 219Harry thrust his fist in the air. Again, Professor Umbridge promptly turnedaway from him, but now several other people had their hands up, too.
'And your name is?' Professor Umbridge said to Dean.
'Dean Thomas.'
'Well, Mr Thomas?'
'Well, it's like Harry said, isn't it?' said Dean. 'If we're going to be attacked, itwon't be risk free.'
'I repeat,' said Professor Umbridge, smiling in a very irritating fashion atDean, 'do you expect to be attacked during my classes?'
'No, but -'
Professor Umbridge talked over him. 'I do not wish to criticise the way thingshave been run in this school,' she said, an unconvincing smile stretching herwide mouth, 'but you have been exposed to some very irresponsible wizards inthis class, very irresponsible indeed - not to mention,' she gave a nasty littlelaugh, 'extremely dangerous half-breeds.'
'If you mean Professor Lupin,' piped up Dean angrily, 'he was the best weever -'
'Hand, Mr Thomas! As I was saying - you have been introduced to spells thathave been complex, inappropriate to your age group and potentially lethal. Youhave been frightened into believing that you are likely to meet Dark attacksevery other day -'
'No we haven't,' Hermione said, 'we just -'
'Your hand is not up, Miss Granger!'
Hermione put up her hand. Professor Umbridge turned away from her.
'It is my understanding that my predecessor not only performed illegal cursesin front of you, he actually performed them on you.'
'Well, he turned out to be a maniac, didn't he?' said Dean hotly. 'Mind you, westill learned loads.'
'Your hand is not up, Mr Thomas!' trilled Professor Umbridge. 'Now, it is theview of the Ministry that a theoretical knowledge will be more than sufficient toget you through your examination, which, after all, is what school is all about.
And your name is?' she added, staring at Parvati, whose hand had just shot up.
'Parvati Patil, and isn't there a practical bit in our Defence Against 220 HARRY POTTERthe Dark Arts OWL? Aren't we supposed to show that we can actually do thecounter-curses and things?'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'As long as you have studied the theory hard enough, there is no reason whyyou should not be able to perform the spells under carefully controlledexamination conditions,' said Professor Umbridge dismissively.
'Without ever practising them beforehand?' said Parvati incredulously. 'Areyou telling us that the first time we'll get to do the spells will be during ourexam?'
'I repeat, as long as you have studied the theory hard enough -'
'And what good's theory going to be in the real world?' said Harry loudly, hisfist in the air again.
Professor Umbridge looked up.
'This is school, Mr Potter, not the real world,' she said softly.
'So we're not supposed to be prepared for what's waiting for us out there?'
There is nothing waiting out there, Mr Potter.'
'Oh, yeah?' said Harry. His temper, which seemed to have been bubbling justbeneath the surface all day, was reaching boiling point.
'Who do you imagine wants to attack children like yourselves?' enquiredProfessor Umbridge in a horribly honeyed voice.
'Hmm, let's think ...' said Harry in a mock thoughtful voice. 'Maybe ... LordVoldemortTRon gasped; Lavender Brown uttered a little scream; Neville slippedsideways off his stool. Professor Umbridge, however, did not flinch. She wasstaring at Harry with a grimly satisfied expression on her face.
Ten points from Gryffindor, Mr Potter.'
The classroom was silent and still. Everyone was staring at either Umbridgeor Harry.
'Now, let me make a few things quite plain.'
Professor Umbridge stood up and leaned towards them, her stubby-fingeredhands splayed on her desk.
'You have been told that a certain Dark wizard has returned from the dead -'
'He wasn't dead,' said Harry angrily, 'but yeah, he's returned!'

PROFESSOR UMBRIDGE
221'Mr-Potter-you-have-already-lost-your-house-ten-points-do-not-makemattersworse-for-yourself,' said Professor Umbridge in one breath withoutlooking at him. 'As I was saying, you have been informed that a certain Darkwizard is at large once again. This is a lie.'
'It is NOT a lie!' said Harry. T saw him, I fought him!'
'Detention, Mr Potter!' said Professor Umbridge triumphantly. Tomorrowevening. Five o'clock. My office. I repeat, this is a lie. The Ministry of Magicguarantees that you are not in danger from any Dark wizard. If you are stillworried, by all means come and see me outside class hours. If someone isalarming you with fibs about reborn Dark wizards, I would like to hear about it. Iam here to help. I am your friend. And now, you will kindly continue yourreading. Page five, "Basics for Beginners".'
Professor Umbridge sat down behind her desk. Harry, however, stood up.
Everyone was staring at him; Seamus looked half-scared, half-fascinated.
'Harry, no!' Hermione whispered in a warning voice, tugging at his sleeve, butHarry jerked his arm out of her reach.
'So, according to you, Cedric Diggory dropped dead of his own accord, didhe?' Harry asked, his voice shaking.
There was a collective intake of breath from the class, for none of them, apartfrom Ron and Hermione, had ever heard Harry talk about what had happened onthe night Cedric had died. They stared avidly from Harry to Professor Umbridge,who had raised her eyes and was staring at him without a trace of a fake smile onher face.

'Cedric Diggory's death was a tragic accident,' she said coldly.
'It was murder,' said Harry. He could feel himself shaking. He had hardlyspoken to anyone about this, least of all thirty eagerly listening classmates.
'Voldemort killed him and you know it.'
Professor Umbridge's face was quite blank. For a moment, Harry thought shewas going to scream at him. Then she said, in her softest, most sweetly girlishvoice, 'Come here, Mr Potter, dear.'
He kicked his chair aside, strode around Ron and Hermione and up to theteacher's desk. He could feel the rest of the class holding its breath. He felt soangry he did not care what happened next.

222 HARRY POTTERProfessor Umbridge pulled a small roll of pink parchment out of her handbag,stretched it out on the desk, dipped her quill into a bottle of ink and startedscribbling, hunched over so that Harry could not see what she was writing.
Nobody spoke. After a minute or so she rolled up the parchment and tapped itwith her wand; it sealed itself seamlessly so that he could not open it.
Take this to Professor McGonagall, dear,' said Professor Umbridge, holdingout the note to him.
He took it from her without saying a word, turned on his heel and left theroom, not even looking back at Ron and Hermione, slamming the classroomdoor shut behind him. He walked very fast along the corridor, the note toMcGonagall clutched tight in his hand, and turning a corner walked slap intoPeeves the poltergeist, a wide-mouthed little man floating on his back in midair,juggling several inkwells.
'Why it's Potty Wee Potter!' cackled Peeves, allowing two of the inkwells tofall to the ground where they smashed and spattered the walls with ink; Harryjumped backwards out of the way with a snarl.
'Get out of it, Peeves.'
'Oooh, Crackpot's feeling cranky' said Peeves, pursuing Harry along thecorridor, leering as he zoomed along above him. 'What is it this time, my finePotty friend? Hearing voices? Seeing visions? Speaking in -' Peeves blew agigantic raspberry '— tongues?'
'I said, leave me ALONE!' Harry shouted, running down the nearest flight ofstairs, but Peeves merely slid down the banister on his back beside him.
'Oh, most think he's barking, the potty wee lad,But some are more kindly and think he's just sad,But Peevesy knows better and says that he's mad —'SHUT UP!'
A door to his left flew open and Professor McGonagall emerged from heroffice looking grim and slightly harassed.
'What on earth are you shouting about, Potter?' she snapped, as Peevescackled gleefully and zoomed out of sight. 'Why aren't you in class?'

PROFESSOR UMBRIDGE 223'I've been sent to see you,' said Harry stiffly.
'Sent? What do you mean, sent?'
He held out the note from Professor Umbridge. Professor McGonagall took itfrom him, frowning, slit it open with a tap of her wand, stretched it out andbegan to read. Her eyes zoomed from side to side behind their square spectaclesas she read what Umbridge had written, and with each line they becamenarrower.
'Come in here, Potter.'

He followed her inside her study. The door closed automatically behind him.
'Well?' said Professor McGonagall, rounding on him. 'Is this true?'
'Is what true?' Harry asked, rather more aggressively than he had intended.
'Professor?' he added, in an attempt to sound more polite.
'Is it true that you shouted at Professor Umbridge?'
'Yes,' said Harry.
'You called her a liar?'
'Yes.'
'You told her He Who Must Not Be Named is back?'
'Yes.'
Professor McGonagall sat down behind her desk, watching Harry closely.
Then she said, 'Have a biscuit, Potter.'
'Have - what?'
'Have a biscuit,' she repeated impatiently, indicating a tartan tin lying on topof one of the piles of papers on her desk. 'And sit down.'
There had been a previous occasion when Harry, expecting to be caned byProfessor McGonagall, had instead been appointed by her to the GryffindorQuidditch team. He sank into a chair opposite her and helped himself to a GingerNewt, feeling just as confused and wrong-footed as he had done on thatoccasion.
Professor McGonagall set down Professor Umbridge's note and looked veryseriously at Harry.
'Potter, you need to be careful.'
Harry swallowed his mouthful of Ginger Newt and stared at her. Her tone ofvoice was not at all what he was used to; it was not brisk, crisp and stern; it waslow and anxious and somehow much more human than usual.

224 HARRY POTTER'Misbehaviour in Dolores Umbridge's class could cost you much more thanhouse points and a detention.'
'What do you -?'
'Potter, use your common sense,' snapped Professor McGonagall, with anabrupt return to her usual manner. 'You know where she comes from, you mustknow to whom she is reporting.'
The bell rang for the end of the lesson. Overhead and all around came theelephantine sounds of hundreds of students on the move.
'It says here she's given you detention every evening this week, startingtomorrow,' Professor McGonagall said, looking down at Umbridge's note again.
'Every evening this week!' Harry repeated, horrified. 'But, Professor, couldn'tyou -?'
'No, I couldn't,' said Professor McGonagall flatly.
'But -'
'She is your teacher and has every right to give you detention. You will go toher room at five o'clock tomorrow for the first one. Just remember: treadcarefully around Dolores Umbridge.'
'But 1 was telling the truth!' said Harry, outraged. 'Voldemort is back, youknow he is; Professor Dumbledore knows he is -'
'For heaven's sake, Potter!' said Professor McGonagall, straightening herglasses angrily (she had winced horribly when he had used Voldemort's name).
'Do you really think this is about truth or lies? It's about keeping your head downand your temper under control!'

She stood up, nostrils wide and mouth very thin, and Harry stood up, too.
'Have another biscuit,' she said irritably, thrusting the tin at him.
'No, thanks,' said Harry coldly.
'Don't be ridiculous,' she snapped. .,..
He took one.
'Thanks,' he said grudgingly.
'Didn't you listen to Dolores Umbridge's speech at the start-of-term feast,Potter?'
'Yeah,' said Harry. 'Yeah ... she said ... progress will be prohibited or ... well,it meant that ... that the Ministry of Magic is trying to interfere at Hogwarts.'
PROFESSOR UMBRIDGE225Professor McGonagall eyed him closely for a moment, then sniffed, walkedaround her desk and held open the door for him.
'Well, I'm glad you listen to Hermione Granger at any rate,' she said, pointinghim out of her office.

— CHAPTER THIRTEEN —

Detention withDoloresDinner in the Great Hall that night was not apleasant experience for Harry. The newsabout his shouting match with Umbridge hadtravelled exceptionally fast even byHogwarts' standards. He heard whispers allaround him as he sat eating between Ron andHermione. The funny thing was that none ofthe whisperers seemed to mind himoverhearing what they were saying abouthim. On the contrary, it was as though theywere hoping he would get angry and startshouting again, so that they could hear hisstory first-hand.
'He says he saw Cedric Diggory murdered ...'
'He reckons he duelled with You-Know-Who...'
'Come off it ..."
'Who does he think he's kidding?'
Tur-Zease ..."
'What I don't get,' said Harry throughclenched teeth, laying down his knife andfork (his hands were shaking too much tohold them steady), 'is why they all believedthe story two months ago when Dumbledoretold them ...'
'The thing is, Harry, I'm not sure they did,' said Hermione grimly. 'Oh, let's get out ofhere.'
She slammed down her own knife andfork; Ron looked longingly at his halffinishedapple pie but followed suit. Peoplestared at them all the way out of the Hall.
'What d'you mean, you're not sure theybelieved Dumbledore?' Harry askedHermione when they reached the first-floorlanding.
'Look, you don't understand what it waslike after it happened,' said Hermionequietly. 'You arrived back in the middle ofthe lawn clutching Cedric's dead body ...

none of us saw what DETENTION WITH DOLORES 227happened in the maze ... we just had Dumbledore's word for it that You-Know-
Who had come back and killed Cedric and fought you.'

'Which is the truth!' said Harry loudly.

'I know it is, Harry, so will you please stop biting my head off?' saidHermione wearily. 'It's just that before the truth could sink in, everyone wenthome for the summer, where they spent two months reading about how you're anutcase and Dumbledore's going senile!'

Rain pounded on the windowpanes as they strode along the empty corridorsback to Gryffindor Tower. Harry felt as though his first day had lasted a week,but he still had a mountain of homework to do before bed. A dull pounding painwas developing over his right eye. He glanced out of a rain-washed window atthe dark grounds as they turned into the Fat Lady's corridor. There was still nolight in Hagrid's cabin.

'Mimbulus mimbletonia,' said Hermione, before the Fat Lady could ask. Theportrait swung open to reveal the hole behind it and the three of them scrambledthrough it.

The common room was almost empty; nearly everyone was still down atdinner. Crookshanks uncoiled himself from an armchair and trotted to meetthem, purring loudly, and when Harry, Ron and Hermione took their threefavourite chairs at the fireside he leapt lightly on to Hermione's lap and curled upthere like a furry ginger cushion. Harry gazed into the flames, feeling drainedand exhausted.

'How can Dumbledore have let this happen?' Hermione cried suddenly,making Harry and Ron jump; Crookshanks leapt off her, looking affronted. Shepounded the arms of her chair in fury, so that bits of stuffing leaked out of theholes. 'How can he let that terrible woman teach us? And in our OWL year, too!'

'Well, we've never had great Defence Against the Dark Arts teachers, havewe?' said Harry. 'You know what it's like, Hagrid told us, nobody wants the job;
they say it's jinxed.'

'Yes, but to employ someone who's actually refusing to let us do magic!
What's Dumbledore playing at?'

'And she's trying to get people to spy for her,' said Ron darkly.

. 228 HARRY POTTER'Remember when she said she wanted us to come and tell her ifwe hear anyone saying You-Know-Who's back?'

'Of course she's here to spy on us all, that's obvious, why else would Fudgehave wanted her to come?' snapped Hermione.

'Don't start arguing again,' said Harry wearily, as Ron opened his mouth toretaliate. 'Can't we just ... let's just do that homework, get it out of the way ...'

They collected their schoolbags from a corner and returned to the chairs by thefire. People were coming back from dinner now. Harry kept his face averted fromthe portrait hole, but could still sense the stares he was attracting.

'Shall we do Snape's stuff first?' said Ron, dipping his quill into his ink. "Theproperties ... of moonstone ... and its uses ... in potion-making ...'" he muttered,writing the words across the top of his parchment as he spoke them. There.' Heunderlined the title, then looked up expectantly at Hermione.

'So, what are the properties of moonstone and its uses in potion-making?'

But Hermione was not listening; she was squinting over into the far corner ofthe room, where Fred, George and Lee Jordan were now sitting at the centre of aknot of innocent-looking first-years, all of whom were chewing something thatseemed to have come out of a large paper bag that Fred was holding.

'No, I'm sorry, they've gone too far,' she said, standing up and lookingpositively furious. 'Come on,

Ron.'
'1 - what?' said Ron, plainly playing for time. 'No - come on, Hermione - wecan't tell them off for giving out sweets.'
'You know perfectly well that those are bits of Nosebleed Nougat or - orPuking Pastilles or -'
'Fainting Fancies?' Harry suggested quietly.
One by one, as though hit over the head with an invisible mallet, the first-yearswere slumping unconscious in their seats; some slid right on to the floor, othersmerely hung over the arms of their chairs, their tongues lolling out. Most of thepeople watching were laughing; Hermione, however, squared her shoulders andmarched directly over to where Fred and George now stood with clipboards,closely observing the unconscious first-years. Ron rose halfway out DETENTION WITH DOLORES 229of his chair, hovered uncertainly for a moment or two, then muttered to Harry,'She's got it under control,' before sinking as low in his chair as his lanky framepermitted.
That's enough!' Hermione said forcefully to Fred and George, both of whomlooked up in mild surprise.
'Yeah, you're right,' said George, nodding, 'this dosage looks strong enough,doesn't it?'
'I told you this morning, you can't test your rubbish on students!'
'We're paying them!' said Fred indignantly.
'I don't care, it could be dangerous!'
'Rubbish,' said Fred.
'Calm down, Hermione, they're fine!' said Lee reassuringly as he walked fromfirst-year to first-year, inserting purple sweets into their open mouths.
'Yeah, look, they're coming round now,' said George.
A few of the first-years were indeed stirring. Several looked so shocked tofind themselves lying on the floor, or dangling off their chairs, that Harry wassure Fred and George had not warned them what the sweets were going to do.
'Feel all right?' said George kindly to a small dark-haired girl lying at his feet.
'I - I think so,' she said shakily.
'Excellent,' said Fred happily, but the next second Hermione had snatchedboth his clipboard and the paper bag of Fainting Fancies from his hands.
'It is NOT excellent!'
'Course it is, they're alive, aren't they?' said Fred angrily.
'You can't do this, what if you made one of them really ill?'
'We're not going to make them ill, we've already tested them all on ourselves,this is just to see if everyone reacts the same -'
'If you don't stop doing it, I'm going to -'
'Put us in detention?' said Fred, in an I'd-like-to-see-you-try-it voice.
'Make us write lines?' said George, smirking.
Onlookers all over the room were laughing. Hermione drew herself up to herfull height; her eyes were narrowed and her bushy hair seemed to crackle withelectricity.

230 HARRY POTTER'No,' she said, her voice quivering with anger, 'but I will write to your mother.'
'You wouldn't,' said George, horrified, taking a step back from her.
'Oh, yes, I would,' said Hermione grimly. '1 can't stop you eating the stupidthings yourselves, but you're not to give them to the first-years.'

Fred and George looked thunderstruck. It was clear that as far as they wereconcerned, Hermione's threat was way below the belt. With a last threateninglook at them, she thrust Fred's clipboard and the bag of Fancies back into hisarms, and stalked back to her chair by the fire.
Ron was now so low in his seat that his nose was roughly level with his knees.
Thank you for your support, Ron,' Hermione said acidly.
'You handled it fine by yourself,' Ron mumbled.
Hermione stared down at her blank piece of parchment for a few seconds, thensaid edgily, 'Oh, it's no good, I can't concentrate now. I'm going to bed.'
She wrenched her bag open; Harry thought she was about to put her booksaway, but instead she pulled out two misshapen woolly objects, placed themcarefully on a table by the fireplace, covered them with a few screwed-up bits ofparchment and a broken quill and stood back to admire the effect.
'What in the name of Merlin are you doing?' said Ron, watching her as thoughfearful for her sanity.
They're hats for house-elves,' she said briskly, now stuffing her books backinto her bag. 'I did them over the summer. I'm a really slow knitter without magicbut now I'm back at school I should be able to make lots more.'
'You're leaving out hats for the house-elves?' said Ron slowly. 'And you'recovering them up with rubbish first?'
'Yes,' said Hermione defiantly, swinging her bag on to her back.
That's not on,' said Ron angrily. 'You're trying to trick them into picking upthe hats. You're setting them free when they might not want to be free.'
'Of course they want to be free!' said Hermione at once, though IDETENTION WITH DOLORES 231her face was turning pink. 'Don't you dare touch those hats, Ron!'
She turned on her heel and left. Ron waited until she had disappearedthrough the door to the girls' dormitories, then cleared the rubbish off thewoolly hats.
'They should at least see what they're picking up,' he said firmly.
'Anyway ...' he rolled up the parchment on which he had written the titleof Snape's essay, 'there's no point trying to finish this now, I can't do itwithout Hermione, I haven't got a clue what you're supposed to do withmoonstones, have you?'
Harry shook his head, noticing as he did so that the ache in his righttemple was getting worse. He thought of the long essay on giant wars andthe pain stabbed at him sharply. Knowing perfectly well that when themorning came, he would regret not finishing his homework that night, hepiled his books back into his bag.
'I'm going to bed too.'
He passed Seamus on the way to the door leading to the dormitories,but did not look at him. Harry had a fleeting impression that Seamus hadopened his mouth to speak, but he sped up and reached the soothing peaceof the stone spiral staircase without having to endure any moreprovocation.
*The following day dawned just as leaden and rainy as the previousone. Hagrid was still absent from the staff table at breakfast.
'But on the plus side, no Snape today' said Ron bracingly.
Hermione yawned widely and poured herself some coffee. She lookedmildly pleased about something, and when Ron asked her what she had tobe so happy about, she simply said, The hats have gone. Seems the houseelvesdo want freedom after all.'
'1 wouldn't bet on it,' Ron told her cuttingly. They might not count asclothes. They didn't look anything like hats to me, more like woollybladders.'

Hermione did not speak to him all morning.
Double Charms was succeeded by double Transfiguration. ProfessorFlitwick and Professor McGonagall both spent the first fifteen minutes oftheir lessons lecturing the class on the importance of OWLs.
'What you must remember,' said little Professor Flitwick squeakily 232 HARRY POTTERperched as ever on a pile of books so that he could see over the top of his desk, 'isthat these examinations may influence your futures for many years to come! Ifyou have not already given serious thought to your careers, now is the time to doso. And in the meantime, I'm afraid, we shall be working harder than ever toensure that you all do yourselves justice!'
They then spent over an hour revising Summoning Charms, which accordingto Professor Flitwick were bound to come up in their OWL, and he rounded offthe lesson by setting them their largest ever amount of Charms homework.
It was the same, if not worse, in Transfiguration.
'You cannot pass an OWL,' said Professor McGonagall grimly, 'withoutserious application, practice and study. I see no reason why everybody in thisclass should not achieve an OWL in Transfiguration as long as they put in thework.' Neville made a sad little disbelieving noise. 'Yes, you too, Longbottom,' said Professor McGonagall. There's nothing wrong with your work except lack ofconfidence. So ... today we are starting Vanishing Spells. These are easier thanConjuring Spells, which you would not usually attempt until NEWT level, butthey are still among the most difficult magic you will be tested on in your OWL.'
She was quite right; Harry found the Vanishing Spells horribly difficult. Bythe end of a double period neither he nor Ron had managed to vanish the snails onwhich they were practising, though Ron said hopefully he thought his looked a bitpaler. Hermione, on the other hand, successfully vanished her snail on the thirdattempt, earning her a ten-point bonus for Gryffindor from ProfessorMcGonagall. She was the only person not given homework; everybody else wastold to practise the spell overnight, ready for a fresh attempt on their snails thefollowing afternoon.
Now panicking slightly about the amount of homework they had to do, Harryand Ron spent their lunch hour in the library looking up the uses of moonstonesin potion-making. Still angry about Ron's slur on her woolly hats, Hermione didnot join them. By the time they reached Care of Magical Creatures in theafternoon, Harry's head was aching again.
The day had become cool and breezy, and as they walked down DETENTION WITH DOLORES 233the sloping lawn towards Hagrid's cabin on the edge of the Forbidden Forest,they felt the occasional drop of rain on their faces. Professor Grubbly-Plankstood waiting for the class some ten yards from Hagrid's front door, a longtrestle table in front of her laden with twigs. As Harry and Ron reached her, aloud shout of laughter sounded behind them; turning, they saw Draco Malfoystriding towards them, surrounded by his usual gang of Slytherin cronies. Hehad clearly just said something highly amusing, because Crabbe, Goyle, PansyParkinson and the rest continued to snigger heartily as they gathered around thetrestle table and, judging by the way they all kept looking over at Harry, he wasable to guess the subject of the joke without too much difficulty.
'Everyone here?' barked Professor Grubbly-Plank, once all the Slytherins andGryffindors had arrived. 'Let's crack on then. Who can tell me what these thingsare called?'
She indicated the heap of twigs in front of her. Hermione's hand shot into theair. Behind her back, Malfoy did a buck-toothed imitation of her jumping up anddown in eagerness to answer a question. Pansy Parkinson gave a shriek oflaughter that turned almost at once into a scream, as the twigs on the table leaptinto the air and revealed themselves to be what looked like tiny pixie-ishcreatures made of wood, each with knobbly brown arms and legs, two twiglikefingers at the end of each hand and a funny flat, barklike face in which a pair ofbeetle-brown eyes glittered.

'Oooooh!' said Parvati and Lavender, thoroughly irritating Harry. Anyonewould have thought Hagrid had never shown them impressive creatures; admittedly, the Flobberworms had been a bit dull, but the Salamanders andHippogriffs had been interesting enough, and the Blast-Ended Skrewts perhapstoo much so.
'Kindly keep your voices down, girls!' said Professor Grubbly-Plank sharply,scattering a handful of what looked like brown rice among the stick-creatures,who immediately fell upon the food. 'So - anyone know the names of thesecreatures? Miss Granger?'
'Bowtruckles,' said Hermione. They're tree-guardians, usually live in wandtrees.'
'Five points for Gryffindor,' said Professor Grubbly-Plank. 'Yes, these areBowtruckles, and as Miss Granger rightly says, they 234 HARRY POTTERgenerally live in trees whose wood is of wand quality. Anybody know what theyeat?'
'Woodlice,' said Hermione promptly which explained why what Harry hadtaken to be grains of brown rice were moving. 'But fairy eggs if they can getthem.'
'Good girl, take another five points. So, whenever you need leaves or woodfrom a tree in which a Bowtruckle lodges, it is wise to have a gift of woodliceready to distract or placate it. They may not look dangerous, but if angered theywill try to gouge at human eyes with their fingers, which, as you can see, are verysharp and not at all desirable near the eyeballs. So if you'd like to gather closer,take a few woodlice and a Bowtruckle - I have enough here for one between three- you can study them more closely. I want a sketch from each of you with allbody-parts labelled by the end of the lesson.'
The class surged forwards around the trestle table. Harry deliberately circledaround the back so that he ended up right next to Professor Grubbly-Plank.
'Where's Hagrid?' he asked her, while everyone else was choosing Bowtruckles.
'Never you mind,' said Professor Grubbly-Plank repressively, which had beenher attitude last time Hagrid had failed to turn up for a class, too. Smirking all overhis pointed face, Draco Malfoy leaned across Harry and seized the largestBowtruckle.
'Maybe,' said Malfoy in an undertone, so that only Harry could hear him, 'thestupid great oaf's got himself badly injured.'
'Maybe you will if you don't shut up,' said Harry out of the side of his mouth.
'Maybe he's been messing with stuff that's too big for him, if you get my drift.'
Malfoy walked away, smirking over his shoulder at Harry, who felt suddenlysick. Did Malfoy know something? His father was a Death Eater after all; what ifhe had information about Hagrid's fate that had not yet reached the ears of theOrder? He hurried back around the table to Ron and Hermione who were squattingon the grass some distance away and attempting to persuade a Bowtruckle toremain still long enough for them to draw it. Harry DETENTION WITH DOLORES 235pulled out parchment and quill, crouched down beside the others and related in awhisper what Malfoy had just said.
'Dumbledore would know if some thing had happened to Hagrid,' saidHermione at once. 'It's just playing into Malfoy's hands to look worried; it tellshim we don't know exactly what's going on. We've got to ignore him, Harry.
Here, hold the Bowtruckle for a moment, just so I can draw its face ...'

'Yes,' came Malfoy's clear drawl from the group nearest them, 'Father wastalking to the Minister just a couple of days ago, you know, and it sounds asthough the Ministry's really determined to crack down on sub-standard teachingin this place. So even if that overgrown moron does show up again, he'llprobably be sent packing straightaway.'

'OUCH!'

Harry had gripped the Bowtruckle so hard that it had almost snapped, and ithad just taken a great retaliatory swipe at his hand with its sharp fingers, leavingtwo long deep cuts there. Harry dropped it. Crabbe and Goyle, who had alreadybeen guffawing at the idea of Hagrid being sacked, laughed still harder as theBowtruckle set off at full tilt towards the Forest, a little moving stick-man soonswallowed up among the tree roots. When the bell echoed distantly over thegrounds, Harry rolled up his blood-stained Bowtruckle picture and marched offto Herbology with his hand wrapped in Hermione's handkerchief, and Malfoy'sderisive laughter still ringing in his ears.

'If he calls Hagrid a moron one more time ...' said Harry through gritted teeth.

'Harry, don't go picking a row with Malfoy, don't forget, he's a prefect now,he could make life difficult for you ...'

'Wow, I wonder what it'd be like to have a difficult life?' said Harrysarcastically. Ron laughed, but Hermione frowned. Together, they traipsedacross the vegetable patch. The sky still appeared unable to make up its mindwhether it wanted to rain or not.

'I just wish Hagrid would hurry up and get back, that's all,' said Harry in a lowvoice, as they reached the greenhouses. 'And don't say that Grubbly-Plankwoman's a better teacher!' he added threateningly.

'I wasn't going to,' said Hermione calmly.

'Because she'll never be as good as Hagrid,' said Harry firmly, fully aware thathe had just experienced an exemplary Care of Magical Creatures lesson and wasthoroughly annoyed about it.

The door of the nearest greenhouse opened and some fourth-years spilled outof it, including Ginny.

'Hi,' she said brightly as she passed. A few seconds later, Luna Lovegoodemerged, trailing behind the rest of the class, a smudge of earth on her nose, andher hair tied in a knot on the top of her head. When she saw Harry, her prominenteyes seemed to bulge excitedly and she made a beeline straight for him. Many ofhis classmates turned curiously to watch. Luna took a great breath and then said,without so much as a preliminary hello, 'I believe He Who Must Not Be Namedis back and I believe you fought him and escaped from him.'

'Er - right,' said Harry awkwardly. Luna was wearing what looked like a pairof orange radishes for earrings, a fact that Parvati and Lavender seemed to havenoticed, as they were both giggling and pointing at her earlobes.

'You can laugh,' Luna said, her voice rising, apparently under the impressionthat Parvati and Lavender were laughing at what she had said rather than whatshe was wearing, 'but people used to believe there were no such things as theBlibbering Humdinger or the Crumple-Horned Snorkack!'

'Well, they were right, weren't they?' said Hermione impatiently. There weren'tany such things as the Blibbering Humdinger or the Crumple-Horned Snorkack.'

Luna gave her a withering look and flounced away, radishes swinging madlyParvati and Lavender were not the only ones hooting with laughter now.

'D'you mind not offending the only people who believe me?' Harry askedHermione as they made their way into class.

'Oh, for heaven's sake, Harry, you can do better than her,' said Hermione.

'Ginny's told me all about her; apparently, she'll only believe in things as long asthere's no proof at all. Well, I wouldn't expect anything else from someone whosefather runs The Quibbler.'
Harry thought of the sinister winged horses he had seen on the DETENTION WITH DOLORES 237night he had arrived and how Luna had said she could see them too. His spiritssank slightly. Had she been lying? But before he could devote much morethought to the matter, Ernie Macmillan had stepped up to him.
'I want you to know, Potter,' he said in a loud, carrying voice, 'that it's notonly weirdos who support you. I personally believe you one hundred per cent.
My family have always stood firm behind Dumbledore, and so do I.'
'Er - thanks very much, Ernie,' said Harry, taken aback but pleased. Erniemight be pompous on occasions like this, but Harry was in a mood to deeplyappreciate a vote of confidence from somebody who did not have radishesdangling from their ears. Ernie's words had certainly wiped the smile fromLavender Brown's face and as he turned to talk to Ron and Hermione, Harrycaught Seamuss expression, which looked both confused and defiant.
To nobody's surprise, Professor Sprout started their lesson by lecturing themabout the importance of OWLs. Harry wished all the teachers would stop doingthis; he was starting to get an anxious, twisted feeling in his stomach every timehe remembered how much homework he had to do, a feeling that worseneddramatically when Professor Sprout gave them yet another essay at the . end ofclass. Tired and smelling strongly of dragon dung, Professor Sprout's preferredtype of fertiliser, the Gryffindors trooped back up to the castle an hour and a halflater, none of them talking very much; it had been another long day.
As Harry was starving, and he had his first detention with Umbridge at fiveo'clock, he headed straight for dinner without dropping off his bag in GryffindorTower so that he could bolt something down before facing whatever she had instore for him. He had barely reached the entrance of the Great Hall, however,when a loud and angry voice yelled, 'Oi, Potter!'
'What now?' he muttered wearily, turning to face Angelina Johnson, wholooked as though she was in a towering temper.
'I'll tell you what now,' she said, marching straight up to him and poking himhard in the chest with her finger. 'How come you've landed yourself in detentionfor five o'clock on Friday?'
'What?' said Harry. 'Why ... oh yeah, Keeper tryouts!'

238 HARRY POTTER'Now he remembers!' snarled Angelina. 'Didn't I tell you I wanted to do atryout with the whole team, and find someone who fitted in with everyone! Didn'tI tell you I'd booked the Quidditch pitch specially? And now you've decidedyou're not going to be there!'
'I didn't decide not to be there!' said Harry, stung by the injustice of thesewords. 'I got detention from that Umbridge woman, just because I told her thetruth about You-Know-Who.'
'Well, you can just go straight to her and ask her to let you off on Friday,' saidAngelina fiercely, 'and 1 don't care how you do it. Tell her You-Know-Who's afigment of your imagination if you like, just make sure you re there}'
She turned on her heel and stormed away.
'You know what?' Harry said to Ron and Hermione as they entered the GreatHall. 'I think we'd better check with Puddlemere United whether Oliver Wood'sbeen killed during a training session, because Angelina seems to be channellinghis spirit.'
'What d'you reckon are the odds of Umbridge letting you off on Friday?' saidRon sceptically, as they sat down at the Gryffindor table.

'Less than zero,' said Harry glumly, tipping lamb chops on to his plate andstarting to eat. 'Better try, though, hadn't I? I'll offer to do two more detentions orsomething, I dunno ..." He swallowed a mouthful of potato and added, 'I hope shedoesn't keep me too long this evening. You realise we've got to write three essays,practise Vanishing Spells for McGonagall, work out a counter-charm forFlitwick, finish the Bowtruckle drawing and start that stupid dream diary forTrelawney?'
Ron moaned and for some reason glanced up at the ceiling.
'And it looks like it's going to rain.'
'What's that got to do with our homework?' said Hermione, her eyebrowsraised.
'Nothing,' said Ron at once, his ears reddening.
At five to five Harry bade the other two goodbye and set off for Umbridge'soffice on the third floor. When he knocked on the door she called, 'Come in,' in asugary voice. He entered cautiously, looking around.
He had known this office under three of its previous occupants.

DETENTION WITH DOLORES 239In the days when Gilderoy Lockhart had lived here it had been plastered inbeaming portraits of himself. When Lupin had occupied it, it was likely youwould meet some fascinating Dark creature in a cage or tank if you came to call.
In the impostor Moody's days it had been packed with various instruments andartefacts for the detection of wrongdoing and concealment.
Now, however, it looked totally unrecognisable. The surfaces had all beendraped in lacy covers and cloths. There were several vases full of dried flowers,each one residing on its own doily, and on one of the walls was a collection ofornamental plates, each decorated with a large technicolour kitten wearing adifferent bow around its neck. These were so foul that Harry stared at them,transfixed, until Professor Umbridge spoke again.
'Good evening, Mr Potter.'
Harry started and looked around. He had not noticed her at first because shewas wearing a luridly flowered set of robes that blended only too well with thetablecloth on the desk behind her.
'Evening, Professor Umbridge,' Harry said stiffly.
'Well, sit down,' she said, pointing towards a small table draped in lace besidewhich she had drawn up a straight-backed chair. A piece of blank parchment layon the table, apparently waiting for him.
'Er,' said Harry, without moving. 'Professor Umbridge. Er - before we start, I- I wanted to ask you a ... a favour.'
Her bulging eyes narrowed.
'Oh, yes?'
'Well, I'm ... I'm in the Gryffindor Quidditch team. And I was supposed to beat the tryouts for the new Keeper at five o'clock on Friday and I was - waswondering whether I could skip detention that night and do it - do it anothernight ... instead ...'
He knew long before he reached the end of his sentence that it was no good.
'Oh, no,' said Umbridge, smiling so widely that she looked as though she hadjust swallowed a particularly juicy fly. 'Oh, no, no, no. This is your punishmentfor spreading evil, nasty, attention-seeking stories, Mr Potter, and punishmentscertainly cannot be adjusted to suit the guilty one's convenience. No, you willcome

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

.r240 HARRY POTTERhere at five o'clock tomorrow, and the next day, and on Friday too, and you will do yourdetentions as planned. I think it rather a good thing that you are missing something youreally want to do. It ought to reinforce the lesson I am trying to teach you.'
Harry felt the blood surge to his head and heard a thumping noise in his ears. So hetold 'evil, nasty, attention-seeking stones', did he?
She was watching him with her head slightly to one side, still smiling widely, asthough she knew exactly what he was thinking and was waiting to see whether he wouldstart shouting again. With a massive effort, Harry looked away from her, dropped hisschoolbag beside the straight-backed chair and sat down.
There,' said Umbridge sweetly, 'we're getting better at controlling our temper already,aren't we? Now, you are going to be doing some lines for me, Mr Potter. No, not withyour quill,' she added, as Harry bent down to open his bag. 'You're going to be using arather special one of mine. Here you are.'
She handed him a long, thin black quill with an unusually sharp point.
'I want you to write, / must not tell lies,' she told him softly.
'How many times?' Harry asked, with a creditable imitation of politeness.
'Oh, as long as it takes for the message to sink in,' said Umbridge sweetly. 'Off yougo.'
She moved over to her desk, sat down and bent over a stack of parchment that lookedlike essays for marking. Harry raised the sharp black quill, then realised what wasmissing.
'You haven't given me any ink,' he said.
'Oh, you won't need ink,' said Professor Umbridge, with the merest suggestion of alaugh in her voice.
Harry placed the point of the quill on the paper and wrote: / must not tell lies.
He let out a gasp of pain. The words had appeared on the parchment in what appearedto be shining red ink. At the same time, the words had appeared on the back of Harrysright hand, cut into his skin as though traced there by a scalpel - yet even as he stared atthe shining cut, the skin healed over again, leaving the place where it had been slightlyredder than before but quite smooth.

DETENT ION WITH Do LORES 241Harry looked round at Umbridge. She was watching him, her wide,toadlike mouth stretched in a smile.
'Yes?'
'Nothing,' said Harry quietly.
He looked back at the parchment, placed the quill on it once more, wrote Imust not tell lies, and felt the searing pain on the back of his hand for asecond time; once again, the words had been cut into his skin; once again,they healed over seconds later.
And on it went. Again and again Harry wrote the words on the parchmentin what he soon came to realise was not ink, but his own blood. And, againand again, the words were cut into the back of his hand, healed, andreappeared the next time he set quill to parchment.
Darkness fell outside Umbridge's window. Harry did not ask when hewould be allowed to stop. He did not even check his watch. He knew she waswatching him for signs of weakness and he was not going to show any, noteven if he had to sit there all night, cutting open his own hand with this quill...
'Come here,' she said, after what seemed hours.
He stood up. His hand was stinging painfully. When he looked down at ithe saw that the cut had healed, but that the skin there was red raw.
'Hand,' she said.
He extended it. She took it in her own. Harry repressed a shudder as shetouched him with her thick, stubby fingers on which she wore a number ofugly old rings.

Tut, tut, 1 don't seem to have made much of an impression yet,' she said,smiling. 'Well, we'll just have to try again tomorrow evening, won't we? Youmay go.'
Harry left her office without a word. The school was quite deserted; it wassurely past midnight. He walked slowly up the corridor, then, when he hadturned the corner and was sure she would not hear him, broke into a run.
*He had not had time to practise Vanishing Spells, had not written a singledream in his dream diary and had not finished the drawing of the Bowtruckle,nor had he written his essays. He skipped 242 HARRY POTTERbreakfast next morning to scribble down a couple of made-up dreams forDivination, their first lesson, and was surprised to find a dishevelled Ron keepinghim company.
'How come you didn't do it last night?' Harry asked, as Ron stared wildly aroundthe common room for inspiration. Ron, who had been fast asleep when Harry gotback to the dormitory, muttered something about 'doing other stuff, bent low overhis parchment and scrawled a few words.
That'll have to do,' he said, slamming the diary shut. 'I've said I dreamed 1 wasbuying a new pair of shoes, she can't make anything weird out of that, can she?'
They hurried off to North Tower together.
'How was detention with Umbridge, anyway? What did she make you do?'
Harry hesitated for a fraction of a second, then said, 'Lines.'
That's not too bad, then, eh?' said Ron.
'Nope,' said Harry.
'Hey - I forgot - did she let you off for Friday?'
'No,' said Harry.
Ron groaned sympathetically.
It was another bad day for Harry; he was one of the worst in Transfiguration,not having practised Vanishing Spells at all. He had to give up his lunch hour tocomplete the picture of the Bowtruckle and, meanwhile, Professors McGonagall,Grubbly-Plank and Sinistra gave them yet more homework, which he had noprospect of finishing that evening because of his second detention with Umbridge.
To cap it all, Angelina Johnson tracked him down at dinner again and, on learningthat he would not be able to attend Friday's Keeper tryouts, told him she was not atall impressed by his attitude and that she expected players who wished to remainon the team to put training before their other commitments.
'I'm in detention!' Harry yelled after her as she stalked away. 'D'you think I'drather be stuck in a room with that old toad or playing Quidditch?'
'At least it's only lines,' said Hermione consolingly, as Harry sank back on to hisbench and looked down at his steak and kidney DETENTION WITH DOLORES 243pie, which he no longer fancied very much. 'It's not as if it's a dreadfulpunishment, really ..."
Harry opened his mouth, closed it again and nodded. He was not really surewhy he was not telling Ron and Hermione exactly what was happening inUmbridge's room: he only knew that he did not want to see their looks ofhorror; that would make the whole thing seem worse and therefore moredifficult to face. He also felt dimly that this was between himself andUmbridge, a private battle of wills, and he was not going to give her thesatisfaction of hearing that he had complained about it.
'I can't believe how much homework we've got,' said Ron miserably.
'Well, why didn't you do any last night?' Hermione asked him. 'Where wereyou, anyway?'
'I was ... I fancied a walk,' said Ron shiftily.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Harry had the distinct impression that he was not alone in concealing thingsat the moment.
*The second detention was just as bad as the previous one. The skin on the backof Harry's hand became irritated more quickly now and was soon red andinflamed. Harry thought it unlikely that it would keep healing as effectively forlong. Soon the cut would remain etched into his hand and Umbridge would,perhaps, be satisfied. He let no gasp of pain escape him, however, and from themoment of entering the room to the moment of his dismissal, again pastmidnight, he said nothing but 'good evening' and 'goodnight'.
His homework situation, however, was now desperate, and when he returnedto the Gryffindor common room he did not, though exhausted, go to bed, butopened his books and began Snape's moonstone essay. It was half past two bythe time he had finished it. He knew he had done a poor job, but there was nohelp for it; unless he had something to give in he would be in detention withSnape next. He then dashed off answers to the questions Professor McGonagallhad set them, cobbled together something on the proper handling ofBowtruckles for Professor Grubbly-Plank, and staggered up to bed, where hefell fully clothed on top of the covers and fell asleep immediately.

244 HARRY POTTERXThursday passed in a haze of tiredness. Ron seemed very sleepy too, thoughHarry could not see why he should be. Harry's third detention passed in the sameway as the previous two, except that after two hours the words '/ must not telllies' did not fade from the back of Harrys hand, but remained scratched there,oozing droplets of blood. The pause in the pointed quill's scratching madeProfessor Umbridge look up.
'Ah,' she said softly, moving around her desk to examine his hand herself.
'Good. That ought to serve as a reminder to you, oughtn't it? You may leave fortonight.'
'Do I still have to come back tomorrow?' said Harry picking up his schoolbagwith his left hand rather than his smarting right one.
'Oh yes,' said Professor Umbridge, smiling as widely as before. 'Yes, I thinkwe can etch the message a little deeper with another evening's work.'
Harry had never before considered the possibility that there might be anotherteacher in the world he hated more than Snape, but as he walked back towardsGryffindor Tower he had to admit he had found a strong contender. She's evil, hethought, as he climbed a staircase to the seventh floor, she's an evil, twisted, madold-
'Ron?'
He had reached the top of the stairs, turned right and almost walked into Ron,who was lurking behind a statue of Lachlan the Lanky, clutching his broomstick.
He gave a great leap of surprise when he saw Harry and attempted to hide hisnew Cleansweep Eleven behind his back.
'What are you doing?'
'Er - nothing. What are you doing?'
Harry frowned at him.
'Come on, you can tell me! What are you hiding here for?'
Tm - I'm hiding from Fred and George, if you must know,' said Ron. They justwent past with a bunch of first-years, I bet they're testing stuff on them again. Imean, they can't do it in the common room now, can they, not with Hermionethere.'
He was talking in a very fast, feverish way.

DETENTION WITH DOLORES 245'But what have you got your broom for, you haven't been flying, have you?'
Harry asked.
'I - well - well, OK, I'll tell you, but don't laugh, all right?' Ron saiddefensively, turning redder with every second. 'I - I thought I'd try out forGryffindor Keeper now I've got a decent broom. There. Go on. Laugh.'
'I'm not laughing,' said Harry. Ron blinked. 'It's a brilliant idea! It'd be reallycool if you got on the team! I've never seen you play Keeper, are you good?'
'I'm not bad,' said Ron, who looked immensely relieved at Harry's reaction.
'Charlie, Fred and George always made me Keep for them when they weretraining during the holidays.'
'So you've been practising tonight?'
'Every evening since Tuesday ... just on my own, though. I've been trying tobewitch Quaffles to fly at me, but it hasn't been easy and I don't know howmuch use it'll be.' Ron looked nervous and anxious. 'Fred and George are goingto laugh themselves stupid when I turn up for the tryouts. They haven't stoppedtaking the mickey out of me since I got made a prefect.'
'I wish I was going to be there,' said Harry bitterly, as they set off togethertowards the common room.
'Yeah, so do - Harry, what's that on the back of your hand?'
Harry, who had just scratched his nose with his free right hand, tried to hideit, but had as much success as Ron with his Cleansweep.
'It's just a cut - it's nothing - it's -'
But Ron had grabbed Harry's forearm and pulled the back of Harry's hand uplevel with his eyes. There was a pause, during which he stared at the wordscarved into the skin, then, looking sick, he released Harry.
'I thought you said she was just giving you lines?'
Harry hesitated, but after all, Ron had been honest with him, so he told Ronthe truth about the hours he had been spending in Umbridge's office.
The old hag!' Ron said in a revolted whisper as they came to a halt in front ofthe Fat Lady, who was dozing peacefully with her head against her frame. 'She'ssick! Go to McGonagall, say something!'

246 HARRY POTTER'No,' said Harry at once. 'I'm not giving her the satisfaction of knowing she'sgot to me.'
'Got to you? You can't let her get away with this!'
'I don't know how much power McGonagall's got over her,' said Harry.
'Dumbledore, then, tell Dumbledore!'
'No,' said Harry flatly.
'Why not?'
'He's got enough on his mind,' said Harry, but that was not the true reason. Hewas not going to go to Dumbledore for help when Dumbledore had not spoken tohim once since June.
'Well, 1 reckon you should -' Ron began, but he was interrupted by the FatLady, who had been watching them sleepily and now burst out, 'Are you going togive me the password or will 1 have to stay awake all night waiting for you tofinish your conversation?'
*Friday dawned sullen and sodden as the rest of the week. Though Harryautomatically glanced towards the staff table when he entered the Great Hall, itwas without any real hope of seeing Hagrid, and he turned his mind immediatelyto his more pressing problems, such as the mountainous pile of homework he hadto do and the prospect of yet another detention with Umbridge.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Two things sustained Harry that day. One was the thought that it was almostthe weekend; the other was that, dreadful though his final detention withUmbridge was sure to be, he had a distant view of the Quidditch pitch from herwindow and might, with luck, be able to see something of Ron's tryout. Thesewere rather feeble rays of light, it was true, but Harry was grateful for anythingthat might lighten his present darkness; he had never had a worse first week ofterm at Hogwarts.
At five o'clock that evening he knocked on Professor Umbridge's office doorfor what he sincerely hoped would be the final time, and was told to enter. Theblank parchment lay ready for him on the lace-covered table, the pointed blackquill beside it.
'You know what to do, Mr Potter,' said Umbridge, smiling sweetly at him.
Harry picked up the quill and glanced through the window. If DETENTION WITH DOLORES 247he just shifted his chair an inch or so to the right ... on the pretext of shiftinghimseli closer to the table, he managed it. He now had a distant view of theGryffindor Quidditch team soaring up and down the pitch, while half a dozenblack figures stood at the foot of the three high goalposts, apparently awaitingtheir turn to Keep. It was impossible to tell which one was Ron at this distance.
I must not tell lies, Harry wrote. The cut in the back of his right hand openedand began to bleed atresh.
I must not tell lies. The cut dug deeper, stinging and smarting.
I must not tell lies. Blood trickled down his wrist.
He chanced another glance out of the window. Whoever was defending thegoalposts now was doing a very poor job indeed. Katie Bell scored twice in thefew seconds Harry dared to watch. Hoping very much that the Keeper wasn'tRon, he dropped his eyes back to the parchment shining with blood.
I must not tell lies.
I must not tell lies.
He looked up whenever he thought he could risk it; when he could hear thescratching of Umbridges quill or the opening of a desk drawer. The third personto try out was pretty good, the fourth was terrible, the fifth dodged a Bludgerexceptionally well but then fumbled an easy save. The sky was darkening, andHarry doubted he would be able to see the sixth and seventh people at all.
I must not tell lies.
I must not tell lies.
The parchment was now dotted with drops of blood from the back of his hand,which was searing with pain. When he next looked up, night had fallen and theQuidditch pitch was no longer visible.
'Let's see if you've got the message yet, shall we?' said Umbridges soft voicehalf an hour later.
She moved towards him, stretching out her short ringed fingers for his arm.
And then, as she took hold of him to examine the words now cut into his skin,pain seared, not across the back of his hand, but across the scar on his forehead.
At the same time, he had a most peculiar sensation somewhere around hismidriff.

248 HARRY POTTERHe wrenched his arm out of her grip and leapt to his feet, staring at her. Shelooked back at him, a smile stretching her wide, slack mouth.
'Yes, it hurts, doesn't it?' she said softly.
He did not answer. His heart was thumping very hard and fast. Was shetalking about his hand or did she know what he had just felt in his forehead?

'Well, I think I've made my point, Mr Potter. You may go.'

He caught up his schoolbag and left the room as quickly as he could.

Stay calm, he told himself, as he sprinted up the stairs. Stay calm, it doesn'tnecessarily mean what you think it means ...

'Mimbulus mimbletonia!' he gasped at the Fat Lady, who swung forwardsonce more.

A roar of sound greeted him. Ron came running towards him, beaming allover his face and slopping Butterbeer down his front from the goblet he wasclutching.

'Harry, I did it, I'm in, I'm Keeper!'

'What? Oh - brilliant!' said Harry, trying to smile naturally, while his heartcontinued to race and his hand throbbed and bled.

'Have a Butterbeer.' Ron pressed a bottle on him. '1 can't believe it - where'sHermione gone?'

'She's there,' said Fred, who was also swigging Butterbeer, and pointed to anarmchair by the fire. Hermione was dozing in it, her drink tipping precariously inher hand.

'Well, she said she was pleased when I told her,' said Ron, looking slightly putout.

'Let her sleep,' said George hastily. It was a few moments before Harrynoticed that several of the first-years gathered around them bore unmistakeablesigns of recent nosebleeds.

'Come here, Ron, and see if Oliver's old robes fit you,' called Katie Bell, 'wecan take off his name and put yours on instead ...'

As Ron moved away, Angelina came striding up to Harry.

'Sorry I was a bit short with you earlier, Potter,' she said abruptly. 'It's stressfulthis managing lark, you know, I'm starting to think I was a bit hard on Woodsometimes.' She was watching Ron over the rim of her goblet with a slight frownon her face.

DETENTION WITH DOLORES 249'Look, I know he's your best mate, but he's not fabulous,' she said bluntly. 'Ithink with a bit of training he'll be all right, though. He comes from a family ofgood Quidditch players. I'm banking on him turning out to have a bit more talentthan he showed today, to be honest. Vicky Frobisher and Geoffrey Hooper bothflew better this evening, but Hoopers a real whiner, he's always moaning aboutsomething or other, and Vicky's involved in all sorts of societies. She admittedherself that if training clashed with her Charms Club she'd put Charms first.

Anyway, we're having a practice session at two o'clock tomorrow, so just makesure you're there this time. And do me a favour and help Ron as much as youcan, OK?'

He nodded, and Angelina strolled back to Alicia Spinnet. Harry moved overto sit next to Hermione, who awoke with a jerk as he put down his bag.

'Oh, Harry, it's you ... good about Ron, isn't it?' she said blearily. 'I'm just soso- so tired,' she yawned. 'I was up until one o'clock making more hats. They'redisappearing like mad!'

And sure enough, now that he looked, Harry saw that there were woolly hatsconcealed all around the room where unwary elves might accidentally pick themup.

'Great,' said Harry distractedly; if he did not tell somebody soon, he wouldburst. 'Listen, Hermione, I was just up in Umbridge's office and she touched myarmHermione listened closely. When Harry had (inished, she said slowly 'You'reworried You-Know-Who's controlling her like he controlled Quirrell?'

'Well,' said Harry, dropping his voice, 'it's a possibility, isn't it?'

'I suppose so,' said Hermione, though she sounded unconvinced. 'But I don'tthink he can be possessing her the way he possessed Quirrell, I mean, he'sproperly alive again now, isn't he, he's got his own body, he wouldn't need toshare someone else's. He could have her under the Imperius Curse, I suppose ..."

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Harry watched Fred, George and Lee Jordan juggling empty Butterbeerbottles for a moment. Then Hermione said, 'But last year your scar hurt whennobody was touching you, and didn't Dumbledore say it had to do with whatYou-Know-Who was feeling at the time? I mean, maybe this hasn't got anythingto do with

250 HARRY POTTERUmbridge at all, maybe it's just coincidenceit happened while you were with her?'
'She's evil,' said Harry flatly. Twisted.'
'She's horrible, yes, but ... Harry, I thinkyou ought to tell Dumbledore your scarhurt.'
It was the second time in two days he hadbeen advised to go to Dumbledore and hisanswer to Hermione was just the same as hisanswer to Ron.
'I'm not bothering him with this. Like youjust said, its not a big deal. It's been hurtingon and off all summer - it was just a bitworse tonight, that's all -'
'Harry, I'm sure Dumbledore would wantto be bothered by this -'
'Yeah,' said Harry, before he could stophimself, 'that's the only bit of meDumbledore cares about, isn't it, my scar?'
'Don't say that, it's not true!'
'I think I'll write and tell Sirius about it, seewhat he thinks -'
'Harry, you can't put something like thatin a letter!' said Hermione, looking alarmed.
'Don't you remember, Moody told us to becareful what we put in writing! We just can'tguarantee owls aren't being intercepted anymore!'
'All right, all right, I won't tell him, then!'
said Harry irritably. He got to his feet. 'I'mgoing to bed. Tell Ron for me, will you?'
'Oh no,' said Hermione, looking relieved,'if you're going that means I can go too,without being rude. I'm absolutelyexhausted and I want to make some morehats tomorrow. Listen, you can help me ifyou like, it's quite fun, I'm getting better, Ican do patterns and bobbles and all sorts ofthings now.'
Harry looked into her face, which wasshining with glee, and tried to look asthough he was vaguely tempted by thisoffer.
'Er ... no, I don't think I will, thanks,' hesaid. 'Er- not tomorrow. I've got loads ofhomework to do ...'
And he traipsed off to the boys' stairs,leaving her looking slightly disappointed.

— CHAPTER FOURTEEN —

Percy and PadfootHarry was first to wake up in his dormitory next morning. He lay for a momentwatching dust swirl in the ray of sunlight coming through the gap in his fourpostershangings, and savoured the thought that it was Saturday. The first week ofterm seemed to have dragged on for ever, like one gigantic History of Magiclesson.
Judging by the sleepy silence and the freshly minted look of that beam ofsunlight, it was just after daybreak. He pulled open the curtains around his bed,got up and started to dress. The only sound apart from the distant twittering ofbirds was the slow, deep breathing of his fellow Gryffindors. He opened hisschoolbag carefully, pulled out parchment and quill and headed out of thedormitory for the common room.
Making straight for his favourite squashy old armchair beside the now extinctfire, Harry settled himself down comfortably and unrolled his parchment whilelooking around the room. The detritus of crumpled-up bits of parchment, oldGobstones, empty ingredient jars and sweet wrappers that usually covered thecommon room at the end of each day was gone, as were all Hermione's elf hats.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Wondering vaguely how many elves had now been set free whether they wantedto be or not, Harry uncorked his ink bottle, dipped his quill into it, then held itsuspended an inch above the smooth yellowish surface of his parchment, thinkinghard ... but after a minute or so he found himself staring into the empty grate, at acomplete loss for what to say.
He could now appreciate how hard it had been for Ron and Hermione to writehim letters over the summer. How was he supposed to tell Sirius everything thathad happened over the past 252 HARRY POTTERweek and pose all the questions he was burning to ask without giving potentialletter-thieves a lot of information he did not want them to have?
He sat quite motionless for a while, gazing into the fireplace,: then, finallycoming to a decision, he dipped his quill into the ink bottle once more and set itresolutely on the parchment.
Dear Snuffles,Hope you're OK, the first week back here's been terrible, I'm reallyglad it's the weekend. We've got a new Defence Against the Dark Arts teacher, Professor Umbridge. She'snearly as nice as your mum. I'm writing because that thing I wrote to you about lastsummer happened again last night when I was doing a detention with Umbridge.
We're all missing our biggest friend, we hope he'll be back soon.
Please write back quickly.
Best,HarryHarry reread the letter several times, trying to see it from the point of view of anoutsider. He could not see how they would know what he was talking about - orwho he was talking to - just from reading this letter. He did hope Sirius wouldpick up the hint about Hagrid and tell them when he might be back. Harry did notwant to ask directly in case it drew too much attention to what Hagrid might beup to while he was not at Hogwarts.
Considering it was a very short letter, it had taken a long time to write; sunlight had crept halfway across the room while he had been working on it andhe could now hear distant sounds of movement from the dormitories above.
Sealing the parchment carefully, he climbed through the portrait hole and headedoff for the Owlery.
'I would not go that way if I were you,' said Nearly Headless Nick, driftingdisconcertingly through a wall just ahead of Harry as he walked down thepassage. 'Peeves is planning an amusing joke on the next person to pass the bustof Paracelsus halfway down the corridor.'

PERCY AND PAD FOOT 253'Does it involve Paracelsus falling on top of the persons head?' asked Harry.
'Funnily enough, it does,' said Nearly Headless Nick in a bored voice.
'Subtlety has never been Peeves's strong point. I'm off to try and find the BloodyBaron ... he might be able to put a stop to it ... see you, Harry'Yeah, bye,' said Harry and instead of turning right, he turned left, taking alonger but safer route up to the Owlery. His spirits rose as he walked pastwindow after window showing brilliantly blue sky; he had training later, hewould be back on the Quidditch pitch at last.
Something brushed his ankles. He looked down and saw the caretaker'sskeletal grey cat, Mrs Norns, slinking past him. She turned lamplike yellow eyeson him for a moment before disappearing behind a statue of Wilfred the Wistful.
Tm not doing anything wrong,' Harry called after her. She had theunmistakeable air of a cat that was ofi to report to her boss, yet Harry could notsee why; he was perfectly entitled to walk up to the Owlery on a Saturdaymorning.

The sun was high in the sky now and when Harry entered the Owlery theglassless windows dazzled his eyes; thick silvery beams of sunlight crisscrossedthe circular room in which hundreds of owls nestled on rafters, a little restless inthe early-morning light, some clearly just returned from hunting. The strawcoveredfloor crunched a little as he stepped across tiny animal bones, craninghis neck for a sight of Hedwig.
There you are,' he said, spotting her somewhere near the very top of thevaulted ceiling. 'Get down here, I've got a letter for you."
With a low hoot she stretched her great white wings and soared down on tohis shoulder.
'Right, I know this says Snuffles on the outside,' he told her, giving her theletter to clasp in her beak and, without knowing exactly why, whispering, 'but it'sfor Sirius, OK?'
She blinked her amber eyes once and he took that to mean that sheunderstood.
'Safe flight, then,' said Harry and he carried her to one of the windows; with amoment's pressure on his arm, Hedwig took off 254 HARRY POTTERinto the blindingly bright sky. He watched her until she became a tiny blackspeck and vanished, then switched his gaze to Hagrid's hut, clearly visible fromthis window, and just as clearly uninhabited, the chimney smokeless, the curtainsdrawn.
The treetops of the Forbidden Forest swayed in a light breeze. Harry watchedthem, savouring the fresh air on his face, thinking about Quidditch later ... thenhe saw it. A great, reptilian winged horse, just like the ones pulling the Hogwartscarriages, with leathery black wings spread wide like a pterodactyl's, rose up outof the trees like a grotesque, giant bird. It soared in a great circle, then plungedback into the trees. The whole thing had happened so quickly, Harry could hardlybelieve what he had seen, except that his heart was hammering madly.
The Owlery door opened behind him. He leapt in shock and, turning quickly,saw Cho Chang holding a letter and a parcel in her hands.
'Hi,' said Harry automatically.
'Oh ... hi,' she said breathlessly. T didn't think anyone would be up here thisearly ... I only remembered five minutes ago, it's my mum's birthday.'
She held up the parcel.
'Right,' said Harry. His brain seemed to have jammed. He wanted to saysomething funny and interesting, but the memory of that terrible winged horsewas fresh in his mind.
'Nice day,' he said, gesturing to the windows. His insides seemed to shrivelwith embarrassment. The weather. He was talking about the weather ...
'Yeah,' said Cho, looking around for a suitable owl. 'Good Quidditchconditions. 1 haven't been out all week, have you?'
'No,' said Harry.
Cho had selected one of the school barn owls. She coaxed it down on to herarm where it held out an obliging leg so that she could attach the parcel.
'Hey, has Gryffindor got a new Keeper yet?' she asked.
'Yeah,' said Harry. 'It's my friend Ron Weasley, d'you know him?'
The Tornados-hater?' said Cho rather coolly. 'Is he any good?'

PERCY AND PADFOOT 255'Yeah,' said Harry, 'I think so. I didn't see his tryout, though, I was indetention.'

Cho looked up, the parcel only half-attached to the owl's legs.
That Umbridge woman's foul,' she said in a low voice. 'Putting you indetention just because you told the truth about how - how - how he died.
Everyone heard about it, it was all over the school. You were really bravestanding up to her like that.'
Harry's insides re-inflated so rapidly he felt as though he might actually floata few inches off the dropping-strewn floor. Who cared about a stupid flyinghorse; Cho thought he had been really brave. For a moment, he consideredaccidentally-on-purpose showing her his cut hand as he helped her tie her parcelon to her owl ... but the very instant this thrilling thought occurred, the Owlerydoor opened again.
Filch the caretaker came wheezing into the room. There were purple patcheson his sunken, veined cheeks, his jowls were aquiver and his thin grey hairdishevelled; he had obviously run here. Mrs Norris came trotting at his heels,gazing up at the owls overhead and mewing hungrily. There was a restlessshifting of wings from above and a large brown owl snapped his beak in amenacing fashion.
'Aha!' said Filch, taking a flat-footed step towards Harry, his pouchy cheekstrembling with anger. 'I've had a tip-off that you are intending to place a massiveorder for DungbombsPHarry folded his arms and stared at the caretaker.
'Who told you 1 was ordering Dungbombs?'
Cho was looking from Harry to Filch, also frowning; the barn owl on her arm,tired of standing on one leg, gave an admonitory hoot but she ignored it.
T have my sources,' said Filch in a self-satisfied hiss. 'Now hand overwhatever it is you're sending.'
Feeling immensely thankful that he had not dawdled in posting off the letter,Harry said, T can't, it's gone.'
'Gone?' said Filch, his face contorting with rage.
'Gone,' said Harry calmly.
Filch opened his mouth furiously, mouthed for a few seconds, then rakedHarrys robes with his eyes.
'How do I know you haven't got it in your pocket?'

256 HARRY POTTER'Because -'
'I saw him send it,' said Cho angrily.
Filch rounded on her.
'You saw him -?'
That's right, I saw him,' she said fiercely.
There was a moments pause in which Filch glared at Cho and Cho glared rightback, then the caretaker turned on his heel and shuffled back towards the door.
He stopped with his hand on the handle and looked back at Harry.
'If I get so much as a whiff of a DungbombHe stumped off down the stairs. Mrs Norris cast a last longing look at the owlsand followed him.
Harry and Cho looked at each other.
Thanks,' Harry said.
'No problem,' said Cho, finally fixing the parcel to the barn owl's other leg, herface slightly pink. 'You weren't ordering Dungbombs, were you?'
'No,' said Harry.
'I wonder why he thought you were, then?' she said as she carried the owl tothe window.
Harry shrugged. He was quite as mystified by that as she was, though oddly itwas not bothering him very much at the moment.

They left the Owlery together. At the entrance of a corridor that led towardsthe west wing of the castle, Cho said, Tm going this way. Well, I'll ... I'll see youaround, Harry.'
'Yeah ... see you.'
She smiled at him and departed. Harry walked on, feeling quietly elated. Hehad managed to have an entire conversation with her and not embarrassed himselfonce ... you were really brave standing up to her like that ... Cho had called himbrave ... she did not hate him for being alive ...
Ol course, she had preferred Cedric, he knew that ... though if he'd only askedher to the Ball before Cedric had, things might have turned out differently ... shehad seemed sincerely sorry that she'd had to refuse when Harry asked her ...
'Morning,' Harry said brightly to Ron and Hermione as he joined them at theGryffindor table in the Great Hall.

PERCY AND PADFOOT 257'What are you looking so pleased about?' said Ron, eyeing Harry in surprise.
'Erm ... Quidditch later,' said Harry happily, pulling a large platter of baconand eggs towards him.
'Oh ... yeah ...' said Ron. He put down the piece of toast he was eating andtook a large swig of pumpkin juice. Then he said, 'Listen ... you don't fancygoing out a bit earlier with me, do you? Just to - er - give me some practicebefore training? So I can, you know, get my eye in a bit.'
'Yeah, OK,' said Harry.
'Look, 1 don't think you should,' said Hermione seriously. 'You're both reallybehind on homework as it -'
But she broke off; the morning post was arriving and, as usual, the DailyProphet was soaring towards her in the beak of a screech owl, which landedperilously close to the sugar bowl and held out a leg. Hermione pushed a Knutinto its leather pouch, took the newspaper, and scanned the front page criticallyas the owl took off.
'Anything interesting?' said Ron. Harry grinned, knowing Ron was keen tokeep her off the subject of homework.
'No,' she sighed, 'just some guff about the bass player in the Weird Sistersgetting married.'
Hermione opened the paper and disappeared behind it. Harry devoted himselfto another helping of eggs and bacon. Ron was staring up at the high windows,looking slightly preoccupied.
'Wait a moment,' said Hermione suddenly. 'Oh no ... Sirius!'
'What's happened?' said Harry, snatching at the paper so violently it rippeddown the middle, with him and Hermione each holding one half.
'"The Ministry of Magic has received a tip-off from a reliable source thatSirius Black, notorious mass murderer ... blah blah blah ... is currently hiding inLondon!"' Hermione read from her half in an anguished whisper.
'Lucius Malfoy I'll bet anything,' said Harry in a low, furious voice. 'He didrecognise Sirius on the platform ...'
'What?' said Ron, looking alarmed. 'You didn't say -'
'Shh!' said the other two.

258 HARRY POTTER1... "Ministry warns wizarding community that Black is very dangerous ... killed thirteen people ... broke out of Azkaban ..." the usual rubbish,' Hermioneconcluded, laying down her half of the paper and looking fearfully at Harry andRon. 'Well, he just won't be able to leave the house again, that's all,' shewhispered. 'Dumbledore did warn him not to.'

Harry looked down glumly at the bit ol the Prophet he had torn off. Most ofthe page was devoted to an advertisement for Madam Malkins Robes for AllOccasions, which was apparently having a sale.
'Hey!' he said, flattening it down so Hermione and Ron could see it. 'Look atthis!'
'I've got all the robes I want,' said Ron.
'No,' said Harry. 'Look ... this little piece here ...'
Ron and Hermione bent closer to read it; the item was barely an inch long andplaced right at the bottom of a column. It was headlined:
TRESPASS AT MINISTRYSturgis Podmore, 38, of number two, Laburnum Gardens, Clapham, hasappeared in front of the Wizengamot charged with trespass and attemptedrobbery at the Ministry of Magic on 3I August. SI Podmore was arrested byMinistry of Magic watchwizard Eric Munch, who found him attempting to forcehis way through a top-security door at one o'clock in the morning. Podmore, whorefused to speak in his own defence, was convicted on both charges andsentenced to six months in Azkaban.
'Sturgis Podmore?' said Ron slowly. 'He's that bloke who looks like his head'sbeen thatched, isn't he? He's one of the Ord—'
'Ron, shh!' said Hermione, casting a terrified look around them.
'Six months in Azkaban!' whispered Harry, shocked. 'Just for trying to getthrough a door!'
'Don't be silly, it wasn't just for trying to get through a door. What on earth washe doing at the Ministry of Magic at one o'clock in the morning?' breathedHermione.
'D'you reckon he was doing something for the Order?' Ron muttered.

'Wait a moment ...' said Harry slowly. 'Sturgis was supposed to come and seeus off, remember?'
The other two looked at him.
'Yeah, he was supposed to be part of our guard going to King's Cross,remember? And Moody was all annoyed because he didn't turn up; so hecouldn't have been on a job for them, could he?'
'Well, maybe they didn't expect him to get caught,' said Hermione.
'It could be a frame-up!' Ron exclaimed excitedly. 'No - listen!' he went on,dropping his voice dramatically at the threatening look on Hermione's face. TheMinistry suspects he's one of Dumbledore's lot so - I dunno - they lured him tothe Ministry, and he wasn't trying to get through a door at all! Maybe they've justmade something up to get him!'
There was a pause while Harry and Hermione considered this. Harry thoughtit seemed far-fetched. Hermione, on the other hand, looked rather impressed.
'Do you know, I wouldn't be at all surprised if that were true.'
She folded up her half of the newspaper thoughtfully. As Harry laid down hisknife and fork, she seemed to come out of a reverie.
'Right, well, I think we should tackle that essay for Sprout on self-fertilisingshrubs first and if we're lucky we'll be able to start McGonagall's InanimatusConjurus Spell before lunch ...'
Harry felt a small twinge of guilt at the thought of the pile of homeworkawaiting him upstairs, but the sky was a clear, exhilarating blue, and he had notbeen on his Firebolt for a week ...
'I mean, we can do it tonight,' said Ron, as he and Harry walked down thesloping lawns towards the Quidditch pitch, their broomsticks over theirshoulders, and with Hermione's dire warnings that they would fail all theirOWLs still ringing in their ears. 'And we've got tomorrow. She gets too workedup about work, that's her trouble ...' There was a pause and he added, in aslightly more anxious tone, 'D'you think she meant it when she said we weren'tcopying from her?'

'Yeah, I do,' said Harry. 'Still, this is important, too, we've got to practise ifwe want to stay on the Quidditch team ...'
'Yeah, that's right,' said Ron, in a heartened tone. 'And we have got plenty oftime to do it all ...'

260 HARRY POTTERAs they approached the Quidditch pitch, Harry glanced over to his right towhere the trees of the Forbidden Forest were swaying darkly. Nothing flew out ofthem; the sky was empty but for a few distant owls fluttering around the Owlerytower. He had enough to worry about; the flying horse wasn't doing him anyharm; he pushed it out of his mind.
They collected balls from the cupboard in the changing room and set to work,Ron guarding the three tall goalposts, Harry playing Chaser and trying to get theQuaffle past Ron. Harry thought Ron was pretty good; he blocked three-quartersof the goals Harry attempted to put past him and played better the longer theypractised. After a couple of hours they returned to the castle for lunch - duringwhich Hermione made it quite clear she thought they were irresponsible — thenreturned to the Quidditch pitch for the real training session. All their teammatesbut Angelina were already in the changing room when they entered.
'All right, Ron?' said George, winking at him.
'Yeah,' said Ron, who had become quieter and quieter all the way down to thepitch.
'Ready to show us all up, Ickle Prefect?' said Fred, emerging tousle-hairedfrom the neck of his Quidditch robes, a slightly malicious grin on his face.
'Shut up,' said Ron, stony-faced, pulling on his own team robes for the firsttime. They fitted him well considering they had been Oliver Wood's, who wasrather broader in the shoulder.
'OK, everyone,' said Angelina, entering from the Captain's office, alreadychanged. 'Let's get to it; Alicia and Fred, if you can just bring out the ball cratefor us. Oh, and there are a couple of people out there watching but I want you tojust ignore them, all right?'
Something in her would-be casual voice made Harry think he might knowwho the uninvited spectators were, and sure enough, when they left the changingroom for the bright sunlight of the pitch it was to a storm of catcalls and jeersfrom the Slytherin Quidditch team and assorted hangers-on, who were groupedhalfway up the empty stands and whose voices echoed loudly around thestadium.
'What's that Weasley's riding?' Malfoy called in his sneering PERCY AND PADFOOT 261drawl. 'Why would anyone put a flying charm on a mouldy old log like that?'
Crabbe, Goyle and Pansy Parkinson guffawed and shrieked with laughter.
Ron mounted his broom and kicked off from the ground and Harry followedhim, watching his ears turn red from behind.
'Ignore them,' he said, accelerating to catch up with Ron, 'we'll see who'slaughing after we play them ...'
'Exactly the attitude I want, Harry,' said Angelina approvingly, soaringaround them with the Quaffle under her arm and slowing to hover on the spot infront of her airborne team. 'OK, everyone, we're going to start with some passesjust to warm up, the whole team please -'
'Hey, Johnson, what's with that hairstyle, anyway?' shrieked Pansy Parkinsonfrom below. 'Why would anyone want to look like they've got worms comingout of their head?'
Angelina swept her long braided hair out of her face and continued calmly,'Spread out, then, and let's see what we can do ...'

Harry reversed away from the others to the far side of the pitch. Ron fell backtowards the opposite goal. Angelina raised the Quaffle with one hand and threwit hard to Fred, who passed to George, who passed to Harry, who passed to Ron,who dropped it.
The Slytherins, led by Malfoy, roared and screamed with laughter. Ron, whohad pelted towards the ground to catch the Quaffle before it landed, pulled out ofthe dive untidily, so that he slipped sideways on his broom, and returned toplaying height, blushing. Harry saw Fred and George exchange looks, butuncharacteristically neither of them said anything, for which he was grateful.
'Pass it on, Ron,' called Angelina, as though nothing had happened.
Ron threw the Quaffle to Alicia, who passed back to Harry, who passed toGeorge ...
'Hey, Potter, how's your scar feeling?' called Malfoy. 'Sure you don't need alie down? It must be, what, a whole week since you were in the hospital wing,that's a record for you, isn't it?'
George passed to Angelina; she reverse-passed to Harry, who had not beenexpecting it, but caught it in the very tips of his 262 HARRY POTTERfingers and passed it quickly to Ron, who lunged for it and missedby inches.
'Come on now, Ron,' said Angelina crossly, as he dived for the ground again,chasing the Quaffle. 'Pay attention.'
It would have been hard to say whether Ron's face or the Quaffle was a deeperscarlet when he again returned to playing height. Malfoy and the rest of theSlytherin team were howling with laughter.
On his third attempt, Ron caught the Quaffle; perhaps out of relief he passed iton so enthusiastically that it soared straight through Katie's outstretched handsand hit her hard in the face.
'Sorry!' Ron groaned, zooming forwards to see whether he had done anydamage.
'Get back in position, she's fine!' barked Angelina. 'But as you're passing to ateammate, do try not to knock her off her broom, won't you? We've got Bludgersfor that!'
Katie's nose was bleeding. Down below, the Slytherins were stamping theirfeet and jeering. Fred and George converged on Katie.
'Here, take this,' Fred told her, handing her something small and purple fromout of his pocket, 'it'll clear it up in no time.'
'All right,' called Angelina, 'Fred, George, go and get your bats and a Bludger.
Ron, get up to the goalposts. Harry, release the Snitch when I say so. We're goingto aim for Ron's goal, obviously.'
Harry zoomed off after the twins to fetch the Snitch.
'Ron's making a right pig's ear of things, isn't he?' muttered George, as thethree of them landed at the crate containing the balls and opened it to extract oneof the Bludgers and the Snitch.
'He's just nervous,' said Harry, 'he was fine when I was practising with himthis morning.'
'Yeah, well, I hope he hasn't peaked too soon,' said Fred gloomily.
They returned to the air. When Angelina blew her whistle, Harry released theSnitch and Fred and George let fly the Bludger. From that moment on, Harry wasbarely aware of what the others were doing. It was his job to recapture the tinyfluttering golden ball that was worth a hundred and fifty points to the Seeker'steam and doing so required enormous speed and skill. He accelerated, rolling andswerving in and out of the Chasers, the warm autumn air whipping his face, andthe distant yells of the Slytherins so much PERCY AND PADFOOT 263meaningless roaring in his ears ... but too soon, the whistle broughthim to a halt again.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Stop - stop - STOP!' screamed Angelina. 'Ron - you're not covering yourmiddle post!'
Harry looked round at Ron, who was hovering in front of the left-hand hoop,leaving the other two completely unprotected.
'Oh ... sorry ...'
'You keep shifting around while you're watching the Chasers!' said Angelina.
'Either stay in centre position until you have to move to defend a hoop, or elsecircle the hoops, but don't drift vaguely off to one side, that's how you let in thelast three goals!'
'Sorry ...' Ron repeated, his red face shining like a beacon against the brightblue sky.
'And Katie, can't you do something about that nosebleed?'
'It's just getting worse!' said Katie thickly, attempting to stem the flow withher sleeve.
Harry glanced round at Fred, who was looking anxious and checking hispockets. He saw Fred pull out something purple, examine it for a second andthen look round at Katie, evidently horror-struck.
'Well, let's try again,' said Angelina. She was ignoring the Slytherins, who hadnow set up a chant of 'Gryffindor are losers, Gryffindor are losers,' but there wasa certain rigidity about her seat on the broom nevertheless.
This time they had been flying for barely three minutes when Angelinaswhistle sounded. Harry, who had just sighted the Snitch circling the oppositegoalpost, pulled up feeling distinctly aggrieved.
'What now?' he said impatiently to Alicia, who was nearest.
'Katie,' she said shortly.
Harry turned and saw Angelina, Fred and George all flying as fast as theycould towards Katie. Harry and Alicia sped towards her, too. It was plain thatAngelina had stopped training just in time; Katie was now chalk white andcovered in blood.
'She needs the hospital wing,' said Angelina.
'We'll take her,' said Fred. 'She - er - might have swallowed a BloodBlisterpod by mistake -'
'Well, there's no point continuing with no Beaters and a Chaser 264 HARRY POTTERgone,' said Angelina glumly as Fred and George zoomed off towards the castlesupporting Katie between them. 'Come on, let's go and get changed.'
The Slytherins continued to chant as they trailed back into the changing rooms.
'How was practice?' asked Hermione rather coolly half an hour later, as Harryand Ron climbed through the portrait hole into the Gryffindor common room.
'It was -' Harry began.
'Completely lousy,' said Ron in a hollow voice, sinking into a chair besideHermione. She looked up at Ron and her frostiness seemed to melt.
'Well, it was only your first one,' she said consolingly, 'it's bound to take timeto -'
'Who said it was me who made it lousy?' snapped Ron.
'No one,' said Hermione, looking taken aback, 'I thought -'
'You thought I was bound to be rubbish?'
'No, of course I didn't! Look, you said it was lousy so 1 just -'
'I'm going to get started on some homework,' said Ron angrily and stomped offto the staircase to the boys' dormitories and vanished from sight. Hermione turnedto Harry.
'Was he lousy?'
'No,' said Harry loyally.
Hermione raised her eyebrows.
'Well, 1 suppose he could've played better,' Harry muttered, 'but it was only thefirst training session, like you said ...'

Neither Harry nor Ron seemed to make much headway with their homeworkthat night. Harry knew Ron was too preoccupied with how badly he hadperformed at Quidditch practice and he himself was having difficulty in gettingthe 'Gryffindor are losers' chant out of his head.
They spent the whole of Sunday in the common room, buried in their bookswhile the room around them filled up, then emptied. It was another clear, fine dayand most of their fellow Gryffindors spent the day out in the grounds, enjoyingwhat might well be some of the last sunshine that year. By the evening, Harry feltas though somebody had been beating his brain against the inside of his skull.

PERCY AND PADFOOT 265'You know, we probably should try and get more homework done during theweek,' Harry muttered to Ron, as they finally laid aside Professor McGonagall'slong essay on the Inanimatus Conjurus Spell and turned miserably to ProfessorSinistra's equally long and difficult essay about Jupiter's many moons.
'Yeah,' said Ron, rubbing slightly bloodshot eyes and throwing his fifthspoiled bit of parchment into the fire beside them. 'Listen ... shall we just askHermione if we can have a look at what she's done?'
Harry glanced over at her; she was sitting with Crookshanks on her lap andchatting merrily to Ginny as a pair of knitting needles flashed in midair in frontof her, now knitting a pair of shapeless elf socks.
'No,' he said heavily, 'you know she won't let us.'
And so they worked on while the sky outside the windows became steadilydarker. Slowly, the crowd in the common room began to thin again. At half pasteleven, Hermione wandered over to them, yawning.
'Nearly done?'
'No,' said Ron shortly.
'Jupiter's biggest moon is Ganymede, not Callisto,' she said, pointing overRon's shoulder at a line in his Astronomy essay, 'and it's lo that's got thevolcanoes.'
Thanks,' snarled Ron, scratching out the offending sentences.
'Sorry, I only -'
'Yeah, well, if you've just come over here to criticise -'
'Ron -'
'I haven't got time to listen to a sermon, all right, Hermione, I'm up to myneck in it here -'
'No - look!'
Hermione was pointing to the nearest window. Harry and Ron both lookedover. A handsome screech owl was standing on the windowsill, gazing into theroom at Ron.
'Isn't that Hermes?' said Hermione, sounding amazed.
'Blimey, it is!' said Ron quietly, throwing down his quill and getting to hisfeet. 'What's Percy writing to me for?'
He crossed to the window and opened it; Hermes flew inside, landed on Ron'sessay and held out a leg to which a letter was 266 HARRY POTTERattached. Ron took the letter off it and the owl departed at once, leaving inkyfootprints across Ron's drawing of the moon lo.
That's definitely Percy's handwriting,' said Ron, sinking back into his chairand staring at the words on the outside of the scroll: Ronald Weasley, GryffindorHouse, Hogwarts. He looked up at the other two.
'What d'you reckon?'
'Open it!' said Hermione eagerly, and Harry nodded.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Ron unrolled the scroll and began to read. The further down the parchmenthis eyes travelled, the more pronounced became his scowl. When he hadfinished reading, he looked disgusted. He thrust the letter at Harry andHermione, who leaned towards each other to read it together:

Dear Ron,I have only just heard (from no less a person than the Minister for Magic himself, whohas it from your new teacher, Professor Umbridge) that you have become a Hogwartsprefect.

1 was most pleasantly surprised when I heard this news and must firstly offer mycongratulations. 1 must admit that I have always been afraid that you would take whatwe might call the 'Fred and George' route, rather than following in my footsteps, so youcan imagine my feelings on hearing you have stopped flouting authority and havedecided to shoulder some real responsibility.

But I want to give you more than congratulations, Ron, I want to give you someadvice, which is why I am sending this at night rather than by the usual morning post.

Hopefully, you will be able to read this away from prying eyes and avoid awkwardquestions.

From something the Minister let slip when telling me you are now a prefect, I gatherthat you are still seeing a lot of Harry Potter. 1 must tell you, Ron, that nothing could putyou in danger of losing your badge more than continued fraternisation with that boy.

Yes, I am sure you are surprised to hear this - no doubt you will say that Potter hasalways been Dumbledore's favourite — but I feel bound to tell you that Dumbledore maynot be in charge at Hogwarts much longer and the people who count have a verydifferent - and probably more accurate - view of Potter's behaviour. I shall say no morehere, but if you look at the Daily Prophet PERCY AND PADFOOT 267tomorrow you will get a good idea of the way the wind is blowing — and see if you canspot yours truly!

Seriously, Ron, you do not want to be tarred with the same brush as Potter, it could bevery damaging to your future prospects, and I am talking here about life after school, too.

As you must be aware, given that our father escorted him to court, Potter had adisciplinary hearing this summer in front of the whole Wizengamot and he did not comeout of it looking too good. He got off on a mere technicality, if you ask me, and many ofthe people I've spoken to remain convinced of his guilt.

It may be that you are afraid to sever ties with Potter - / know that he can beunbalanced and, for all I know, violent - but if you have any worries about this, or havespotted anything else in Potter's behaviour that is troubling you, I urge you to speak toDolores Umbridge, a truly delightful woman who I know will be only too happy to adviseyou.

This leads me to my other bit of advice. As I have hinted above, Dumbledore's regimeat Hogwarts may soon be over. Your loyalty, Ron, should be not to him, but to the schooland the Ministry. I am very sorry to hear that, so far, Professor Umbridge is encounteringvery little co-operation from staff as she strives to make those necessary changes withinHogwarts that the Ministry so ardently desires (although she should find this easier fromnext week — again, see the Daily Prophet tomorrow!). I shall say only this - a student whoshows himself willing to help Professor Umbridge now may be very well-placed for HeadBoyship in a couple of years!

I am sorry that I was unable to see more of you over the summer. It pains me tocriticise our parents, but I am afraid i can no longer live under their roof while theyremain mixed up with the dangerous crowd around Dumbledore. (If you are writing toMother at any point, you might tell her that a certain Sturgis Podmore, who is a greatfriend of Dumbledore's, has recently been sent to Azkabanfor trespass at the Ministry.

Perhaps that will open their eyes to the kind of petty criminals with whom they arecurrently rubbing shoulders.) I count myself very lucky to have escaped the stigma ofassociation with such people - the Minister really could not be more gracious to me —and 1 do hope, Ron, that you will 268 HARRY POTTERnot allow family ties to blind you to the misguided nature of our parents' beliefs andactions, either. I sincerely hope that, in time, they will realise how mistaken they were andI shall, of course, be ready to accept a full apology when that day comes.

Please think over what I have said most carefully, particularly the bit about HarryPotter, and congratulations again on becoming prefect.
Your brother,PercyHarry looked up at Ron.
'Well,' he said, trying to sound as though he found the whole thing a joke, 'ifyou want to - er - what is it?' - he checked Percy's letter - 'Oh yeah - "sever ties" with me, I swear 1 won't get violent.'
'Give it back,' said Ron, holding out his hand. 'He is -' Ron said jerkily, tearingPercy's letter in half 'the world's -' he tore it into quarters 'biggest -' he tore it intoeighths 'git.' He threw the pieces into the fire.
'Come on, we've got to get this finished sometime before dawn,' he saidbriskly to Harry, pulling Professor Sinistra's essay back towards him.
Hermione was looking at Ron with an odd expression on her face.
'Oh, give them here,' she said abruptly.
'What?' said Ron.
'Give them to me, I'll look through them and correct them,' she said.
'Are you serious? Ah, Hermione, you're a life-saver,' said Ron, 'what can I -?'
'What you can say is, "We promise we'll never leave our homework this lateagain,"' she said, holding out both hands for their essays, but she looked slightlyamused all the same.
Thanks a million, Hermione,' said Harry weakly, passing over his essay andsinking back into his armchair, rubbing his eyes.
It was now past midnight and the common room was deserted but for the threeof them and Crookshanks. The only sound was that of Hermione's quillscratching out sentences here and there on their essays and the ruffle of pages asshe checked various facts
PERCY AND PADFOOT 269in the reference books strewn across the table. Harry was exhausted. He also feltan odd, sick, empty feeling in his stomach that had nothing to do with tirednessand everything to do with the letter now curling blackly in the heart of the fire.
He knew that half the people inside Hogwarts thought him strange, even mad;
he knew that the Daily Prophet had been making snide allusions to him formonths, but there was something about seeing it written down like that in Percyswriting, about knowing that Percy was advising Ron to drop him and even to telltales about him to Umbridge, that made his situation real to him as nothing elsehad. He had known Percy for four years, had stayed in his house during thesummer holidays, shared a tent with him during the Quidditch World Cup, hadeven been awarded full marks by him in the second task of the TriwizardTournament last year, yet now, Percy thought him unbalanced and possiblyviolent.
And with a surge of sympathy for his godfather, Harry thought Sirius wasprobably the only person he knew who could really understand how he felt at themoment, because Sirius was in the same situation. Nearly everyone in thewizarding world thought Sirius a dangerous murderer and a great Voldemortsupporter and he had had to live with that knowledge for fourteen years ...
Harry blinked. He had just seen something in the fire that could not have beenthere. It had flashed into sight and vanished immediately. No ... it could not havebeen ... he had imagined it because he had been thinking about Sirius ...

'OK, write that down,' Hermione said to Ron, pushing his essay and a sheetcovered in her own writing back to Ron, 'then add this conclusion I've written foryou.'
'Hermione, you are honestly the most wonderful person I've ever met,' saidRon weakly, 'and if I'm ever rude to you again -'
'- I'll know you're back to normal,' said Hermione. 'Harry, yours is OK exceptfor this bit at the end, I think you must have misheard Professor Sinistra,Europa's covered in ice, not mice -Harry?'
Harry had slid off his chair on to his knees and was now crouching on thesinged and threadbare hearthrug, gazing into the flames.
'Er - Harry?' said Ron uncertainly. 'Why are you down there?'

270 HARRY POTTER'Because I've just seen Sirius's head in the fire,' said Harry.
He spoke quite calmly; after all, he had seen Sirius's head in this very fire theprevious year and talked to it, too; nevertheless, he could not be sure that he hadreally seen it this time ... it had vanished so quickly ...
'Sirius's head?' Hermione repeated. 'You mean like when he wanted to talk toyou during the Triwizard Tournament? But he wouldn't do that now, it would betoo - Sirius!'
She gasped, gazing at the fire; Ron dropped his quill. There in the middle ofthe dancing flames sat Sirius's head, long dark hair falling around his grinningface.
'1 was starting to think you'd go to bed before everyone else had disappeared,' he said. 'I've been checking every hour.'
'You've been popping into the fire every hour?' Harry said, half-laughing.
'Just for a few seconds to check if the coast was clear.'
'But what if you'd been seen?' said Hermione anxiously.
'Well, 1 think a girl - first-year, by the look of her - might've got a glimpse ofme earlier, but don't worry' Sirius said hastily, as Hermione clapped a hand to hermouth, 'I was gone the moment she looked back at me and I'll bet she just thoughtI was an oddly-shaped log or something.'
'But, Sirius, this is taking an awful risk -' Hermione began.
'You sound like Molly,' said Sirius. This was the only way I could come upwith of answering Harrys letter without resorting to a code - and codes arebreakable.'
At the mention of Harry's letter, Hermione and Ron both turned to stare at him.
'You didn't say you'd written to Sirius!' said Hermione accusingly.
T forgot,' said Harry, which was perfectly true; his meeting with Cho in theOwlery had driven everything before it out of his mind. 'Don't look at me likethat, Hermione, there was no way anyone would have got secret information outof it, was there, Sirius?'
'No, it was very good,' said Sirius, smiling. 'Anyway, we'd better be quick, justin case we're disturbed - your scar.'
'What about -?' Ron began, but Hermione interrupted him.
. 'We'll tell you afterwards. Go on, Sirius.'

PERCY AND PADFOOT 271'Well, I know it can't be fun when it hurts, but we don't think it's anything toreally worry about. It kept aching all last year, didn't it?'
'Yeah, and Dumbledore said it happened whenever Voldemort was feeling apowerful emotion,' said Harry, ignoring, as usual, Ron and Hermione's winces.
'So maybe he was just, I dunno, really angry or something the night I had thatdetention.'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Well, now he's back it's bound to hurt more often,' said Sirius.
'So you don't think it had anything to do with Umbridge touching me when Iwas in detention with her?' Harry asked.
'I doubt it,' said Sirius. 'I know her by reputation and I'm sure she's no DeathEater -'
'She's foul enough to be one,' said Harry darkly, and Ron and Hermionenodded vigorously in agreement.
'Yes, but the world isn't split into good people and Death Eaters,' said Siriuswith a wry smile. 'I know she's a nasty piece of work, though — you should hearRemus talk about her.'
'Does Lupin know her?' asked Harry quickly, remembering Umbridge'scomments about dangerous half-breeds during her first lesson.
'No,' said Sirius, 'but she drafted a bit of anti-werewolf legislation two yearsago that makes it almost impossible for him to get a job.'
Harry remembered how much shabbier Lupin looked these days and hisdislike of Umbridge deepened even further.
'What's she got against werewolves?" said Hermione angrily.
'Scared of them, I expect,' said Sirius, smiling at her indignation. 'Apparentlyshe loathes part-humans; she campaigned to have merpeople rounded up andtagged last year, too. Imagine wasting your time and energy persecutingmerpeople when there are little toerags like Kreacher on the loose.'
Ron laughed but Hermione looked upset.
'Sirius!' she said reproachfully. 'Honestly, if you made a bit of an effort withKreacher, I'm sure he'd respond. After all, you are the only member of his familyhe's got left, and Professor Dumbledore said -'
'So, what are Umbridge's lessons like?' Sirius interrupted. 'Is she training youall to kill half-breeds?'

272 HARRY POTTER'No,' said Harry, ignoring Hermione's affronted look at being cut off in herdefence of Kreacher. 'She's not letting us use magic at all!'
'All we do is read the stupid textbook,' said Ron.
'Ah, well, that figures,' said Sirius. 'Our information Irom inside the Ministryis that Fudge doesn't want you trained in combat.'
'Trained in combat!' repeated Harry incredulously. 'What does he think we'redoing here, forming some sort of wizard army?'
That's exactly what he thinks you're doing,' said Sirius, 'or, rather, that'sexactly what he's afraid Dumbledore's doing - forming his own private army,with which he will be able to take on the Ministry of Magic.'
There was a pause at this, then Ron said, That's the most stupid thing I've everheard, including all the stuff that Luna Lovegood comes out with.'
'So we're being prevented from learning Defence Against the Dark Artsbecause Fudge is scared we'll use spells against the Ministry?' said Hermione,looking furious.
'Yep,' said Sirius. 'Fudge thinks Dumbledore will stop at nothing to seizepower. He's getting more paranoid about Dumbledore by the day. It's a matter oftime before he has Dumbledore arrested on some trumped-up charge.'
This reminded Harry of Percy's letter.
'D'you know if there's going to be anything about Dumbledore in the DailyProphet tomorrow? Ron's brother Percy reckons there will be -'
'I don't know,' said Sirius, T haven't seen anyone from the Order all weekend,they're all busy. It's just been Kreacher and me hereThere was a definite note of bitterness in Sirius's voice.

'So you haven't had any news about Hagrid, either?'
'Ah ...' said Sirius, 'well, he was supposed to be back by now, no one's surewhat's happened to him.' Then, seeing their stricken faces, he added quickly, 'ButDumbledore's not worried, so don't you three get yourselves in a state; I'm sureHagrid's fine.'
'But if he was supposed to be back by now ...' said Hermione in a small,anxious voice.
'Madame Maxime was with him, we've been in touch with her and she saysthey got separated on the journey home - but there's PERCY AND PADFOOT 273nothing to suggest he's hurt or - well, nothing to suggest he's not perfectly OK.'
Unconvinced, Harry, Ron and Hermione exchanged worried looks.
'Listen, don't go asking too many questions about Hagrid,' said Sirius hastily,'it'll just draw even more attention to the fact that he's not back and I knowDumbledore doesn't want that. Hagrid's tough, he'll be OK.' And when they didnot appear cheered by this, Sirius added, 'When's your next Hogsmeadeweekend, anyway? I was thinking, we got away with the dog disguise at thestation, didn't we? I thought I could —'
'NO!' said Harry and Hermione together, very loudly.
'Sirius, didn't you see the Daily Prophet?' said Hermione anxiously.
'Oh, that,' said Sirius, grinning, 'they're always guessing where I am, theyhaven't really got a clue -'
'Yeah, but we think this time they have,' said Harry. 'Something Malfoy saidon the train made us think he knew it was you, and his father was on theplatform, Sirius - you know, Lucius Malfoy - so don't come up here, whateveryou do. If Malfoy recognises you again -'
'All right, all right, I've got the point,' said Sirius. He looked most displeased.
'Just an idea, thought you might like to get together.'
'I would, I just don't want you chucked back in Azkaban!' said Harry.
There was a pause in which Sirius looked out of the fire at Harry, a creasebetween his sunken eyes.
'You're less like your father than I thought,' he said finally, a definite coolnessin his voice. The risk would've been what made it fun for James.'
'Look -'
'Well, I'd better get going, I can hear Kreacher coming down the stairs,' saidSirius, but Harry was sure he was lying. Til write to tell you a time I can make itback into the fire, then, shall I? If you can stand to risk it?'
There was a tiny pop, and the place where Sirius's head had been wasflickering flame once more.

— CHAPTER FIFTEEN —

Hogwarts HighInquisitorThey had expected to have to combHermione's Daily Prophet carefullynext morning to find the article Percyhad mentioned in his letter. However,the departing delivery owl had barelycleared the top of the milk jug whenHermione let out a huge gasp andflattened the newspaper to reveal alarge photograph of DoloresUmbridge, smiling widely andblinking slowly at them from beneaththe headline.
MINISTRY SEEKS EDUCATIONALREFORMDOLORES UMBR1DGE APPOINTEDFIRST EVER HIGH INQUISITOR'Umbridge - "High Inquisitor"?' saidHarry darkly, his half-eatenpiece of toast slipping from hisfingers. 'What does that mean?'

Hermione read aloud:
'In a surprise move last night the Ministryof Magic passed new legislation givingitself an unprecedented level of control atHogwarts School of Witchcraft andWizardry.
'"The Minister has been growinguneasy about goings-on at Hogwarts forsome time," said junior Assistant to theMinister, Percy Weasley. "He is nowresponding to concerns voiced by anxiousparents, who feel the school may bemoving in a direction they do not approveof."
'This is not the first time in recentweeks that the Minister, Cornelius Fudge,has used new laws to effect improvementsat the

THE HOGWARTS HIGH INQUISITOR 275wizarding school. As recently as 30 August, Educational Decree Number Twenty-twowas passed, to ensure that, in the event of the current Headmaster being unable toihprovide a candidate for a teaching post, the Ministry should select an appropriate person.
'"That's how Dolores Umbridge came to be appointed to the teaching staff at Hogwarts," said Weasley last night. "Dumbledore couldn't find anyone so the Minister put inUmbridge, and of course, she's been an immediate success —"' he's been a WHAT?' said Harry loudly.
'Wait, there's more,' said Hermione grimly.
'"— an immediate success, totally revolutionising the teaching of Defence Against theDark Arts and providing the Minister with on-the-ground feedback about what's reallyhappening at Hogwarts."
'It is this last function that the Ministry has now formalised with the passing ofEducational Decree Number Twenty-three, which creates the new position of HogwartsHigh Inquisitor.
'"This is an exciting new phase in the Minister's plan to get to grips with what someare calling the falling standards at Hogwarts," said Weasley. "The Inquisitor will havepowers to inspect her fellow educators and make sure that they are coming up to scratch.
Professor Umbridge has been offered this position in addition to her own teaching postand we are delighted to say that she has accepted."
'The Ministry's new moves have received enthusiastic support from parents of studentsat Hogwarts.
"T feel much easier in my mind now that I know Dumbledore is being subjected to fairand objective evaluation," said Mr Lucius Malfoy, 41, speaking from his Wiltshiremansion last night. "Many of us with our children's best interests at heart have beenconcerned about some of Dumbledore's eccentric decisions in the last few years and areglad to know that the Ministry is keeping an eye on the situation."
'Among those eccentric decisions are undoubtedly the controversial staff appointmentspreviously described in this newspaper, which have included the employment of werewolfRemus Lupin, half-giant Rubeus Hagrid and delusional ex-Auror, "Mad-Eye" Moody.

276 HARRY POTTER'Rumours abound, of course, that Albus Dumbledore, once Supreme Mugwump of theInternational Confederation of Wizards and Chief Warlock of the Wizengamot, is nolonger up to the task of managing the prestigious school of Hogwarts.
'"I think the appointment of the Inquisitor is a first step towards ensuring thatHogwarts has a headmaster in whom we can all repose our confidence," said a Ministryinsider last night.
'Wizengamot elders Griselda Marchbanks and Tiberius Ogden have resigned inprotest at the introduction of the post of Inquisitor to Hogwarts.
'"Hogwarts is a school, not an outpost of Cornelius Fudge's office," said MadamMarchbanks. "This is a further, disgusting attempt to discredit Albus Dumbledore."

'(For a full account of Madam Marchbanks's alleged links to . subversive goblin groups, turn to page seventeen.)'
Hermione finished reading and looked across the table at the other two.
'So now we know how we ended up with Umbridge! Fudge passed this"Educational Decree" and forced her on us! And now he's given her the power toinspect the other teachers!' Hermione was breathing fast and her eyes were verybright. 'I can't believe this. It's outrageous]'
'I know it is,' said Harry. He looked down at his right hand, clenched on the tabletop,and saw the faint white outline of the words Umbridge had forced him to cutinto his skin.
But a grin was unfurling on Ron's face.
'What?' said Harry and Hermione together, staring at him.
'Oh, I can't wait to see McGonagall inspected,' said Ron happily. 'Umbridge won'tknow what's hit her.'
'Well, come on,' said Hermione, jumping up, 'we'd better get going, if she'sinspecting Binns's class we don't want to be late ...'
But Professor Umbridge was not inspecting their History of Magic lesson, whichwas just as dull as the previous Monday, nor was she in Snape's dungeon when theyarrived for double Potions, where Harry's moonstone essay was handed back to himwith a large, spiky black 'D' scrawled in an upper corner.

THE Hoc WARTS HIGH INQUISITOR 277'I have awarded you the grades you would have received if you presented thiswork in your OWL,' said Snape with a smirk, as he swept among them, passingback their homework. This should give you a realistic idea of what to expect inthe examination.'
Snape reached the front of the class and turned on his heel to face them.
The general standard of this homework was abysmal. Most of you would havefailed had this been your examination. I expect to see a great deal more effort forthis weeks essay on the various varieties of venom antidotes, or I shall have tostart handing out detentions to those dunces who get a "D'VHe smirked as Malfoy sniggered and said in a carrying whisper, 'Some peoplegot a "D"? Ha!'
Harry realised that Hermione was looking sideways to see what grade he hadreceived; he slid his moonstone essay back into his bag as quickly as possible,feeling that he would rather keep that information private.
Determined not to give Snape an excuse to fail him this lesson, Harry read andreread every line of instructions on the blackboard at least three times beforeacting on them. His Strengthening Solution was not precisely the clear turquoiseshade of Hermione's but it was at least blue rather than pink, like Neville's, andhe delivered a flask of it to Snape's desk at the end of the lesson with a feeling ofmingled defiance and relief.
'Well, that wasn't as bad as last week, was it?' said Hermione, as they climbedthe steps out of the dungeon and made their way across the Entrance Halltowards lunch. 'And the homework didn't go too badly, either, did it?'
When neither Ron nor Harry answered, she pressed on, 'I mean, all right, 1didn't expect the top grade, not if he's marking to OWL standard, but a pass isquite encouraging at this stage, wouldn't you say?'
Harry made a non-committal noise in his throat.
'Of course, a lot can happen between now and the exam, we've got plenty oftime to improve, but the grades we're getting now are a sort of baseline, aren'tthey? Something we can build on ..."

278 HARRY POTTERThey sat down together at the Gryffmdor table.
'Obviously, I'd have been thrilled if I'd got an "O" -'
'Hermione,' said Ron sharply 'if you want to know what grades we got, ask.' : -
'
'I don't - I didn't mean - well, if you want to tell me -' ..-
'I got a "P",' said Ron, ladling soup into his bowl. 'Happy?'
'Well, that's nothing to be ashamed of,' said Fred, who had just arrived at thetable with George and Lee Jordan and was sitting down on Harry's right. 'Nothingwrong with a good healthy "P".'
'But,' said Hermione, 'doesn't "P" stand for ..."
'"Poor", yeah,' said Lee Jordan. 'Still, better than "D", isn't it? "Dreadful"?'
Harry felt his face grow warm and faked a small coughing fit over his roll.
When he emerged from this he was sorry to find that Hermione was still in fullflow about OWL grades.
'So top grade's "O" for "Outstanding",' she was saying, 'and then there's "A" -'
'No, "E",' George corrected her, '"E" for "Exceeds Expectations". And I'vealways thought Fred and I should've got "E" in everything, because we exceededexpectations just by turning up for the exams.'
They all laughed except Hermione, who ploughed on, 'So, after "E" it's "A" for"Acceptable", and that's the last pass grade, isn't it?'
'Yep,' said Fred, dunking an entire roll in his soup, transferring it to his mouthand swallowing it whole.
Then you get "P" for "Poor"-' Ron raised both his arms in mock celebration -
'and "D" for "Dreadful".'
'And then "T",' George reminded him.
"T"?' asked Hermione, looking appalled. 'Even lower than a "D"? What onearth does "T" stand for?'
"Troll",' said George promptly.
Harry laughed again, though he was not sure whether or not George wasjoking. He imagined trying to conceal from Hermione that he had received T's inall his OWLs and immediately resolved to work harder from now on.
'You lot had an inspected lesson yet?' Fred asked them.
'No,' said Hermione at once. 'Have you?'
'Just now, before lunch,' said George. 'Charms.'

THE Hoc WARTS HIGH INQUISITOR 279'What was it like?' Harry and Hermione asked together.
Fred shrugged.
'Not that bad. Umbridge just lurked in the corner making notes on aclipboard. You know what Flitwick's like, he treated her like a guest, didn'tseem to bother him at all. She didn't say much. Asked Alicia a couple ofquestions about what the classes are normally like, Alicia told her they werereally good, that was it.'
'I can't see old Flitwick getting marked down,' said George, 'he usually getseveryone through their exams all right.'
'Who've you got this afternoon?' Fred asked Harry.
Trelawney -'
'A "T" if ever I saw one.'
'- and Umbridge herself.'
'Well, be a good boy and keep your temper with Umbridge today' saidGeorge. 'Angelina'll do her nut if you miss any more Quidditch practices.'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

But Harry did not have to wait for Defence Against the Dark Arts to meetProfessor Umbridge. He was pulling out his dream diary in a seat at the veryback of the shadowy Divination room when Ron elbowed him in the ribs and,looking round, he saw Professor Umbridge emerging through the trapdoor in thefloor. The class, which had been talking cheerily fell silent at once. The abruptfall in the noise level made Professor Trelawney, who had been wafting abouthanding out copies of The Dream Oracle, look round.

'Good afternoon, Professor Trelawney,' said Professor Umbridge with herwide smile. 'You received my note, I trust? Giving the time and date of yourinspection?'

Professor Trelawney nodded curtly and, looking very disgruntled, turned herback on Professor Umbridge and continued to give out books. Still smiling,Professor Umbridge grasped the back of the nearest armchair and pulled it to thefront of the class so that it was a few inches behind Professor Trelawneys seat.

She then sat down, took her clipboard from her flowery bag and looked upexpectantly, waiting for the class to begin.

Professor Trelawney pulled her shawls tight about her with slightly tremblinghands and surveyed the class through her hugely magnifying lenses.

280 HARRY POTTER'We shall be continuing our study of prophetic dreams today,' she said in abrave attempt at her usual mystic tones, though her voice shook slightly. 'Divideinto pairs, please, and interpret each other's latest night-time visions with the aidof the Oracle.'

She made as though to sweep back to her seat, saw Professor Umbridge sittingright beside it, and immediately veered left towards Parvati and Lavender, whowere already deep in discussion about Parvati's most recent dream.

Harry opened his copy of The Dream Oracle, watching Umbridge covertly.

She was already making notes on her clipboard. After a few minutes she got toher ieet and began to pace the room in Trelawney's wake, listening to herconversations with students and posing questions here and there. Harry bent hishead hurriedly over his book.

Think of a dream, quick,' he told Ron, 'in case the old toad comes our way.'

'I did it last time,' Ron protested, 'it's your turn, you tell me one.'

'Oh, I dunno ...' said Harry desperately, who could not remember dreaminganything at all over the last few days. 'Lets say I dreamed I was ... drowningSnape in my cauldron. Yeah, that'll do ...'

Ron chortled as he opened his Dream Oracle.

'OK, we've got to add your age to the date you had the dream, the number ofletters in the subject ... would that be "drowning" or "cauldron" or "Snape"?'

'It doesn't matter, pick any of them,' said Harry, chancing a glance behind him.

Professor Umbridge was now standing at Professor Trelawneys shoulder makingnotes while the Divination teacher questioned Neville about his dream diary.

'What night did you dream this again?' Ron said, immersed in calculations.

'I dunno, last night, whenever you like,' Harry told him, trying to listen to whatUmbridge was saying to Professor Trelawney. They were only a table away fromhim and Ron now. Professor Umbridge was making another note on her clipboardand Professor Trelawney was looking extremely put out.

'Now,' said Umbridge, looking up at Trelawney, 'you've been in this post howlong, exactly?'

THE HOGWARTS HIGH INQUISITOR 281Professor Trelawney scowled at her, arms crossed and shoulders hunched asthough wishing to protect herself as much as possible from the indignity of theinspection. After a slight pause in which she seemed to decide that the questionwas not so offensive that she could reasonably ignore it, she said in a deeplyresentful tone, 'Nearly sixteen years.'

'Quite a period,' said Professor Umbridge, making a note on her clipboard. 'Soit was Professor Dumbledore who appointed you?'
That's right,' said Professor Trelawney shortly.
Professor Umbridge made another note.
'And you are a great-great-granddaughter of the celebrated Seer CassandraTrelawney?'
'Yes,' said Professor Trelawney, holding her head a little higher.
Another note on the clipboard.
'But 1 think - correct me if I am mistaken - that you are the first in yourfamily since Cassandra to be possessed of Second Sight?'
'These things often skip - er - three generations,' said Professor Trelawney.
Professor Umbridge's toadlike smile widened.
'Of course,' she said sweetly, making yet another note. 'Well, if you could justpredict something for me, then?' And she looked up enquiringly, still smiling.
Professor Trelawney stiffened as though unable to believe her ears. 'I don'tunderstand you,' she said, clutching convulsively at the shawl around herscrawny neck.
'I'd like you to make a prediction for me,' said Professor Umbridge veryclearly.
Harry and Ron were not the only people now watching and listening sneakilyfrom behind their books. Most of the class were staring transfixed at ProfessorTrelawney as she drew herself up to her full height, her beads and banglesclinking.
The Inner Eye does not See upon command!' she said in scandalised tones.
'I see,' said Professor Umbridge softly, making yet another note on herclipboard.
'I - but - but ... wait!' said Professor Trelawney suddenly, in an attempt at herusual ethereal voice, though the mystical effect was 282 HARRY POTTERruined somewhat by the way it was shaking with anger. 'I ... I think I do seesomething ... something that concerns you ... why, 1 sense something ... something dark ... some grave peril ...'
Professor Trelawney pointed a shaking finger at Professor Umbridge whocontinued to smile blandly at her, eyebrows raised.
'I am afraid ... I am afraid that you are in grave danger!' Professor Trelawneyfinished dramatically.
There was a pause. Professor Umbridge surveyed Professor Trelawney.
'Right,' she said softly, scribbling on her clipboard once more. 'Well, if that'sreally the best you can do ...'
She turned away, leaving Professor Trelawney standing rooted to the spot, herchest heaving. Harry caught Ron's eye and knew that Ron was thinking exactlythe same as he was: they both knew that Professor Trelawney was an old fraud,but on the other hand, they loathed Umbridge so much that they felt very much onTrelawneys side - until she swooped down on them a few seconds later, that is.
'Well?' she said, snapping her long fingers under Harry's nose,uncharacteristically brisk. 'Let me see the start you've made on your dream diary,please.'
And by the time she had interpreted Harrys dreams at the top of her voice (allof which, even the ones that involved eating porridge, apparently foretold agruesome and early death), he was feeling much less sympathetic towards her. Allthe while, Professor Umbridge stood a few feet away, making notes on thatclipboard, and when the bell rang she descended the silver ladder first and waswaiting for them all when they reached their Defence Against the Dark Artslesson ten minutes later.

She was humming and smiling to herself when they entered the room. Harryand Ron told Hermione, who had been in Arithmancy, exactly what had happenedin Divination while they all took out their copies of Defensive Magical Theory,but before Hermione could ask any questions Professor Umbridge had calledthem all to order and silence fell.
'Wands away' she instructed them all with a smile, and those people who hadbeen hopeful enough to take them out, sadly returned them to their bags. 'As wefinished Chapter One last
THE HOG WARTS HIGH INQUISITOR 283lesson, I would like you all to turn to page nineteen today and commence"Chapter Two, Common Defensive Theories and their Derivation". There willbe no need to talk.'
Still smiling her wide, self-satisfied smile, she sat down at her desk. Theclass gave an audible sigh as it turned, as one, to page nineteen. Harry wondereddully whether there were enough chapters in the book to keep them readingthrough all this year's lessons and was on the point of checking the contentspage when he noticed that Hermione had her hand in the air again.
Professor Umbridge had noticed, too, and what was more, she seemed tohave worked out a strategy for just such an eventuality. Instead of trying topretend she had not noticed Hermione she got to her feet and walked around thefront row of desks until they were face to face, then she bent down andwhispered, so that the rest of the class could not hear, 'What is it this time, MissGranger?'
'I've already read Chapter Two,' said Hermione.
'Well then, proceed to Chapter Three.'
'I've read that too. I've read the whole book.'
Professor Umbndge blinked but recovered her poise almost instantly.
'Well, then, you should be able to tell me what Slinkhard says about counterjinxesin Chapter Fifteen.'
'He says that counter-jinxes are improperly named,' said Hermione promptly.
'He says "counter-jinx" is just a name people give their jinxes when they want tomake them sound more acceptable.'
Professor Umbridge raised her eyebrows and Harry knew she was impressed,against her will.
'But I disagree,' Hermione continued.
Professor Umbridge's eyebrows rose a little higher and her gaze becamedistinctly colder.
'You disagree?' she repeated.
'Yes, I do,' said Hermione, who, unlike Umbridge, was not whispering, butspeaking in a clear, carrying voice that had by now attracted the attention of therest of the class. 'Mr Slinkhard doesn't like jinxes, does he? But. 1 think they canbe very useful when they're used defensively.'
'Oh, you do, do you?' said Professor Umbridge, forgetting to whisper andstraightening up. 'Well, I'm afraid it is Mr Slinkhard's 284 HARRY POTTERopinion, and not yours, that matters within this classroom, Miss Granger.'
'But -' Hermione began.
That is enough,' said Professor Umbridge. She walked back to the front of theclass and stood before them, all the jauntiness she had shown at the beginning ofthe lesson gone. 'Miss Granger, 1 am going to take five points from Gryffindorhouse.'
There was an outbreak of muttering at this. :
'What for?' said Harry angrily.
'Don't you get involved!' Hermione whispered urgently to him.

'For disrupting my class with pointless interruptions,' said Professor Umbridgesmoothly. 'I am here to teach you using a Ministry-approved method that does notinclude inviting students to give their opinions on matters about which theyunderstand very little. Your previous teachers in this subject may have allowedyou more licence, but as none of them - with the possible exception of ProfessorQuirrell, who did at least appear to have restricted himself to age-appropriatesubjects - would have passed a Ministry inspection -'

'Yeah, Quirrell was a great teacher,' said Harry loudly, 'there was just thatminor drawback of him having Lord Voldemort sticking out of the back of hishead.'

This pronouncement was followed by one of the loudest silences Harry hadever heard. Then -

'I think another week's detentions would do you some good, Mr Potter,' saidUmbridge sleekly.

*The cut on the back of Harry's hand had barely healed and, by the followingmorning, it was bleeding again. He did not complain during the evening'sdetention; he was determined not to give Umbridge the satisfaction; over and overagain he wrote I must not tell lies and not a sound escaped his lips, though the cutdeepened with every letter.

The very worst part of this second week's worth of detentions was, just asGeorge had predicted, Angelinas reaction. She cornered him just as he arrived atthe Gryffindor table for breakfast on Tuesday and shouted so loudly thatProfessor McGonagall came sweeping down upon the pair of them from the stafftable.

THE HOGWARTS HIGH INQUISITOR 285'Miss Johnson, how dare you make such a racket in the Great Hall! Fivepoints from Gryffindor!'

'But Professor - he's gone and landed himself in detention again -

'What's this, Potter?' said Professor McGonagall sharply, rounding on Harry.

'Detention? From whom?'

'From Professor Umbridge,' muttered Harry, not meeting ProfessorMcGonagalls beady, square-framed eyes.

'Are you telling me,' she said, lowering her voice so that the group of curiousRavenclaws behind them could not hear, 'that after the warning I gave you lastMonday you lost your temper in Professor Umbridge's class again?'

'Yes,' Harry muttered, speaking to the floor.

'Potter, you must get a grip on yourself! You are heading for serious trouble!

Another five points from Gryffindor!'

'But - what -? Professor, no!' Harry said, furious at this injustice, 'I'm alreadybeing punished by her, why do you have to take points as well?'

'Because detentions do not appear to have any effect on you whatsoever!' saidProfessor McGonagall tartly. 'No, not another word of complaint, Potter! And asfor you, Miss Johnson, you will confine your shouting matches to the Quidditchpitch in future or risk losing the team captaincy!'

Professor McGonagall strode back towards the staff table. Angelina gaveHarry a look of deepest disgust and stalked away, upon which he flung himselfon to the bench beside Ron, fuming.

'She's taken points off Gryffindor because I'm having my hand sliced openevery night! How is that fair, how?'

'I know, mate,' said Ron sympathetically, tipping bacon on to Harry's plate,'she's bang out of order.'

Hermione, however, merely rustled the pages of her Daily Prophet and saidnothing.

'You think McGonagall was right, do you?' said Harry angrily to the pictureof Cornelius Fudge obscuring Hermione's face.

'I wish she hadn't taken points from you, but I think she's right to warn younot to lose your temper with Umbridge,' said Hermione's voice, while Fudgegesticulated forcefully from the front page, clearly giving some kind of speech.

286 HARRY POTTERHarry did not speak to Hermione all through Charms, but when they enteredTransfiguration he forgot about being cross with her. Professor Umbridge and herclipboard were sitting in a corner and the sight of her drove the memory ofbreakfast right out of his head.
'Excellent,' whispered Ron, as they sat down in their usual seats. 'Let's seeUmbridge get what she deserves.'
Professor McGonagall marched into the room without giving the slightestindication that she knew Professor Umbridge was there.
That will do,' she said and silence fell immediately. 'Mr Finnigan, kindly comehere and hand back the homework - Miss Brown, please take this box of mice - don't be silly, girl, they won't hurt you - and hand one to each student -'
'Hem, hem,' said Professor Umbridge, employing the same silly little coughshe had used to interrupt Dumbledore on the first night of term. ProfessorMcGonagall ignored her. Seamus handed back Harry's essay; Harry took itwithout looking at him and saw, to his relief, that he had managed an 'A'.
'Right then, everyone, listen closely - Dean Thomas, if you do that to themouse again I shall put you in detention - most of you have now successfullyVanished your snails and even those who were left with a certain amount of shellhave got the gist of the spell. Today, we shall be -'
'Hem, hem,' said Professor Umbridge.
'Yes?' said Professor McGonagall, turning round, her eyebrows so closetogether they seemed to form one long, severe line.
'1 was just wondering, Professor, whether you received my note telling you ofthe date and time of your inspec—'
'Obviously I received it, or I would have asked you what you are doing in myclassroom,' said Professor McGonagall, turning her back firmly on ProfessorUmbridge. Many of the students exchanged looks of glee. 'As 1 was saying:
today, we shall be practising the altogether more difficult Vanishment of mice.
Now, the Vanishing Spell -'
'Hem, hem.'
'I wonder,' said Professor McGonagall in cold fury, turning on ProfessorUmbridge, 'how you expect to gain an idea of my usual
THE HOGWARTS HIGH INQUISITOR 287teaching methods if you continue to interrupt me? You see, I do not generallypermit people to talk when I am talking.'
Professor Umbridge looked as though she had just been slapped in the face.
She did not speak, but straightened the parchment on her clipboard and beganscribbling furiously.
Looking supremely unconcerned, Professor McGonagall addressed the classonce more.
'As I was saying: the Vanishing Spell becomes more difficult with thecomplexity of the animal to be Vanished. The snail, as an invertebrate, does notpresent much of a challenge; the mouse, as a mammal, offers a much greaterone. This is not, therefore, magic you can accomplish with your mind on yourdinner. So - you know the incantation, let me see what you can do ...'
'How she can lecture me about not losing my temper with Umbridge!' Harrymuttered to Ron under his breath, but he was grinning - his anger with ProfessorMcGonagall had quite evaporated.

Professor Umbridge did not follow Professor McGonagall around the class asshe had followed Professor Trelawney; perhaps she realised ProfessorMcGonagall would not permit it. She did, however, take many more notes whilesitting in her corner, and when Professor McGonagall finally told them all topack away, she rose with a grim expression on her face.
'Well, it's a start,' said Ron, holding up a long wriggling mouse-tail anddropping it back into the box Lavender was passing around.
As they filed out of the classroom, Harry saw Professor Umbridge approachthe teacher's desk; he nudged Ron, who nudged Hermione in turn, and the threeof them deliberately fell back to eavesdrop.
'How long have you been teaching at Hogwarts?' Professor Umbridge asked.
Thirty-nine years this December,' said Professor McGonagall brusquely,snapping her bag shut.
Professor Umbridge made a note.
'Very well,' she said, 'you will receive the results of your inspection in tendays' time.'
'I can hardly wait,' said Professor McGonagall, in a coldly indifferent voice,and she strode off towards the door. 'Hurry up, you three,' she added, sweepingHarry, Ron and Hermione before her.

288 HARRY POTTERHarry could not help giving her a faint smile and could have sworn herereceived one in return.
He had thought that the next time he would see Umbridge would be in hisdetention that evening, but he was wrong. When they walked down the lawnstowards the Forest for Care of Magical Creatures, they found her and herclipboard waiting for them beside Professor Grubbly-Plank.
'You do not usually take this class, is that correct?' Harry heard her ask as theyarrived at the trestle table where the group of captive Bowtruckles werescrabbling around for woodlice like so many living twigs.
'Quite correct,' said Professor Grubbly-Plank, hands behind her back andbouncing on the balls of her feet. 'I am a substitute teacher standing in forProfessor Hagrid.'
Harry exchanged uneasy looks with Ron and Hermione. Malfoy waswhispering with Crabbe and Goyle; he would surely love this opportunity to telltales on Hagrid to a member of the Ministry.
'Hmm,' said Professor Umbridge, dropping her voice, though Harry could stillhear her quite clearly. '1 wonder - the Headmaster seems strangely reluctant togive me any information on the matter - can you tell me what is causingProfessor Hagrid's very extended leave of absence?'
Harry saw Malfoy look up eagerly and watch Umbridge and Grubbly-Plankclosely.
"Fraid I can't,' said Professor Grubbly-Plank breezily. 'Don't know anythingmore about it than you do. Got an owl from Dumbledore, would I like a coupleof weeks' teaching work. I accepted. That's as much as I know. Well ... shall 1get started then?'
'Yes, please do,' said Professor Umbridge, scribbling on her clipboard.
Umbridge took a different tack in this class and wandered amongst thestudents, questioning them on magical creatures. Most people were able toanswer well and Harry's spirits lifted somewhat; at least the class was not lettingHagrid down.
'Overall,' said Professor Umbridge, returning to Professor Grubbly-Plank'sside after a lengthy interrogation of Dean Thomas, 'how do you, as a temporarymember of staff- an objective outsider,
THE HOGWARTS HIGH INQUISITOR 289I suppose you might say — how do you find Hogwarts? Do youfeel you receive enough support from the school management?'
'Oh, yes, Dumbledore's excellent,' said Professor Grubbly-Plank heartily.

'Yes, I'm very happy with the way things are run, very happy indeed.'
Looking politely incredulous, Umbridge made a tiny note on her clipboardand went on, 'And what are you planning to cover with this class this year - assuming, of course, that Professor Hagrid does not return?'
'Oh, I'll take them through the creatures that most often come up in OWL,' said Professor Grubbly-Plank. 'Not much left to do - they've studied unicorns andNifflers, I thought we'd cover Porlocks and Kneazles, make sure they canrecognise Crups and Knarls, you know ...'
'Well, you seem to know what you're doing, at any rate,' said ProfessorUmbridge, making a very obvious tick on her clipboard. Harry did not like theemphasis she put on 'you' and liked it even less when she put her next question toGoyle. 'Now, I hear there have been injuries in this class?'
Goyle gave a stupid grin. Malfoy hastened to answer the question.
That was me,' he said. '1 was slashed by a Hippogriff.'
'A Hippogriff?' said Professor Umbridge, now scribbling frantically.
'Only because he was too stupid to listen to what Hagrid told him to do,' saidHarry angrily.
Both Ron and Hermione groaned. Professor Umbridge turned her head slowlyin Harry's direction.
'Another nights detention, I think,' she said softly. 'Well, thank you verymuch, Professor Grubbly-Plank, I think that's all I need here. You will bereceiving the results of your inspection within ten days.'
'Jolly good,' said Professor Grubbly-Plank, and Professor Umbridge set offback across the lawn to the castle.
*It was nearly midnight when Harry left Umbridge's office that night,his hand now bleeding so severely that it was staining the scarf he 290 HARRY POTTERhad wrapped around it. He expected the common room to be empty when hereturned, but Ron and Hermione had sat up waiting for him. He was pleased tosee them, especially as Hermione was disposed to be sympathetic rather thancritical.
'Here,' she said anxiously, pushing a small bowl of yellow liquid towards him,'soak your hand in that, it's a solution of strained and pickled Murtlap tentacles, itshould help.'
Harry placed his bleeding, aching hand into the bowl and experienced awonderful feeling of relief. Crookshanks curled around his legs, purring loudly,then leapt into his lap and settled down.
'Thanks,' he said gratefully, scratching behind Crookshanks's ears with his lefthand.
'I still reckon you should complain about this,' said Ron in a low voice.
'No,' said Harry flatly.
'McGonagall would go nuts if she knew —'
'Yeah, she probably would,' said Harry dully. 'And how long do you reckon it'dtake Umbridge to pass another decree saying anyone who complains about theHigh Inquisitor gets sacked immediately?'
Ron opened his mouth to retort but nothing came out and, after a moment, heclosed it again, defeated.
'She's an awful woman,' said Hermione in a small voice. 'Awful. You know, 1was just saying to Ron when you came in ... we've got to do something about her.'
'I suggested poison,' said Ron grimly.
'No ... I mean, something about what a dreadful teacher she is, and how we'renot going to learn any Defence from her at all,' said Hermione.
'Well, what can we do about that?' said Ron, yawning. "S too late, isn't it?
She's got the job, she's here to stay. Fudge'll make sure of that.'
'Well,' said Hermione tentatively. 'You know, I was thinking today ...' she shota slightly nervous look at Harry and then plunged on, 'I was thinking that - maybethe time's come when we should just - just do it ourselves.'

'Do what ourselves?' said Harry suspiciously, still floating his hand in theessence of Murtlap tentacles.

THE HOGWARTS HIGH INQUISITOR 291'Well - learn Defence Against the Dark Arts ourselves,' said Hermione.
'Come off it,' groaned Ron. 'You want us to do extra work? D'you realiseHarry and I are behind on homework again and it's only the second week?'
'But this is much more important than homework!' said Hermione.
Harry and Ron goggled at her.
'I didn't think there was anything in the universe more important thanhomework!' said Ron.
'Don't be silly, of course there is,' said Hermione, and Harry saw, with anominous feeling, that her face was suddenly alight with the kind of fervour thatSPEW usually inspired in her. 'It's about preparing ourselves, like Harry said inUmbridge's first lesson, for what's waiting for us out there. It's about makingsure we really can defend ourselves. If we don't learn anything for a whole year -
'
'We can't do much by ourselves,' said Ron in a defeated voice. 'I mean, allright, we can go and look jinxes up in the library and try and practise them, Isuppose -'
'No, I agree, we've gone past the stage where we can just learn things out ofbooks,' said Hermione. 'We need a teacher, a proper one, who can show us howto use the spells and correct us if we're going wrong.'
'If you're talking about Lupin ...' Harry began.
'No, no, I'm not talking about Lupin,' said Hermione. 'He's too busy with theOrder and, anyway, the most we could see him is during Hogsmeade weekendsand that's not nearly often enough.'
'Who, then?' said Harry, frowning at her.
Hermione heaved a very deep sigh.
'Isn't it obvious?' she said. 'I'm talking about you, Harry.'
There was a moment's silence. A light night breeze rattled the windowpanesbehind Ron, and the fire guttered.
'About me what?' said Harry.
'I'm talking about you teaching us Defence Against the Dark Arts.'
Harry stared at her. Then he turned to Ron, ready to exchange the exasperatedlooks they sometimes shared when Hermione 292 HARRY POTTERelaborated on far-fetched schemes like SPEW To Harrys consternation, however,Ron did not look exasperated.
He was frowning slightly, apparently thinking. Then he said, That's an idea.'
'What's an idea?' said Harry.
'You,' said Ron. Teaching us to do it.'
'But ...'
Harry was grinning now, sure the pair of them were pulling his leg.
'But I'm not a teacher, I can't -'
'Harry, you're the best in the year at Defence Against the Dark Arts,' saidHermione.
'Me?' said Harry, now grinning more broadly than ever. 'No I'm not, you'vebeaten me in every test -'
'Actually, I haven't,' said Hermione coolly. 'You beat me in our third year - theonly year we both sat the test and had a teacher who actually knew the subject.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

But I'm not talking about test results, Harry. Think what you've done]'
'How d'you mean?'
'You know what, I'm not sure I want someone this stupid teaching me,' Ronsaid to Hermione, smirking slightly. He turned to Harry.
'Let's think,' he said, pulling a face like Goyle concentrating. 'Uh ... first year - you saved the Philosopher's Stone from You-Know-Who.'
'But that was luck,' said Harry, 'it wasn't skill -'
'Second year,' Ron interrupted, 'you killed the Basilisk and destroyed Riddle.'
'Yeah, but if Fawkes hadn't turned up, I -'
Third year,' said Ron, louder still, 'you fought off about a hundred Dementorsat once -'
'You know that was a fluke, if the Time-Turner hadn't -'
'Last year,' Ron said, almost shouting now, 'you fought off You-Know-Whoagain -'
'Listen to me!' said Harry, almost angrily, because Ron and Hermione wereboth smirking now. 'Just listen to me, all right? It sounds great when you say itlike that, but all that stuff was luck - I didn't know what I was doing half the time,I didn't plan any
THE HOGWARTS HIGH INQUISITOR 293of it, I just did whatever I could think of, and I nearly always hadhelp -'
Ron and Hermione were still smirking and Harry felt his temper rise; hewasn't even sure why he was feeling so angry.
'Don't sit there grinning like you know better than I do, 1 was there, wasn't 1?'
he said heatedly. 'I know what went on, all right? And I didn't get through any ofthat because I was brilliant at Defence Against the Dark Arts, I got through it allbecause - because help came at the right time, or because I guessed right - but Ijust blundered through it all, I didn't have a clue what I was doing -STOPLAUGHING!'
The bowl of Murtlap essence fell to the floor and smashed. He became awarethat he was on his feet, though he couldn't remember standing up. Crookshanksstreaked away under a sofa. Ron and Hermione's smiles had vanished.
'You don't know what it's like! You - neither of you - you've never had to facehim, have you? You think it's just memorising a bunch of spells and throwingthem at him, like you're in class or something? The whole time you're sure youknow there's nothing between you and dying except your own - your own brainor guts or whatever -like you can think straight when you know you're about ananosecond from being murdered, or tortured, or watching your friends die - they've never taught us that in their classes, what it's like to deal with things likethat - and you two sit there acting like I'm a clever little boy to be standing here,alive, like Diggory was stupid, like he messed up — you just don't get it, thatcould just as easily have been me, it would have been if Voldemort hadn'tneeded me -'
'We weren't saying anything like that, mate,' said Ron, looking aghast. 'Weweren't having a go at Diggory, we didn't - you've got the wrong end of the -'
He looked helplessly at Hermione, whose face was stricken.
'Harry,' she said timidly, 'don't you see? This ... this is exactly why we needyou ... we need to know what it's r-really like ... facing him ... facing VVoldemort.'
It was the first time she had ever said Voldemort's name and it was this, morethan anything else, that calmed Harry. Still breathing hard, he sank back into hischair, becoming aware as he did so294HARRY POTTER that his hand was throbbing horribly again. He wished he had not smashed thebowl of Murtlap essence.

'Well ... think about it,' said Hermione quietly. 'Please?'
Harry could not think of anything to say. He was feeling ashamed of hisoutburst already. He nodded, hardly aware of what he was agreeing to.
Hermione stood up.
'Well, I'm off to bed,' she said, in a voice that was clearly as natural as shecould make it. 'Erm ... night.'
Ron had got to his feet, too.
'Coming?' he said awkwardly to Harry.
'Yeah,' said Harry. 'In ... in a minute. I'll just clear this up.'
He indicated the smashed bowl on the floor. Ron nodded and left.
'Reparo,' Harry muttered, pointing his wand at the broken pieces of china.
They flew back together, good as new, but there was no returning the Murtlapessence to the bowl.
He was suddenly so tired he was tempted to sink back into his armchair andsleep there, but instead he forced himself to his feet and followed Ron upstairs.
His restless night was punctuated once more by dreams of long corridors andlocked doors and he awoke next day with his scar prickling again.

— CHAPTER SIXTEEN

In the HogsHeadHermione made no mention of Harrygiving Defence Against the Dark Artslessons for two whole weeks after heroriginal suggestion. Harry's detentionswith Umbridge were finally over (hedoubted whether the words now etchedinto the back of his hand would ever fadeentirely); Ron had had four moreQuidditch practices and not been shoutedat during the last two; and all three ofthem had managed to Vanish their mice inTransfiguration (Hermione had actuallyprogressed to Vanishing kittens), beforethe subject was broached again, on a wild,blustery evening at the end of September,when the three of them were sitting in thelibrary, looking up potion ingredients forSnape.
'I was wondering,' Hermione saidsuddenly, 'whether you'd thought anymore about Defence Against the DarkArts, Harry.'
'Course I have,' said Harry grumpily,'can't forget it, can we, with that hagteaching us -'
'I meant the idea Ron and I had -' Roncast her an alarmed, threatening kind oflook. She frowned at him, '- Oh, all right,the idea I had, then - about you teachingus.'
Harry did not answer at once. Hepretended to be perusing a page of AsiaticAnti-Venoms, because he did not want tosay what was in his mind.
He had given the matter a great deal ofthought over the past fortnight.
Sometimes it seemed an insane idea, justas it had on the night Hermione hadproposed it, but at others, he had foundhimself thinking about the spells that hadserved him best in his various encounters with Dark creatures and Death Eaters - found himself, in fact, subconsciouslyplanning lessons ...

296 HARRY POTTER'Well,' he said slowly, when he could no longer pretend to find Asiatic Anti-Venoms interesting, 'yeah, 1 - I've thought about it a bit.'
'And?' said Hermione eagerly.

'I dunno,' said Harry, playing for time. He looked up at Ron.
'I thought it was a good idea from the start,' said Ron, who seemed keener tojoin in this conversation now that he was sure Harry was not going to startshouting again.
Harry shifted uncomfortably in his chair.
'You did listen to what I said about a load of it being luck, didn't you?'
'Yes, Harry,' said Hermione gently, 'but all the same, there's no pointpretending that you're not good at Defence Against the Dark Arts, because youare. You were the only person last year who could throw off the ImperiusCurse completely, you can produce a Patronus, you can do all sorts of stuffthat full-grown wizards can't, Viktor always said -'
Ron looked round at her so fast he appeared to crick his neck. Rubbing it,he said, 'Yeah? What did Vicky say?'
'Ho ho,' said Hermione in a bored voice. 'He said Harry knew how to dostuff even he didn't, and he was in the final year at Durmstrang.'
Ron was looking at Hermione suspiciously.
'You're not still in contact with him, are you?'
'So what if I am?' said Hermione coolly, though her face was a little pink. 'Ican have a pen-pal if I -'
'He didn't only want to be your pen-pal,' said Ron accusingly.
Hermione shook her head exasperatedly and, ignoring Ron, who wascontinuing to watch her, said to Harry, 'Well, what do you think? Will youteach us?'
'Just you and Ron, yeah?'
'Well,' said Hermione, looking a mite anxious again. 'Well ... now, don't flyoff the handle again, Harry, please ... but I really think you ought to teachanyone who wants to learn. I mean, we're talking about defending ourselvesagainst V-Voldemort. Oh, don't be pathetic, Ron. It doesn't seem fair if wedon't offer the chance to other people.'
Harry considered this for a moment, then said, 'Yeah, but I
IN THE HOG'S HEAD 297doubt anyone except you two would want to be taught by me. I'm anutter, remember?'
'Well, I think you might be surprised how many people would beinterested in hearing what you've got to say' said Hermioneseriously. 'Look,' she leaned towards him - Ron, who was stillwatching her with a frown on his face, leaned forwards to listen too- 'you know the first weekend in October's a Hogsmeade weekend?
How would it be if we tell anyone who's interested to meet us in thevillage and we can talk it over?'
'Why do we have to do it outside school?' said Ron.
'Because,' said Hermione, returning to the diagram of theChinese Chomping Cabbage she was copying, 'I don't thinkUmbridge would be very happy if she found out what we were upto.'
*Harry had been looking forward to the weekend trip intoHogsmeade, but there was one thing worrying him. Sirius hadmaintained a stony silence since he had appeared in the fire at thebeginning of September; Harry knew they had made him angry bysaying they didn't want him to come - but he still worried from timeto time that Sirius might throw caution to the winds and turn upanyway. What were they going to do if the great black dog camebounding up the street towards them in Hogsmeade, perhaps underthe nose of Draco Malfoy?
'Well, you can't blame him for wanting to get out and about,' saidRon, when Harry discussed his fears with him and Hermione. 'Imean, he's been on the run for over two years, hasn't he, and I knowthat can't have been a laugh, but at least he was free, wasn't he? Andnow he's just shut up all the time with that ghastly elf.'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Hermione scowled at Ron, but otherwise ignored the slight onKreacher.
The trouble is,' she said to Harry, 'until V-Voldemort - oh, forheaven's sake, Ron - comes out into the open, Sirius is going tohave to stay hidden, isn't he? I mean, the stupid Ministry isn't goingto realise Sirius is innocent until they accept that Dumbledore'sbeen telling the truth about him all along. And once the fools startcatching real Death Eaters again, it'll be obvious Sirius isn't one ... Imean, he hasn't got the Mark, for one thing.'

298 HARRY POTTER'I don't reckon he'd be stupid enough to turn up,' said Ron brac-ingly.
'Dumbledore'd go mad if he did and Sirius listens to Dumbledore even if hedoesn't like what he hears.'
When Harry continued to look worried, Hermione said, 'Listen, Ron and Ihave been sounding out people who we thought might want to learn some properDefence Against the Dark Arts, and there are a couple who seem interested.
We've told them to meet us in Hogsmeade.'
'Right,' said Harry vaguely, his mind still on Sirius.
'Don't worry, Harry' Hermione said quietly. 'You've got enough on your platewithout Sirius, too.'
She was quite right, of course, he was barely keeping up with his homework,though he was doing much better now that he was no longer spending everyevening in detention with Umbridge. Ron was even further behind with his workthan Harry, because while they both had Quidditch practice twice a week, Ronalso had his prefect duties. However, Hermione, who was taking more subjectsthan either of them, had not only finished all her homework but was also findingtime to knit more elf clothes. Harry had to admit that she was getting better; itwas now almost always possible to distinguish between the hats and the socks.
The morning of the Hogsmeade visit dawned bright but windy. After breakfastthey queued up in front of Filch, who matched their names to the long list ofstudents who had permission from their parents or guardian to visit the village.
With a slight pang, Harry remembered that if it hadn't been for Sirius, he wouldnot have been going at all.
When Harry reached Filch, the caretaker gave a great sniff as though trying todetect a whiff of something from Harry. Then he gave a curt nod that set hisjowls aquiver again and Harry walked on, out on to the stone steps and the cold,sunlit day.
'Er - why was Filch sniffing you?' asked Ron, as he, Harry and Hermione setoff at a brisk pace down the wide drive to the gates.
T suppose he was checking for the smell of Dungbombs,' said Harry with asmall laugh. 'I forgot to tell you ...'
And he recounted the story of sending his letter to Sirius and Filch bursting inseconds later, demanding to see the letter. To his
IN THE HOG'S HEAD 299slight surprise, Hermione found this story highly interesting, much more, indeed,than he did himself.
'He said he was tipped off you were ordering Dungbombs? But who tippedhim off?'
'I dunno,' said Harry, shrugging. 'Maybe Malfoy, he'd think it was a laugh.'
They walked between the tall stone pillars topped with winged boars andturned left on to the road into the village, the wind whipping their hair into theireyes.
'Malfoy?' said Hermione, sceptically. 'Well ... yes ... maybe ...'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

And she remained deep in thought all the way into the outskirts ofHogsmeade.
'Where are we going, anyway?' Harry asked. The Three Broomsticks?'
'Oh - no,' said Hermione, coming out of her reverie, 'no, it's always packedand really noisy. I've told the others to meet us in the Hog's Head, that other pub,you know the one, it's not on the main road. I think it's a bit ... you know ...
dodgy ... but students don't normally go in there, so I don't think we'll beoverheard.'
They walked down the main street past Zonko's Wizarding Joke Shop, wherethey were not surprised to see Fred, George and Lee Jordan, past the post office,from which owls issued at regular intervals, and turned up a side-street at the topof which stood a small inn. A battered wooden sign hung from a rusty bracketover the door, with a picture on it of a wild boar's severed head, leaking blood onto the white cloth around it. The sign creaked in the wind as they approached.
All three of them hesitated outside the door.
'Well, come on,' said Hermione, slightly nervously. Harry led the way inside.
It was not at all like the Three Broomsticks, whose large bar gave animpression of gleaming warmth and cleanliness. The Hog's Head bar comprisedone small, dingy and very dirty room that smelled strongly of something thatmight have been goats. The bay windows were so encrusted with grime that verylittle daylight could permeate the room, which was lit instead with the stubs ofcandles sitting on rough wooden tables. The floor seemed at first 300 HARRY POTTERglance to be compressed earth, though as Harry stepped on to it he realised thatthere was stone beneath what seemed to be the accumulated filth of centuries.
Harry remembered Hagrid mentioning this pub in his first year: 'Yeh get a loto' funny folk in the Hogs Head/ he had said, explaining how he had won adragon's egg from a hooded stranger there. At the time Harry had wondered whyHagrid had not found it odd that the stranger kept his face hidden throughouttheir encounter; now he saw that keeping your face hidden was something of afashion in the Hog's Head. There was a man at the bar whose whole head waswrapped in dirty grey bandages, though he was still managing to gulp endlessglasses of some smoking, fiery substance through a slit over his mouth; twofigures shrouded in hoods sat at a table in one of the windows; Harry might havethought them Dementors if they had not been talking in strong Yorkshireaccents, and in a shadowy corner beside the fireplace sat a witch with a thick,black veil that fell to her toes. They could just see the tip of her nose because itcaused the veil to protrude slightly.
'I don't know about this, Hermione,' Harry muttered, as they crossed to thebar. He was looking particularly at the heavily veiled witch. 'Has it occurred toyou Umbridge might be under that?'
Hermione cast an appraising eye over the veiled figure.
'Umbridge is shorter than that woman,' she said quietly. 'And anyway, even ifUmbridge does come in here there's nothing she can do to stop us, Harry,because I've double- and triple-checked the school rules. We're not out ofbounds; I specifically asked Professor Flitwick whether students were allowedto come in the Hog's Head, and he said yes, but he advised me strongly to bringour own glasses. And I've looked up everything I can think of about studygroups and homework groups and they're definitely allowed. I just don't thinkit's a good idea if we parade what we're doing.'
'No,' said Harry drily, 'especially as it's not exactly a homework group you'replanning, is it?'
The barman sidled towards them out of a back room. He was a grumpylookingold man with a great deal of long grey hair and beard. He was tall andthin and looked vaguely familiar to Harry.

INTHEHOG'SHEAD 301'What?' he grunted.

Three Butterbeers, please,' said Hermione.
The man reached beneath the counter and pulled up three very dusty,very dirty bottles, which he slammed on the bar.
'Six Sickles,' he said.
Til get them,' said Harry quickly, passing over the silver. The barman'seyes travelled over Harry, resting for a fraction of a second on his scar.
Then he turned away and deposited Harry's money in an ancient woodentill whose drawer slid open automatically to receive it. Harry, Ron andHermione retreated to the furthest table from the bar and sat down,looking around. The man in the dirty grey bandages rapped the counterwith his knuckles and received another smoking drink from the barman.
'You know what?' Ron murmured, looking over at the bar withenthusiasm. 'We could order anything we liked in here. I bet that blokewould sell us anything, he wouldn't care. I've always wanted to tryFirewhisky -'
'You - are - a - prefect,' snarled Hermione.
'Oh,' said Ron, the smile fading from his face. 'Yeah ...'
'So, who did you say is supposed to be meeting us?' Harry asked,wrenching open the rusty top of his Butterbeer and taking a swig.
'Just a couple of people,' Hermione repeated, checking her watch andlooking anxiously towards the door. 'I told them to be here about now andI'm sure they all know where it is - oh, look, this might be them now.'
The door of the pub had opened. A thick band of dusty sunlight splitthe room in two for a moment and then vanished, blocked by theincoming rush of a crowd of people.
First came Neville with Dean and Lavender, who were closelyfollowed by Parvati and Padma Patil with (Harry's stomach did a backflip)
Cho and one of her usually-giggling girlfriends, then (on her ownand looking so dreamy she might have walked in by accident) LunaLovegood; then Katie Bell, Alicia Spinnet and Angelina Johnson, Colinand Dennis Creevey, Ernie Macmillan, Justin Finch-Fletchley, HannahAbbott, a Hufflepuff girl with a long plait down her back whose nameHarry did not know; three Ravenclaw boys he was pretty sure were calledAnthony Goldstein, Michael Corner 302 HARRY POTTERand Terry Boot, Ginny, closely followed by a tall skinny blond boy with anupturned nose whom Harry recognised vaguely as being a member of theHufflepuff Quidditch team and, bringing up the rear, Fred and George Weasleywith their friend Lee Jordan, all three of whom were carrying large paper bagscrammed with Zonko's merchandise.
'A couple of people?' said Harry hoarsely to Hermione. 'A couple of people?'
'Yes, well, the idea seemed quite popular,' said Hermione happily 'Ron, do youwant to pull up some more chairs?'
The barman had frozen in the act of wiping out a glass with a rag so filthy itlooked as though it had never been washed. Possibly, he had never seen his pubso full.
'Hi,' said Fred, reaching the bar first and counting his companions quickly,'could we have ... twenty-five Butterbeers, please?'
The barman glared at him for a moment, then, throwing down his rag irritablyas though he had been interrupted in something very important, he started passingup dusty Butterbeers from under the bar.
'Cheers,' said Fred, handing them out. 'Cough up, everyone, I haven't gotenough gold for all of these ...'
Harry watched numbly as the large chattering group took their beers from Fredand rummaged in their robes to find coins. He could not imagine what all thesepeople had turned up for until the horrible thought occurred to him that theymight be expecting some kind of speech, at which he rounded on Hermione.

'What have you been telling people?' he said in a low voice. 'What are theyexpecting?'
'I've told you, they just want to hear what you've got to say,' said Hermionesoothingly; but Harry continued to look at her so furiously that she added quickly,'you don't have to do anything yet, I'll speak to them first.'
'Hi, Harry,' said Neville, beaming and taking a seat opposite him.
Harry tried to smile back, but did not speak; his mouth was exceptionally dry.
Cho had just smiled at him and sat down on Ron's right. Her friend, who hadcurly reddish-blonde hair, did
IN THE HOG'S HEAD 303not smile, but gave Harry a thoroughly mistrustful look which plainly told himthat, given her way, she would not be here at all.
In twos and threes the new arrivals settled around Harry, Ron and Hermione,some looking rather excited, others curious, Luna Lovegood gazing dreamilyinto space. When everybody had pulled up a chair, the chatter died out. Everyeye was upon Harry.
'Er,' said Hermione, her voice slightly higher than usual out of nerves. 'Well - er - hi.'
The group focused its attention on her instead, though eyes continued to dartback regularly to Harry.
'Well ... erm ... well, you know why you're here. Erm ... well, Harry here hadthe idea - I mean' (Harry had thrown her a sharp look) 'I had the idea - that itmight be good if people who wanted to study Defence Against the Dark Arts - and I mean, really study it, you know, not the rubbish that Umbridge is doingwith us -' (Hermione's voice became suddenly much stronger and moreconfident) '- because nobody could call that Defence Against the Dark Arts -' ('Hear, hear,' said Anthony Goldstein, and Hermione looked heartened) '- Well, Ithought it would be good if we, well, took matters into our own hands.'
She paused, looked sideways at Harry, and went on, 'And by that I meanlearning how to defend ourselves properly, not just in theory but doing the realspells -'
'You want to pass your Defence Against the Dark Arts OWL too, though, Ibet?' said Michael Corner, who was watching her closely.
'Of course I do,' said Hermione at once. 'But more than that, I want to beproperly trained in defence because ... because ..." she took a great breath andfinished, 'because Lord Voldemort is back.'
The reaction was immediate and predictable. Cho's friend shrieked andslopped Butterbeer down herself; Terry Boot gave a kind of involuntary twitch; Padma Patil shuddered, and Neville gave an odd yelp that he managed to turninto a cough. All of them, however, looked fixedly, even eagerly, at Harry.
'Well ... that's the plan, anyway' said Hermione. 'If you want to join us, weneed to decide how we're going to -'

304 HARRY POTTER'Where's the proof You-Know-Who's back?' said the blond Hufflepuff player ina rather aggressive voice.
'Well, Dumbledore believes it -' Hermione began.
'You mean, Dumbledore believes him,' said the blond boy, nodding at Harry.

'Who are you?' said Ron, rather rudely.

'Zacharias Smith,' said the boy, 'and I think we've got the right to know exactlywhat makes him say You-Know-Who's back.'

'Look,' said Hermione, intervening swiftly, 'that's really not what this meetingwas supposed to be about -'

'It's OK, Hermione,' said Harry.

It had just dawned on him why there were so many people there. He thoughtHermione should have seen this coming. Some of these people - maybe even mostof them - had turned up in the hopes of hearing Harry's story firsthand.

'What makes me say You-Know-Who's back?' he repeated, looking Zachariasstraight in the face. 'I saw him. But Dumbledore told the whole school whathappened last year, and if you didn't believe him, you won't believe me, and I'mnot wasting an afternoon trying to convince anyone.'

The whole group seemed to have held its breath while Harry spoke. Harry hadthe impression that even the barman was listening. He was wiping the same glasswith the filthy rag, making it steadily dirtier.

Zacharias said dismissively, 'All Dumbledore told us last year was that CedricDiggory got killed by You-Know-Who and that you brought Diggory's body backto Hogwarts. He didn't give us details, he didn't tell us exactly how Diggory gotmurdered, I think we'd all like to know -'

'If you've come to hear exactly what it looks like when Voldemort murderssomeone I can't help you,' Harry said. His temper, always so close to the surfacethese days, was rising again. He did not take his eyes from Zacharias Smith'saggressive face, and was determined not to look at Cho. 'I don't want to talk aboutCedric Diggory, all right? So if that's what you're here for, you might as well clearout.'

He cast an angry look in Hermione's direction. This was, he felt, all her fault;

she had decided to display him like some sort of freak

IN THE HOG'S HEAD 305and of course they had all turned up to see just how wild his story was. But noneof them left their seats, not even Zacharias Smith, though he continued to gazeintently at Harry.

'So,' said Hermione, her voice very high-pitched again. 'So ... like I was saying... if you want to learn some defence, then we need to work out how we're goingto do it, how often we're going to meet and where we're going to -'

'Is it true,' interrupted the girl with the long plait down her back, looking atHarry, 'that you can produce a Patronus?'

There was a murmur of interest around the group at this.

'Yeah,' said Harry slightly defensively.

'A corporeal Patronus?'

The phrase stirred something in Harry's memory.

'Er - you don't know Madam Bones, do you?' he asked.

The girl smiled.

'She's my auntie,' she said. Tm Susan Bones. She told me about your hearing.

So - is it really true? You make a stag Patronus?'

'Yes,' said Harry.

'Blimey, Harry!' said Lee, looking deeply impressed. 'I never knew that!'

'Mum told Ron not to spread it around,' said Fred, grinning at Harry. 'She saidyou got enough attention as it was.'

'She's not wrong,' mumbled Harry, and a couple of people laughed.

The veiled witch sitting alone shifted very slightly in her seat.

'And did you kill a Basilisk with that sword in Dumbledore's office?' demandedTerry Boot. That's what one of the portraits on the wall told me when I was inthere last year ...'
'Er - yeah, I did, yeah,' said Harry.
Justin Finch-Fletchley whistled; the Creevey brothers exchanged awestrucklooks and Lavender Brown said 'Wow!' softly. Harry was feeling slightly hotaround the collar now; he was determinedly looking anywhere but at Cho.
'And in our first year,' said Neville to the group at large, 'he saved thatPhilological Stone -'
'Philosopher's,' hissed Hermione.
'Yes, that - from You-Know-Who,' finished Neville.

306 HARRY POTTERHannah Abbott's eyes were as round as Galleons.
'And that's not to mention,' said Cho (Harry's eyes snapped across to her; shewas looking at him, smiling; his stomach did another somersault) 'all the tasks hehad to get through in the Triwizard Tournament last year - getting past dragonsand merpeople and Acromantula and things ...'
There was a murmur of impressed agreement around the table. Harry's insideswere squirming. He was trying to arrange his face so that he did not look toopleased with himself. The fact that Cho had just praised him made it much, muchharder for him to say the thing he had sworn to himself he would tell them.
'Look,' he said, and everyone fell silent at once, '1 ... I don't want to sound likeI'm trying to be modest or anything, but ... I had a lot of help with all that stuff ...'
'Not with the dragon, you didn't,' said Michael Corner at once. That was aseriously cool bit of flying ...'
'Yeah, well -' said Harry, feeling it would be churlish to disagree.
'And nobody helped you get rid of those Dementors this summer,' said SusanBones.
'No,' said Harry, 'no, OK, 1 know I did bits of it without help, but the point I'mtrying to make is -'
'Are you trying to weasel out of showing us any of this stuff?' said ZachariasSmith.
'Here's an idea,' said Ron loudly, before Harry could speak, 'why don't you shutyour mouth?'
Perhaps the word 'weasel' had affected Ron particularly strongly. In any case,he was now looking at Zacharias as though he would like nothing better than tothump him. Zacharias flushed.
'Well, we've all turned up to learn from him and now he's telling us he can'treally do any of it,' he said.
'That's not what he said,' snarled Fred.
'Would you like us to clean out your ears for you?' enquired George, pulling along and lethal-looking metal instrument from inside one of the Zonko's bags.
'Or any part of your body, really, we're not fussy where we stick this,' saidFred.

IN THE HOG'S HEAD 307'Yes, well,' said Hermione hastily, 'moving on ... the point is, are we agreedwe want to take lessons from Harry?'
There was a murmur of general agreement. Zacharias folded his arms and saidnothing, though perhaps this was because he was too busy keeping an eye on theinstrument in Fred's hand.
'Right,' said Hermione, looking relieved that something had at last beensettled. 'Well, then, the next question is how often we do it. I really don't thinkthere's any point in meeting less than once a week -'
'Hang on,' said Angelina, 'we need to make sure this doesn't clash with ourQuidditch practice.'
'No,' said Cho, 'nor with ours.'
'Nor ours,' added Zacharias Smith.
'I'm sure we can find a night that suits everyone,' said Hermione, slightlyimpatiently, 'but you know, this is rather important, we're talking about learningto defend ourselves against V-Voldemort's Death Eaters -'

'Well said!' barked Ernie Macmillan, who Harry had been expecting to speaklong before this. 'Personally I think this is really important, possibly moreimportant than anything else we'll do this year, even with our OWLs coming up!'
He looked around impressively, as though waiting for people to cry 'Surelynot!' When nobody spoke, he went on, 'I, personally am at a loss to see why theMinistry has foisted such a useless teacher on us at this critical period.
Obviously, they are in denial about the return of You-Know-Who, but to give usa teacher who is trying to actively prevent us from using defensive spells -'
'We think the reason Umbridge doesn't want us trained in Defence Against theDark Arts,' said Hermione, 'is that she's got some ... some mad idea thatDumbledore could use the students in the school as a kind of private army. Shethinks he'd mobilise us against the Ministry.'
Nearly everybody looked stunned at this news; everybody except LunaLovegood, who piped up, 'Well, that makes sense. After all, Cornelius Fudge hasgot his own private army'
'What?' said Harry, completely thrown by this unexpected piece ofinformation.

'Yes, he's got an army of Heliopaths,' said Luna solemnly.
'No, he hasn't,' snapped Hermione.
'Yes, he has,' said Luna.
'What are Heliopaths?' asked Neville, looking blank.
They're spirits of fire,' said Luna, her protuberant eyes widening so that shelooked madder than ever, 'great tall flaming creatures that gallop across theground burning everything in front of -'
They don't exist, Neville,' said Hermione tartly.
'Oh, yes, they do!' said Luna angrily.
Tm sorry, but where's the proof of that?' snapped Hermione.
There are plenty of eye-witness accounts. Just because you're so narrowmindedyou need to have everything shoved under your nose before you -'
'Hem, hem,' said Ginny, in such a good imitation of Professor Umbridge thatseveral people looked around in alarm and then laughed. 'Weren't we trying todecide how often we're going to meet and have defence lessons?'
'Yes,' said Hermione at once, 'yes, we were, you're right, Ginny.'
Well, once a week sounds cool,' said Lee Jordan.
'As long as -' began Angelina.
'Yes, yes, we know about the Quidditch,' said Hermione in a tense voice. Well,the other thing to decide is where we're going to meet ...'
This was rather more difficult; the whole group fell silent.
'Library?' suggested Katie Bell after a few moments.
'1 can't see Madam Pince being too chuffed with us doing jinxes in the library,' said Harry.
'Maybe an unused classroom?' said Dean.
'Yeah,' said Ron, 'McGonagall might let us have hers, she did when Harry waspractising for the Triwizard.'
But Harry was pretty certain that McGonagall would not be so accommodatingthis time. For all that Hermione had said about study and homework groups beingallowed, he had the distinct feeling that this one might be considered a lot morerebellious.

'Right, well, we'll try to find somewhere,' said Hermione. 'We'll send amessage round to everybody when we've got a time and a place for the firstmeeting.'

IN THE HOG'S HEAD 309She rummaged in her bag and produced parchment and a quill, then hesitated,rather as though she was steeling herself to say something.
'I - I think everybody should write their name down, just so we know who washere. But I also think,' she took a deep breath, 'that we all ought to agree not toshout about what we're doing. So if you sign, you're agreeing not to tell Umbridgeor anybody else what we're up to.'
Fred reached out for the parchment and cheerfully wrote his signature, butHarry noticed at once that several people looked less than happy at the prospect ofputting their names on the list.
'Er ...' said Zacharias slowly, not taking the parchment that George was tryingto pass to him, 'well ... I'm sure Ernie will tell me when the meeting is.'
But Ernie was looking rather hesitant about signing, too. Hermione raised hereyebrows at him.
'I - well, we are prefects,' Ernie burst out. 'And if this list was found ... well, Imean to say ... you said yourself, if Umbridge finds out -'
'You just said this group was the most important thing you'd do this year,' Harry reminded him.
'I - yes,' said Ernie, 'yes, I do believe that, it's just -'
'Ernie, do you really think I'd leave that list lying around?' said Hermionetestily.
'No. No, of course not,' said Ernie, looking slightly less anxious. 'I - yes, ofcourse I'll sign.'
Nobody raised objections after Ernie, though Harry saw Cho's friend give her arather reproachful look before adding her own name. When the last perscfri - Zacharias - had signed, Hermione took the parchment back and slipped itcarefully into her bag. There was an odd feeling in the group now. It was asthough they had just signed some kind of contract.
'Well, time's ticking on,' said Fred briskly, getting to his feet. 'George, Lee andI have got items of a sensitive nature to purchase, we'll be seeing you all later.'
In twos and threes the rest of the group took their leave, too.

310 HARRY POTTERCho made rather a business of fastening the catch on her bag before leaving, herlong dark curtain of hair swinging forwards to hide her face, but her friend stoodbeside her, arms folded, clicking her tongue, so that Cho had little choice but toleave with her. As her friend ushered her through the door, Cho looked back andwaved at Harry.
'Well, I think that went quite well,' said Hermione happily, as she, Harry andRon walked out of the Hog's Head into the bright sunlight a few moments later.
Harry and Ron were clutching their bottles of Butterbeer.
That Zacharias bloke's a wart,' said Ron, who was glowering after the figure ofSmith, just discernible in the distance.
'I don't like him much, either,' admitted Hermione, 'but he overheard metalking to Ernie and Hannah at the Hufflepuff table and he seemed reallyinterested in coming, so what could I say? But the more people the better really -
I mean, Michael Corner and his friends wouldn't have come if he hadn't beengoing out with Ginny -'
Ron, who had been draining the last few drops from his Butterbeer bottle,gagged and sprayed

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Butterbeer down his front.

'He's WHAT?' spluttered Ron, outraged, his ears now resembling curls of rawbeef. 'She's going out with - my sister's going - what d'you mean, MichaelCorner?'

'Well, that's why he and his friends came, I think - well, they're obviouslyinterested in learning defence, but if Ginny hadn't told Michael what was goingon -'

When did this - when did she -?'

They met at the Yule Ball and got together at the end of last year,' saidHermione composedly. They had turned into the High Street and she pausedoutside Scrivenshaft's Quill Shop, where there was a handsome display ofpheasant feather quills in the window. 'Hmm ... I could do with a new quill.'

She turned into the shop. Harry and Ron followed her.

Which one was Michael Corner?' Ron demanded furiously.

The dark one,' said Hermione.

T didn't like him,' said Ron at once.

'Big surprise,' said Hermione under her breath.

'But,' said Ron, following Hermione along a row of quills in copper pots, '1thought Ginny fancied Harry!'

Hermione looked at him rather pityingly and shook her head.

'Ginny used to fancy Harry, but she gave up on him months ago. Not that shedoesn't like you, of course,' she added kindly to Harry while she examined a longblack and gold quill.

Harry, whose head was still full of Cho's parting wave, did not find thissubject quite as interesting as Ron, who was positively quivering withindignation, but it did bring something home to him that until now he had notreally registered.

'So that's why she talks now?' he asked Hermione. 'She never used to talk infront of me.'

'Exactly,' said Hermione. 'Yes, I think I'll have this one ...'

She went up to the counter and handed over fifteen Sickles and two Knuts,with Ron still breathing down her neck.

'Ron,' she said severely as she turned and trod on his feet, 'this is exactly whyGinny hasn't told you she's seeing Michael, she knew you'd take it badly. Sodon't harp on about it, for heaven's sake.'

'What d'you mean? Who's taking anything badly? I'm not going to harp onabout anything ...' Ron continued to chunter under his breath all the way downthe street.

Hermione rolled her eyes at Harry and then said in an undertone, while Ronwas still muttering imprecations about Michael Corner, 'And talking aboutMichael and Ginny ... what about Cho and you?'

'What d'you mean?' said Harry quickly.

It was as though boiling water was rising rapidly inside him; a burningsensation that was causing his face to smart in the cold -had he been thatobvious?

'Well,' said Hermione, smiling slightly, 'she just couldn't keep her eyes offyou, could she?'

Harry had never before appreciated just how beautiful the village ofHogsmeade was.

— CHAPTER SEVENTEEN —

EducationalDecreeNumber TwentyfourHarry felt happier for the rest ofthe weekend than he had done allterm. He and Ron spent much ofSunday catching up with all theirhomework again, and althoughthis could hardly be called fun,the last burst of autumn sunshinepersisted, so rather than sittinghunched over tables in thecommon room they took theirwork outside and lounged in theshade of a large beech tree on theedge of the lake. Hermione, whoof course was up to date with allher work, brought more wooloutside with her and bewitchedher knitting needles so that theyflashed and clicked in midairbeside her, producing more hatsand scarves.

Knowing they were doingsomething to resist Umbridgeand the Ministry, and that he wasa key part of the rebellion, gaveHarry a feeling of immensesatisfaction. He kept relivingSaturdays meeting in his mind:
all those people, coming to himto learn Defence Against theDark Arts ... and the looks ontheir faces as they had heardsome of the things he had done ... and Cho praising hisperformance in the TriwizardTournament - knowing all thosepeople did not think him a lyingweirdo, but someone to beadmired, buoyed him up so muchthat he was still cheerful on Monday morning, despite theimminent prospect of all his leastfavourite classes.
He and Ron headeddownstairs from their dormitory,discussing Angelinas idea thatthey were to work on a newmove called the Sloth Grip Rollduring that night's Quidditchpractice, and not until they werehalfway across the sunlitcommon room did they noticethe addition to the room that hadalready attracted the attention ofa small group of people.

EDUCATIONAL DECREE NUMBER TWENTY-FOUR 313A large sign had been affixed to the Gryffindor noticeboard; so large it coveredeverything else on it - the lists of secondhand spellbooks for sale, the regularreminders of school rules from Argus Filch, the Quidditch team training timetable,the offers to barter certain Chocolate Frog Cards for others, the Weasleys' latestadvertisement for testers, the dates of the Hogsmeade weekends and the lost andfound notices. The new sign was printed in large black letters and there was ahighly official-looking seal at the bottom beside a neat and curly signature.
BY ORDER OF THE HIGH INQUISITOR OF HOGWARTSons, societies, teams, groups and dubs arehenceforth disbanded.
nisation, society, team, group or club is hereby definedas a regular meeting of three or more students.
m may be sought from the High Inquisitor(Professor Umbridge).
o student organisation, society, team, group or club may existwithout the knowledge and approval of the High Inquisitor.
Any student found to have formed, or to belong to, an organisation,society, team, group or club that has not been approved bythe High Inquisitor will be expelled.
accordance with Educational DecreeNumber Twenty-four.
Signed: Dolores Jane Umbridge, High InquisitorHarry and Ron read the notice over the heads of some anxious-looking secondyears.
'Does this mean they're going to shut down the Gobstones Club?' one of themasked his friend.
'I reckon you'll be OK with Gobstones,' Ron said darkly, making the secondyearjump. T don't think we're going to be as lucky, though, do you?' he askedHarry as the second-years hurried away.

314 HARRY POTTERHarry was reading the notice through again. The happiness that had filled himsince Saturday was gone. His insides were pulsing with rage.
This isn't a coincidence,' he said, his hands forming fists. 'She knows.'

'She can't,' said Ron at once.
There were people listening in that pub. And let's face it, we don't know howmany of the people who turned up we can trust ... any of them could have run offand told Umbridge ...'
And he had thought they believed him, thought they even admired him ...
'Zacharias Smith!' said Ron at once, punching a fist into his hand. 'Or - Ithought that Michael Corner had a really shifty look, too -'
'I wonder if Hermione's seen this yet?' Harry said, looking round at the door tothe girls' dormitories.
'Let's go and tell her,' said Ron. He bounded forwards, pulled open the doorand set off up the spiral staircase.
He was on the sixth stair when there was a loud, wailing, klaxon-like soundand the steps melted together to make a long, smooth stone slide like a helterskelter.
There was a brief moment when Ron tried to keep running, arms workingmadly like windmills, then he toppled over backwards and shot down the newlycreated slide, coming to rest on his back at Harry's feet.
'Er - 1 don't think we're allowed in the girls' dormitories,' said Harry, pullingRon to his feet and trying not to laugh.
Two fourth-year girls came zooming gleefully down the stone slide.
'Oooh, who tried to get upstairs?' they giggled happily, leaping to their feetand ogling Harry and Ron.
'Me,' said Ron, who was still rather dishevelled. 'I didn't realise that wouldhappen. It's not fair!' he added to Harry, as the girls headed off for the portraithole, still giggling madly. 'Hermione's allowed in our dormitory, how come we'renot allowed -?'
'Well, it's an old-fashioned rule,' said Hermione, who had just slid neatly on toa rug in front of them and was now getting to her feet, 'but it says in Hogwarts: AHistory, that the founders EDUCATIONAL DECREE NUMBER TWENTY-FOUR 315thought boys were less trustworthy than girls. Anyway, why were you trying toget in there?'
'To see you - look at this!' said Ron, dragging her over to the noticeboard.
Hermione's eyes slid rapidly down the notice. Her expression became stony.
'Someone must have blabbed to her!' Ron said angrily.
They can't have done,' said Hermione in a low voice.
'You're so naive,' said Ron, 'you think just because you're all honourable andtrustworthy -'
'No, they can't have done, because I put a jinx on that piece of parchment weall signed,' said Hermione grimly. 'Believe me, if anyone's run off and toldUmbridge, we'll know exactly who they are and they will really regret it.'
'What'll happen to them?' said Ron eagerly.
'Well, put it this way' said Hermione, 'it'll make Eloise Midgeon's acne looklike a couple of cute freckles. Come on, let's get down to breakfast and see whatthe others think ... I wonder whether this has been put up in all the houses?'
It was immediately apparent on entering the Great Hall that Umbridge's signhad not only appeared in Gryffindor Tower. There was a peculiar intensity aboutthe chatter and an extra measure of movement in the Hall as people scurried upand down their tables conferring on what they had read. Harry, Ron andHermione had barely taken their seats when Neville, Dean, Fred, George andGinny descended upon them.
'Did you see it?'
'D'you reckon she knows?'

'What are we going to do?'
They were all looking at Harry. He glanced around to make sure there were noteachers near them.
'We're going to do it anyway of course,' he said quietly.
'Knew you'd say that,' said George, beaming and thumping Harry on the arm.
The prefects as well?' said Fred, looking quizzically at Ron and Hermione.
'Of course,' said Hermione coolly.

316 HARRY POTTER'Here come Ernie and Hannah Abbott,' said Ron, looking over his shoulder.
'And those Ravenclaw blokes and Smith ... and no one looks very spotty.'
Hermione looked alarmed.
'Never mind spots, the idiots can't come over here now, it'll look reallysuspicious - sit down!' she mouthed to Ernie and Hannah, gesturing frantically tothem to rejoin the Hufflepuff table. 'Later! We'll - talk - to - you - later!'
Til tell Michael,' said Ginny impatiently, swinging herself off her bench, 'thefool, honestly ...'
She hurried off towards the Ravenclaw table; Harry watched her go. Cho wassitting not far away, talking to the curly-haired friend she had brought along tothe Hog's Head. Would Umbridge's notice scare her off meeting them again?
But the full repercussions of the sign were not felt until they were leaving theGreat Hall for History of Magic.
'Harry! Ron/'
It was Angelina and she was hurrying towards them looking perfectlydesperate.
'It's OK,' said Harry quietly, when she was near enough to hear him. 'We'restill going to -'
'You realise she's including Quidditch in this?' Angelina said over him. 'Wehave to go and ask permission to re-form the Gryffindor team!'
'What?' said Harry.
'No way,' said Ron, appalled.
'You read the sign, it mentions teams too! So listen, Harry ... I am saying thisfor the last time ... please, please don't lose your temper with Umbridge again orshe might not let us play any more!'
'OK, OK,' said Harry, for Angelina looked as though she was on the verge oftears. 'Don't worry, I'll behave myself ...'
'Bet Umbridge is in History of Magic,' said Ron grimly, as they set off forBinns's lesson. 'She hasn't inspected Binns yet ... bet you anything she's there ...'
But he was wrong; the only teacher present when they entered was ProfessorBinns, floating an inch or so above his chair as usual and preparing to continuehis monotonous drone on giant wars. Harry EDUCATIONAL DECREE NUMBER TWENTY-FOUR 317did not even attempt to follow what he was saying today; he doodled idly on hisparchment ignoring Hermiones frequent glares and nudges, until a particularlypainful poke in the ribs made him look up angrily.
'What?'
She pointed at the window. Harry looked round. Hedwig was perched on thenarrow window ledge, gazing through the thick glass at him, a letter tied to her leg.
Harry could not understand it; they had just had breakfast, why on earth hadn't shedelivered the letter then, as usual? Many of his classmates were pointing out Hedwigto each other, too.
'Oh, I've always loved that owl, she's so beautiful,' Harry heard Lavender sigh toParvati.
He glanced round at Professor Binns who continued to read his notes, serenelyunaware that the class's attention was even less focused upon him than usual. Harryslipped quietly off his chair, crouched down and hurried along the row to thewindow, where he slid the catch and opened it very slowly.

He had expected Hedwig to hold out her leg so that he could remove the letter andthen fly off to the Owlery but the moment the window was open wide enough shehopped inside, hooting dolefully. He closed the window with an anxious glance atProfessor Binns, crouched low again and sped back to his seat with Hedwig on hisshoulder. He regained his seat, transferred Hedwig to his lap and made to remove theletter tied to her leg.
Only then did he realise that Hedwig's feathers were oddly ruffled; some werebent the wrong way, and she was holding one of her wings at an odd angle.
'She's hurt!' Harry whispered, bending his head low over her. Hermione and Ronleaned in closer; Hermione even put down her quill. 'Look - there's something wrongwith her wing -'
Hedwig was quivering; when Harry made to touch the wing she gave a littlejump, all her feathers on end as though she was inflating herself, and gazed at himreproachfully.
'Professor Binns,' said Harry loudly, and everyone in the class turned to look athim. 'I'm not feeling well.'
Professor Binns raised his eyes from his notes, looking amazed, as always, to findthe room in front of him full of people.

'Not feeling well?' he repeated hazily.
'Not at all well,' said Harry firmly getting to his feet with Hedwig concealedbehind his back. '1 think I need to go to the hospital wing.'
'Yes,' said Professor Binns, clearly very much wrong-footed. 'Yes ... yes,hospital wing ... well, off you go, then, Perkins ...'
Once outside the room, Harry returned Hedwig to his shoulder and hurried offup the corridor, pausing to think only when he was out of sight of Binns's door.
His first choice of somebody to cure Hedwig would have been Hagrid, of course,but as he had no idea where Hagrid was his only remaining option was to findProfessor Grubbly-Plank and hope she would help.
He peered out of a window at the blustery, overcast grounds. There was nosign of her anywhere near Hagrid's cabin; if she was not teaching, she wasprobably in the staff room. He set off downstairs, Hedwig hooting feebly as sheswayed on his shoulder.
Two stone gargoyles flanked the staff-room door. As Harry approached, one ofthem croaked, 'You should be in class, Sonny Jim.'
This is urgent,' said Harry curtly.
'Ooooh, urgent, is it?' said the other gargoyle in a high-pitched voice. 'Well,that's put us in our place, hasn't it?'
Harry knocked. He heard footsteps, then the door opened and he found himselfface to face with Professor McGonagall.
'You haven't been given another detention!' she said at once, her squarespectacles flashing alarmingly.
'No, Professor!' said Harry hastily.
'Well then, why are you out of class?'
'It's urgent, apparently,' said the second gargoyle snidery.
'I'm looking for Professor Grubbly-Plank,' Harry explained. 'It's my owl, she'sinjured.'
'Injured owl, did you say?'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Professor Grubbly-Plank appeared at Professor McGonagall's shoulder,smoking a pipe and holding a copy of the Daily Prophet.
'Yes,' said Harry, lifting Hedwig carefully off his shoulder, 'she turned up afterthe other post owls and her wing's all funny, look -'
Professor Grubbly-Plank stuck her pipe firmly between her teeth and tookHedwig from Harry while Professor McGonagall watched.

EDUCATIONAL DECREE NUMBER TWENTY-FOUR 319'Hmm,' said Professor Grubbly-Plank, her pipe waggling slightly as shetalked. 'Looks like something's attacked her. Can't think what would have doneit, though. Thestrals will sometimes go for birds, of course, but Hagrid's got theHogwarts Thestrals well-trained not to touch owls.'
Harry neither knew nor cared what Thestrals were; he just wanted to knowthat Hedwig was going to be all right. Professor McGonagall, however, lookedsharply at Harry and said, 'Do you know how far this owl's travelled, Potter?'
'Er,' said Harry. 'From London, I think.'
He met her eyes briefly and knew, by the way her eyebrows had joined in themiddle, that she understood 'London' to mean 'number twelve, GrimmauldPlace'.
Professor Grubbly-Plank pulled a monocle out of the inside of her robes andscrewed it into her eye, to examine Hedwig's wing closely. 'I should be able tosort this out if you leave her with me, Potter,' she said, 'she shouldn't be flyinglong distances for a few days, in any case.'
'Er - right - thanks,' said Harry, just as the bell rang for break.
'No problem,' said Professor Grubbly-Plank gruffly, turning back into thestaff room.
'Just a moment, Wilhelmina!' said Professor McGonagall. 'Potters letter!'
'Oh yeah!' said Harry, who had momentarily forgotten the scroll tied toHedwig's leg. Professor Grubbly-Plank handed it over and then disappeared intothe staff room carrying Hedwig, who was staring at Harry as though unable tobelieve he would give her away like this. Feeling slightly guilty, he turned to go,but Professor McGonagall called him back.
'Potter!'
'Yes, Professor?'
She glanced up and down the corridor; there were students coming from bothdirections.
'Bear in mind,' she said quickly and quietly, her eyes on the scroll in his hand,'that channels of communication in and out of Hogwarts may be being watched,won't you?'
'I -' said Harry, but the flood of students rolling along the 320 HARRY POTTERcorridor was almost upon him. Professor McGonagall gave him a curt nod andretreated into the staff room, leaving Harry to be swept out into the courtyardwith the crowd. He spotted Ron and Hermione already standing in a shelteredcorner, their cloak collars turned up against the wind. Harry slit open the scroll ashe hurried towards them and found five words in Sirius's handwriting:
Today, same time, same place.
'Is Hedwig OK?' asked Hermione anxiously, the moment he was withinearshot.
'Where did you take her?' asked Ron.
To Grubbly-Plank,' said Harry. 'And I met McGonagall ... listen ..."
And he told them what Professor McGonagall had said. To his surprise,neither of the others looked shocked. On the contrary, they exchanged significantlooks.

'What?' said Harry, looking from Ron to Hermione and back again.
Well, 1 was just saying to Ron ... what if someone had tried to interceptHedwig? I mean, she's never been hurt on a flight before, has she?'
'Who's the letter from, anyway?' asked Ron, taking the note from Harry.
'Snuffles,' said Harry quietly.
'"Same time, same place?" Does he mean the fire in the common room?'
'Obviously,' said Hermione, also reading the note. She looked uneasy. 'I justhope nobody else has read this ...'
'But it was still sealed and everything,' said Harry, trying to convince himselfas much as her. 'And nobody would understand what it meant if they didn't knowwhere we'd spoken to him before, would they?'
'I don't know,' said Hermione anxiously, hitching her bag back over hershoulder as the bell rang again, 'it wouldn't be exactly difficult to re-seal the scrollby magic ... and if anyone's watching the Floo Network ... but I don't really seehow we can warn him not to come without that being intercepted, too!'
They trudged down the stone steps to the dungeons for Potions,
EDUCATIONAL DECREE NUMBER TWENTY-FOUR 321all three of them lost in thought, but as they reached the bottom of the steps theywere recalled to themselves by the voice of Draco Malfoy who was standing justoutside Snape's classroom door, waving around an official-looking piece ofparchment and talking much louder than was necessary so that they could hearevery word.
'Yeah, Umbridge gave the Slytherin Quidditch team permission to continueplaying straightaway, I went to ask her first thing this morning. Well, it waspretty much automatic, 1 mean, she knows my father really well, he's alwayspopping in and out of the Ministry ... it'll be interesting to see whetherGryffindor are allowed to keep playing, won't it?'
'Don't rise,' Hermione whispered imploringly to Harry and Ron, who wereboth watching Malfoy, faces set and fists clenched. 'It's what he wants.'
'I mean,' said Malfoy, raising his voice a little more, his grey eyes glitteringmalevolently in Harry and Ron's direction, 'if it's a question of influence with theMinistry, I don't think they've got much chance ... from what my father says,they've been looking for an excuse to sack Arthur Weasley for years ... and as forPotter ... my father says it's a matter of time before the Ministry has him cartedoff to St Mungo's ... apparently they've got a special ward for people whosebrains have been addled by magic.'
Malfoy made a grotesque face, his mouth sagging open and his eyes rolling.
Crabbe and Goyle gave their usual grunts of laughter; Pansy Parkinson shriekedwith glee.
Something collided hard with Harry's shoulder, knocking him sideways. Asplit second later he realised that Neville had just charged past him, headingstraight for Malfoy.
'Neville, no!'
Harry leapt forward and seized the back of Neville's robes; Neville struggledfrantically, his fists flailing, trying desperately to get at Malfoy who looked, for amoment, extremely shocked.
'Help me!' Harry flung at Ron, managing to get an arm around Neville's neckand dragging him backwards, away from the Slytherins. Crabbe and Goyle wereflexing their arms as they stepped in front of Malfoy, ready for the fight. Ronseized Neville's arms, 322 HARRY POTTERand together he and Harry succeeded in dragging Neville back into theGryffindor line. Neville's face was scarlet; the pressure Harry was exertingon his throat rendered him quite incomprehensible, but odd wordsspluttered from his mouth.
'Not ... funny ... don't ... Mungo's ... show ... him ...'

The dungeon door opened. Snape appeared there. His black eyes sweptup the Gryffindor line to the point where Harry and Ron were wrestlingwith Neville.
'Fighting, Potter, Weasley, Longbottom?' Snape said in his cold, sneeringvoice. Ten points from Gryffindor. Release Longbottom, Potter, or it will bedetention. Inside, all of you.'
Harry let go of Neville, who stood panting and glaring at him.
'I had to stop you,' Harry gasped, picking up his bag. 'Crabbe and Goylewould've torn you apart.'
Neville said nothing; he merely snatched up his own bag and stalked offinto the dungeon.
'What in the name of Merlin,' said Ron slowly, as they followed Neville,'was that about?'
Harry did not answer. He knew exactly why the subject of people whowere in St Mungo's because of magical damage to their brains was highlydistressing to Neville, but he had sworn to Dumbledore that he would nottell anyone Neville's secret. Even Neville did not know Harry knew.
Harry, Ron and Hermione took their usual seats at the back of the class,pulled out parchment, quills and their copies of One Thousand MagicalHerbs and Fungi. The class around them was whispering about whatNeville had just done, but when Snape closed the dungeon door with anechoing bang, everybody immediately fell silent.
'You will notice,' said Snape, in his low, sneering voice, 'that we have aguest with us today.'
He gestured towards the dim corner of the dungeon and Harry sawProfessor Umbridge sitting there, clipboard on her knee. He glancedsideways at Ron and Hermione, his eyebrows raised. Snape and Umbridge,the two teachers he hated most. It was hard to decide which one he wantedto triumph over the other.
'We are continuing with our Strengthening Solution today. Youi

EDUCATIONAL DECREE NUMBER TWENTY-FOUR 323will find your mixtures as you left them last lesson; if correctly made theyshould have matured well over the weekend - instructions -' he waved his wandagain '- on the board. Carry on.'
Professor Umbridge spent the first half hour of the lesson making notes in hercorner. Harry was very interested in hearing her question Snape; so interested,that he was becoming careless with his potion again.
'Salamander blood, Harry !'Hermione moaned, grabbing his wrist to preventhim adding the wrong ingredient for the third time, 'not pomegranate juice!'
'Right,' said Harry vaguely, putting down the bottle and continuing to watchthe corner. Umbridge had just got to her feet. 'Ha,' he said softly, as she strodebetween two lines of desks towards Snape, who was bending over DeanThomas's cauldron.
'Well, the class seem fairly advanced for their level,' she said briskly toSnape's back. Though I would question whether it is advisable to teach them apotion like the Strengthening Solution. I think the Ministry would prefer it if thatwas removed from the syllabus.'
Snape straightened up slowly and turned to look at her.
'Now ... how long have you been teaching at Hogwarts?' she asked, her quillpoised over her clipboard.
'Fourteen years,' Snape replied. His expression was unfathomable. Harry,watching him closely, added a few drops to his potion; it hissed menacingly andturned from turquoise to orange.
'You applied first for the Defence Against the Dark Arts post, I believe?'
Professor Umbridge asked Snape.
'Yes,' said Snape quietly.
'But you were unsuccessful?'

Snape's lip curled.
'Obviously'
Professor Umbridge scribbled on her clipboard.
'And you have applied regularly for the Defence Against the Dark Arts postsince you first joined the school, I believe?'
'Yes,' said Snape quietly, barely moving his lips. He looked very angry.
'Do you have any idea why Dumbledore has consistently refused to appointyou?' asked Umbridge.

324 HARRY POTTER'I suggest you ask him,' said Snape jerkily. .?
'Oh, I shall,' said Professor Umbridge, with a sweet smile.
'I suppose this is relevant?' Snape asked, his black eyes narrowed.
'Oh yes,' said Professor Umbridge, 'yes, the Ministry wants a thoroughunderstanding of teachers' - er - backgrounds.'
She turned away, walked over to Pansy Parkinson and began questioning herabout the lessons. Snape looked round at Harry and their eyes met for a second.
Harry hastily dropped his gaze to his potion, which was now congealing foullyand giving off a strong smell of burned rubber.
'No marks again, then, Potter,' said Snape maliciously, emptying Harry'scauldron with a wave of his wand. 'You will write me an essay on the correctcomposition of this potion, indicating how and why you went wrong, to behanded in next lesson, do you understand?'
'Yes,' said Harry furiously. Snape had already given them homework and hehad Quidditch practice this evening; this would mean another couple of sleeplessnights. It did not seem possible that he had awoken that morning feeling veryhappy. All he felt now was a fervent desire for this day to end.
'Maybe I'll skive off Divination,' he said glumly, as they stood in the courtyardafter lunch, the wind whipping at the hems of robes and brims of hats. Til pretendto be ill and do Snape's essay instead, then I won't have to stay up half the night.'
'You can't skive off Divination,' said Hermione severely.
'Hark who's talking, you walked out of Divination, you hate Trelawney!' saidRon indignantly.
'I don't hate her,' said Hermione loftily. 'I just think she's an absolutelyappalling teacher and a real old fraud. But Harrys already missed History ofMagic and I don't think he ought to miss anything else today!'
There was too much truth in this to ignore, so half an hour later Harry took hisseat in the hot, overperfumed atmosphere of the Divination classroom, feelingangry at everybody. Professor Trelawney was yet again handing out copies ofThe Dream Oracle. Harry thought he'd surely be much better employed doingSnape's

EDUCATIONAL DECREE NUMBER TWENTY-FOUR 325punishment essay than sitting here trying to find meaning in a lot of made-updreams.
It seemed, however, that he was not the only person in Divination who was ina temper. Professor Trelawney slammed a copy of the Oracle down on the tablebetween Harry and Ron and swept away, her lips pursed; she threw the next copyof the Oracle at Seamus and Dean, narrowly avoiding Seamus's head, and thrustthe final one into Neville's chest with such force that he slipped off his pouffe.
'Well, carry on!' said Professor Trelawney loudly, her voice high-pitched andsomewhat hysterical, 'you know what to do! Or am I such a sub-standard teacherthat you have never learned how to open a book?'

The class stared perplexedly at her, then at each other. Harry, however,thought he knew what was the matter. As Professor Trelawney flounced back tothe high-backed teacher's chair, her magnified eyes full of angry tears, he leanedhis head closer to Ron's and muttered, 'I think she's got the results of herinspection back.'
'Professor?' said Parvati Patil in a hushed voice (she and Lavender had alwaysrather admired Professor Trelawney). 'Professor, is there anything - er - wrong?'
'Wrong!' cried Professor Trelawney in a voice throbbing with emotion.
'Certainly not! I have been insulted, certainly ... insinuations have been madeagainst me ... unfounded accusations levelled ... but no, there is nothing wrong,certainly not!'
She took a great shuddering breath and looked away from Parvati, angry tearsspilling from under her glasses.
'I say nothing,' she choked, 'of sixteen years of devoted service ... it haspassed, apparently, unnoticed ... but I shall not be insulted, no, I shall not!'
'But, Professor, who's insulting you?' asked Parvati timidly.
The Establishment!' said Professor Trelawney, in a deep, dramatic, waveringvoice. 'Yes, those with eyes too clouded by the mundane to See as I See, toKnow as I Know ... of course, we Seers have always been feared, alwayspersecuted ... it is - alas -our fate.'

326 HARRY POTTERShe gulped, dabbed at her wet cheeks with the end of her shawl, then shepulled a small embroidered handkerchief from her sleeve, and blew her nosevery hard with a sound like Peeves blowing a raspberry.
Ron sniggered. Lavender shot him a disgusted look.
'Professor,' said Parvati, 'do you mean ... is it something Professor Umbridge -
?'
'Do not speak to me about that woman!' cried Professor Trelawney, leaping toher feet, her beads rattling and her spectacles flashing. 'Kindly continue withyour work!'
And she spent the rest of the lesson striding among them, tears still leakingfrom behind her glasses, muttering what sounded like threats under her breath.
'... may well choose to leave ... the indignity of it ... on probation ... we shallsee ... how she dares ...'
'You and Umbridge have got something in common,' Harry told Hermionequietly when they met again in Defence Against the Dark Arts. 'She obviouslyreckons Trelawney's an old fraud, too ... looks like she's put her on probation.'
Umbridge entered the room as he spoke, wearing her black velvet bow and anexpression of great smugness.
'Good afternoon, class.'
'Good afternoon, Professor Umbridge,' they chanted dully.
'Wands away, please.'
But there was no answering flurry of movement this time; nobody hadbothered to take out their wands.
'Please turn to page thirty-four of Defensive Magical Theory and read thethird chapter, entitled "The Case for Non-Offensive Responses to MagicalAttack". There will be -'
'- no need to talk,' Harry, Ron and Hermione said together, under theirbreaths.
*'No Quidditch practice,' said Angelina in hollow tones when Harry, Ron andHermione entered the common room after dinner that night.

'But I kept my temper!' said Harry, horrified. 'I didn't say anything to her,Angelina, I swear, I -'

EDUCATIONAL DECREE NUMBER TWENTY-FOUR 327'I know, I know,' said Angelina miserably. 'She just said she needed a bit oftime to consider.'

'Consider what?' said Ron angrily. 'She's given the Slytherins permission, whynot us?'

But Harry could imagine how much Umbridge was enjoying holding the threatof no Gryffindor Quidditch team over their heads and could easily understandwhy she would not want to relinquish that weapon over them too soon.

'Well,' said Hermione, 'look on the bright side - at least now you'll have time todo Snape's essay!'

That's a bright side, is it?' snapped Harry, while Ron stared incredulously atHermione. 'No Quidditch practice, and extra Potions?'

Harry slumped down into a chair, dragged his Potions essay reluctantly fromhis bag and set to work. It was very hard to concentrate; even though he knewSirius was not due in the fire until much later, he could not help glancing into theflames every few minutes just in case. There was also an incredible amount ofnoise in the room: Fred and George appeared finally to have perfected one type ofSkiving Snackbox, which they were taking turns to demonstrate to a cheering andwhooping crowd.

First, Fred would take a bite out of the orange end of a chew, at which hewould vomit spectacularly into a bucket they had placed in front of them. Then hewould force down the purple end of the chew, at which the vomiting wouldimmediately cease. Lee Jordan, who was assisting the demonstration, was lazilyVanishing the vomit at regular intervals with the same Vanishing Spell Snapekept using on Harrys potions.

What with the regular sounds of retching, cheering and the sound of Fred andGeorge taking advance orders from the crowd, Harry was finding it exceptionallydifficult to focus on the correct method for Strengthening Solution. Hermione wasnot helping matters; the cheers and the sound of vomit hitting the bottom of Fredand George's bucket were punctuated by her loud and disapproving sniffs, whichHarry found, if anything, more distracting.

'Just go and stop them, then!' he said irritably, after crossing out the wrongweight of powdered griffin claw for the fourth time.

328 HARRY POTTER'I can't, they're not technically doing anything wrong,' said Hermionethrough gritted teeth. They're quite within their rights to eat the foul thingsthemselves and I can't find a rule that says the other idiots aren't entitled tobuy them, not unless they're proven to be dangerous in some way and itdoesn't look as though they are.'

She, Harry and Ron watched George projectile-vomit into the bucket,gulp down the rest of the chew and straighten up, beaming with his armswide to protracted applause.

'You know, I don't get why Fred and George only got three OWLs each,' said Harry, watching as Fred, George and Lee collected gold from the eagercrowd. They really know their stuff.'

'Oh, they only know flashy stuff that's of no real use to anyone,' saidHermione disparagingly.

'No real use?' said Ron in a strained voice. 'Hermione, they've madeabout twenty-six Galleons already.'

It was a long while before the crowd around the Weasley twinsdispersed, then Fred, Lee and George sat up counting their takings evenlonger, so it was well past midnight when Harry, Ron and Hermione finallyhad the common room to themselves. At long last, Fred had closed thedoorway to the boys' dormitories behind him, rattling his box of Galleonsostentatiously so that Hermione scowled. Harry, who was making very littleprogress with his Potions essay, decided to give it up for the night. As heput his books away, Ron, who was dozing lightly in an armchair, gave amuffled grunt, awoke, and looked blearily into the fire.

'Sirius!' he said.
Harry whipped round. Siriuss untidy dark head was sitting in the fireagain.
'Hi,' he said, grinning.
'Hi,' chorused Harry, Ron and Hermione, all three kneeling down on thehearthrug. Crookshanks purred loudly and approached the fire, trying,despite the heat, to put his face close to Sirius's.
'How're things?' said Sirius.
'Not that good,' said Harry, as Hermione pulled Crookshanks back to stophim singeing his whiskers. The Ministry's forced through another decree,which means we're not allowed to have Quidditch teams -'
I

EDUCATIONAL DECREE NUMBER TWENTY-FOUR 329'Or secret Defence Against the Dark Arts groups?' said Sirius.
There was a short pause.
'How did you know about that?' Harry demanded.
'You want to choose your meeting places more carefully,' said Sirius, grinningstill more broadly. The Hog's Head, I ask you.'
'Well, it was better than the Three Broomsticks!' said Hermione defensively.
That's always packed with people -'
'Which means you'd have been harder to overhear,' said Sirius. 'You've got alot to learn, Hermione.'
'Who overheard us?' Harry demanded.
'Mundungus, of course,' said Sirius, and when they all looked puzzled helaughed. 'He was the witch under the veil.'
That was Mundungus?' Harry said, stunned. 'What was he doing in the Hog'sHead?'
What do you think he was doing?' said Sirius impatiently. 'Keeping an eye onyou, of course.'
'I'm still being followed?' asked Harry angrily.
'Yeah, you are,' said Sirius, 'and just as well, isn't it, if the first thing you'regoing to do on your weekend off is organise an illegal defence group.'
But he looked neither angry nor worried. On the contrary, he was looking atHarry with distinct pride.
'Why was Dung hiding from us?' asked Ron, sounding disappointed. 'We'd'veliked to've seen him.'
'He was banned from the Hog's Head twenty years ago,' said Sirius, 'and thatbarman's got a long memory. We lost Moody's spare Invisibility Cloak whenSturgis was arrested, so Dung's been dressing as a witch a lot lately ... anyway ...
first of all, Ron - I've sworn to pass on a message from your mother.'
'Oh yeah?' said Ron, sounding apprehensive.
'She says on no account whatsoever are you to take part in an illegal secretDefence Against the Dark Arts group. She says you'll be expelled for sure andyour future will be ruined. She says there will be plenty of time to learn how todefend yourself later and that you are too young to be worrying about that rightnow. She also' (Sirius's eyes turned to the other two) 'advises Harry andHermione not to proceed with the group, though she accepts that 330 HARRY POTTERshe has no authority over either of them and simply begs them to remember thatshe has their best interests at heart. She would have written all this to you, but ifthe owl had been intercepted you'd all have been in real trouble, and she can't sayit for herself because she's on duty tonight.'

'On duty doing what?' said Ron quickly.
'Never you mind, just stuff for the Order,' said Sirius. 'So it's fallen to me to bethe messenger and make sure you tell her I passed it all on, because I don't thinkshe trusts me to.'
There was another pause in which Crookshanks, mewing, attempted to pawSirius's head, and Ron fiddled with a hole in the hearthrug.
'So, you want me to say I'm not going to take part in the Defence group?' hemuttered finally.
'Me? Certainly not!' said Sirius, looking surprised. 'I think it's an excellentidea!'
'You do?' said Harry, his heart lifting.
'Of course I do!' said Sirius. 'D'you think your father and I would've lain downand taken orders from an old hag like Umbridge?'
'But - last term all you did was tell me to be careful and not take risks -'
'Last year, all the evidence was that someone inside Hogwarts was trying to killyou, Harry!' said Sirius impatiently. This year, we know there's someone outsideHogwarts who'd like to kill us all, so I think learning to defend yourselvesproperly is a very good idea!'
'And if we do get expelled?' Hermione asked, a quizzical look on her face.
'Hermione, this whole thing was your idea!' said Harry, staring at her.
'I know it was. I just wondered what Sirius thought,' she said, shrugging.
'Well, better expelled and able to defend yourselves than sitting safely in schoolwithout a clue,' said Sirius.
'Hear, hear,' said Harry and Ron enthusiastically.
'So,' said Sirius, 'how are you organising this group? Where are you meeting?'

EDUCATIONAL DECREE NUMBER TWENTY-FOUR 331'Well, that's a bit of a problem now,' said Harry. 'Dunno where we're going tobe able to go.'
'How about the Shrieking Shack?' suggested Sirius.
'Hey, that's an idea!' said Ron excitedly, but Hermione made a sceptical noiseand all three of them looked at her, Siriuss head turning in the flames.
'Well, Sirius, it's just that there were only four of you meeting in theShrieking Shack when you were at school,' said Hermione, 'and all of you couldtransform into animals and I suppose you could all have squeezed under a singleInvisibility Cloak if you'd wanted to. But there are twenty-eight of us and noneof us is an Animagus, so we wouldn't need so much an Invisibility Cloak as anInvisibility Marquee -'
'Fair point,' said Sirius, looking slightly crestfallen. 'Well, I'm sure you'llcome up with somewhere. There used to be a pretty roomy secret passagewaybehind that big mirror on the fourth floor, you might have enough space topractise jinxes in there.'
'Fred and George told me it's blocked,' said Harry, shaking his head. 'Caved inor something.'
'Oh ...' said Sirius, frowning. 'Well, I'll have a think and get back to -'
He broke off. His face was suddenly tense, alarmed. He turned sideways,apparently looking into the solid brick wall of the fireplace.
'Sirius?' said Harry anxiously.
But he had vanished. Harry gaped at the flames for a moment, then turned tolook at Ron and Hermione.

Why did he -?'
Hermione gave a horrified gasp and leapt to her feet, still staring at the fire.
A hand had appeared amongst the flames, groping as though to catch hold ofsomething; a stubby, short-fingered hand covered in ugly old-fashioned rings.
The three of them ran for it. At the door of the boys' dormitory Harry lookedback. Umbridge's hand was still making snatching movements amongst theflames, as though she knew exactly where Siriuss hair had been moments beforeand was determined to seize it.

— CHAPTER EIGHTEEN —

Dumbledore'sArmy'Umbridge has been reading your mail, Harry.
There's no other explanation.'
'You think Umbridge attacked Hedwig?' he said,outraged.
Tm almost certain of it,' said Hermionegrimly. 'Watch your frog, it's escaping.'
Harry pointed his wand at the bullfrog that hadbeen hopping hopefully towards the other side ofthe table - 'Accio!' - and it zoomed gloomily backinto his hand.
Charms was always one of the best lessons inwhich to enjoy a private chat; there was generallyso much movement and activity that the dangerof being overheard was very slight. Today, withthe room full of croaking bullfrogs and cawingravens, and with a heavy downpour of rainclattering and pounding against the classroomwindows, Harry, Ron and Hermione's whispereddiscussion about how Umbridge had nearlycaught Sirius went quite unnoticed.
'I've been suspecting this ever since Filchaccused you of ordering Dungbombs, because itseemed such a stupid lie,' Hermione whispered. 'Imean, once your letter had been read it wouldhave been quite clear you weren't ordering them,so you wouldn't have been in trouble at all - it's abit of a feeble joke, isn't it? But then 1 thought,what if somebody just wanted an excuse to readyour mail? Well then, it would be a perfect wayfor Umbridge to manage it - tip off Filch, let himdo the dirty work and confiscate the letter, theneither find a way of stealing it from him or elsedemand to see it - 1 don't think Filch wouldobject, when's he ever stuck up for a student'srights? Harry, you're squashing your frog.'

rDUMBLEDORE'S ARMY 333Harry looked down; he was indeed squeezing his bullfrog so tightly itseyes were popping; he replaced it hastily upon the desk.
'It was a very, very close call last night,' said Hermione. 'I just wonderif Umbridge knows how close it was. Silencio.'
The bullfrog on which she was practising her Silencing Charm wasstruck dumb mid-croak and glared at her reproachfully.
'If she'd caught Snuffles -'
Harry finished the sentence for her.
'- He'd probably be back in Azkaban this morning.' He waved his wandwithout really concentrating; his bullfrog swelled like a green balloon andemitted a high-pitched whistle.
'Silencio!' said Hermione hastily, pointing her wand at Harry's frog,which deflated silently before them.
'Well, he mustn't do it again, that'sall. I just don't know how we're going to let him know. We can't send himan owl.'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'I don't reckon he'll risk it again,' said Ron. 'He's not stupid, he knowsshe nearly got him. Silencio.'
The large and ugly raven in front of him let out a derisive caw.
'Silencio. SILENCIO!'
The raven cawed more loudly.
'Its the way you're moving your wand,' said Hermione, watching Roncritically, 'you don't want to wave it, it's more a sharp jab.'
'Ravens are harder than frogs,' said Ron through clenched teeth.
'Fine, let's swap,' said Hermione, seizing Rons raven and replacing itwith her own fat bullfrog. 'Silencio!' The raven continued to open andclose its sharp beak, but no sound came out.
'Very good, Miss Granger!' said Professor Flitwick's squeaky littlevoice, making Harry, Ron and Hermione all jump. 'Now, let me see youtry, Mr Weasley.'
'Wha—? Oh - oh, right,' said Ron, very flustered. 'Er - silendo!'
He jabbed at the bullfrog so hard he poked it in the eye: the frog gave adeafening croak and leapt off the desk.
It came as no surprise to any of them that Harry and Ron were givenadditional practice of the Silencing Charm for homework.
They were allowed to remain inside over break due to the downpouroutside. They found seats in a noisy and overcrowded classroom on thefirst floor in which Peeves was floating dreamily up 334 HARRY POTTERnear the chandelier, occasionally blowing an ink pellet at the top of somebody'shead. They had barely sat down when Angelina came struggling towards themthrough the groups of gossiping students.
'I've got permission!' she said. To re-form the Quidditch team!'
'Excellent!' said Ron and Harry together.
'Yeah,' said Angelina, beaming. 'I went to McGonagall and I think she mighthave appealed to Dumbledore. Anyway, Umbridge had to give in. Ha! So I wantyou down at the pitch at seven o'clock tonight, all right, because we've got tomake up time. You realise we're only three weeks away from our first match?'
She squeezed away from them, narrowly dodged an ink pellet from Peeves,which hit a nearby first-year instead, and vanished from sight.
Ron's smile slipped slightly as he looked out of the window, which was nowopaque with hammering rain.
'Hope this clears up. What's up with you, Hermione?'
She, too, was gazing at the window, but not as though she really saw it. Hereyes were unfocused and there was a frown on her face.
'Just thinking ...' she said, still frowning at the rain-washed window.
'About Siri— Snuffles?' said Harry.
'No ... not exactly ...' said Hermione slowly. 'More ... wondering ... 1 supposewe're doing the right thing ... I think ... aren't we?'
Harry and Ron looked at each other.
'Well, that clears that up,' said Ron. 'It would've been really annoying if youhadn't explained yourself properly.'
Hermione looked at him as though she had only just realised he was there.
'I was just wondering,' she said, her voice stronger now, 'whether we're doingthe right thing, starting this Defence Against the Dark Arts group.'

'What?' said Harry and Ron together.
'Hermione, it was your idea in the first place!' said Ron indignantly.
'I know,' said Hermione, twisting her fingers together. 'But after talking toSnuffles ...'

DUMBLEDORE'S ARMY 335'But he's all for it,' said Harry.
'Yes,' said Hermione, staring at the window again. 'Yes, that's what made methink maybe it wasn't a good idea after all ...'
Peeves floated over them on his stomach, peashooter at the ready; automatically all three of them lifted their bags to cover their heads until he hadpassed.
'Let's get this straight,' said Harry angrily, as they put their bags back on thefloor, 'Sirius agrees with us, so you don't think we should do it any more?'
Hermione looked tense and rather miserable. Now staring at her own hands,she said, 'Do you honestly trust his judgement?'
'Yes, I do!' said Harry at once. 'He's always given us great advice!'
An ink pellet whizzed past them, striking Katie Bell squarely in the ear.
Hermione watched Katie leap to her feet and start throwing things at Peeves; itwas a few moments before Hermione spoke again and it sounded as though shewas choosing her words very carefully.
'You don't think he has become ... sort of ... reckless ... since he's been coopedup in Grimmauld Place? You don't think he's ... kind of ... living through us?'
'What d'you mean, "living through us"?' Harry retorted.
'I mean ... well, I think he'd love to be forming secret Defence societies rightunder the nose of someone from the Ministry ... I think he's really frustrated athow little he can do where he is ... so I think he's keen to kind of ... egg us on.'
Ron looked utterly perplexed.
'Sirius is right,' he said, 'you do sound just like my mother.'
Hermione bit her lip and did not answer. The bell rang just as Peeves swoopeddown on Katie and emptied an entire ink bottle over her head.
*The weather did not improve as the day wore on, so that at seven^o'clock that evening, when Harry and Ron went down to the^uidditch pitch for practice, they were soaked through within minates,their feet slipping and sliding on the sodden grass. The skypwas a deep, thundery grey and it was a relief to gain the warmthand light of the changing rooms, even if they knew the respite was 336 HARRY POTTERonly temporary. They found Fred and George debating whether to use one of theirown Skiving Snackboxes to get out of flying.
'... but I bet she'd know what we'd done,' Fred said out of the corner of his mouth.
'If only I hadn't offered to sell her some Puking Pastilles yesterday.'
'We could try the Fever Fudge,' George muttered, 'no one's seen that yet -'
'Does it work?' enquired Ron hopefully, as the hammering of rain on the roofintensified and wind howled around the building.
'Well, yeah,' said Fred, 'your temperature'll go right up.'
'But you get these massive pus-filled boils, too,' said George, 'and we haven'tworked out how to get rid of them yet.'
'I can't see any boils,' said Ron, staring at the twins.
'No, well, you wouldn't,' said Fred darkly, 'they're not in a place we generallydisplay to the public.'
'But they make sitting on a broom a right pain in the -'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'All right, everyone, listen up,' said Angelina loudly, emerging from the Captain'soffice. 'I know it's not ideal weather, but there's a chance we'll be playing Slytherin inconditions like this so it's a good idea to work out how we're going to cope withthem. Harry, didn't you do something to your glasses to stop the rain fogging them upwhen we played Hufflepuff in that storm?'

'Hermione did it,' said Harry. He pulled out his wand, tapped his glasses and said,'Impervius!'

'I think we all ought to try that,' said Angelina. 'If we could just keep the rain offour faces it would really help visibility - all together, come on - Impervius! OK. Let'sgo.'

They all stowed their wands back in the inside pockets of their robes, shoulderedtheir brooms and followed Angelina out of the changing rooms.

They squelched through the deepening mud to the middle of the pitch; visibilitywas still very poor even with the Impervius Charm; light was fading fast and curtainsof rain were sweeping the grounds.

'All right, on my whistle,' shouted Angelina.

Harry kicked off from the ground, spraying mud in all directions, and shotupwards, the wind pulling him slightly off course.

DUMBLEDORE'S ARMY 337He had no idea how he was going to see the Snitch in this weather; he washaving enough difficulty seeing the one Bludger with which they werepractising; a minute into the practice it almost unseated him and he had touse the Sloth Grip Roll to avoid it. Unfortunately, Angelina did not see this.

In fact, she did not appear to be able to see anything; none of them had a cluewhat the others were doing. The wind was picking up; even at a distanceHarry could hear the swishing, pounding sounds of the rain pummelling thesurface of the lake.

Angelina kept them at it for nearly an hour before conceding defeat. Sheled her sodden and disgruntled team back into the changing rooms, insistingthat the practice had not been a waste of time, though without any realconviction in her voice. Fred and George were looking particularly annoyed; both were bandy-legged and winced with every movement. Harry could hearthem complaining in low voices as he towelled his hair dry.

'I think a few of mine have ruptured,' said Fred in a hollow voice.

'Mine haven't,' said George, through clenched teeth, 'they're throbbing likemad ... feel bigger if anything.'

'OUCH!' said Harry.

He pressed the towel to his face, his eyes screwed tight with pain. The scaron his forehead had seared again, more painfully than it had in weeks.

'What's up?' said several voices.

Harry emerged from behind his towel; the changing room was blurredbecause he was not wearing his glasses, but he could still tell that everyone'sface was turned towards him.

'Nothing,' he muttered, 'I - poked myself in the eye, that's all.'

But he gave Ron a significant look and the two of them hung back as therest of the team filed back outside, muffled in their cloaks, their hats pulledlow over their ears.

'What happened?' said Ron, the moment Alicia had disappeared throughthe door. 'Was it your scar?'

Harry nodded.

'But ...' looking scared, Ron strode across to the window and stared outinto the rain, 'he - he can't be near us now, can he?'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

338 HARRY POTTER'No,' Harry muttered, sinking on to a bench and rubbing his forehead. 'He'sprobably miles away. It hurt because ... he's ... angry.'

Harry had not meant to say that at all, and heard the words as though a strangerhad spoken them - yet knew at once that they were true. He did not know how heknew it, but he did; Voldemort, wherever he was, whatever he was doing, was ina towering temper.

'Did you see him?' said Ron, looking horrified. 'Did you ... get a vision, orsomething?'

Harry sat quite still, staring at his feet, allowing his mind and his memory torelax in the aftermath of the pain.

A confused tangle of shapes, a howling rush of voices ...

'He wants something done, and it's not happening fast enough,' he said.

Again, he felt surprised to hear the words coming out of his mouth, and yetwas quite certain they were true.

'But ... how do you know?' said Ron.

Harry shook his head and covered his eyes with his hands, pressing down uponthem with his palms. Little stars erupted in them. He felt Ron sit down on thebench beside him and knew Ron was staring at him.

'Is this what it was about last time?' said Ron in a hushed voice. 'When yourscar hurt in Umbridge's office? You-Know-Who was angry?'

Harry shook his head.

'What is it, then?'

Harry was thinking himself back. He had been looking into Umbridge's face ...

his scar had hurt ... and he had had that odd feeling in his stomach ... a strange,leaping feeling ... a happy feeling ... but of course, he had not recognised it forwhat it was, as he had been feeling so miserable himself ...

'Last time, it was because he was pleased,' he said. 'Really pleased. He thought... something good was going to happen. And the night before we came back toHogwarts ...' he thought back to the moment when his scar had hurt so badly inhis and Ron's bedroom in Grimmauld Place ... 'he was furiousHe looked round at Ron, who was gaping at him.

DUMBLEDORE'S ARMY 339'You could take over from Trelawney, mate,' he said in an awed voice.

'I'm not making prophecies,' said Harry.

'No, you know what you're doing?' Ron said, sounding both scared andimpressed. 'Harry, you're reading You-Know-Who's mind!'

'No,' said Harry, shaking his head. 'It's more like ... his mood, I suppose. I'mjust getting flashes of what mood he's in. Dumbledore said something like thiswas happening last year. He said that when Voldemort was near me, or whenhe was feeling hatred, I could tell. Well, now I'm feeling it when he's pleased,too ..."

There was a pause. The wind and rain lashed at the building.

'You've got to tell someone,' said Ron.

'I told Sirius last time.'

'Well, tell him about this time!'

'Can't, can I?' said Harry grimly. 'Umbridge is watching the owls and thefires, remember?'

'Well then, Dumbledore.'

'I've just told you, he already knows,' said Harry shortly, getting to his feet,taking his cloak off his peg and swinging it around him. There's no point tellinghim again.'

Ron did up the fastening of his own cloak, watching Harry thoughtfully.
'Dumbledore'd want to know,' he said.
Harry shrugged.
'C'mon ... we've still got Silencing Charms to practise.'
They hurried back through the dark grounds, sliding and stumbling up themuddy lawns, not talking. Harry was thinking hard. What was it that Voldemortwanted done that was not happening quickly enough?
'... he's got other plans ... plans he can put into operation very quietly indeed ...
stuff he can only get by stealth ... like a weapon. Something he didn't have lasttime.'
Harry had not thought about those words in weeks; he had been too absorbedin what was going on at Hogwarts, too busy dwelling on the ongoing battleswith Umbridge, the injustice of all the Ministry interference ... but now theycame back to him and made him wonder ... Voldemort's anger would makesense if he was no 340 HARRY POTTERnearer to laying hands on the weapon, whatever it was. Had the Order thwartedhim, stopped him from seizing it? Where was it kept? Who had it now?
'Mimbulus mimbletonia,' said Ron's voice and Harry came back to his sensesjust in time to clamber through the portrait hole into the common room.
It appeared that Hermione had gone to bed early, leaving Crookshanks curledin a nearby chair and an assortment of knobbly knitted elf hats lying on a table bythe fire. Harry was rather grateful that she was not around, because he did notmuch want to discuss his scar hurting and have her urge him to go toDumbledore, too. Ron kept throwing him anxious glances, but Harry pulled outhis Charms books and set to work on finishing his essay, though he was onlypretending to concentrate and by the time Ron said he was going up to bed, too,he had written hardly anything.
Midnight came and went while Harry was reading and rereading a passageabout the uses of scurvy-grass, lovage and sneezewort and not taking in a word ofit.
These plantes are moste efficacious in the inflaming of the braine, and are thereforemuch used in Confusing and Befuddlement Draughts, where the wizard is desirous ofproducing hot-headedness and recklessness ...
... Hermione said Sirius was becoming reckless cooped up in Grimmauld Place...
... moste efficacious in the inflaming of the braine, and are therefore much used ...
... the Daily Prophet would think his brain was inflamed if they found out thathe knew what Voldemort was feeling ...
... therefore much used in Confusing and Befuddlement Draughts ...
... confusing was the word, all right; why did he know what Voldemort wasfeeling? What was this weird connection between them, which Dumbledore hadnever been able to explain satisfactorily?
... where the wizard is desirous ...
... how Harry would like to sleep ...
...of producing hot-headedness ...
... it was warm and comfortable in his armchair before the fire,
DUMBLEDORE'SARMY 341with the rain still beating heavily on the windowpanes, Crookshanks purring,and the crackling of the flames ...
The book slipped from Harry's slack grip and landed with a dull thud on thehearthrug. His head lolled sideways ...

He was walking once more along a windowless corridor, his footstepsechoing in the silence. As the door at the end of the passage loomed larger, hisheart beat fast with excitement ... if he could only open it ... enter beyond ...
He stretched out his hand ... his fingertips were inches from it ...
'Harry Potter, sir!'
He awoke with a start. The candles had all been extinguished in the commonroom, but there was something moving close by.
'Whozair?' said Harry, sitting upright in his chair. The fire was almost out,the room very dark.
'Dobby has your owl, sir!' said a squeaky voice.
'Dobby?' said Harry thickly, peering through the gloom towards the sourceof the voice.
Dobby the house-elf was standing beside the table on which Hermione hadleft half a dozen of her knitted hats. His large, pointed ears were now stickingout from beneath what looked like all the hats Hermione had ever knitted; hewas wearing one on top of the other, so that his head seemed elongated by twoor three feet, and on the very topmost bobble sat Hedwig, hooting serenely andobviously cured.
'Dobby volunteered to return Harry Potter's owl,' said the elf squeakily, witha look of positive adoration on his face, 'Professor Grubbly-Plank says she is allwell now, sir.' He sank into a deep bow so that his pencil-like nose brushed thethreadbare surface of the hearthrug and Hedwig gave an indignant hoot andfluttered on to the arm of Harry's chair.
Thanks, Dobby!' said Harry, stroking Hedwig's head and blinking hard,trying to rid himself of the image of the door in his dream ... it had been veryvivid. Surveying Dobby more closely, he noticed that the elf was also wearingseveral scarves and innumerable socks, so that his feet looked far too big for hisbody.
'Er ... have you been taking all the clothes Hermione's been leaving out?'

342 HARRY POTTER'Oh, no, sir,' said Dobby happily. 'Dobby has been taking some for Winky, too,sir.'
'Yeah, how is Winky?' asked Harry.
Dobby's ears drooped slightly.
'Winky is still drinking lots, sir,' he said sadly, his enormous round green eyes,large as tennis balls, downcast. 'She still does not care for clothes, Harry Potter.
Nor do the other house-elves. None of them will clean Gryffindor Tower anymore, not with the hats and socks hidden everywhere, they finds them insulting,sir. Dobby does it all himself, sir, but Dobby does not mind, sir, for he alwayshopes to meet Harry Potter and tonight, sir, he has got his wish!' Dobby sank intoa deep bow again. 'But Harry Potter does not seem happy,' Dobby went on,straightening up again and looking timidly at Harry. 'Dobby heard him mutteringin his sleep. Was Harry Potter having bad dreams?'
'Not really bad,' said Harry, yawning and rubbing his eyes. 'I've had worse.'
The elf surveyed Harry out of his vast, orb-like eyes. Then he said veryseriously, his ears drooping, 'Dobby wishes he could help Harry Potter, for HarryPotter set Dobby free and Dobby is much, much happier now.'
Harry smiled.
'You can't help me, Dobby, but thanks for the offer.'
He bent and picked up his Potions book. He'd have to try to finish the essaytomorrow. He closed the book and as he did so the firelight illuminated the thinwhite scars on the back of his hand - the result of his detentions with Umbridge ...

'Wait a moment - there is something you can do for me, Dobby,' said Harryslowly.
The elf looked round, beaming.
'Name it, Harry Potter, sir!'
'I need to find a place where twenty-eight people can practise Defence Againstthe Dark Arts without being discovered by any of the teachers. Especially,' Harryclenched his hand on the book, so that the scars shone pearly white, 'ProfessorUmbridge.'
He expected the elf's smile to vanish, his ears to droop; he expected him to sayit was impossible, or else that he would try DUMBLEDORE'S ARMY 343to find somewhere, but his hopes were not high. What he had not expected wasfor Dobby to give a little skip, his ears waggling cheerfully, and clap his handstogether.
'Dobby knows the perfect place, sir!' he said happily. 'Dobby heard tell of itfrom the other house-elves when he came to Hogwarts, sir. It is known by us asthe Come and Go Room, sir, or else as the Room of Requirement!'
'Why?' said Harry curiously.
'Because it is a room that a person can only enter,' said Dobby seriously,'when they have real need of it. Sometimes it is there, and sometimes it is not,but when it appears, it is always equipped for the seeker's needs. Dobby hasused it, sir,' said the elf, dropping his voice and looking guilty, 'when Winky hasbeen very drunk; he has hidden her in the Room of Requirement and he hasfound antidotes to Butterbeer there, and a nice elf-sized bed to settle her onwhile she sleeps it off, sir ... and Dobby knows Mr Filch has found extracleaning materials there when he has run short, sir, and -'
'And if you really needed a bathroom,' said Harry, suddenly rememberingsomething Dumbledore had said at the Yule Ball the previous Christmas, 'wouldit fill itself with chamber pots?'
'Dobby expects so, sir,' said Dobby, nodding earnestly. 'It is a most amazingroom, sir.'
'How many people know about it?' said Harry, sitting up straighter in hischair.
'Very few, sir. Mostly people stumbles across it when they needs it, sir, butoften they never finds it again, for they do not know that it is always therewaiting to be called into service, sir.'
'It sounds brilliant,' said Harry, his heart racing. 'It sounds perfect, Dobby.
When can you show me where it is?'
'Any time, Harry Potter, sir,' said Dobby, looking delighted at Harrysenthusiasm. 'We could go now, if you like!'
For a moment Harry was tempted to go with Dobby. He was halfway out ofhis seat, intending to hurry upstairs for his Invisibility Cloak when, not for thefirst time, a voice very much like Hermione's whispered in his ear: reckless. Itwas, after all, very late, he was exhausted, and had Snape's essay to finish.

344 HARRY POTTER'Not tonight, Dobby,' said Harry reluctantly, sinking back into his chair. Thisis really important ... I don't want to blow it, it'll need proper planning. Listen,can you just tell me exactly where this Room of Requirement is, and how to getin there?'
*Their robes billowed and swirled around them as they splashed across theflooded vegetable patch to double Herbology, where they could hardly hear whatProfessor Sprout was saying over the hammering of raindrops hard as hailstoneson the greenhouse roof. The afternoons Care of Magical Creatures lesson was tobe relocated from the storm-swept grounds to a free classroom on the groundfloor and, to their intense relief, Angelina had sought out her team at lunch to tellthem that Quidditch practice was cancelled.

'Good,' said Harry quietly, when she told him, 'because we've foundsomewhere to have our first Defence meeting. Tonight, eight o'clock, seventhfloor opposite that tapestry of Barnabas the Barmy being clubbed by those trolls.
Can you tell Katie and Alicia?'
She looked slightly taken aback but promised to tell the others. Harry returnedhungrily to his sausages and mash. When he looked up to take a drink ofpumpkin juice, he found Hermione watching him.
'What?' he said thickly.
'Well ... it's just that Dobby's plans aren't always that safe. Don't youremember when he lost you all the bones in your arm?'
This room isn't just some mad idea of Dobby's; Dumbledore knows about it,too, he mentioned it to me at the Yule Ball.'
Hermione's expression cleared. V'Dumbledore told you about it?'
'Just in passing,' said Harry, shrugging.
'Oh, well, that's all right then,' said Hermione briskly and raised no moreobjections.
Together with Ron they had spent most of the day seeking out those peoplewho had signed their names to the list in the Hog's Head and telling them whereto meet that evening. Somewhat to Harry's disappointment, it was Ginny whomanaged to find Cho Chang and her friend first; however, by the end of dinnerhe was DUMBLEDORE'S ARMY 345confident that the news had been passed to every one of the twenty-five peoplewho had turned up in the Hog's Head.

At half past seven Harry, Ron and Hermione left the Gryffindor commonroom, Harry clutching a certain piece of aged parchment in his hand. Fifth-yearswere allowed to be out in the corridors until nine o'clock, but all three of themkept looking around nervously as they made their way along the seventh floor.
'Hold it,' Harry warned, unfolding the piece of parchment at the top of thelast staircase, tapping it with his wand and muttering, 'I solemnly swear that Iam up to no good.'
A map of Hogwarts appeared on the blank surface of the parchment. Tinyblack moving dots, labelled with names, showed where various people were.
'Filch is on the second floor,' said Harry, holding the map close to his eyes,'and Mrs Norris is on the fourth.'
'And Umbridge?' said Hermione anxiously.
'In her office,' said Harry, pointing. 'OK, lets go.'
They hurried along the corridor to the place Dobby had described to Harry, astretch of blank wall opposite an enormous tapestry depicting Barnabas theBarmy's foolish attempt to train trolls for the ballet.
'OK,' said Harry quietly, while a moth-eaten troll paused in his relentlessclubbing of the would-be ballet teacher to watch them. 'Dobby said to walk pastthis bit of wall three times, concentrating hard on what we need.'
They did so, turning sharply at the window just beyond the blank stretch ofwall, then at the man-sized vase on its other side. Ron had screwed up his eyesin concentration; Hermione was whispering something under her breath; Harry'sfists were clenched as he stared ahead of him.
We need somewhere to learn to fight ... he thought. Just give us a place topractise ... somewhere they can't find us ...

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Harry!' said Hermione sharply, as they wheeled around after their third walkpast.
A highly polished door had appeared in the wall. Ron was staring at it,looking slightly wary. Harry reached out, seized the brass handle, pulled openthe door and led the way into a spacious room 346 HARRY POTTERlit with flickering torches like those that illuminated the dungeons eight floorsbelow.
The walls were lined with wooden bookcases and instead of chairs there werelarge silk cushions on the floor. A set of shelves at the far end of the roomcarried a range of instruments such as Sneakoscopes, Secrecy Sensors and alarge, cracked Foe-Glass that Harry was sure had hung, the previous year, in thefake Moodys office.
These will be good when we're practising Stunning,' said Ron enthusiastically,prodding one of the cushions with his foot.
'And just look at these books!' said Hermione excitedly, running a fingeralong the spines of the large leather-bound tomes. 'A Compendium of CommonCurses and their Counter-Actions... The Dark Arts Outsmarted ... Self-DefensiveSpellwork ... wow ..." She looked around at Harry, her face glowing, and he sawthat the presence of hundreds of books had finally convinced Hermione that whatthey were doing was right. 'Harry, this is wonderful, there's everything we needhere!'
And without further ado she slid Jinxes for the Jinxed from its shelf, sank onto the nearest cushion and began to read.
There was a gentle knock on the door. Harry looked round. Gmny, Neville,Lavender, Parvati and Dean had arrived.
'Whoa,' said Dean, staring around, impressed. 'What is this place?'
Harry began to explain, but before he had finished more people had arrivedand he had to start all over again. By the time eight o'clock arrived, everycushion was occupied. Harry moved across to the door and turned the keyprotruding from the lock; it clicked in a satisfyingly loud way and everybody fellsilent, looking at him. Hermione carefully marked her page of Jinxes for theJinxed and set the book aside.
'Well,' said Harry, slightly nervously. This is the place we've found forpractice sessions, and you've - er - obviously found it OK.'
'It's fantastic!' said Cho, and several people murmured their agreement.
'It's bizarre,' said Fred, frowning around at it. 'We once hid from Filch in here,remember, George? But it was just a broom cupboard then.'
'Hey, Harry, what's this stuff?' asked Dean from the rear of the DUMBLEDORE'S ARMY 347room, indicating the Sneakoscopes and the Foe-Glass.
'Dark detectors,' said Harry, stepping between the cushions to reach them.
'Basically they all show when Dark wizards or enemies are around, but youdon't want to rely on them too much, they can be fooled ...'
He gazed for a moment into the cracked Foe-Glass; shadowy figures weremoving around inside it, though none was recognisable. He turned his back onit.
'Well, I've been thinking about the sort of stuff we ought to do first and - er -'
He noticed a raised hand. 'What, Hermione?'
'I think we ought to elect a leader,' said Hermione.
'Harry's leader,' said Cho at once, looking at Hermione as though she weremad.
Harrys stomach did yet another back-flip.
'Yes, but I think we ought to vote on it properly,' said Hermione,unperturbed. 'It makes it formal and it gives him authority. So -everyone whothinks Harry ought to be our leader?'

Everybody put up their hand, even Zacharias Smith, though he did it veryhalf-heartedly.
'Er - right, thanks,' said Harry, who could feel his face burning. 'And - what,Hermione?'
'I also think we ought to have a name,' she said brightly, her hand still in theair. 'It would promote a feeling of team spirit and unity, don't you think?'
'Can we be the Anti-Umbridge League?' said Angelina hopefully.
'Or the Ministry of Magic are Morons Group?' suggested Fred.
'I was thinking,' said Hermione, frowning at Fred, 'more of a name that didn'ttell everyone what we were up to, so we can refer to it safely outside meetings.'
The Defence Association?' said Cho. The DA for short, so nobody knowswhat we're talking about?'
'Yeah, the DA's good,' said Ginny. 'Only let's make it stand for DumbledoresArmy, because that's the Ministry's worst fear, isn't it?'
There was a good deal of appreciative murmuring and laughter at this.
'All in favour of the DA?' said Hermione bossily, kneeling up on her cushionto count. That's a majority - motion passed!'

348 HARRY POTTERShe pinned the piece of parchment with all of their signatures on it on to thewall and wrote across the top in large letters:
DUMBLEDORE'S ARMY'Right,' said Harry, when she had sat down again, 'shall we get practising then? Iwas thinking, the first thing we should do is Expelliarmus, you know, theDisarming Charm. I know it's pretty basic but I've found it really useful -'
'Oh, please,' said Zacharias Smith, rolling his eyes and folding his arms. 'Idon't think Expelliarmus is exactly going to help us against You-Know-Who, doyou?'
'I've used it against him,' said Harry quietly. 'It saved my life in June.'
Smith opened his mouth stupidly. The rest of the room was very quiet.
'But if you think it's beneath you, you can leave,' Harry said.
Smith did not move. Nor did anybody else.
'OK,' said Harry, his mouth slightly drier than usual with all these eyes uponhim, 'I reckon we should all divide into pairs and practise.'
It felt very odd to be issuing instructions, but not nearly as odd as seeing themfollowed. Everybody got to their feet at once and divided up. Predictably, Nevillewas left partnerless.
'You can practise with me,' Harry told him. 'Right - on the count of three, then- one, two, three -'
The room was suddenly full of shouts of Expelliarmus. Wands flew in alldirections; missed spells hit books on shelves and sent them flying into the air.
Harry was too quick for Neville, whose wand went spinning out of his hand, hitthe ceiling in a shower of sparks and landed with a clatter on top of a bookshelf,from which Harry retrieved it with a Summoning Charm. Glancing around, hethought he had been right to suggest they practise the basics first; there was a lotof shoddy spellwork going on; many people were not succeeding in Disarmingtheir opponents at all, but merely causing them to jump backwards a few paces orwince as their feeble spell whooshed over them.

DUMBLEDORE'S ARMY 349'Expelliarmus!' said Neville, and Harry, caught unawares, ielt his wand flyout of his hand.
'I DID IT!' said Neville gleefully. 'I've never done it before - I DID IT!'

PUTCLUBEBOOKS

'Good one!' said Harry encouragingly, deciding not to point out that in a realduel Nevilles opponent was unlikely to be staring in the opposite direction withhis wand held loosely at his side. 'Listen, Neville, can you take it in turns topractise with Ron and Hermione for a couple of minutes so I can walk aroundand see how the rest are doing?'
Harry moved off into the middle of the room. Something very odd washappening to Zacharias Smith. Every time he opened his mouth to disarmAnthony Goldstein, his own wand would fly out of his hand, yet Anthony didnot seem to be making a sound. Harry did not have to look far to solve themystery: Fred and George were several feet from Smith and taking it in turns topoint their wands at his back.
'Sorry, Harry' said George hastily, when Harry caught his eye. 'Couldn'tresist.'
Harry walked around the other pairs, trying to correct those who were doingthe spell wrong. Ginny was teamed with Michael Corner; she was doing verywell, whereas Michael was either very bad or unwilling to jinx her. ErnieMacmillan was flourishing his wand unnecessarily, giving his partner time to getin under his guard; the Creevey brothers were enthusiastic but erratic and mainlyresponsible for all the books leaping off the shelves around them; LunaLovegood was similarly patchy, occasionally sending Justin Finch-Fletchley'swand spinning out of his hand, at other times merely causing his hair to stand onend.
'OK, stop!' Harry shouted. 'Stop! STOP!'
I need a whistle, he thought, and immediately spotted one lying on top of thenearest row of books. He caught it up and blew hard. Everyone lowered theirwands.
That wasn't bad,' said Harry, 'but there's definite room for improvement.'
Zacharias Smith glared at him. 'Let's try again.'
He moved off around the room again, stopping here and there to makesuggestions. Slowly, the general performance improved.

350 HARRY POTTERHe avoided going near Cho and her friend for a while, but after walking twicearound every other pair in the room felt he could not ignore them any longer.
'Oh no,' said Cho rather wildly as he approached. 'Expelliarmious! I mean,Expellimellius\ 1 - oh, sorry, Marietta!'
Her curly-haired friend's sleeve had caught fire; Marietta extinguished it withher own wand and glared at Harry as though it was his fault.
'You made me nervous, I was doing all right before then!' Cho told Harryruefully.
That was quite good,' Harry lied, but when she raised her eyebrows he said,'Well, no, it was lousy, but I know you can do it properly, I was watching fromover there.'
She laughed. Her friend Marietta looked at them rather sourly and turnedaway.
'Don't mind her,' Cho muttered. 'She doesn't really want to be here but I madeher come with me. Her parents have forbidden her to do anything that mightupset Umbridge. You see - her mum works for the Ministry.'
'What about your parents?' asked Harry.
'Well, they've forbidden me to get on the wrong side of Umbridge, too,' saidCho, drawing herself up proudly. 'But if they think I'm not going to fight You-Know-Who after what happened to Cedric -'
She broke off, looking rather confused, and an awkward silence fell betweenthem; Terry Boot's wand went whizzing past Harry's ear and hit Alicia Spinnethard on the nose.
'Well, my dad is very supportive of any anti-Ministry action!' said LunaLovegood proudly from just behind Harry; evidently she had been eavesdroppingon his conversation while Justin Finch-Fletchley attempted to disentangle himselffrom the robes that had flown up over his head. 'He's always saying he'd believeanything of Fudge; 1 mean, the number of goblins Fudge has had assassinated!

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

And of course he uses the Department of Mysteries to develop terrible poisons,which he secretly feeds to anybody who disagrees with him. And then there's hisUmgubular Slashkilter —'
'Don't ask,' Harry muttered to Cho as she opened her mouth, looking puzzled.
She giggled.

DUMBLEDORE'SARMY 351'Hey, Harry,' Hermione called from the other end of the room, 'have youchecked the time?'
He looked down at his watch and was shocked to see it was already ten pastnine, which meant they needed to get back to their common rooms immediatelyor risk being caught and punished by Filch for being out of bounds. He blew hiswhistle; everybody stopped shouting 'Expelliannus' and the last couple of wandsclattered to the floor.
'Well, that was pretty good,' said Harry, 'but we've overrun, we'd better leaveit here. Same time, same place next week?'
'Sooner!' said Dean Thomas eagerly and many people nodded in agreement.
Angelina, however, said quickly The Quidditch season's about to start, weneed team practices too!'
'Let's say next Wednesday night, then,' said Harry, 'we can decide onadditional meetings then. Come on, we'd better get going.'
He pulled out the Marauder's Map again and checked it carefully for signs ofteachers on the seventh floor. He let them all leave in threes and fours, watchingtheir tiny dots anxiously to see that they returned safely to their dormitories: theHufflepuffs to the basement corridor that also led to the kitchens; theRavenclaws to a tower on the west side of the castle, and the Gryffindors alongthe corridor to the Fat Lady's portrait.
'That was really, really good, Harry' said Hermione, when finally it was justher, Harry and Ron who were left.
'Yeah, it was!' said Ron enthusiastically, as they slipped out of the door andwatched it melt back into stone behind them. 'Did you see me disarm Hermione,Harry?'
'Only once,' said Hermione, stung. T got you loads more than you got me -' T did not only get you once, I got you at least three times -'
'Well, if you're counting the one where you tripped over your own feet andknocked the wand out of my hand -'
They argued all the way back to the common room, but Harry was notlistening to them. He had one eye on the Marauder's Map, but he was alsothinking of Cho saying he made her nervous.

— CHAPTER NINETEEN —

The Lion andthe SerpentHarry felt as though he were carrying somekind of talisman inside his chest over thefollowing two weeks, a glowing secret thatsupported him through Umbridge's classesand even made it possible for him to smileblandly as he looked into her horriblebulging eyes. He and the DA wereresisting her under her very nose, doing thevery thing she and the Ministry mostfeared, and whenever he was supposed tobe reading Wilbert Slinkhard's book duringher lessons he dwelled instead onsatisfying memories of their most recentmeetings, remembering how Neville hadsuccessfully disarmed Hermione, howColin Creevey had mastered theImpediment Jinx after three meetings' hardeffort, how Parvati Patil had produced sucha good Reductor Curse that she hadreduced the table carrying all theSneakoscopes to dust.

He was finding it almost impossible tofix a regular night of the week for the DAmeetings, as they had to accommodatethree separate team's Quidditch practices,which were often rearranged due to badweather conditions; but Harry was notsorry about this; he had a feeling that itwas probably better to keep the timing oftheir meetings unpredictable. If anyonewas watching them, it would be hard tomake out a pattern.
Hermione soon devised a very clevermethod of communicating the time anddate of the next meeting to all the membersin case they needed to change it at shortnotice, because it would look suspicious ifpeople from different Houses were seencrossing the Great Hall to talk to eachother too often. She gave each of themembers of the DA a fake Galleon (Ron became very excited when he first saw thebasket and was convinced she was actuallygiving out gold).

THE LION AND THE SERPENT 353'You see the numerals around the edge of the coins?' Hermione said, holdingone up for examination at the end of their fourth meeting. The coin gleamed fatand yellow in the light from the torches. 'On real Galleons that's just a serialnumber referring to the goblin who cast the coin. On these fake coins, though,the numbers will change to reflect the time and date of the next meeting. Thecoins will grow hot when the date changes, so if you're carrying them in a pocketyou'll be able to feel them. We take one each, and when Harry sets the date of thenext meeting he'll change the numbers on his coin, and because I've put a ProteanCharm on them, they'll all change to mimic his.'
A blank silence greeted Hermione's words. She looked around at all the facesupturned to her, rather disconcerted.
'Well - I thought it was a good idea,' she said uncertainly, 'I mean, even ifUmbridge asked us to turn out our pockets, there's nothing fishy about carrying aGalleon, is there? But ... well, if you don't want to use them -'
'You can do a Protean Charm?' said Terry Boot.
'Yes,' said Hermione.
'But that's ... that's NEWT standard, that is,' he said weakly.
'Oh,' said Hermione, trying to look modest. 'Oh ... well ... yes, I suppose it is.'
'How come you're not in Ravenclaw?' he demanded, staring at Hermione withsomething close to wonder. 'With brains like yours?'
'Well, the Sorting Hat did seriously consider putting me in Ravenclaw duringmy Sorting,' said Hermione brightly, 'but it decided on Gryffindor in the end. So,does that mean we're using the Galleons?'
There was a murmur of assent and everybody moved forwards to collect onefrom the basket. Harry looked sideways at Hermione.
'You know what these remind me of?'
'No, what's that?'
The Death Eaters' scars. Voldemort touches one of them, and all their scarsburn, and they know they've got to join him.'
'Well ... yes,' said Hermione quietly, 'that is where I got the idea . .. but you'llnotice I decided to engrave the date on bits of metal rather than on our members' skin.'

354 HARRY POTTER'Yeah ... I prefer your way,' said Harry, grinning, as he slipped his Galleon intohis pocket. '1 suppose the only danger with these is that we might accidentallyspend them.'

'Fat chance,' said Ron, who was examining his own fake Galleon with a slightlymournful air, 'I haven't got any real Galleons to confuse it with.'

As the first Quidditch match of the season, Gryffindor versus Slytherin, drewnearer, their DA meetings were put on hold because Angelina insisted on almostdaily practices. The fact that the Quidditch Cup had not been held for so long addedconsiderably to the interest and excitement surrounding the forthcoming game; theRavenclaws and Hufflepuffs were taking a lively interest in the outcome, for they,of course, would be playing both teams over the coming year; and the Heads ofHouse of the competing teams, though they attempted to disguise it under a decentpretence of sportsmanship, were determined to see their own side victorious. Harryrealised how much Professor McGonagall cared about beating Slytherin when sheabstained from giving them homework in the week leading up to the match.

'I think you've got enough to be getting on with at the moment,' she said loftily.

Nobody could quite believe their ears until she looked directly at Harry and Ronand said grimly, 'I've become accustomed to seeing the Quidditch Cup in my study,boys, and I really don't want to have to hand it over to Professor Snape, so use theextra time to practise, won't you?'

Snape was no less obviously partisan; he had booked the Quidditch pitch forSlytherin practice so often that the Gryffindors had difficulty getting on it to play.

He was also turning a deaf ear to the many reports of Slytherin attempts to hexGryffindor players in the corridors. When Alicia Spinnet turned up in the hospitalwing with her eyebrows growing so thick and fast they obscured her vision andobstructed her mouth, Snape insisted that she must have attempted a HairthickeningCharm on herself and refused to listen to the fourteen eye-witnesseswho insisted they had seen the Slytherin Keeper, Miles Bletchley, hit her frombehind with a jinx while she worked in the library.

Harry felt optimistic about Gryffindor's chances; they had, after

THE LION AND THE SERPENT 355all, never lost to Malfoy's team. Admittedly, Ron was still not performing toWood's standard, but he was working extremely hard to improve. His greatestweakness was a tendency to lose confidence after he'd made a blunder; if he let inone goal he became flustered and was therefore likely to miss more. On the otherhand, Harry had seen Ron make some truly spectacular saves when he was onform; during one memorable practice he had hung one-handed from his broom andkicked the Quaffle so hard away from the goalhoop that it soared the length of thepitch and through the centre hoop at the other end; the rest of the team felt thissave compared favourably with one made recently by Barry Ryan, the IrishInternational Keeper, against Poland's top Chaser, Ladislaw Zamojski. Even Fredhad said that Ron might yet make him and George proud, and that they wereseriously considering admitting he was related to them, something they assuredhim they had been trying to deny for four years.

The only thing really worrying Harry was how much Ron was allowing thetactics of the Slytherin team to upset him before they even got on to the pitch.

Harry, of course, had endured their snide comments for over four years, sowhispers of, 'Hey, Potty, I heard Warrington's sworn to knock you off your broomon Saturday', far from chilling his blood, made him laugh. 'Warrington's aim's sopathetic I'd be more worried if he was aiming for the person next to me,' heretorted, which made Ron and Hermione laugh and wiped the smirk off PansyParkinsons face.

But Ron had never endured a relentless campaign of insults, jeers andintimidation. When Slytherins, some of them seventh-years and considerablylarger than he was, muttered as they passed in the corridors, 'Got your bed bookedin the hospital wing, Weasley?' he didn't laugh, but turned a delicate shade ofgreen. When Draco Malfoy imitated Ron dropping the Quaffle (which he didwhenever they came within sight of each other), Ron's ears glowed red and hishands shook so badly that he was likely to drop whatever he was holding at thetime, too.
October extinguished itself in a rush of howling winds and driving rain andNovember arrived, cold as frozen iron, with hard irosts every morning and icydraughts that bit at exposed hands and 356 HARRY POTTERfaces. The skies and the ceiling of the Great Hall turned a pale, pearly grey, themountains around Hogwarts were snowcapped, and the temperature in thecastle dropped so low that many students wore their thick protective dragonskingloves in the corridors between lessons.
The morning of the match dawned bright and cold. When Harry awoke helooked round at Ron's bed and saw him sitting bolt upright, his arms around hisknees, staring fixedly into space.
'You all right?' said Harry.
Ron nodded but did not speak. Harry was reminded forcibly of the time Ronhad accidentally put a Slug-vomiting Charm on himself; he looked just as paleand sweaty as he had done then, not to mention as reluctant to open his mouth.
'You just need some breakfast,' Harry said bracingly. 'C'mon.'
The Great Hall was filling up fast when they arrived, the talk louder and themood more exuberant than usual. As they passed the Slytherin table there wasan upsurge of noise. Harry looked round and saw that, in addition to the usualgreen and silver scarves and hats, every one of them was wearing a silver badgein the shape of what seemed to be a crown. For some reason many of themwaved at Ron, laughing uproariously. Harry tried to see what was written on thebadges as he walked by, but he was too concerned to get Ron past their tablequickly to linger long enough to read them.
They received a rousing welcome at the Gryffindor table, where everyonewas wearing red and gold, but far from raising Ron's spirits the cheers seemedto sap the last of his morale; he collapsed on to the nearest bench looking asthough he were facing his final meal.
'I must've been mental to do this,' he said in a croaky whisper. 'Mental.'
'Don't be thick,' said Harry firmly, passing him a choice of cereals, 'you'regoing to be fine. It's normal to be nervous.'
'I'm rubbish,' croaked Ron. 'I'm lousy. I can't play to save my life. What wasI thinking?'
'Get a grip,' said Harry sternly. 'Look at that save you made with your footthe other day, even Fred and George said it was brilliant.'

THE LION AND THE SERPENT 357Ron turned a tortured face to Harry.
That was an accident,' he whispered miserably. 'I didn't mean to do it - I slippedoff my broom when none of you were looking and when I was trying to get backon I kicked the Quaffle by accident.'
'Well,' said Harry, recovering quickly from this unpleasant surprise, 'a few moreaccidents like that and the game's in the bag, isn't it?'
Hermione and Ginny sat down opposite them wearing red and gold scarves,gloves and rosettes.
'How're you feeling?' Ginny asked Ron, who was now staring into the dregs ofmilk at the bottom of his empty cereal bowl as though seriously consideringattempting to drown himself in them.
'He's just nervous,' said Harry.

'Well, that's a good sign, I never feel you perform as well in exams if you're nota bit nervous,' said Hermione heartily.
'Hello,' said a vague and dreamy voice from behind them. Harry looked up:
Luna Lovegood had drifted over from the Ravenclaw table. Many people werestaring at her and a few were openly laughing and pointing; she had managed toprocure a hat shaped like a life-size lion's head, which was perched precariouslyon her head.
'I'm supporting Gryffindor,' said Luna, pointing unnecessarily at her hat. 'Lookwhat it does ...'
She reached up and tapped the hat with her wand. It opened its mouth wide andgave an extremely realistic roar that made everyone in the vicinity jump.
'It's good, isn't it?' said Luna happily. 'I wanted to have it chewing up a serpentto represent Slytherm, you know, but there wasn't time. Anyway ... good luck,Ronald!'
She drifted away. They had not quite recovered from the shock of Luna's hatbefore Angelina came hurrying towards them, accompanied by Katie and Alicia,whose eyebrows had mercifully been returned to normal by Madam Pomfrey.
'When you're ready' she said, 'we're going to go straight down to the pitch,check out conditions and change.'
'We'll be there in a bit,' Harry assured her. 'Ron's just got to have somebreakfast.'

358 HARRY POTTERIt became clear after ten minutes, however, that Ron was not capable ofeating anything more and Harry thought it best to get him down to the changingrooms. As they rose from the table, Hermione got up, too, and taking Harry'sarm she drew him to one side.
'Don't let Ron see what's on those Slytherins' badges,' she whispered urgently.
Harry looked questioningly at her, but she shook her head warn-ingly; Ronhad just ambled over to them, looking lost and desperate.
'Good luck, Ron,' said Hermione, standing on tiptoe and kissing him on thecheek. 'And you, Harry -'
Ron seemed to come to himself slightly as they walked back across the GreatHall. He touched the spot on his face where Hermione had kissed him, lookingpuzzled, as though he was not quite sure what had just happened. He seemed toodistracted to notice much around him, but Harry cast a curious glance at thecrown-shaped badges as they passed the Slytherin table, and this time he madeout the words etched on to them:
Weasley is our KingWith an unpleasant feeling that this could mean nothing good, he hurried Ronacross the Entrance Hall, down the stone steps and out into the icy air.
The frosty grass crunched under their feet as they hurried down the slopinglawns towards the stadium. There was no wind at all and the sky was a uniformpearly white, which meant that visibility would be good without the drawback ofdirect sunlight in the eyes. Harry pointed out these encouraging factors to Ron asthey walked, but he was not sure that Ron was listening.
Angelina had changed already and was talking to the rest of the team whenthey entered. Harry and Ron pulled on their robes (Ron attempted to do his upback-to-front for several minutes before Alicia took pity on him and went tohelp), then sat down to listen to the pre-match talk while the babble of voicesoutside grew steadily louder as the crowd came pouring out of the castle towardsthe pitch.
'OK, I've only just found out the final line-up for Slytherin,' said Angelina,consulting a piece of parchment. 'Last year's Beaters,
THE LION AND THE SERPENT 359Derrick and Bole, have left, but it looks as though Montague's replaced themwith the usual gorillas, rather than anyone who can fly particularly well. They'retwo blokes called Crabbe and Goyle, I don't know much about them -'

'We do,' said Harry and Ron together.
'Well, they don't look bright enough to tell one end of a broom from the other,' said Angelina, pocketing her parchment, 'but then I was always surprised Derrickand Bole managed to find their way on to the pitch without signposts.'
'Crabbe and Goyle are in the same mould,' Harry assured her.
They could hear hundreds of footsteps mounting the banked benches of thespectators' stands. Some people were singing, though Harry could not make outthe words. He was starting to feel nervous, but he knew his butterflies were asnothing compared to Ron's, who was clutching his stomach and staring straightahead again, his jaw set and his complexion pale grey.
'It's time,' said Angelina in a hushed voice, looking at her watch. 'C'moneveryone ... good luck.'
The team rose, shouldered their brooms and marched in single file out of thechanging room and into the dazzling sunlight. A roar of sound greeted them inwhich Harry could still hear singing, though it was muffled by the cheers andwhistles.
The Slytherin team was standing waiting for them. They, too, were wearingthose silver crown-shaped badges. The new Captain, Montague, was built alongthe same lines as Dudley Dursley, with massive forearms like hairy hams.
Behind him lurked Crabbe and Goyle, almost as large, blinking stupidly in thesunlight, swinging their new Beaters' bats. Malfoy stood to one side, the sunlightgleaming on his white-blond head. He caught Harry's eye and smirked, tappingthe crown-shaped badge on his chest.
'Captains, shake hands,' ordered the referee Madam Hooch, as Angelina andMontague reached each other. Harry could tell that Montague was trying to crushAngelina's fingers, though she did not wince.
'Mount your brooms ...'
Madam Hooch placed her whistle in her mouth and blew.
The balls were released and the fourteen players shot upwards. Out of thecorner of his eye Harry saw Ron streak off towards the 360 HARRY POTTERgoalhoops. Harry zoomed higher, dodging a Bludger, and set off on a wide lapof the pitch, gazing around for a glint of gold; on the other side of the stadium,Draco Malfoy was doing exactly the same.
'And it's Johnson -Johnson with the Quaffle, what a player that girl is, I'vebeen saying it for years but she still won't go out with me -'
'JORDAN!' yelled Professor McGonagall.
'- just a fun fact, Professor, adds a bit of interest - and she's duckedWarrington, she's passed Montague, she's — ouch - been hit from behind by aBludger from Crabbe ... Montague catches the Quaffle, Montague heading backup the pitch and - nice Bludger there from George Weasley, that's a Bludger tothe head for Montague, he drops the Quaffle, caught by Katie Bell, Katie Bell ofGryffindor reverse-passes to Alicia Spinnet and Spinnet's away -'
Lee Jordan's commentary rang through the stadium and Harry listened ashard as he could through the wind whistling in his ears and the din of the crowd,all yelling and booing and singing.
'- dodges Warrington, avoids a Bludger - close call, Alicia - and the crowdare loving this, just listen to them, what's that they're singing?'
And as Lee paused to listen, the song rose loud and clear from the sea ofgreen and silver in the Slytherin section of the stands:
'Weasley cannot save a thing, He cannot block a single ring, That's why Slytherinsall sing: Weasley is our King.

'Weasley was born in a binHe always lets the Quaffle inWeasley will make sure we winWeasley is our King.'
'— and Alicia passes back to Angelina!' Lee shouted, and as Harry swerved, hisinsides boiling at what he had just heard, he knew Lee was trying to drown outthe words of the song. 'Come on now, THE LION AND THE SERPENT 361Angelina — looks like she's got just the Keeper to beat! - SHE SHOOTS - SHE - aaaah ...'
Bletchley, the Slytherin Keeper, had saved the goal; he threw the Quaffle toWarrington who sped off with it, zig-zagging in between Alicia and Katie; thesinging from below grew louder and louder as he drew nearer and nearer Ron.
'Weasley is our King,Weasley is our King,He always lets the Quaffle inWeasley is our King.'
Harry could not help himself: abandoning his search for the Snitch, he wheeledaround to watch Ron, a lone figure at the far end of the pitch, hovering before thethree goalhoops while the massive Warrington pelted towards him.
'- and it's Warrington with the Quaffle, Warrington heading for goal, he's out ofBludger range with just the Keeper ahead -'
A great swell of song rose from the Slytherin stands below:
'Weasley cannot save a thing,He cannot block a single ring ..."
'- so it's the first test for new Gryffindor Keeper Weasley, brother of Beaters Fredand George, and a promising new talent on the team - come on, Ron!'
But the scream of delight came from the Slytherins' end: Ron had dived wildly,his arms wide, and the Quaffle had soared between them straight through Ron'scentral hoop.
'Slytherin score!' came Lee's voice amid the cheering and booing from the crowdsbelow, 'so that's ten-nil to Slytherin - bad luck, Ron.'
The Slytherins sang even louder:
'WEASLEY WAS BORN IN A BINHE ALWAYS LETS THE QUAFFLE IN...'

362 HARRY POTTER'- and Gryffindor back in possession and it's Katie Bell tanking up the pitch -' criedLee valiantly, though the singing was now so deafening that he could hardly makehimself heard above it.
'WEASLEY WILL MAKE SURE WE WINWEASLEY IS OUR KING ...'
'Harry, WHAT ARE YOU DOING?' screamed Angelina, soaring past him to keepup with Katie. 'GET GOING!'
Harry realised he had been stationary in midair for over a minute, watching theprogress of the match without sparing a thought for the whereabouts of the Snitch; horrified, he went into a dive and started circling the pitch again, staring around,trying to ignore the chorus now thundering through the stadium:
'WEASLEY IS OUR K1NC,WEASLEY IS OUR KING ...'
There was no sign of the Snitch anywhere he looked; Malfoy was still circling thestadium just as he was. They passed one another midway around the pitch, going inopposite directions, and Harry heard Malfoy singing loudly:
'WEASLEY WAS BORN IN A BIN ...'
'— and it's Warrington again,' bellowed Lee, 'who passes to Pucey, Pucey's off pastSpinnet, come on now, Angelina, you can take him - turns out you can't - but niceBludger from Fred Weasley, I mean, George Weasley, oh, who cares, one of them,anyway, and Warrington drops the Quaffle and Katie Bell — er - drops it, too - sothat's Montague with the Quaffle, Slytherin Captain Montague takes the Quaffle andhe's off up the pitch, come on now, Gryffindor, block him!'

Harry zoomed around the end of the stadium behind the Slytherin goalhoops,willing himself not to look at what was going on at Ron's end. As he sped past theSlytherin Keeper, he heard Bletchley singing along with the crowd below:

THE LION AND THE SERPENT 363'WEASLEY CANNOT SAVE A TH7NG ..."
'- and Pucey's dodged Alicia again and he's heading straight for goal, stop it,Ron!'
Harry did not have to look to see what had happened: there was a terriblegroan from the Gryffindor end, coupled with fresh screams and applause fromthe Slytherins. Looking down, Harry saw the pug-faced Pansy Parkinson right atthe front of the stands, her back to the pitch as she conducted the Slytherinsupporters who were roaring:
THAT'S WHY SLYTHERINS ALL SINGWEASLEY IS OUR KING.'
But twenty-nil was nothing, there was still time for Gryffindor to catch up orcatch the Snitch. A few goals and they would be in the lead as usual, Harryassured himself, bobbing and weaving through the other players in pursuit ofsomething shiny that turned out to be Montague's watchstrap.
But Ron let in two more goals. There was an edge of panic in Harry's desire tofind the Snitch now. If he could just get it soon and finish the game quickly.
'- and Katie Bell of Gryffindor dodges Pucey, ducks Montague, nice swerve,Katie, and she throws to Johnson, Angelina Johnson takes the Quaffle, she's pastWarrington, she's heading for goal, come on now, Angelina - GRYFFINDORSCORE! It's forty-ten, forty-ten to Slytherin and Pucey has the QuaffleHarry could hear Luna's ludicrous lion hat roaring amidst the Gryffindorcheers and felt heartened; only thirty points in it, that was nothing, they couldpull back easily. Harry ducked a Bludger that Crabbe had sent rocketing in hisdirection and resumed his frantic scouring of the pitch for the Snitch, keepingone eye on Malfoy in case he showed signs of having spotted it, but Malfoy, likehim, was continuing to soar around the stadium, searching fruitlessly ...
'— Pucey throws to Warrington, Warrington to Montague, Montague back toPucey -Johnson intervenes, Johnson takes the364 HARRY POTTERQuaffle, Johnson to Bell, this looks good - I mean bad - Bells hitby a Bludger from Goyle of Slytherin and it's Pucey in possession
'WEASLEY WAS BORN IN A BINHE ALWAYS LETS THE QUAFFLE IN ->.
WEASLEY WILL MAKE SURE WE WINBut Harry had seen it at last: the tiny fluttering Golden Snitch was hovering feetfrom the ground at the Slytherin end of the pitch.
He dived ...
In a matter of seconds, Malfoy was streaking out of the sky on Harry's left, agreen and silver blur lying flat on his broom ...
The Snitch skirted the foot of one of the goalhoops and scooted off towards theother side of the stands; its change of direction suited Malfoy, who was nearer; Harrypulled his Firebolt around, he and Malfoy were now neck and neck ...
Feet from the ground, Harry lifted his right hand from his broom, stretchingtowards the Snitch ... to his right, Malfoy's arm extended too, was reaching, groping...
It was over in two breathless, desperate, windswept seconds -Harry's fingersclosed around the tiny, struggling ball - Malfoy's fingernails scrabbled the back ofHarrys hand hopelessly - Harry pulled his broom upwards, holding the strugglingball in his hand and the Gryffindor spectators screamed their approval ...

They were saved, it did not matter that Ron had let in those goals, nobody wouldremember as long as Gryffindor had won -
WHAM.
A Bludger hit Harry squarely in the small of the back and he flew forwards off hisbroom. Luckily he was only five or six feet above the ground, having dived so low tocatch the Snitch, but he was winded all the same as he landed flat on his back on thefrozen pitch. He heard Madam Hooch's shrill whistle, an uproar in the standscompounded of catcalls, angry yells and jeering, a thud, then Angelinas frantic voice.
'Are you all right?'

THE LION AND THE SERPENT 365'Course I am,' said Harry grimly, taking her hand and allowing her to pull himto his feet. Madam Hooch was zooming towards one of the Slytherin playersabove him, though he could not see who it was from this angle.
'It was that thug Crabbe,' said Angelina angrily, 'he whacked the Bludger atyou the moment he saw you'd got the Snitch - but we won, Harry, we won!'
Harry heard a snort from behind him and turned around, still holding theSnitch tightly in his hand: Draco Malfoy had landed close by. White-faced withfury, he was still managing to sneer.
'Saved Weasley's neck, haven't you?' he said to Harry. 'I've never seen aworse Keeper ... but then he was born in a bin ... did you like my lyrics, Potter?'
Harry didn't answer. He turned away to meet the rest of the team who werenow landing one by one, yelling and punching the air in triumph; all except Ron,who had dismounted from his broom over by the goalposts and seemed to bemaking his way slowly back to the changing rooms alone.
'We wanted to write another couple of verses!' Malfoy called, as Katie andAlicia hugged Harry. 'But we couldn't find rhymes for fat and ugly - we wantedto sing about his mother, see -'
Talk about sour grapes,' said Angelina, casting Malfoy a disgusted look.
'- we couldn't fit in useless loser either - for his father, you know -'
Fred and George had realised what Malfoy was talking about. Halfwaythrough shaking Harry's hand, they stiffened, looking round at Malfoy.
'Leave it!' said Angelina at once, taking Fred by the arm. 'Leave it, Fred, lethim yell, he's just sore he lost, the jumped-up little -'
'- but you like the Weasleys, don't you, Potter?' said Malfoy, sneering. 'Spendholidays there and everything, don't you? Can't see how you stand the stink, butI suppose when you've been dragged up by Muggles, even the Weasleys' hovelsmells OK -'
Harry grabbed hold of George. Meanwhile, it was taking the combined effortsof Angelina, Alicia and Katie to stop Fred leaping on Malfoy, who was laughingopenly. Harry looked around for 366 HARRY POTTERMadam Hooch, but she was still berating Crabbe for his illegal Sludger attack.
'Or perhaps,' said Malfoy, leering as he backed away, 'you can rememberwhat your mother's house stank like, Potter, and Weasleys pigsty reminds you ofit —'
Harry was not aware of releasing George, all he knew was that a second laterboth of them were sprinting towards Malfoy. He had completely forgotten thatall the teachers were watching: all he wanted to do was cause Malfoy as muchpain as possible; with no time to draw out his wand, he merely drew back the fistclutching the Snitch and sank it as hard as he could into Malfoys stomach -

'Harry! HARRY! GEORGE! NO/'

He could hear girls' voices screaming, Malfoy yelling, George swearing, awhistle blowing and the bellowing of the crowd around him, but he did not care.

Not until somebody in the vicinity yelled 'Impedimenta!' and he was knockedover backwards by the force of the spell, did he abandon the attempt to punchevery inch of Malfoy he could reach.

'What do you think you're doing?' screamed Madam Hooch, as Harry leapt tohis feet. It seemed to have been her who had hit him with the Impediment Jinx; she was holding her whistle in one hand and a wand in the other; her broom layabandoned several feet away. Malfoy was curled up on the ground, whimperingand moaning, his nose bloody; George was sporting a swollen lip; Fred was stillbeing forcibly restrained by the three Chasers, and Crabbe was cackling in thebackground. 'I've never seen behaviour like it - back up to the castle, both ofyou, and straight to your Head of House's office! Go! Now."

Harry and George turned on their heels and marched off the pitch, bothpanting, neither saying a word to the other. The howling and jeering of thecrowd grew fainter and fainter until they reached the Entrance Hall, where theycould hear nothing except the sound of their own footsteps. Harry became awarethat something was still struggling in his right hand, the knuckles of which hehad bruised against Malfoy's jaw. Looking down, he saw the Snitch's silverwings protruding from between his fingers, struggling for release.

THE LION AND THE SERPENT 367They had barely reached the door of Professor McGonagall's office when shecame marching along the corridor behind them. She was wearing a Gryffindorscarf, but tore it from her throat with shaking hands as she strode towards them,looking livid.

'In!' she said furiously, pointing to the door. Harry and George entered. Shestrode around behind her desk and faced them, quivering with rage as she threwthe Gryffindor scarf aside on to the floor.

'Well?' she said. 'I have never seen such a disgraceful exhibition. Two on one!

Explain yourselves!'

'Malfoy provoked us,' said Harry stiffly.

'Provoked you?' shouted Professor McGonagall, slamming a fist on to herdesk so that her tartan tin slid sideways off it and burst open, littering the floorwith Ginger Newts. 'He'd just lost, hadn't he? Of course he wanted to provokeyou! But what on earth he can have said that justified what you two —'

'He insulted my parents,' snarled George. 'And Harry's mother.'

'But instead of leaving it to Madam Hooch to sort out, you two decided togive an exhibition of Muggle duelling, did you?' bellowed ProfessorMcGonagall. 'Have you any idea what you've -?'

'Hem, hem.'

Harry and George both wheeled round. Dolores Umbridge was standing in thedoorway wrapped in a green tweed cloak that greatly enhanced her resemblanceto a giant toad, and was smiling in the horrible, sickly, ominous way that Harryhad come to associate with imminent misery.

'May I help, Professor McGonagall?' asked Professor Umbridge in her mostpoisonously sweet voice.

Blood rushed into Professor McGonagall's face.

'Help?' she repeated, in a constricted voice. 'What do you mean, help?'

Professor Umbridge moved forwards into the office, still smiling her sicklysmile.

'Why, I thought you might be grateful for a little extra authority'

Harry would not have been surprised to see sparks fly from ProfessorMcGonagall's nostrils.

'You thought wrong,' she said, turning her back on Umbridge.

368 HARRY POTTER'Now, you two had better listen closely. I do not care what provocation Malfoyoffered you, I do not care if he insulted every family member you possess, yourbehaviour was disgusting and I am giving each of you a week's worth ofdetentions! Do not look at me like that, Potter, you deserve it! And if either ofyou ever -'

'Hem, hem.'

Professor McGonagall closed her eyes as though praying for patience as sheturned her face towards Professor Umbridge again.

'Yes?'

'I think they deserve rather more than detentions,' said Umbridge, smiling stillmore broadly.

Professor McGonagall's eyes flew open.

'But unfortunately' she said, with an attempt at a reciprocal smile that madeher look as though she had lockjaw, 'it is what I think that counts, as they are inmy House, Dolores.'

'Well, actually, Minerva,' simpered Professor Umbridge, 'I think you'll findthat what I think does count. Now, where is it? Cornelius just sent it ... I mean,' she gave a false little laugh as she rummaged in her handbag, 'the Minister justsent it ... ah yes ..."

She had pulled out a piece of parchment which she now unfurled, clearing herthroat fussily before starting to read what it said.

'Hem, hem ... "Educational Decree Number Twenty-five".'

'Not another one!' exclaimed Professor McGonagall violently.

'Well, yes,' said Umbridge, still smiling. 'As a matter of fact, Minerva, it wasyou who made me see that we needed a further amendment ... you rememberhow you overrode me, when I was unwilling to allow the Gryffindor Quidditchteam to re-form? How you took the case to Dumbledore, who insisted that theteam be allowed to play? Well, now, I couldn't have that. I contacted the Ministerat once, and he quite agreed with me that the High Inquisitor has to have thepower to strip pupils of privileges, or she - that is to say, I - would have lessauthority than common teachers! And you see now, don't you, Minerva, howright I was in attempting to stop the Gryffindor team re-forming? Dreadfultempers ... anyway, I was reading out our amendment ... hem, hem ... "the HighInquisitor will henceforth have supreme authority

THE LION AND THE SERPENT 369over all punishments, sanctions and removal of privileges pertaining to thestudents of Hogwarts, and the power to alter such punishments, sanctions andremovals of privileges as may have been ordered by other staff members.

Signed, Cornelius Fudge, Minister for Magic, Order of Merlin First Class, etc.,etc."'

She rolled up the parchment and put it back into her handbag, still smiling.

'So ... I really think 1 will have to ban these two from playing Quidditch everagain,' she said, looking from Harry to George and back again.

Harry felt the Snitch fluttering madly in his hand.

'Ban us?' he said, and his voice sounded strangely distant. 'From playing ...

ever again?'

'Yes, Mr Potter, I think a lifelong ban ought to do the trick,' said Umbridge,her smile widening still further as she watched him struggle to comprehend whatshe had said. 'You and Mr Weasley here. And I think, to be safe, this youngman's twin ought to be stopped, too - if his teammates had not restrained him, Ifeel sure he would have attacked young Mr Malfoy as well. I will want theirbroomsticks confiscated, of course; I shall keep them safely in my office, tomake sure there is no infringement of my ban. But I am not unreasonable,Professor McGonagall,' she continued, turning back to Professor McGonagallwho was now standing as still as though carved from ice, staring at her. The restof the team can continue playing, I saw no signs of violence from any of them.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Well ... good afternoon to you.'
And with a look of the utmost satisfaction, Umbridge left the room, leaving ahorrified silence in her wake.
*'Banned,' said Angelina in a hollow voice, late that evening in the commonroom. 'Banned. No Seeker and no Beaters ... what on earth are we going to do?'
It did not feel as though they had won the match at all. Everywhere Harrylooked there were disconsolate and angry faces; the team themselves wereslumped around the fire, all apart from Ron, who had not been seen since the endof the match.
'It's just so unfair,' said Alicia numbly. 'I mean, what about 370 HARRY POTTERCrabbe and that Bludger he hit after the whistle had been blown? Has she bannedhtm?'
'No,' said Ginny miserably; she and Hermione were sitting on either side ofHarry. 'He just got lines, 1 heard Montague laughing about it at dinner.'
'And banning Fred when he didn't even do anything!' said Alicia furiously,pummelling her knee with her fist.
'It's not my fault I didn't,' said Fred, with a very ugly look on his face, '1would've pounded the little scumbag to a pulp if you three hadn't been holding meback.'
Harry stared miserably at the dark window. Snow was falling. The Snitch hehad caught earlier was now zooming around and around the common room; peoplewere watching its progress as though hypnotised and Crookshanks was leapingfrom chair to chair, trying to catch it.
'I'm going to bed,' said Angelina, getting slowly to her feet. 'Maybe this will allturn out to have been a bad dream ... maybe I'll wake up tomorrow and find wehaven't played yet ...'
She was soon followed by Alicia and Katie. Fred and George sloped off to bedsome time later, glowering at everyone they passed, and Ginny went not long afterthat. Only Harry and Hermione were left beside the fire.
'Have you seen Ron?' Hermione asked in a low voice.
Harry shook his head.
'I think he's avoiding us,' said Hermione. 'Where do you think he-?'
But at that precise moment, there was a creaking sound behind them as the FatLady swung forwards and Ron came clambering through the portrait hole. He wasvery pale indeed and there was snow in his hair. When he saw Harry andHermione, he stopped dead in his tracks.
'Where have you been?' said Hermione anxiously, springing up.
'Walking,' Ron mumbled. He was still wearing his Quidditch things.
'You look frozen,' said Hermione. 'Come and sit down!'
Ron walked to the fireside and sank into the chair furthest from Harry's, notlooking at him. The stolen Snitch zoomed over their heads.

THE LION AND THE SERPENT 371'I'm sorry,' Ron mumbled, looking at his feet.
'What for?' said Harry.
'For thinking I can play Quidditch,' said Ron. Tm going to resign first thingtomorrow.'
'If you resign,' said Harry testily, 'there'll only be three players left on theteam.' And when Ron looked puzzled, he said, 'I've been given a lifetime ban.

So've Fred and George.'
'What?' Ron yelped.
Hermione told him the full story; Harry could not bear to tell it again. Whenshe had finished, Ron looked more anguished than ever.
This is all my fault -'
'You didn't make me punch Malfoy,' said Harry angrily.
'- if I wasn't so terrible at Quidditch -'
'- it's got nothing to do with that.'
'- it was that song that wound me up -'
'- it would've wound anyone up.'
Hermione got up and walked to the window, away from the argument,watching the snow swirling down against the pane.
'Look, drop it, will you!' Harry burst out. 'It's bad enough, without youblaming yourself for everything!'
Ron said nothing but sat gazing miserably at the damp hem of his robes. Aftera while he said in a dull voice, 'This is the worst I've ever felt in my life.'
'Join the club,' said Harry bitterly.
'Well,' said Hermione, her voice trembling slightly. 'I can think of one thingthat might cheer you both up.'
'Oh yeah?' said Harry sceptically.
'Yeah,' said Hermione, turning away from the pitch-black, snow-fleckedwindow, a broad smile spreading across her face. 'Hagrids back.'

—CHAPTER TWENTY—
Hagrid's TalcHarry sprinted up to the boys' dormitories tofetch the Invisibility Cloak and theMarauder's Map from his trunk; he was soquick that he and Ron were ready to leave atleast five minutes before Hermione hurriedback down from the girls' dormitories,wearing scarf, gloves and one of her ownknobbly elf hats.
'Well, it's cold out there!' she saiddefensively, as Ron clicked his tongueimpatiently.
They crept through the portrait hole andcovered themselves hastily in the Cloak -
Ron had grown so much he now needed tocrouch to prevent his feet showing - then,moving slowly and cautiously, theyproceeded down the many staircases, pausingat intervals to check on the map for signs ofFilch or Mrs Norris. They were lucky; theysaw nobody but Nearly Headless Nick, whowas gliding along absent-mindedly hummingsomething that sounded horribly like'Weasley is our King'. They crept across theEntrance Hall and out into the silent, snowygrounds. With a great leap of his heart, Harrysaw little golden squares of light ahead andsmoke coiling up from Hagrid's chimney. Heset off at a quick march, the other twojostling and bumping along behind him.
They crunched excitedly through thethickening snow until at last they reached thewooden front door. When Harry raised hisfist and knocked three times, a dog startedbarking frantically inside.
'Hagrid, its us!' Harry called through thekeyhole.
'Shoulda known!' said a gruff voice.
They beamed at each other under theCloak; they could tell by Hagrid's voice thathe was pleased. 'Bin home three seconds ...

out the way, Fang ... out the way, yeh dozydog ...'

HAGRID'S TALE 373The bolt was drawn back, the door creaked open and Hagrid's head appearedin the gap.

Hermione screamed.

'Merlin's beard, keep it down!' said Hagrid hastily, staring wildly over theirheads. 'Under that Cloak, are yeh? Well, get in, get in!'

'I'm sorry!' Hermione gasped, as the three of them squeezed past Hagrid intothe house and pulled the Cloak off themselves so he could see them. 'I just - oh,Hagrid!'

'It's nuthin', it's nuthin'!' said Hagrid hastily, shutting the door behind themand hurrying to close all the curtains, but Hermione continued to gaze up at himin horror.

Hagrid's hair was matted with congealed blood and his left eye had beenreduced to a puffy slit amid a mass of purple and black bruising. There weremany cuts on his face and hands, some of them still bleeding, and he wasmoving gingerly, which made Harry suspect broken ribs. It was obvious that hehad only just got home; a thick black travelling cloak lay over the back of a chairand a haversack large enough to carry several small children leaned against thewall inside the door. Hagrid himself, twice the size of a normal man, was nowlimping over to the fire and placing a copper kettle over it.

'What happened to you?' Harry demanded, while Fang danced around themall, trying to lick their faces.

Told yeh, nuthin',' said Hagrid firmly. 'Want a cuppa?'

'Come off it,' said Ron, 'you're in a right state!'

Tm tellin' yeh, I'm fine,' said Hagrid, straightening up and turning to beam atthem all, but wincing. 'Blimey, it's good ter see yeh three again - had goodsummers, did yeh?'

'Hagrid, you've been attacked!' said Ron.

'Per the las' time, it's nuthin'!' said Hagrid firmly.

'Would you say it was nothing if one of us turned up with a pound of minceinstead of a face?' Ron demanded.

'You ought to go and see Madam Pomfrey, Hagrid,' said Hermione anxiously,'some of those cuts look nasty.'

'I'm dealin' with it, all righ'?' said Hagrid repressively.

He walked across to the enormous wooden table that stood in the middle ofhis cabin and twitched aside a tea towel that had 374 HARRY POTTERbeen lying on it. Underneath was a raw, bloody, green-tinged steak slightly largerthan the average car tyre.

'You're not going to eat that, are you, Hagrid?' said Ron, leaning in for a closerlook. 'It looks poisonous.'

'It's s'posed ter look like that, it's dragon meat,' Hagrid said. 'An' I didn' get itter eat.'

He picked up the steak and slapped it over the left side of his face. Greenishblood trickled down into his beard as he gave a soft moan of satisfaction.

Tha's better. It helps with the stingin', yeh know.'

'So, are you going to tell us what's happened to you?' Harry asked.

'Can't, Harry. Top secret. More'n me job's worth ter tell yeh that.'

'Did the giants beat you up, Hagrid?' asked Hermione quietly.

Hagrid's fingers slipped on the dragon steak and it slid squelchily on to hischest.

'Giants?' said Hagrid, catching the steak before it reached his belt and slappingit back over his face, 'who said anythin' abou' giants? Who yeh bin talkm' to?

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Who's told yeh what I've - who's said I've bin - eh?'
'We guessed,' said Hermione apologetically.
'Oh, yeh did, did yeh?' said Hagrid, surveying her sternly with the eye that wasnot hidden by the steak.
'It was kind of ... obvious,' said Ron. Harry nodded.
Hagrid glared at them, then snorted, threw the steak back on to the table andstrode over to the kettle, which was now whistling.
'Never known kids like you three fer knowin' more'n yeh oughta,' he muttered,splashing boiling water into three of his bucket-shaped mugs. 'An' I'm notcomplimentin' yeh, neither. Nosy, some'd call it. Interferin'.'
But his beard twitched.
'So you have been to look for giants?' said Harry, grinning as he sat down atthe table.
Hagrid set tea in front of each of them, sat down, picked up his steak again andslapped it back over his face.
'Yeah, all righ',' he grunted, 'I have.'
'And you found them?' said Hermione in a hushed voice.

HAGRID'S TALE 375'Well, they're not that difficult ter find, ter be honest,' said Hagrid. 'Prettybig, see.'
'Where are they?' said Ron.
'Mountains,' said Hagrid unhelpfully.
'So why don't Muggles -?'
They do,' said Hagrid darkly. 'On'y their deaths are always put down termountaineerin' accidents, aren' they?'
He adjusted the steak a little so that it covered the worst of the bruising.
'Come on, Hagrid, tell us what you've been up to!' said Ron. Tell us aboutbeing attacked by the giants and Harry can tell you about being attacked by theDementors -' Hagrid choked in his mug and dropped his steak at the same time; a largequantity of spit, tea and dragon blood was sprayed over the table as Hagridcoughed and spluttered and the steak slid, with a soft splat, on to the floor.
'Whadda yeh mean, attacked by Dementors?' growled Hagrid.
'Didn't you know?' Hermione asked him, wide-eyed.
'I don' know anythin' that's bin happenin' since I left. I was on a secretmission, wasn' I, didn' wan' owls followin' me all over the place - ruddyDementors! Yeh're not serious?'
'Yeah, 1 am, they turned up in Little Whingmg and attacked my cousin andme, and then the Ministry of Magic expelled me -'
'WHAT?'
'- and I had to go to a hearing and everything, but tell us about the giantsfirst.'
'You were expelled!'
Tell us about your summer and I'll tell you about mine.'
Hagrid glared at him through his one open eye. Harry looked right back, anexpression of innocent determination on his face.
'Oh, all righ',' Hagrid said in a resigned voice.
He bent down and tugged the dragon steak out of Fang's mouth.
'Oh, Hagrid, don't, it's not hygien—' Hermione began, but Hagrid hadalready slapped the meat back over his swollen eye.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

He took another fortifying gulp of tea, then said, 'Well, we set off righ' afterterm ended -'
'Madame Maxime went with you, then?' Hermione interjected.

376 HARRY POTTER'Yeah, tha's righ',' said Hagrid, and a softened expression appeared on the fewinches of face that were not obscured by beard or green steak. 'Yeah, it was jus' the pair of us. An' I'll tell yeh this, she's not afraid of roughin' it, Olympe. Yehknow, she's a fine, well-dressed woman, an' knowin' where we was goin' Iwondered 'ow she'd feel abou' clamberin' over boulders an' sleepin' in caves an' tha', bu' she never complained once.'
'You knew where you were going?' Harry repeated. 'You knew where thegiants were?'
'Well, Dumbledore knew, an' he told us,' said Hagrid.
'Are they hidden?' asked Ron. 'Is it a secret, where they are?'
'Not really' said Hagrid, shaking his shaggy head. 'It's jus' that mos' wizardsaren' bothered where they are, 's'long as it's a good long way away. But wherethey are's very difficult ter get ter, fer humans anyway, so we neededDumbledore's instructions. Took us abou' a month ter get there -'
'A month?' said Ron, as though he had never heard of a journey lasting such aridiculously long time.
'But - why couldn't you just grab a Portkey or something?'
There was an odd expression in Hagrid's unobscured eye as he surveyed Ron;
it was almost pitying.
'We're bein' watched, Ron,' he said gruffly.
'What d'you mean?'
'Yeh don' understand,' said Hagrid. The Ministry's keepin' an eye onDumbledore an' anyone they reckon's in league with 'im, an' -'
'We know about that,' said Harry quickly keen to hear the rest of Hagrid'sstory, 'we know about the Ministry watching Dumbledore -'
'So you couldn't use magic to get there?' asked Ron, looking thunderstruck,'you had to act like Muggles all the way?'
'Well, not exactly all the way' said Hagrid cagily. 'We jus' had ter be careful,'cause Olympe an' me, we stick out a bit —'
Ron made a stifled noise somewhere between a snort and a sniff and hastilytook a gulp of tea.
'- so we're not hard ter follow. We was pretendin' we was goin' on holidaytogether, so we got inter France an' we made like we IHAGRID'S TALE 377was headin' fer where Olympes school is, 'cause we knew we was bein' tailed by someone from the Ministry. We had to go slow, 'cause I'm notreally s'posed ter use magic an' we knew the Ministry'd be lookin' fer areason ter run us in. But we managed ter give the berk tailin' us the sliproundabou' Dee-John —'
'Ooooh, Dijon?' said Hermione excitedly. 'I've been there on holiday,did you see -?'
She fell silent at the look on Ron's face.
'We chanced a bit o' magic after that an' it wasn' a bad journey. Raninter a couple o' mad trolls on the Polish border an' I had a sligh' disagreement with a vampire in a pub in Minsk, bu' apart from tha' couldn't'a bin smoother.
'An' then we reached the place, an' we started trekkin' up through themountains, lookin' fer signs of 'em ...

We had ter lay off the magic once we got near 'em. Partly 'cause theydon' like wizards an' we didn' want ter put their backs up too soon, an' partly 'cause Dumbledore had warned us You-Know-Who was bound terbe after the giants an' all. Said it was odds on he'd sent a messenger offter them already. Told us ter be very careful of drawin' attention terourselves as we got nearer in case there was Death Eaters around.'
Hagrid paused for a long draught of tea.
'Go on!' said Harry urgently.
'Found 'em,' said Hagrid baldly. 'Went over a ridge one nigh' an' therethey was, spread ou' underneath us. Little fires burnin' below an' hugeshadows ... it was like watchin' bits o' the mountain movin'.'
'How big are they?' asked Ron in a hushed voice.
"Bout twenty feet,' said Hagrid casually. 'Some o' the bigger onesmighta bin twenty-five.'
'And how many were there?' asked Harry.
'I reckon abou' seventy or eighty,' said Hagrid.
'Is that all?' said Hermione.
'Yep,' said Hagrid sadly, 'eighty left, an' there was loads once, mustabin a hundred diff'rent tribes from all over the world. Bu' they've bindyin' out fer ages. Wizards killed a few, o' course, bu' mostly they killedeach other, an' now they're dyin' out faster than 378 HARRY POTTERever. They're not made ter live bunched up together like tha'. Dumbledore says it'sour fault, it was the wizards who forced 'em to go an' made 'em live a good longway from us an' they had no choice bu' ter stick together fer their own protection.'
'So,' said Harry, 'y° them and then what?' u saw'Well, we waited till morning, didn' want ter go sneakin' up on 'em in the dark,fer our own safety,' said Hagrid. "Bout three in the mornin' they fell asleep jus' where they was sittin'. We didn' dare sleep. Fer one thing, we wanted ter makesure none of 'em woke up an' came up where we were, an' fer another, the snorin' was unbelievable. Caused an avalanche near mornin'.
'Anyway, once it was light we wen' down ter see 'em.'
'Just like that?' said Ron, looking awestruck. 'You just walked right into a giantcamp?'
'Well, Dumbledore'd told us how ter do it,' said Hagrid. 'Give the Gurg gifts,show some respect, yeh know.'
'Give the what gifts?' asked Harry.
'Oh, the Gurg - means the chief.'
'How could you tell which one was the Gurg?' asked Ron.
Hagrid grunted in amusement.
'No problem,' he said. 'He was the biggest, the ugliest an' the laziest. Sittin' there waitin' ter be brought food by the others. Dead goats an' such like. Name o' Karkus. I'd put him at twenty-two, twenty-three feet an' the weight o' a couple o' bull elephants. Skin like rhino hide an' all.'
'And you just walked up to him?' said Hermione breathlessly.
'Well ... down ter him, where he was lyin' in the valley. They was in this dipbetween four pretty high mountains, see, beside a mountain lake, an' Karkus waslyin' by the lake roarin' at the others ter feed him an' his wife. Olympe an' I wentdown the mountainside -'
'But didn't they try and kill you when they saw you?' asked Ron incredulously.
'It was def'nitely on some o' their minds,' said Hagrid, shrugging, 'but we didwhat Dumbledore told us ter do, which was ter hold our gift up high an' keep oureyes on the Gurg an' ignore the others. So tha's what we did. An' the rest of 'emwent quiet an'

HAGRID'S TALE 379watched us pass an' we got right up ter Karkus's feet an' we bowed an' put ourpresent down in front o' him.'
'What do you give a giant?' asked Ron eagerly. 'Food?'
'Nah, he can get food all righ' fer himself,' said Hagrid. 'We took him magic.
Giants like magic, jus' don' like us usin' it against 'em. Anyway, that firs' day wegave 'im a branch o' Gubraithian fire.'
Hermione said, 'Wow!' softly, but Harry and Ron both frowned in puzzlement.
'A branch of -?'
'Everlasting fire,' said Hermione irritably, 'you ought to know that by now.
Professor Flitwick's mentioned it at least twice in class!'
'Well, anyway,' said Hagrid quickly, intervening before Ron could answerback, 'Dumbledore'd bewitched this branch to burn fer evermore, which isn' somethin' any wizard could do, an' so I lies it down in the snow by Karkus's feetand says, "A gift to the Gurg of the giants from Albus Dumbledore, who sendshis respectful greetings."'
'And what did Karkus say?' asked Harry eagerly.
'Nothin',' said Hagrid. 'Didn' speak English.'
'You're kidding!'
'Didn' matter,' said Hagrid imperturbably, 'Dumbledore had warned us tha' migh' happen. Karkus knew enough to yell fer a couple o' giants who knew ourlingo an' they translated fer us.'
'And did he like the present?' asked Ron.
'Oh yeah, it went down a storm once they understood what it was,' saidHagrid, turning his dragon steak over to press the cooler side to his swollen eye.
'Very pleased. So then I said, "Albus Dumbledore asks the Gurg to speak with hismessenger when he returns tomorrow with another gift."'
Why couldn't you speak to them that day?' asked Hermione.
'Dumbledore wanted us ter take it very slow,' said Hagrid. 'Let 'em see wekept our promises. We'll come back tomorrow with another present, an' then wedo come back with another present - gives a good impression, see? An' givesthem time ter test out the firs' present an' find out it's a good one, an' get 'emeager fer more. In any case, giants like Karkus - overload 'em with informationan'

380 HARRY POTTERthey'll kill yeh jus' to simplify things. So we bowed outta the way an' wentoff an' found ourselves a nice little cave ter spend that night in an' thefollowin' mornin' we went back an' this time we found Karkus sittin' upwaitin' fer us lookin' all eager.'
'And you talked to him?'
'Oh yeah. Firs' we presented him with a nice battle helmet -goblin-madean' indestructible, yeh know - an' then we sat down an' we talked.'
'What did he say?'
'Not much,' said Hagrid. 'Listened mostly. Bu' there were good signs. He'dheard o' Dumbledore, heard he'd argued against the killin' o' the last giants inBritain. Karkus seemed ter be quite int'rested in what Dumbledore had tersay. An' a few o' the others, 'specially the ones who had some English, theygathered round an' listened too. We were hopeful when we left that day.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Promised ter come back next mornin' with another present. ..;..
'Bu' that night it all wen' wrong.' ^:
What d'you mean?' said Ron quickly.
'Well, like I say, they're not meant ter live together, giants,' said Hagridsadly. 'Not in big groups like that. They can' help themselves, they half killeach other every few weeks. The men fight each other an' the women fighteach other; the remnants of the old tribes fight each other, an' that's evenwithout squabbles over food an' the best fires an' sleepin' spots. Yeh'd think,seein' as how their whole race is abou' finished, they'd lay off each other, bu'
...'
Hagrid sighed deeply.
That night a fight broke out, we saw it from the mouth of our cave, lookin' down on the valley. Went on fer hours, yeh wouldn' believe the noise. An' when the sun came up the snow was scarlet an' his head was lyin' at thebottom o' the lake.'
'Whose head?' gasped Hermione.
'Karkus's,' said Hagrid heavily. There was a new Gurg, Golgomath.' Hesighed deeply. 'Well, we hadn' bargained on a new Gurg two days after we'dmade friendly contact with the firs' one, an' we had a funny feelin' Golgomath wouldn' be so keen ter listen to us, bu' we had ter try.'
i

HAGRID'S TALE 381'You went to speak to him?' asked Ron incredulously. 'After you'd watchedhim rip off another giant's head?'
'Course we did,' said Hagrid, 'we hadn' gone all that way ter give up after twodays! We wen' down with the next present we'd meant ter give ter Karkus.
'I knew it was no go before I'd opened me mouth. He was sitting therewearin' Karkus's helmet, leerin' at us as we got nearer. He's massive, one o' thebiggest ones there. Black hair an' matchin' teeth an' a necklace o' bones. Humanlookin' bones, some of 'em. Well, I gave it a go - held out a great roll o' dragonskin - an' said, "A gift fer the Gurg of the giants —" Nex' thing I knew, I washangin' upside-down in the air by me feet, two of his mates had grabbed me.'
Hermione clapped her hands to her mouth.
'How did you get out of that?' asked Harry.
'Wouldn'ta done if Olympe hadn' bin there,' said Hagrid. 'She pulled out herwand an' did some o' the fastes' spellwork I've ever seen. Ruddy marvellous. Hitthe two holdin' me right in the eyes with Conjunctivitus Curses an' they droppedme straightaway -bu' we were in trouble then, 'cause we'd used magic against'em, an' that's what giants hate abou' wizards. We had ter leg it an' we knewthere was no way we was going ter be able ter march inter the camp again.'
'Blimey, Hagrid,' said Ron quietly.
'So, how come it's taken you so long to get home if you were only there forthree days?' asked Hermione.
We didn' leave after three days!' said Hagrid, looking outraged. 'Dumbledorewas relyin' on us!'
'But you've just said there was no way you could go back!'
'Not by daylight we couldn', no. We just had ter rethink a bit. Spent a coupleo' days lyin' low up in the cave an' watchin'. An' wha' we saw wasn' good.'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Did he rip off more heads?' asked Hermione, sounding squeamish.
'No,' said Hagrid, 'I wish he had.'
'What d'you mean?'
'I mean we soon found out he didn' object ter all wizards - just us.'

382 HARRY POTTER'Death Eaters?' said Harry quickly.
'Yep,' said Hagrid darkly. 'Couple of 'em were visitin' him ev'ry day, bringin' gifts ter the Gurg, an' he wasn' dangling them upside-down.'
'How d'you know they were Death Eaters?' said Ron.
'Because I recognised one of 'em,' Hagrid growled. 'Macnair, remember him?
Bloke they sent ter kill Buckbeak? Maniac, he is. Likes killin' as much asGolgomath; no wonder they were gettin' on so well.'
'So Macnairs persuaded the giants to join You-Know-Who?' said Hermionedesperately.
'Hold yer Hippogriffs, I haven' finished me story yet!' said Hagridindignantly, who, considering he had not wanted to tell them anything in the firstplace, now seemed to be rather enjoying himself. 'Me an' Olympe talked it overan' we agreed, jus' 'cause the Gurg looked like favourin' You-Know-Who didn' mean all of 'em would. We had ter try an' persuade some o' the others, the oneswho hadn' wanted Golgomath as Gurg.'
'How could you tell which ones they were?' asked Ron.
'Well, they were the ones bein' beaten to a pulp, weren' they?' said Hagridpatiently. The ones with any sense were keepin' outta Golgomath's way, hidin' out in caves roun' the gully jus' like we were. So we decided we'd go pokin' round the caves by night an' see if we couldn' persuade a few o' them.'
'You went poking around dark caves looking for giants?' said Ron, with awedrespect in his voice.
'Well, it wasn' the giants who worried us most,' said Hagrid. We were moreconcerned abou' the Death Eaters. Dumbledore had told us before we wen' notter tangle with 'em if we could avoid it, an' the trouble was they knew we wasaround — 'spect Golgomath told 'em abou' us. At night, when the giants weresleepin' an' we wanted ter be creepin' inter the caves, Macnair an' the other onewere sneakin' round the mountains lookin' fer us. I was hard put to stop Olympejumpin' out at 'em,' said Hagrid, the corners of his mouth lifting his wild beard,'she was rarin' ter attack 'em ... she's somethin' when she's roused, Olympe ... fiery, yeh know ... 'spect it's the French in her ...'

HAGRID'S TALE 383Hagrid gazed misty-eyed into the fire. Harry allowed him thirty seconds ofreminiscence before clearing his throat loudly.
'So, what happened? Did you ever get near any of the other giants?'
'What? Oh ... oh, yeah, we did. Yeah, on the third night after Karkus waskilled we crept outta the cave we'd bin hidin' in an' headed back down inter thegully, keepin' our eyes skinned fer the Death Eaters. Got inside a few o' thecaves, no go - then, in abou' the sixth one, we found three giants hidin'.'
'Cave must've been cramped,' said Ron.
'Wasn' room ter swing a Kneazle,' said Hagrid.
'Didn't they attack you when they saw you?' asked Hermione.
'Probably woulda done if they'd bin in any condition,' said Hagrid, 'but theywas badly hurt, all three o' them; Golgomath's lot had beaten 'em unconscious; they'd woken up an' crawled inter the nearest shelter they could find. Anyway,one o' them had a bit of English an' 'e translated fer the others, an' what we hadter say didn' seem ter go down too badly. So we kep' goin' back, visitin' thewounded ... I reckon we had abou' six or seven o' them convinced at one poin'.'

'Six or seven?' said Ron eagerly. 'Well that's not bad - are they going to comeover here and start fighting You-Know-Who with us?'
But Hermione said, 'What do you mean "at one point", Hagrid?'
Hagrid looked at her sadly.
'Golgomath's lot raided the caves. The ones tha' survived didn' wan' no moreter to do with us after that.'
'So ... so there aren't any giants coming?' said Ron, looking disappointed.
'Nope,' said Hagrid, heaving a deep sigh as he turned over his steak andapplied the cooler side to his face, 'but we did wha' we meant ter do, we gave 'emDumbledore's message an' some o' them heard it an' I spect some o' them'llremember it. Jus' maybe, them that don' want ter stay around Golgomath'll moveoutta the mountains, an' there's gotta be a chance they'll remember Dumbledore'sfriendly to 'em ... could be they'll come.'
Snow was filling up the window now. Harry became aware that 384 HARRY POTTERthe knees of his robes were soaked through: Fang was droolingwith his head in Harry's lap.
'Hagrid?' said Hermione quietly after a while.
'Mmm?'
'Did you ... was there any sign of ... did you hear anything about your ... your ... mother while you were there?'
Hagrid's unobscured eye rested upon her and Hermione looked rather scared.
'I'm sorry ... I ... forget it -'
'Dead,' Hagrid grunted. 'Died years ago. They told me.'
'Oh ... I'm ... I'm really sorry' said Hermione in a very small voice. Hagridshrugged his massive shoulders.
'No need,' he said shortly. 'Can't remember her much. Wasn' a great mother.'
They were silent again. Hermione glanced nervously at Harry and Ron, plainlywanting them to speak.
'But you still haven't explained how you got in this state, Hagrid,' Ron said,gesturing towards Hagrid's bloodstained face.
'Or why you're back so late,' said Harry. 'Sirius says Madame Maxime got backages ago -'
'Who attacked you?' said Ron.
'I haven' bin attacked!' said Hagrid emphatically. T -'
But the rest of his words were drowned in a sudden outbreak of rapping on thedoor. Hermione gasped; her mug slipped through her fingers and smashed on thefloor; Fang yelped. All four of them stared at the window beside the doorway. Theshadow of somebody small and squat rippled across the thin curtain.
'It's her!' Ron whispered.
'Get under here!' Harry said quickly; seizing the Invisibility Cloak, he whirledit over himself and Hermione while Ron tore around the table and dived under theCloak as well. Huddled together, they backed away into a corner. Fang wasbarking madly at the door. Hagrid looked thoroughly confused.
'Hagrid, hide our mugs!'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Hagrid seized Harry and Ron's mugs and shoved them under the cushion inFang's basket. Fang was now leaping up at the door; Hagrid pushed him out of theway with his foot and pulled it open.

HAGRID'S TALE 385Professor Umbridge was standing in the doorway wearing her green tweedcloak and a matching hat with earflaps. Lips pursed, she leaned back so as to seeHagrid's face; she barely reached his navel.

'So,' she said slowly and loudly, as though speaking to somebody deaf.

'You're Hagrid, are you?'

Without waiting for an answer she strolled into the room, her bulging eyesrolling in every direction.

'Get away,' she snapped, waving her handbag at Fang, who had bounded upto her and was attempting to lick her face.

'Er - I don' want ter be rude,' said Hagrid, staring at her, 'but who the ruddyhell are you?'

'My name is Dolores Umbridge.'

Her eyes were sweeping the cabin. Twice they stared directly into the cornerwhere Harry stood, sandwiched between Ron and Hermione.

'Dolores Umbridge?' Hagrid said, sounding thoroughly confused. 'I thoughtyou were one o' them Ministry - don' you work with Fudge?'

'I was Senior Undersecretary to the Minister, yes,' said Umbridge, nowpacing around the cabin, taking in every tiny detail within, from the haversackagainst the wall to the abandoned travelling cloak. 'I am now the DefenceAgainst the Dark Arts teacher -'

Tha's brave of yeh,' said Hagrid, 'there's not many'd take tha' job any more.'

'- and Hogwarts High Inquisitor,' said Umbridge, giving no sign that she hadheard him.

'Wha's that?' said Hagrid, frowning.

'Precisely what I was going to ask,' said Umbridge, pointing at the brokenshards of china on the floor that had been Hermione's mug.

'Oh,' said Hagrid, with a most unhelpful glance towards the corner whereHarry, Ron and Hermione stood hidden, 'oh, tha' was ... was Fang. He broke amug. So I had ter use this one instead.'

Hagrid pointed to the mug from which he had been drinking, one hand stillclamped over the dragon steak pressed to his eye. Umbridge stood facing himnow, taking in every detail of his appearance instead of the cabin's.

386 HARRY POTTER'I heard voices,' she said quietly.

'I was talkin' ter Fang,' said Hagrid stoutly.

'And was he talking back to you?'

'Well ... in a manner o' speakin',' said Hagrid, looking uncomfortable. 'Isometimes say Fang's near enough human -'

There are three sets of footprints in the snow leading from the castle doors toyour cabin,' said Umbridge sleekly.

Hermione gasped; Harry clapped a hand over her mouth. Luckily, Fang wassniffing loudly around the hem of Professor Umbridge's robes and she did notappear to have heard.

'Well, 1 on'y jus' got back,' said Hagrid, waving an enormous hand at thehaversack. 'Maybe someone came ter call earlier an' I missed 'em.'

'There are no footsteps leading away from your cabin door.'

'Well, I ... 1 don' know why that'd be ..,' said Hagrid, tugging nervously at hisbeard and again glancing towards the corner where Harry, Ron and Hermionestood, as though asking for help. 'Erm ...'

Umbridge wheeled round and strode the length of the cabin, looking aroundcarefully. She bent and peered under the bed. She opened Hagrid's cupboards. Shepassed within two inches of where Harry, Ron and Hermione stood pressed againstthe wall; Harry actually pulled in his stomach as she walked by. After lookingcarefully inside the enormous cauldron Hagrid used for cooking, she wheeledround again and said, 'What has happened to you? How did you sustain thoseinjuries?'
Hagrid hastily removed the dragon steak from his face, which in Harrys opinionwas a mistake, because the black and purple bruising all around his eye was nowclearly visible, not to mention the large amount of fresh and congealed blood onhis face. 'Oh, 1 ... had a bit of an accident,' he said lamely.
'What sort of accident?'
'I - I tripped.'
'You tripped,' she repeated coolly.
'Yeah, tha's right. Over ... over a friend's broomstick. I don' fly, meself. Well,look at the size o' me, I don' reckon there's a broomstick that'd hold me. Friend o' mine breeds Abraxan horses, 1 dunno
HAGRID'S TALE 387if you've ever seen 'em, big beasts, winged, yeh know, I've had a bit of a ride onone o' them an' it was -'
'Where have you been?' asked Umbridge, cutting coolly through Hagrid'sbabbling.
"Where've I -?'
'Been, yes,' she said. Term started two months ago. Another teacher has hadto cover your classes. None of your colleagues has been able to give me anyinformation as to your whereabouts. You left no address. Where have youbeen?'
There was a pause in which Hagrid stared at her with his newly uncoveredeye. Harry could almost hear his brain working furiously.
'I - I've been away for me health,' he said.
'For your health,' repeated Professor Umbridge. Her eyes travelled overHagrid's discoloured and swollen face; dragon blood dripped gently and silentlyon to his waistcoat. T see.'
'Yeah,' said Hagrid, 'bit o' - o' fresh air, yeh know -'
'Yes, as gamekeeper fresh air must be so difficult to come by,' said Umbridgesweetly. The small patch of Hagrid's face that was not black or purple, flushed.
'Well — change o' scene, yeh know -'
'Mountain scenery?' said Umbridge swiftly.
She knows, Harry thought desperately.
'Mountains?' Hagrid repeated, clearly thinking fast. 'Nope, South o' Francefer me. Bit o' sun an' ... an' sea.'
'Really?' said Umbridge. 'You don't have much of a tan.'
'Yeah ... well... sensitive skin,' said Hagrid, attempting an ingratiating smile.
Harry noticed that two of his teeth had been knocked out. Umbridge looked athim coldly; his smile faltered. Then she hoisted her handbag a little higher intothe crook of her arm and said, T shall, of course, be informing the Minister ofyour late return.'
'Righ',' said Hagrid, nodding.
'You ought to know, too, that as High Inquisitor it is my unfortunate butnecessary duty to inspect my fellow teachers. So I daresay we shall meet againsoon enough.'
She turned sharply and marched back to the door.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'You're inspectin' us?' Hagrid repeated blankly, looking after her.

388 HARRY POTTER'Oh, yes,' said Umbridge softly, looking back at him with her hand on the doorhandle. The Ministry is determined to weed out unsatisfactory teachers, Hagrid.
Goodnight.'
She left, closing the door behind her with a snap. Harry made to pull off theInvisibility Cloak but Hermione seized his wrist.
'Not yet,' she breathed in his ear. 'She might not be gone yet.'
Hagrid seemed to be thinking the same way; he stumped across the room andpulled back the curtain an inch or so.
'She's goin' back ter the castle,' he said in a low voice. 'Blimey ... inspectin' people, is she?'
'Yeah,' said Harry, pulling off the Cloak. Trelawney's on probation already ...'
'Um ... what sort of thing are you planning to do with us in class, Hagrid?' askedHermione.
'Oh, don' you worry abou' that, I've got a great load o' lessons planned,' saidHagrid enthusiastically, scooping up his dragon steak from the table and slapping itover his eye again. 'I've bin keepin' a couple o' creatures saved fer yer OWL year;
you wait, they're somethin' really special.'
'Erm ... special in what way?' asked Hermione tentatively.
Tm not sayin',' said Hagrid happily. 'I don' want ter spoil the surprise.'
'Look, Hagrid,' said Hermione urgently, dropping all pretence, 'ProfessorUmbridge won't be at all happy if you bring anything to class that's too dangerous.'
'Dangerous?' said Hagrid, looking genially bemused. 'Don' be silly, I wouldn' give yeh anythin' dangerous! I mean, all righ', they can look after themselves -'
'Hagrid, you've got to pass Umbridge s inspection, and to do that it would reallybe better if she saw you teaching us how to look after Porlocks, how to tell thedifference between Knarls and hedgehogs, stuff like that!' said Hermione earnestly.
'But tha's not very interestin', Hermione,' said Hagrid. The stuff I've got's muchmore impressive. I've bin bringin' 'em on fer years, I reckon I've got the on'ydomestic herd in Britain.'
'Hagrid ... please ...' said Hermione, a note of real desperation in her voice.
'Umbridge is looking for any excuse to get rid ofHA GRID'S TALE389 teachers she thinks are too close to Dumbledore. Please, Hagrid, teach ussomething dull that's bound to come up in our OWL.'

But Hagrid merely yawned widely and cast a one-eyed look of longingtowards the vast bed in the corner.
'Lis'en, it's bin a long day an' it's late,' he said, patting Hermione gently on theshoulder, so that her knees gave way and hit the floor with a thud. 'Oh - sorry -'
He pulled her back up by the neck of her robes. 'Look, don' you go worryin' abou' me, I promise yeh I've got really good stuff planned fer yer lessons nowI'm back ... now you lot had better get back up to the castle, an' don' forget terwipe yer footprints out behind yeh!'
'I dunno if you got through to him,' said Ron a short while later when, havingchecked that the coast was clear, they walked back up to the castle through thethickening snow, leaving no trace behind them due to the Obliteration CharmHermione was performing as they went.

POTTERBOOKS

Then I'll go back again tomorrow,' said Hermione determinedly. Til plan hislessons for him if I have to. I don't care if she throws out Trelawney but she's notgetting rid of Hagrid!'

— CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE —

The Eye of theSnakeHermione ploughed her way back toHagrid's cabin through two feet of snow onSunday morning. Harry and Ron wanted togo with her, but their mountain ofhomework had reached an alarming heightagain, so they remained grudgingly in thecommon room, trying to ignore the gleefulshouts drifting up from the groundsoutside, where students were enjoyingthemselves skating on the frozen lake,tobogganing and, worst of all, bewitchingsnowballs to zoom up to Gryffindor Towerand rap hard on the windows.

'Oi!' bellowed Ron, finally losingpatience and sticking his head out of thewindow, 'I am a prefect and if one moresnowball hits this window - OUCH!'

He withdrew his head sharply, his facecovered in snow.

'It's Fred and George,' he said bitterly,slamming the window behind him. 'Gits ...'

Hermione returned from Hagrid's justbefore lunch, shivering slightly, her robesdamp to the knees.

'So?' said Ron, looking up when sheentered. 'Got all his lessons planned forhim?'

'Well, I tried,' she said dully, sinkinginto a chair beside Harry. She pulled outher wand and gave it a complicated littlewave so that hot air streamed out of the tip;

she then pointed this at her robes, whichbegan to steam as they dried out. 'Hewasn't even there when 1 arrived, I wasknocking for at least half an hour. And thenhe came stumping out of the Forest -'

Harry groaned. The Forbidden Forestwas teeming with the kind of creaturesmost likely to get Hagrid the sack. 'What'she keeping in there? Did he say?' he asked.

THE EYE OF THE SNAKE 391'No,' said Hermione miserably. 'He says he wants them to be a surprise. 1tried to explain about Umbridge, but he just doesn't get it. He kept sayingnobody in their right mind would rather study Knarls than Chimaeras - oh, Idon't think he's got a Chimaera,' she added at the appalled look on Harry andRon's faces, 'but that's not for lack of trying, from what he said about how hard itis to get eggs. 1 don't know how many times I told him he'd be better offfollowing Grubbly-Plank's plan, I honestly don't think he listened to half of what1 said. He's in a bit of a funny mood, you know. He still won't say how he got allthose injuries.'

Hagrid's reappearance at the staff table at breakfast next day was not greetedby enthusiasm from all students. Some, like Fred, George and Lee, roared withdelight and sprinted up the aisle between the Gryffindor and Hufflepuff tables towring Hagrid's enormous hand; others, like Parvati and Lavender, exchangedgloomy looks and shook their heads. Harry knew that many of them preferredProfessor Grubbly-Plank's lessons, and the worst of it was that a very small,unbiased part of him knew that they had good reason: Grubbly-Plank's idea of aninteresting class was not one where there was a risk that somebody might havetheir head ripped off.

It was with a certain amount of apprehension that Harry, Ron and Hermioneheaded down to Hagrid's on Tuesday, heavily muffled against the cold. Harrywas worried, not only about what Hagrid might have decided to teach them, butalso about how the rest of the class, particularly Malfoy and his cronies, wouldbehave if Umbridge was watching them.

However, the High Inquisitor was nowhere to be seen as they struggledthrough the snow towards Hagrid, who stood waiting for them on the edge of theForest. He did not present a reassuring sight; the bruises that had been purple onSaturday night were now tinged with green and yellow and some of his cuts stillseemed to be bleeding. Harry could not understand this: had Hagrid perhapsbeen attacked by some creature whose venom prevented the wounds it inflictedfrom healing? As though to complete the ominous picture, Hagrid was carryingwhat looked like half a dead cow over his shoulder.

392 HARRY POTTER'We're workin' in here today!' Hagrid called happily to the approachingstudents, jerking his head back at the dark trees behind him. 'Bit more sheltered!
Anyway, they prefer the dark.'
'What prefers the dark?' Harry heard Malfoy say sharply to Crabbe and Goyle,a trace of panic in his voice. 'What did he say prefers the dark - did you hear?'
Harry remembered the only other occasion on which Malfoy had entered theForest before now; he had not been very brave then, either. He smiled to himself; after the Quidditch match anything that caused Malfoy discomfort was all rightwith him.
'Ready?' said Hagrid cheerfully, looking around at the class. 'Right, well, I'vebin savin' a trip inter the Forest fer yer fifth year. Thought we'd go an' see thesecreatures in their natural habitat. Now, what we're studyin' today is pretty rare, 1reckon I'm probably the on'y person in Britain who's managed ter train 'em.'
'And you're sure they're trained, are you?' said Malfoy, the panic in his voiceeven more pronounced. 'Only it wouldn't be the first time you'd brought wild stuffto class, would it?'
The Slytherins murmured agreement and a few Gryffindors looked as thoughthey thought Malfoy had a fair point, too.
'Course they're trained,' said Hagrid, scowling and hoisting the dead cow a littlehigher on his shoulder.
'So what happened to your face, then?' demanded Malfoy.
'Mind yer own business!' said Hagrid, angrily. 'Now, if yeh've finished askin' stupid questions, follow me!'
He turned and strode straight into the Forest. Nobody seemed much disposed tofollow. Harry glanced at Ron and Hermione, who sighed but nodded, and the threeof them set off after Hagrid, leading the rest of the class.
They walked for about ten minutes until they reached a place where the treesstood so closely together that it was as dark as twilight and there was no snow atall on the ground. With a grunt, Hagrid deposited his half a cow on the ground,stepped back and turned to face his class, most of whom were creeping from treeto tree towards him, peering around nervously as though expecting to be set uponat any moment.
'Gather roun', gather roun',' Hagrid encouraged. 'Now, they'll
THE EYE OF THE SNAKE 393be attracted by the smell o' the meat but I'm goin' ter give 'em acall anyway, 'cause they'll like ter know it's me.'
He turned, shook his shaggy head to get the hair out of his face and gave anodd, shrieking cry that echoed through the dark trees like the call of somemonstrous bird. Nobody laughed: most of them looked too scared to make asound.
Hagrid gave the shrieking cry again. A minute passed in which the classcontinued to peer nervously over their shoulders and around trees for a firstglimpse of whatever it was that was coming. And then, as Hagrid shook his hairback for a third time and expanded his enormous chest, Harry nudged Ron andpointed into the black space between two gnarled yew trees.
A pair of blank, white, shining eyes were growing larger through the gloomand a moment later the dragonish face, neck and then skeletal body of a great,black, winged horse emerged from the darkness. It surveyed the class for a fewseconds, swishing its long black tail, then bowed its head and began to tear fleshfrom the dead cow with its pointed fangs.

A great wave of relief broke over Harry. Here at last was proof that he hadnot imagined these creatures, that they were real: Hagrid knew about them too.
He looked eagerly at Ron, but Ron was still staring around into the trees andafter a few seconds he whispered, 'Why doesn't Hagrid call again?'
Most of the rest of the class were wearing expressions as confused andnervously expectant as Ron's and were still gazing everywhere but at the horsestanding feet from them. There were only two other people who seemed to beable to see them: a stringy Slytherin boy standing just behind Goyle waswatching the horse eating with an expression of great distaste on his face; andNeville, whose eyes were following the swishing progress of the long black tail.
'Oh, an' here comes another one!' said Hagrid proudly, as a second blackhorse appeared out of the dark trees, folded its leathery wings closer to its bodyand dipped its head to gorge on the meat. 'Now ... put yer hands up, who can see'em?'
Immensely pleased to feel that he was at last going to understand the mysteryof these horses, Harry raised his hand. Hagrid nodded at him.

394 HARRY POTTER'Yeah ... yeah, I knew you'd be able ter, Harry,' he said seriously. 'An' you too,Neville, eh? An' -'
'Excuse me,' said Malfoy in a sneering voice, 'but what exactly are we supposedto be seeing?'
For an answer, Hagrid pointed at the cow carcass on the ground. The wholeclass stared at it for a few seconds, then several people gasped and Parvatisquealed. Harry understood why: bits of flesh stripping themselves away from thebones and vanishing into thin air had to look very odd indeed.
'What's doing it?' Parvati demanded in a terrified voice, retreating behind thenearest tree. 'What's eating it?'
Thestrals,' said Hagrid proudly and Hermione gave a soft 'Oh!' ofcomprehension at Harry's shoulder. 'Hogwarts has got a whole herd of 'em in here.
Now, who knows -?'
'But they're really, really unlucky!' interrupted Parvati, looking alarmed. They'resupposed to bring all sorts of horrible misfortune on people who see them.
Professor Trelawney told me once -'
'No, no, no,' said Hagrid, chuckling, 'tha's jus' superstition, that is, they aren' unlucky, they're dead clever an' useful! Course, this lot don' get a lot o' work, it'smainly jus' pullin' the school carriages unless Dumbledore's takin' a long journeyan' don' want ter Apparate - an' here's another couple, look -'
Two more horses came quietly out of the trees, one of them passing very close.to Parvati, who shivered and pressed herself closer to the tree, saying, T think 1felt something, I think it's near me!'
'Don' worry, it won' hurt yen,' said Hagrid patiently. 'Righ', now, who can tellme why some o' yeh can see 'em an' some can't?'
Hermione raised her hand.
'Go on then,' said Hagrid, beaming at her.
The only people who can see Thestrals,' she said, 'are people who have seendeath.'
Tha's exactly right,' said Hagrid solemnly, 'ten points ter Gryffindor. Now,Thestrals -'

'Hem, hem.'

Professor Umbridge had arrived. She was standing a few feet

THE EYE OF THE SNAKE 395away from Harry, wearing her green hat and cloak again, her clipboard at the ready.

Hagrid, who had never heard Umbridge's fake cough before, was gazing in someconcern at the closest Thestral, evidently under the impression that it had made thesound.

'Hem, hem.'

'Oh, hello!' Hagrid said, smiling, having located the source of the noise.

'You received the note I sent to your cabin this morning?' said Umbridge, in thesame loud, slow voice she had used with him earlier, as though she were addressingsomebody both foreign and very slow. Telling you that I would be inspecting yourlesson?'

'Oh, yeah,' said Hagrid brightly. 'Glad yeh found the place all righ'! Well, as youcan see - or, I dunno - can you? We're doin' Thestrals today -'

Tm sorry?' said Professor Umbridge loudly, cupping her hand around her ear andfrowning. 'What did you say?'

Hagrid looked a little confused.

'Er - Thestrals!' he said loudly. 'Big - er - winged horses, yeh know!'

He flapped his gigantic arms hopefully. Professor Umbridge raised her eyebrowsat him and muttered as she made a note on her clipboard: 'Has ... to ... resort ... to ...

crude ... sign ... language.'

'Well ... anyway ..." said Hagrid, turning back to the class and looking slightlyflustered, 'erm ... what was I sayin'?'

'Appears ... to ... have ... poor ... short ... term ... memory,' muttered Umbridge,loudly enough for everyone to hear her. Draco Malfoy looked as though Christmashad come a month early; Hermione, on the other hand, had turned scarlet withsuppressed rage.

'Oh, yeah,' said Hagrid, throwing an uneasy glance at Umbridge's clipboard, butploughing on valiantly. 'Yeah, I was gonna tell yeh how come we got a herd. Yeah,so, we started off with a male an' five females. This one,' he patted the first horse tohave appeared, 'name o' Tenebrus, he's my special favourite, firs' one born here in theForest -'

'Are you aware,' Umbridge said loudly, interrupting him, 'that the Ministry ofMagic has classified Thestrals as "dangerous"?'

396 HARRY POTTERHarry's heart sank like a stone, but Hagrid merely chuckled.

Thestrals aren' dangerous! All righ', they might take a bite outta yeh if yehreally annoy them -'

'Shows ... signs ... of... pleasure ... at ... idea ... of... violence,' mutteredUmbridge, scribbling on her clipboard again.

'No - come on!' said Hagrid, looking a little anxious now. 'I mean, a dog'll biteif yeh bait it, won' it - but Thestrals have jus' got a bad reputation because o' thedeath thing - people used ter think they were bad omens, didn' they? Jus' didn' understand, did they?'

Umbridge did not answer; she finished writing her last note, then looked up atHagrid and said, again very loudly and slowly, 'Please continue teaching as usual.

I am going to walk,' she mimed walking (Malfoy and Pansy Parkinson werehaving silent fits of laughter) 'among the students' (she pointed around atindividual members of the class) 'and ask them questions.' She pointed at hermouth to indicate talking.

Hagrid stared at her, clearly at a complete loss to understand why she wasacting as though he did not understand normal English. Hermione had tears offury in her eyes now.
'You hag, you evil hag!' she whispered, as Umbridge walked towards PansyParkinson. 'I know what you're doing, you awful, twisted, vicious -'
'Erm ... anyway,' said Hagrid, clearly struggling to regain the flow of hislesson, 'so - Thestrals. Yeah. Well, there's loads o' good stuff abou' them ...'
'Do you find,' said Professor Umbridge in a ringing voice to Pansy Parkinson,'that you are able to understand Professor Hagrid when he talks?'
Just like Hermione, Pansy had tears in her eyes, but these were tears oflaughter; indeed, her answer was almost incoherent because she was trying tosuppress her giggles.
'No ... because ... well ... it sounds ... like grunting a lot of the timeUmbridge scribbled on her clipboard. The few unbruised bits of Hagrid's faceflushed, but he tried to act as though he had not heard Pansy's answer.

THE EYE OF THE SNAKE 397'Er ... yeah ... good stuff abou' Thestrals. Well, once they're tamed, like thislot, yeh'll never be lost again. 'Mazin' sense o' direction, jus' tell 'em where yehwant ter go -'
'Assuming they can understand you, of course,' said Malfoy loudly, and PansyParkinson collapsed in a fit of renewed giggles. Professor Umbridge smiledindulgently at them and then turned to Neville.
'You can see the Thestrals, Longbottom, can you?' she said.
Neville nodded.
'Who did you see die?' she asked, her tone indifferent.
'My ... my grandad,' said Neville.
'And what do you think of them?' she said, waving her stubby hand at thehorses, who by now had stripped a great deal of the carcass down to bone.
'Erm,' said Neville nervously, with a glance at Hagrid. Well, they're ... er ...
OK ..."
'Students ... are ... too ... intimidated ... to ... admit ... they ... are ... frightened,' muttered Umbridge, making another note on her clipboard.
'No!' said Neville, looking upset. 'No, I'm not scared of them!'
'It's quite all right,' said Umbridge, patting Neville on the shoulder with whatshe evidently intended to be an understanding smile, though it looked more like aleer to Harry. 'Well, Hagrid,' she turned to look up at him again, speaking oncemore in that loud, slow voice, T think I've got enough to be getting along with.
You will receive' (she mimed taking something from the air in front of her) 'theresults of your inspection' (she pointed at the clipboard) 'in ten days' time.' Sheheld up ten stubby little fingers, then, her smile wider and more toadlike thanever before beneath her green hat, she bustled from their midst, leaving Malfoyand Pansy Parkinson in fits of laughter, Hermione actually shaking with fury andNeville looking confused and upset.
That foul, lying, twisting old gargoyle!' stormed Hermione half an hour later,as they made their way back up to the castle through the channels they had madeearlier in the snow. 'You see what she's up to? It's her thing about half-breeds allover again - she's trying to make out Hagrid's some kind of dimwitted troll, justbecause

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

398 HARRY POTTERhe had a giantess for a mother - and oh, it's not fair, that really wasn't a bad lessonat all - I mean, all right, if it had been Blast-Ended Skrewts again, but Thestrals arefine - in fact, for Hagrid, they're really good!'
'Umbridge said they're dangerous,' said Ron.
'Well, it's like Hagrid said, they can look after themselves,' said Hermioneimpatiently, 'and 1 suppose a teacher like Grubbly-Plank wouldn't usually showthem to us before NEWT level, but, well, they are very interesting, aren't they?
The way some people can see them and some can't! 1 wish 1 could.'
'Do you?' Harry asked her quietly.
She looked suddenly horrorstruck.
'Oh, Harry - I'm sorry - no, of course I don't - that was a really stupid thing tosay.'
'It's OK,' he said quickly, 'don't worry'
T'm surprised so many people could see them,' said Ron. Three in a class -'
'Yeah, Weasley, we were just wondering,' said a malicious voice. Unheard byany of them in the muffling snow, Malfoy, Crabbe and Goyle were walking alongright behind them. 'D'you reckon if you saw someone snuff it you'd be able to seethe Quaffle better?'
He, Crabbe and Goyle roared with laughter as they pushed past on their way tothe castle, then broke into a chorus of 'Weasley is our King'. Ron's ears turnedscarlet.
'Ignore them, just ignore them,' intoned Hermione, pulling out her wand andperforming the charm to produce hot air again, so that she could melt them aneasier path through the untouched snow between them and the greenhouses.
*December arrived, bringing with it more snow and a positive avalanche ofhomework for the fifth-years. Ron and Hermione's prefect duties also becamemore and more onerous as Christmas approached. They were called upon tosupervise the decoration of the castle ('You try putting up tinsel when Peeves hasgot the other end and is trying to strangle you with it,' said Ron), to watch overfirst- and second-years spending their break-times inside because of the bitter cold('And they're cheeky little snot-rags, you know,
THE EYE OF THE SNAKE 399we definitely weren't that rude when we were in first year,' said Ron) and topatrol the corridors in shifts with Argus Filch, who suspected that the holidayspirit might show itself in an outbreak of wizard duels ('He's got dung for brains,that one,' said Ron furiously). They were so busy that Hermione had evenstopped knitting elf hats and was fretting that she was down to her last three.
'All those poor elves I haven't set free yet, having to stay here over Christmasbecause there aren't enough hats!'
Harry, who had not had the heart to tell her that Dobby was taking everythingshe made, bent lower over his History of Magic essay. In any case, he did notwant to think about Christmas. For the first time in his school career, he verymuch wanted to spend the holidays away from Hogwarts. Between his Quidditchban and worry about whether or not Hagrid was going to be put on probation, hefelt highly resentful towards the place at the moment. The only thing he reallylooked forward to were the DA meetings, and they would have to stop over theholidays, as nearly everybody in the DA would be spending the time with theirfamilies. Hermione was going skiing with her parents, something that greatlyamused Ron, who had never heard of Muggles strapping narrow strips of woodon to their feet to slide down mountains. Ron was going home to The Burrow.
Harry endured several days of envy before Ron said, in response to Harry askinghim how he was going to get home for Christmas: 'But you're coming too! Didn'tI say? Mum wrote and told me to invite you weeks ago!'

Hermione rolled her eyes, but Harry's spirits soared: the thought of Christmasat The Burrow was truly wonderful, though slightly marred by Harry's guiltyfeeling that he would not be able to spend the holiday with Sirius. He wonderedwhether he could possibly persuade Mrs Weasley to invite his godfather for thefestivities. Even though he doubted whether Dumbledore would permit Sirius toleave Grimmauld Place anyway, he could not help but think Mrs Weasley mightnot want him; they were so often at loggerheads. Sirius had not contacted Harryat all since his last appearance in the fire, and although Harry knew that withUmbridge on constant watch it would be unwise to attempt to contact him, hedid 400 HARRY POTTERnot like to think of Sirius alone in his mother's old house, perhaps pulling a lonelycracker with Kreacher.

Harry arrived early in the Room of Requirement for the last DA meeting beforethe holidays and was very glad he had, because when the torches burst into flamehe saw that Dobby had taken it upon himself to decorate the place for Christmas.
He could tell the elf had done it, because nobody else would have strung ahundred golden baubles from the ceiling, each showing a picture of Harry's faceand bearing the legend: 'HAVE A VERY HARRY CHRISTMAS!'
Harry had only just managed to get the last of them down before the doorcreaked open and Luna Love good entered, looking as dreamy as usual.
'Hello,' she said vaguely, looking around at what remained of the decorations.
These are nice, did you put them up?'
'No,' said Harry, 'it was Dobby the house-elf.'
'Mistletoe,' said Luna dreamily, pointing at a large clump of white berriesplaced almost over Harry's head. He jumped out from under it. 'Good thinking,' said Luna very seriously. 'It's often infested with Nargles.'
Harry was saved the necessity of asking what Nargles are by the arrival ofAngelina, Katie and Alicia. All three of them were breathless and looked verycold.
'Well,' said Angelina dully, pulling off her cloak and throwing it into a corner,'we've finally replaced you.'
'Replaced me?' said Harry blankly.
'You and Fred and George,' she said impatiently. 'We've got another Seeker!'
'Who?' said Harry quickly.
'Ginny Weasley,' said Katie.
Harry gaped at her.
'Yeah, I know,' said Angelina, pulling out her wand and flexing her arm, 'butshe's pretty good, actually. Nothing on you, of course,' she said, throwing him avery dirty look, 'but as we can't have you ...'
Harry bit back the retort he was longing to utter: did she imagine for a secondthat he did not regret his expulsion from the team a hundred times more than shedid?

THEEYEOFTHESNAKE 401'And what about the Beaters?' he asked, trying to keep his voice even.
'Andrew Kirke,' said Alicia without enthusiasm, 'and Jack Sloper. Neither ofthem are brilliant, but compared to the rest of the idiots who turned up ...'

The arrival of Ron, Hermione and Neville brought this depressing discussionto an end, and within five minutes the room was full enough to prevent Harryseeing Angelina's burning, reproachful looks.
'OK,' he said, calling them all to order. 'I thought this evening we should justgo over the things we've done so far, because it's the last meeting before theholidays and there's no point starting anything new right before a three-weekbreak -'
'We're not doing anything new?' said Zacharias Smith, in a disgruntledwhisper loud enough to carry through the room. 'If I'd known that, I wouldn'thave come.'
'We're all really sorry Harry didn't tell you, then,' said Fred loudly.
Several people sniggered. Harry saw Cho laughing and felt the familiarswooping sensation in his stomach, as though he had missed a step goingdownstairs.
'- we can practise in pairs,' said Harry. We'll start with the Impediment Jinx,for ten minutes, then we can get out the cushions and try Stunning again.'
They all divided up obediently; Harry partnered Neville as usual. The roomwas soon full of intermittent cries of 'Impedimenta! 'People froze for a minute orso, during which their partner would stare aimlessly around the room watchingother pairs at work, then would unfreeze and take their turn at the jinx.
Neville had improved beyond all recognition. After a while, when Harry hadunfrozen three times in a row, he had Neville join Ron and Hermione again sothat he could walk around the room and watch the others. When he passed Choshe beamed at him; he resisted the temptation to walk past her several moretimes.
After ten minutes on the Impediment Jinx, they laid out cushions all over thefloor and started practising Stunning again. Space was really too confined toallow them all to work this spell at once; half the group observed the others for awhile, then swapped over.

Harry felt himself positively swelling with pride as he watched them all. True,Neville did Stun Padma Patil rather than Dean, at whom he had been aiming, but itwas a much closer miss than usual, and everybody else had made enormousprogress.
At the end of an hour, Harry called a halt.
'You're getting really good,' he said, beaming around at them. 'When we get backfrom the holidays we can start doing some of the big stuff - maybe even Patronuses.'
There was a murmur of excitement. The room began to clear in the usual twosand threes; most people wished Harry a 'Happy Christmas' as they went. Feelingcheerful, he collected up the cushions with Ron and Hermione and stacked themneatly away. Ron and Hermione left before he did; he hung back a little, becauseCho was still there and he was hoping to receive a 'Merry Christmas' from her.
'No, you go on,' he heard her say to her friend Marietta and his heart gave a joltthat seemed to take it into the region of his Adam's apple.
He pretended to be straightening the cushion pile. He was quite sure they werealone now and waited tor her to speak. Instead, he heard a hearty sniff.
He turned and saw Cho standing in the middle of the room, tears pouring downher face.
'Wha—?'
He didn't know what to do. She was simply standing there, crying silently.
'What's up?' he said, feebly.
She shook her head and wiped her eyes on her sleeve.
'I'm - sorry,' she said thickly. 'I suppose ... it's just ... learning all this stuff ... it justmakes me ... wonder whether ... if he'd known it all ... he'd still be alive.'

Harry's heart sank right back past its usual spot and settled somewhere around hisnavel. He ought to have known. She wanted to talk about Cedric.
'He did know this stuff,' Harry said heavily. 'He was really good at it, or he couldnever have got to the middle of that maze. But if Voldemort really wants to kill you,you don't stand a chance.'

THE EYE OF THE SNAKE 403She hiccoughed at the sound of Voldemort's name, but stared at Harry withoutflinching.
'You survived when you were just a baby,' she said quietly.
'Yeah, well,' said Harry wearily, moving towards the door, 'I dunno why nordoes anyone else, so it's nothing to be proud of.'
'Oh, don't go!' said Cho, sounding tearful again. Tm really sorry to get all upsetlike this ... I didn't mean to ...'
She hiccoughed again. She was very pretty even when her eyes were red andpuffy. Harry felt thoroughly miserable. He'd have been so pleased with just a'Merry Christmas'.
'I know it must be horrible for you,' she said, mopping her eyes on her sleeveagain. 'Me mentioning Cedric, when you saw him die ... I suppose you just want toforget about it?'
Harry did not say anything to this; it was quite true, but he felt heartless sayingit.
'You're a r-really good teacher, you know,' said Cho, with a watery smile. 'I'venever been able to Stun anything before.'
Thanks,' said Harry awkwardly.
They looked at each other for a long moment. Harry felt a burning desire to runfrom the room and, at the same time, a complete inability to move his feet.
'Mistletoe,' said Cho quietly, pointing at the ceiling over his head.
'Yeah,' said Harry. His mouth was very dry. 'It's probably full of Nargles,though.'
'What are Nargles?'
'No idea,' said Harry. She had moved closer. His brain seemed to have beenStunned. 'You'd have to ask Loony. Luna, I mean.'
Cho made a funny noise halfway between a sob and a laugh. She was evennearer to him now. He could have counted the freckles on her nose.
'I really like you, Harry.'
He could not think. A tingling sensation was spreading through him, paralysinghis arms, legs and brain.
She was much too close. He could see every tear clinging to her eyelashes ...

404 HARRY POTTERHe returned to the common room half an hour later to find Hermione and Ron inthe best seats by the fire; nearly everybody else had gone to bed. Hermione waswriting a very long letter; she had already filled half a roll of parchment, whichwas dangling from the edge of the table. Ron was lying on the hearthrug, trying tofinish his Transfiguration homework.
'What kept you?' he asked, as Harry sank into the armchair next to Hermione's.
Harry didn't answer. He was in a state of shock. Half of him wanted to tell Ronand Hermione what had just happened, but the other half wanted to take the secretwith him to the grave.
'Are you all right, Harry?' Hermione asked, peering at him over the tip of herquill.
Harry gave a half-hearted shrug. In truth, he didn't know whether he was allright or not. 'What's up?'

said Ron, hoisting himself up on his elbow to get aclearer view of Harry. 'What's happened?'
Harry didn't quite know how to set about telling them, and still wasn't surewhether he wanted to. Just as he had decided not to say anything, Hermione tookmatters out of his hands.
'Is it Cho?' she asked in a businesslike way. 'Did she corner you after themeeting?'
Numbly surprised, Harry nodded. Ron sniggered, breaking off when Hermionecaught his eye.
'So - er - what did she want?' he asked in a mock casual voice.
'She -' Harry began, rather hoarsely; he cleared his throat and tried again. 'She - er -'
'Did you kiss?' asked Hermione briskly.
Ron sat up so fast he sent his ink bottle flying all over the rug. Disregardingthis completely, he stared avidly at Harry.
'Well?' he demanded.
Harry looked from Ron's expression of mingled curiosity and hilarity toHermione's slight frown, and nodded.
'HA!'
Ron made a triumphant gesture with his fist and went into a raucous peal oflaughter that made several timid-looking second-years over beside the windowjump. A reluctant grin spread over Harry's face as he watched Ron rolling aroundon the hearthrug.

THE EYE OF THE SNAKE 405Hermione gave Ron a look of deep disgust and returned to herletter.
'Well?' Ron said finally, looking up at Harry. 'How was it?'
Harry considered for a moment.
'Wet,' he said truthfully.
Ron made a noise that might have indicated jubilation or disgust, it was hardto tell.
'Because she was crying,' Harry continued heavily.
'Oh,' said Ron, his smile fading slightly. 'Are you that bad at kissing?'
'Dunno,' said Harry, who hadn't considered this, and immediately felt ratherworried. 'Maybe I am.'
'Of course you're not,' said Hermione absently, still scribbling away at herletter.
'How do you know?' said Ron very sharply.
'Because Cho spends half her time crying these days,' said Hermione vaguely.
'She does it at mealtimes, in the loos, all over the place.'
'You'd think a bit of kissing would cheer her up,' said Ron, grinning.
'Ron,' said Hermione in a dignified voice, dipping the point of her quill intoher inkpot, 'you are the most insensitive wart I have ever had the misfortune tomeet.'
'What's that supposed to mean?' said Ron indignantly. 'What sort of personcries while someone's kissing them?'
'Yeah,' said Harry, slightly desperately, 'who does?'
Hermione looked at the pair of them with an almost pitying expression on herface.
'Don't you understand how Cho's feeling at the moment?' she asked.
'No,' said Harry and Ron together.
Hermione sighed and laid down her quill.
'Well, obviously, she's feeling very sad, because of Cedric dying. Then Iexpect she's feeling confused because she liked Cedric and now she likes Harry,and she can't work out who she likes best. Then she'll be feeling guilty, thinkingit's an insult to Cedric's memory to be kissing Harry at all, and she'll be worryingabout

406 HARRY POTTERwhat everyone else might say about her if she starts going out with Harry. Andshe probably can't work out what her feelings towards Harry are, anyway, becausehe was the one who was with Cedric when Cedric died, so that's all very mixed upand painful. Oh, and she's afraid she's going to be thrown off the RavenclawQuidditch team because she's been flying so badly.'

A slightly stunned silence greeted the end of this speech, then Ron said, 'Oneperson can't feel all that at once, they'd explode.'

'Just because you've got the emotional range of a teaspoon doesn't mean we allhave,' said Hermione nastily picking up her quill again.

'She was the one who started it,' said Harry. 'I wouldn'tVe - she just sort ofcame at me - and next thing she's crying all over me - I didn't know what to do —'

'Don't blame you, mate,' said Ron, looking alarmed at the very thought.

'You just had to be nice to her,' said Hermione, looking up anxiously. 'Youwere, weren't you?'

'Well,' said Harry, an unpleasant heat creeping up his face, 'I sort of - patted heron the back a bit.'

Hermione looked as though she was restraining herself from rolling her eyeswith extreme difficulty.

'Well, 1 suppose it could have been worse,' she said. 'Are you going to see heragain?'

Til have to, won't I?' said Harry. 'We've got DA meetings, haven't we?'

'You know what I mean,' said Hermione impatiently.

Harry said nothing. Hermione's words opened up a whole new vista offrightening possibilities. He tried to imagine going somewhere with Cho —Hogsmeade, perhaps - and being alone with her for hours at a time. Of course, shewould have been expecting him to ask her out after what had just happened ... thethought made his stomach clench painfully.

'Oh well,' said Hermione distantly, buried in her letter once more, 'you'll haveplenty of opportunities to ask her.'

'What if he doesn't want to ask her?' said Ron, who had been watching Harrywith an unusually shrewd expression on his face.

THE EYE OF THE SNAKE 407'Don't be silly,' said Hermione vaguely, 'Harry's liked her for ages, haven'tyou, Harry?'

He did not answer. Yes, he had liked Cho for ages, but whenever he hadimagined a scene involving the two of them it had always featured a Cho whowas enjoying herself, as opposed to a Cho who was sobbing uncontrollably intohis shoulder.

'Who're you writing the novel to, anyway?' Ron asked Hermione, trying toread the bit of parchment now trailing on the floor. Hermione hitched it up outof sight.

'Viktor.'

'Krum?'

'How many other Viktors do we know?'

Ron said nothing, but looked disgruntled. They sat in silence for anothertwenty minutes, Ron finishing his Transfiguration essay with many snorts ofimpatience and crossings-out, Hermione writing steadily to the very end of theparchment, rolling it up carefully and sealing it, and Harry staring into the fire,wishing more than anything that Sirius's head would appear there and give himsome advice about girls. But the fire merely crackled lower and lower, until thered-hot embers crumbled into ash and, looking around, Harry saw that theywere, yet again, the last ones in the common room.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Well, night,' said Hermione, yawning widely as she set olf up the girls' staircase.
'What does she see in Krum?' Ron demanded, as he and Harry climbed theboys' stairs.
'Well,' said Harry, considering the matter, 'I s'pose he's older, isn't he ... andhe's an international Quidditch player ...'
'Yeah, but apart from that,' said Ron, sounding aggravated. 'I mean, he's agrouchy git, isn't he?'
'Bit grouchy, yeah,' said Harry, whose thoughts were still on Cho.
They pulled off their robes and put on pyjamas in silence; Dean, Seamus andNeville were already asleep. Harry put his glasses on his bedside table and gotinto bed but did not pull the hangings closed around his four-poster; instead, hestared at the patch of starry sky visible through the window next to Neville'sbed. If he had known, this time last night, that in twenty-four hours' time hewould have kissed Cho Chang ...

408 HARRY POTTER'Night,' grunted Ron, from somewhere to his right.
'Night,' said Harry.
Maybe next time ... if there was a next time ... she'd be a bit happier. Heought to have asked her out; she had probably been expecting it and wasnow really angry with him ... or was she lying in bed, still crying aboutCedric? He did not know what to think. Hermione's explanation had made itall seem more complicated rather than easier to understand.
That's what they should teach us here, he thought, turning over on to hisside, how girls' brains work ... it'd be more useful than Divination, anyway...
Neville snuffled in his sleep. An owl hooted somewhere out in the night.
Harry dreamed he was back in the DA room. Cho was accusing him ofluring her there under false pretences; she said he had promised her ahundred and fifty Chocolate Frog Cards if she showed up. Harry protested... Cho shouted, 'Cedricgave me loads of Chocolate Frog Cards, look!' Andshe pulled out fistfuls of Cards from inside her robes and threw them intothe air. Then she turned into Hermione, who said, 'You did promise her,you know, Harry ... I think you'd better give her something else instead ... how about your Firebolt?' And Harry was protesting that he could not giveCho his Firebolt, because Umbridge had it, and anyway the whole thingwas ridiculous, he'd only come to the DA room to put up some Christmasbaubles shaped like Dobby's head ...
The dream changed ...
His body felt smooth, powerful and flexible. He was gliding betweenshining metal bars, across dark, cold stone ... he was flat against the floor,sliding along on his belly ... it was dark, yet he could see objects aroundhim shimmering in strange, vibrant colours ... he was turning his head ... atfirst glance the corridor was empty ... but no ... a man was sitting on thefloor ahead, his chin drooping on to his chest, his outline gleaming in thedark ...
Harry put out his tongue ... he tasted the man's scent on the air ... he wasalive but drowsy ... sitting in front of a door at the end of the corridor ...

THE EYE OF THE SNAKE 409Harry longed to bite the man ... but he must master the impulse ... he hadmore important work to do ...
But the man was stirring ... a silver Cloak fell from his legs as he jumped tohis feet; and Harry saw his vibrant, blurred outline towering above him, saw awand withdrawn from a belt ... he had no choice ...

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

he reared high from the floorand struck once, twice, three times, plunging his fangs deeply into the man'sflesh, feeling his ribs splinter beneath his jaws, feeling the warm gush of blood...
The man was yelling in pain ... then he fell silent... he slumped backwardsagainst the wall ... blood was splattering on to the floor ...
His forehead hurt terribly ... it was aching fit to burst ...
'Harry! HARRY!'
He opened his eyes. Every inch of his body was covered in icy sweat; hisbed covers were twisted all around him like a strait-jacket; he felt as though awhite-hot poker were being applied to his forehead.
'Harry!'
Ron was standing over him looking extremely frightened. There were morefigures at the foot of Harry's bed. He clutched his head in his hands; the painwas blinding him ... he rolled right over and vomited over the edge of themattress.
'He's really ill,' said a scared voice. 'Should we call someone?'
'Harry! Harry!'
He had to tell Ron, it was very important that he tell him ... taking great gulpsof air, Harry pushed himself up in bed, willing himself not to throw up again,the pain half-blinding him.
'Your dad,' he panted, his chest heaving. 'Your dad's ... been attacked ...'
'What?' said Ron uncomprehendingly.
'Your dad! He's been bitten, it's serious, there was blood everywhere ..."
'I'm going for help,' said the same scared voice, and Harry heard footstepsrunning out of the dormitory.
'Harry, mate,' said Ron uncertainly, 'you ... you were just dreaming ...'
'No!' said Harry furiously; it was crucial that Ron understand.

'It wasn't a dream ... not an ordinary dream ... I was there, I sawit ... I did it ...'
He could hear Seamus and Dean muttering but did not care. The pain in hisforehead was subsiding slightly, though he was still sweating and shiveringfeverishly. He retched again and Ron leapt backwards out of the way.
'Harry, you're not well,' he said shakily. 'Neville's gone for help.'
Tm fine!' Harry choked, wiping his mouth on his pyjamas and shakinguncontrollably. There's nothing wrong with me, it's your dad you've got to worryabout - we need to find out where he is - he's bleeding like mad - I was - it was ahuge snake.'
He tried to get out of bed but Ron pushed him back into it; Dean and Seamuswere still whispering somewhere nearby. Whether one minute passed or ten,Harry did not know; he simply sat there shaking, feeling the pain recede veryslowly from his scar ... then there were hurried footsteps coming up the stairs andhe heard Neville's voice again.
'Over here, Professor.'
Professor McGonagall came hurrying into the dormitory in her tartan dressinggown, her glasses perched lopsidedly on the bridge of her bony nose.
'What is it, Potter? Where does it hurt?'
He had never been so pleased to see her; it was a member of the Order of thePhoenix he needed now, not someone fussing over him and prescribing uselesspotions.
'It's Ron's dad,' he said, sitting up again. 'He's been attacked by a snake and it'sserious, I saw it happen.'
'What do you mean, you saw it happen?' said Professor McGonagall, her darkeyebrows contracting.
'I don't know ... I was asleep and then I was there ...'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'You mean you dreamed this?'

'No!' said Harry angrily; would none of them understand? 'I was having adream at first about something completely different, something stupid ... and thenthis interrupted it. It was real, I didn't imagine it. Mr Weasley was asleep on thefloor and he was attacked by a gigantic snake, there was a load of blood, hecollapsed, someone's got to find out where he is ...'

THE EYE OF THE SNAKE411

Professor McGonagall was gazing at him through her lopsided spectacles asthough horrified at what she was seeing.

Tm not lying and I'm not mad!' Harry told her, his voice rising to a shout. 'Itell you, I saw it happen!'

'I believe you, Potter,' said Professor McGonagall curtly. 'Put on your dressinggown - we're going to see the Headmaster.'

— CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

—St Mungo's Hospitalfor Magical Maladiesand InjuriesHarry was so relieved she was taking him seriously that he did not hesitate, butjumped out of bed at once, pulled on his dressing gown and pushed his glassesback on to his nose.

'Weasley, you ought to come too,' said Professor McGonagall.

They followed Professor McGonagall past the silent figures of Neville, Dean andSeamus, out of the dormitory, down the spiral stairs into the common room,through the portrait hole and off along the Fat Lady's moonlit corridor. Harryfelt as though the panic inside him might spill over at any moment; he wanted torun, to yell for Dumbledore; Mr Weasley was bleeding as they walked along sosedately, and what if those fangs (Harry tried hard not to think 'my fangs') hadbeen poisonous? They passed Mrs Norris, who turned her lamplike eyes uponthem and hissed faintly, but Professor McGonagall said, 'Shoo!' Mrs Norris slunkaway into the shadows, and in a few minutes they had reached the stonegargoyle guarding the entrance to Dumbledore's office.

'Fizzing Whizzbee,' said Professor McGonagall.

The gargoyle sprang to life and leapt aside; the wall behind it split in two toreveal a stone staircase that was moving continually upwards like a spiralescalator. The three of them stepped on to the moving stairs; the wall closedbehind them with a thud and they were moving upwards in tight circles untilthey reached the highly polished oak door with the brass knocker shaped like agriffin.

Though it was now well past midnight there were voices coming from inside theroom, a positive babble of them. It sounded as though Dumbledore wasentertaining at least a dozen people.

Professor McGonagall rapped three times with the griffin knocker and the voicesceased abruptly as though someone had switched them all off. The door openedof its own accord and Professor McGonagall led Harry and Ron inside.

The room was in half-darkness; the strange silver instruments standing on tableswere silent and still rather than whirring and emitting puffs of smoke as theyusually did; the portraits of old headmasters and headmistresses covering thewalls were all snoozing in their frames. Behind the door, a magnificent red andgold bird the size of a swan dozed on its perch with its head under its wing.

'Oh, it's you, Professor McGonagall… and… ah.'

Dumbledore was sitting in a high-backed chair behind his desk; he leanedforward into the pool of candlelight illuminating the papers laid out before him.
He was wearing a magnificently embroidered purple and gold dressing gownover a snowy white nightshirt, but seemed wide-awake, his penetrating lightblue eyes fixed intently upon Professor McGonagall.
'Professor Dumbledore, Potter has had a… well, a nightmare,' said ProfessorMcGonagall. 'He says…'
'It wasn't a nightmare,' said Harry quickly.
Professor McGonagall looked round at Harry, frowning slightly.
'Very well, then, Potter, you tell the Headmaster about it.'
'I… well, I was asleep…' said Harry and, even in his terror and his desperation tomake Dumbledore understand, he felt slightly irritated that the Headmaster wasnot looking at him, but examining his own interlocked fingers. 'But it wasn't anordinary dream… it was real… I saw it happen…' He took a deep breath, 'Ron'sdad - Mr Weasley - has been attacked by a giant snake.'
The words seemed to reverberate in the air after he had said them, soundingslightly ridiculous, even comic. There was a pause in which Dumbledore leanedback and stared meditatively at the ceiling. Ron looked from Harry toDumbledore, white-faced and shocked.
'How did you see this?' Dumbledore asked quietly, still not looking at Harry.
'Well… I don't know,' said Harry, rather angrily - what did it matter? 'Inside myhead, I suppose -'
'You misunderstand me,' said Dumbledore, still in the same calm tone. 'I mean…
can you remember — er - where you were positioned as you watched this attack happen? Were you perhaps standing beside the victim, or else looking down onthe scene from above?'
This was such a curious question that Harry gaped at Dumbledore; it was almostas though he knew…
'I was the snake,' he said. 'I saw it all from the snake's point of view.'
Nobody else spoke for a moment, then Dumbledore, now looking at Ron whowas still whey-faced, asked in a new and sharper voice, 'Is Arthur seriouslyinjured?'
'Yes,' said Harry emphatically - why were they all so slow on the uptake, didthey not realise how much a person bled when fangs that long pierced their side?
And why could Dumbledore not do him the courtesy of looking at him?
But Dumbledore stood up, so quickly it made Harry jump, and addressed one ofthe old portraits hanging very near the ceiling. 'Everard?' he said sharply. 'Andyou too, Dilys!'
A sallow-faced wizard with a short black fringe and an elderly witch with longsilver ringlets in the frame beside him, both of whom seemed to have been in thedeepest of sleeps, opened their eyes immediately.
'You were listening?' said Dumbledore.
The wizard nodded; the witch said, 'Naturally.'
The man has red hair and glasses,' said Dumbledore. 'Everard, you will need toraise the alarm, make sure he is found by the right people -'
Both nodded and moved sideways out of their frames, but instead of emergingin neighbouring pictures (as usually happened at Hogwarts) neither reappeared.
One frame now contained nothing but a backdrop of dark curtain, the other ahandsome leather armchair. Harry noticed that many of the other headmastersand mistresses on the walls, though snoring and drooling most convincingly,kept sneaking peeks at him from under their eyelids, and he suddenlyunderstood who had been talking when they had knocked.
'Everard and Dilys were two of Hogwarts's most celebrated Heads,' Dumbledoresaid, now sweeping around Harry, Ron and Professor McGonagall to approach the magnificent sleeping bird on his perch beside the door. Their renown is suchthat both have portraits hanging in other important wizarding institutions. Asthey are free to move between their own portraits, they can tell us what may behappening elsewhere…"

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'But Mr Weasley could be anywhere!' said Harry.
'Please sit down, all three of you,' said Dumbledore, as though Harry had notspoken, 'Everard and Dilys may not be back for several minutes. ProfessorMcGonagall, if you could draw up extra chairs.'
Professor McGonagall pulled her wand from the pocket of her dressing gownand waved it; three chairs appeared out of thin air, straight-backed and wooden,quite unlike the comfortable chintz armchairs that Dumbledore had conjured upat Harry's hearing. Harry sat down, watching Dumbledore over his shoulder.
Dumbledore was now stroking Fawkes's plumed golden head with one finger.
The phoenix awoke immediately. He stretched his beautiful head high andobserved Dumbledore through bright, dark eyes.
'We will need,' Dumbledore said very quietly to the bird, 'a warning.'
There was a flash of fire and the phoenix had gone.
Dumbledore now swooped down upon one of the fragile silver instrumentswhose function Harry had never known, carried it over to his desk, sat downfacing them again and tapped it gently with the tip of his wand.
The instrument tinkled into life at once with rhythmic clinking noises. Tiny puffsof pale green smoke issued from the minuscule silver tube at the top.
Dumbledore watched the smoke closely, his brow furrowed. After a few seconds,the tiny puffs became a steady stream of smoke that thickened and coiled in theair… a serpent's head grew out of the end of it, opening its mouth wide. Harrywondered whether the instrument was confirming his story: he looked eagerly atDumbledore for a sign that he was right, but Dumbledore did not look up.
'Naturally, naturally,' murmured Dumbledore apparently to himself, stillobserving the stream of smoke without the slightest sign of surprise. 'But inessence divided?'
Harry could make neither head nor tail of this question. The smoke serpent,however, split itself instantly into two snakes, both coiling and undulating in the dark air. With a look of grim satisfaction, Dumbledore gave the instrumentanother gentle tap with his wand: the clinking noise slowed and died and thesmoke serpents grew faint, became a formless haze and vanished.
Dumbledore replaced the instrument on its spindly little table. Harry saw manyof the old headmasters in the portraits follow him with their eyes, then, realisingthat Harry was watching them, hastily pretend to be sleeping again. Harrywanted to ask what the strange silver instrument was for, but before he could doso, there was a shout from the top of the wall to their right; the wizard calledEverard had reappeared in his portrait, panting slightly.
'Dumbledore!'
'What news?' said Dumbledore at once.
'I yelled until someone came running,' said the wizard, who was mopping hisbrow on the curtain behind him, 'said I'd heard something moving downstairs - they weren't sure whether to believe me but went down to check - you knowthere are no portraits down there to watch from. Anyway, they carried him up afew minutes later. He doesn't look good, he's covered in blood, I ran along toElfrida Cragg's portrait to get a good view as they left -'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Good,' said Dumbledore as Ron made a convulsive movement. 'I take it Dilyswill have seen him arrive, then -'
And moments later, the silver-ringleted witch had reappeared in her picture, too;
she sank, coughing, into her armchair and said, 'Yes, they've taken him to StMungo's, Dumbledore… they carried him past my portrait… he looks bad…'
Thank you,' said Dumbledore. He looked round at Professor McGonagall.
'Minerva, I need you to go and wake the other Weasley children.'
'Of course…'
Professor McGonagall got up and moved swiftly to the door. Harry cast asideways glance at Ron, who was looking terrified.
'And Dumbledore - what about Molly?' said Professor McGonagall, pausing atthe door.

That will be a job for Fawkes when he has finished keeping a lookout foranybody approaching,' said Dumbledore. 'But she may already know… thatexcellent clock of hers…'
Harry knew Dumbledore was referring to the clock that told, not the time, butthe whereabouts and conditions of the various Weasley family members, andwith a pang he thought that Mr Weasley's hand must, even now, be pointing atmortal peril. But it was very late. Mrs Weasley was probably asleep, not watchingthe clock. Harry felt cold as he remembered Mrs Weasley's Boggart turning intoMr Weasley's lifeless body, his glasses askew, blood running down his face… butMr Weasley wasn't going to die… he couldn't…
Dumbledore was now rummaging in a cupboard behind Harry and Ron. Heemerged from it carrying a blackened old kettle, which he placed carefully on hisdesk. He raised his wand and murmured, 'Portus!' For a moment the kettletrembled, glowing with an odd blue light; then it quivered to rest, as solidlyblack as ever.
Dumbledore marched over to another portrait, this time of a clever-lookingwizard with a pointed beard, who had been painted wearing the Slytherincolours of green and silver and was apparently sleeping so deeply that he couldnot hear Dumbledore's voice when he attempted to rouse him.
'Phineas. Phineas.'
The subjects of the portraits lining the room were no longer pretending to beasleep; they were shifting around in their frames, the better to watch what washappening. When the clever-looking wizard continued to feign sleep, some ofthem shouted his name, too.
'Phineas! Phineas! PHINEAS!'
He could not pretend any longer; he gave a theatrical jerk and opened his eyeswide.
'Did someone call?'
'I need you to visit your other portrait again, Phineas,' said Dumbledore. 'I've gotanother message.'

'Visit my other portrait?' said Phineas in a reedy voice, giving a long, fake yawn(his eyes travelling around the room and focusing on Harry). 'Oh, no,Dumbledore, I am too tired tonight.'
Something about Phineas's voice was familiar to Harry, where had he heard itbefore? But before he could think, the portraits on the surrounding walls brokeinto a storm of protest.
'Insubordination, sir!' roared a corpulent, red-nosed wizard, brandishing his fists.
'Dereliction of duty!'
'We are honour-bound to give service to the present Headmaster of Hogwarts!'
cried a frail-looking old wizard whom Harry recognised as Dumbledore'spredecessor, Armando

Dippet. 'Shame on you, Phineas!'
'Shall I persuade him, Dumbledore?' called a gimlet-eyed witch, raising anunusually thick wand that looked not unlike a birch rod.
'Oh, very well,' said the wizard called Phineas, eyeing the wand with mildapprehension, 'though he may well have destroyed my picture by now, he's doneaway with most of the family -'
'Sirius knows not to destroy your portrait,' said Dumbledore, and Harry realisedimmediately where he had heard Phineas's voice before: issuing from theapparently empty frame in his bedroom in Grimmauld Place. 'You are to givehim the message that Arthur Weasley has been gravely injured and that his wife,children and Harry Potter will be arriving at his house shortly. Do youunderstand?'
'Arthur Weasley, injured, wife and children and Harry Potter coming to stay,' repeated Phineas in a bored voice. 'Yes, yes… very wellHe sloped away into the frame of the portrait and disappeared from view at thevery moment the study door opened again. Fred, George and Ginny wereushered inside by Professor McGonagall, all three of them looking dishevelledand shocked, still in their night things.
'Harry - what's going on?' asked Ginny, who looked frightened. 'ProfessorMcGonagall says you saw Dad get hurt -'

'Your father has been injured in the course of his work for the Order of thePhoenix,' said Dumbledore, before Harry could speak. 'He has been taken to StMungo's Hospital for Magical Maladies and Injuries. I am sending you back toSirius's house, which is much more convenient for the hospital than The Burrow.
You will meet your mother there.'
'How're we going?' asked Fred, looking shaken. Tloo powder?'
'No,' said Dumbledore, Tloo powder is not safe at the moment, the Network isbeing watched. You will be taking a Portkey.' He indicated the old kettle lyinginnocently on his desk. 'We are just waiting for Phineas Nigellus to report back…
I want to be sure that the coast is clear before sending you -'
There was a flash of flame in the very middle of the office, leaving behind asingle golden feather that floated gently to the floor.
'It is Fawkes's warning,' said Dumbledore, catching the feather as it fell.
'Professor Umbridge must know you're out of your beds… Minerva, go and headher off - tell her any story -'
Professor McGonagall was gone in a swish of tartan.
'He says he'll be delighted,' said a bored voice behind Dumbledore; the wizardcalled Phineas had reappeared in front of his Slytherin banner. 'My great-greatgrandsonhas always had an odd taste in house-guests.'
'Come here, then,' Dumbledore said to Harry and the Weasleys. 'And quickly,before anyone else joins us.'
Harry and the others gathered around Dumbledore's desk.
'You have all used a Portkey before?' asked Dumbledore, and they nodded, eachreaching out to touch some part of the blackened kettle. 'Good. On the count ofthree, then… one… two…'
It happened in a fraction of a second: in the infinitesimal pause beforeDumbledore said 'three', Harry looked up at him - they were very close together- and Dumbledore's clear blue gaze moved from the Portkey to Harry's face.

At once, Harry's scar burned white-hot, as though the old wound had burst openagain - and unbidden, unwanted, but terrifyingly strong, there rose within Harry a hatred so powerful he felt, for that instant, he would like nothing better than tostrike - to bite - to sink his fangs into the man before him —'… three.'

Harry felt a powerful jerk behind his navel, the ground vanished from beneathhis feet, his hand was glued to the kettle; he was banging into the others as theyall sped forwards in a swirl of colours and a rush of wind, the kettle pulling themonwards… until his feet hit the ground so hard his knees buckled, the kettleclattered to the ground, and somewhere close at hand a voice said:

'Back again, the blood-traitor brats. Is it true their father's dying?'

'OUT!' roared a second voice.

Harry scrambled to his feet and looked around; they had arrived in the gloomybasement kitchen of number twelve, Grimmauld Place. The only sources of lightwere the fire and one guttering candle, which illuminated the remains of asolitary supper. Kreacher was disappearing through the door to the hall, lookingback at them malevolently as he hitched up his loincloth; Sirius was hurryingtowards them all, looking anxious. He was unshaven and still in his day clothes;
there was also a slightly Mundungus-like whiff of stale drink about him.

'What's going on?' he said, stretching out a hand to help Ginny up. ThineasNigellus said Arthur's been badly injured —'

'Ask Harry,' said Fred.

'Yeah, I want to hear this for myself,' said George.

The twins and Ginny were staring at him. Kreacher's footsteps had stopped onthe stairs outside.

'It was -' Harry began; this was even worse than telling McGonagall andDumbledore. 'I had a - a kind of - visionAnd he told them all that he had seen, though he altered the story so that itsounded as though he had watched from the sidelines as the snake attacked,rather than from behind the snake's own eyes. Ron, who was still very white,gave him a fleeting look, but did not speak. When Harry had finished, Fred,George and Ginny continued to stare at him for a moment. Harry did not know whether he was imagining it or not, but he fancied there was somethingaccusatory in their looks. Well, if they were going to blame him just for seeingthe attack, he was glad he had not told them that he had been inside the snake atthe time.

'Is Mum here?' said Fred, turning to Sirius.

'She probably doesn't even know what's happened yet,' said Sirius. Theimportant thing was to get you away before Umbridge could interfere. I expectDumbledores letting Molly know now.'

'We've got to go to St Mungo's,' said Ginny urgently. She looked around at herbrothers; they were of course still in their pyjamas. 'Sirius, can you lend us cloaksor anything?'

'Hang on, you can't go tearing off to St Mungo's!' said Sirius.

'Course we can go to St Mungo's if we want,' said Fred, with a mulish expression.

'He's our dad!'

'And how are you going to explain how you knew Arthur was attacked beforethe hospital even let his wife know?'

'What does that matter?' said George hotly.

'It matters because we don't want to draw attention to the fact that Harry ishaving visions of things that are happening hundreds of miles away!' said Siriusangrily. 'Have you any idea what the Ministry would make of that information?'

Fred and George looked as though they could not care less what the Ministrymade of anything. Ron was still ashen-faced and silent.

Ginny said, 'Somebody else could have told us… we could have heard itsomewhere other than Harry.'
'Like who?' said Sirius impatiently. 'Listen, your dad's been hurt while on dutyfor the Order and the circumstances are fishy enough without his childrenknowing about it seconds after it happened, you could seriously damage theOrder's -'
'We don't care about the dumb Order!' shouted Fred.

'It's our dad dying we're talking about!' yelled George.
'Your father knew what he was getting into and he won't thank you for messingthings up for the Order!' said Sirius, equally angry. This is how it is - this is whyyou're not in the Order - you don't understand - there are things worth dyingfor!'
'Easy for you to say, stuck here!' bellowed Fred. 'I don't see you risking yourneck!'
The little colour remaining in Sirius's face drained from it. He looked for amoment as though he would quite like to hit Fred, but when he spoke, it was in avoice of determined calm.
'I know it's hard, but we've all got to act as though we don't know anything yet.
We've got to stay put, at least until we hear from your mother, all right?'
Fred and George still looked mutinous. Ginny, however, took a few steps over tothe nearest chair and sank into it. Harry looked at Ron, who made a funnymovement somewhere between a nod and a shrug, and they sat down too. Thetwins glared at Sirius for another minute, then took seats either side of Ginny.
That's right,' said Sirius encouragingly, 'come on, let's all… let's all have a drinkwhile we're waiting. Accio Butterbeer!'
He raised his wand as he spoke and half a dozen bottles came flying towardsthem out of the pantry, skidded along the table, scattering the debris of Sinus'smeal, and stopped neatly in front of the six of them. They all drank, and for awhile the only sounds were those of the crackling of the kitchen fire and the softthud of their bottles on the table.
Harry was only drinking to have something to do with his hands. His stomachwas full of horrible hot, bubbling guilt. They would not be here if it were not forhim; they would all still be asleep in bed. And it was no good telling himself thatby raising the alarm he had ensured that Mr Weasley was found, because therewas also the inescapable business of it being he who had attacked Mr Weasley inthe first place.
Don't be stupid, you haven't got fangs, he told himself, trying to keep calm, thoughthe hand on his Butterbeer bottle was shaking, you were lying in bed, you weren'tattacking anyone…

But then, what just happened in Dumbledore's office? he asked himself. I felt like Iwanted to attack Dumbledore, too…
He put the bottle down a little harder than he meant to, and it slopped over on tothe table. No one took any notice. Then a burst of fire in midair illuminated thedirty plates in front of them and, as they gave cries of shock, a scroll ofparchment fell with a thud on to the table, accompanied by a single goldenphoenix tail feather.
'Fawkes!' said Sirius at once, snatching up the parchment. That's notDumbledore's writing - it must be a message from your mother - here -'
He thrust the letter into George's hand, who ripped it open and read aloud: 'Dadis still alive. I am setting out for St Mungo's now. Stay where you are. I will send newsas soon as I can. Mum.'

George looked around the table.
'Still alive…' he said slowly. 'But that makes it sound…'
He did not need to finish the sentence. It sounded to Harry, too, as though MrWeasley was hovering somewhere between life and death. Still exceptionallypale, Ron stared at the back of his mothers letter as though it might speak wordsof comfort to him. Fred pulled the parchment out of George's hands and read itfor himself, then looked up at Harry, who felt his hand shaking on his Butterbeerbottle again and clenched it more tightly to stop the trembling.
If Harry had ever sat through a longer night than this one, he could notremember it. Sirius suggested once, without any real conviction, that they all goto bed, but the Weasleys' looks of disgust were answer enough. They mostly satin silence around the table, watching the candle wick sinking lower and lowerinto liquid wax, occasionally raising a bottle to their lips, speaking only to checkthe time, to wonder aloud what was happening, and to reassure each other that ifthere was bad news, they would know straightaway, for Mrs Weasley must longsince have arrived at St Mungo's.
Fred fell into a doze, his head lolling sideways on to his shoulder. Ginny wascurled like a cat on her chair, but her eyes were open; Harry could see themreflecting the firelight. Ron was sitting with his head in his hands, whetherawake or asleep it was impossible to tell. Harry and Sirius looked at each otherevery so often, intruders upon the family grief, waiting… waiting…

At ten past five in the morning by Ron's watch, the kitchen door swung open andMrs Weasley entered the kitchen. She was extremely pale, but when they allturned to look at her, Fred, Ron and Harry half rising from their chairs, she gavea wan smile.
'He's going to be all right,' she said, her voice weak with tiredness. 'He's sleeping.
We can all go and see him later. Bill's sitting with him now; he's going to take themorning off work.'
Fred fell back into his chair with his hands over his face. George and Ginny gotup, walked swiftly over to their mother and hugged her. Ron gave a very shakylaugh and downed the rest of his Butterbeer in one.
'Breakfast!' said Sirius loudly and joyfully, jumping to his feet. 'Where's thataccursed house-elf? Kreacher! KREACHER!'
But Kreacher did not answer the summons.
'Oh, forget it, then,' muttered Sirius, counting the people in front of him. 'So, it'sbreakfast for - let's see - seven… bacon and eggs, 1 think, and some tea, and toast-'
Harry hurried over to the stove to help. He did not want to intrude on theWeasleys' happiness and he dreaded the moment when Mrs Weasley would askhim to recount his vision. However, he had barely taken plates from the dresserwhen Mrs Weasley lifted them out of his hands and pulled him into a hug.
'I don't know what would have happened if it hadn't been for you, Harry,' shesaid in a muffled voice. They might not have found Arthur for hours, and then itwould have been too late, but thanks to you he's alive and Dumbledore's beenable to think up a good cover story for Arthur being where he was, you've noidea what trouble he would have been in otherwise, look at poor Sturgis…"
Harry could hardly bear her gratitude, but fortunately she soon released him toturn to Sirius and thank him for looking after her children through the night.
Sirius said he was very pleased to have been able to help, and hoped they wouldall stay with him as long as Mr Weasley was in hospital.
'Oh, Sirius, I'm so grateful… they think he'll be there a little while and it wouldbe wonderful to be nearer… of course, that might mean we're here forChristmas.'

The more the merrier!' said Sirius with such obvious sincerity that Mrs Weasleybeamed at him, threw on an apron and began to help with breakfast.
'Sirius,' Harry muttered, unable to stand it a moment longer. 'Can I have a quickword? Er - now?'
He walked into the dark pantry and Sirius followed. Without preamble, Harrytold his godfather every detail of the vision he had had, including the fact that hehimself had been the snake who had attacked Mr Weasley.
When he paused for breath, Sirius said, 'Did you tell Dumbledore this?'
'Yes,' said Harry impatiently, 'but he didn't tell me what it meant. Well, hedoesn't tell me anything any more.'
'I'm sure he would have told you if it was anything to worry about,' said Siriussteadily.
'But that's not all,' said Harry, in a voice only a little above a whisper. 'Sirius, I… Ithink I'm going mad. Back in Dumbledore's office, just before we took thePortkey… for a couple of seconds there I thought I was a snake, I felt like one - my scar really hurt when I was looking at Dumbledore - Sirius, I wanted toattack him!'
He could only see a sliver of Siriuss face; the rest was in darkness.
'It must have been the aftermath of the vision, that's all,' said Sirius. 'You werestill thinking of the dream or whatever it was and -'
'It wasn't that,' said Harry, shaking his head, 'it was like something rose up insideme, like there's a snake inside me.'
'You need to sleep,' said Sirius firmly. 'You're going to have breakfast, then goupstairs to bed, and after lunch you can go and see Arthur with the others.
You're in shock, Harry; you're blaming yourself for something you onlywitnessed, and it's lucky you did witness it or Arthur might have died. Just stopworrying.'
He clapped Harry on the shoulder and left the pantry, leaving Harry standingalone in the dark.

*Everyone but Harry spent the rest of the morning sleeping. He went up to thebedroom he and Ron had shared over the last few weeks of summer, but whileRon crawled into bed and was asleep within minutes, Harry sat fully clothed,hunched against the cold metal bars of the bedstead, keeping himselfdeliberately uncomfortable, determined not to fall into a doze, terrified that hemight become the serpent again in his sleep and wake to find that he hadattacked Ron, or else slithered through the house after one of the others…
When Ron woke up, Harry pretended to have enjoyed a refreshing nap too.
Their trunks arrived from Hogwarts while they were eating lunch, so they coulddress as Muggles for the trip to St Mungo's. Everybody except Harry wasriotously happy and talkative as they changed out of their robes into jeans andsweatshirts. When Tonks and Mad-Eye turned up to escort them across London,they greeted them gleefully, laughing at the bowler hat Mad-Eye was wearing atan angle to conceal his magical eye and assuring him, truthfully, that Tonks,whose hair was short and bright pink again, would attract far less attention onthe Underground.
Tonks was very interested in Harry's vision of the attack on Mr Weasley,something Harry was not remotely interested in discussing.
There isn't any Seer blood in your family, is there?' she enquired curiously, asthey sat side by side on a train rattling towards the heart of the city.
'No,' said Harry, thinking of Professor Trelawney and feeling insulted.

'No,' said Tonks musingly, 'no, I suppose it's not really prophecy you're doing, isit? I mean, you're not seeing the future, you're seeing the present… it's odd, isn'tit? Useful, though…'
Harry didn't answer; fortunately, they got out at the next stop, a station in thevery heart of London, and in the bustle of leaving the train he was able to allowFred and George to get between himself and Tonks, who was leading the way.
They all followed her up the escalator, Moody clunking along at the back of thegroup, his bowler tilted low and one gnarled hand stuck in between the buttonsof his coat, clutching his wand. Harry thought he sensed the concealed eyestaring hard at him. Trying to avoid any more questions about his dream, heasked Mad-Eye where St Mungo's was hidden.

'Not far from here,' grunted Moody as they stepped out into the wintry air on abroad store-lined street packed with Christmas shoppers. He pushed Harry alittle ahead of him and stumped along just behind; Harry knew the eye wasrolling in all directions under the tilted hat. 'Wasn't easy to find a good locationfor a hospital. Nowhere in Diagon Alley was big enough and we couldn't have itunderground like the Ministry - wouldn't be healthy. In the end they managed toget hold of a building up here. Theory was, sick wizards could come and go andjust blend in with the crowd.'
He seized Harry's shoulder to prevent them being separated by a gaggle ofshoppers plainly intent on nothing but making it into a nearby shop full ofelectrical gadgets.
'Here we go,' said Moody a moment later.
They had arrived outside a large, old-fashioned, red-brick department storecalled Purge 6z Dowse Ltd. The place had a shabby, miserable air; the windowdisplays consisted of a few chipped dummies with their wigs askew, standing atrandom and modelling fashions at least ten years out of date. Large signs on allthe dusty doors read: 'Closed for Refurbishment'. Harry distinctly heard a largewoman laden with plastic shopping bags say to her friend as they passed, 'It'snever open, that place…'
'Right,' said Tonks, beckoning them towards a window displaying nothing but aparticularly ugly female dummy. Its false eyelashes were hanging off and it wasmodelling a green nylon pinafore dress. 'Everybody ready?'
They nodded, clustering around her. Moody gave Harry another shove betweenthe shoulder blades to urge him forward and Tonks leaned close to the glass,looking up at the very ugly dummy, her breath steaming up the glass. 'Wotcher,' she said, 'we're here to see Arthur Weasley.'
Harry thought how absurd it was for Tonks to expect the dummy to hear hertalking so quietly through a sheet of glass, with buses rumbling along behind herand all the racket of a street full of shoppers. Then he reminded himself thatdummies couldn't hear anyway. Next second, his mouth opened in shock as thedummy gave a tiny nod and beckoned with its jointed finger, and Tonks hadseized Ginny and Mrs Weasley by. the elbows, stepped right through the glassand vanished.

Fred, George and Ron stepped after them. Harry glanced around at the jostlingcrowd; not one of them seemed to have a glance to spare for window displays asugly as those of Purge & Dowse Ltd; nor did any of them seem to have noticedthat six people had just melted into thin air in front of them.
'C'mon,' growled Moody, giving Harry yet another poke in the back, andtogether they stepped forward through what felt like a sheet of cool water,emerging quite warm and dry on the other side.
There was no sign of the ugly dummy or the space where she had stood. Theywere in what seemed to be a crowded reception area where rows of witches andwizards sat upon rickety wooden chairs, some looking perfectly normal andperusing out-of-date copies of Witch Weekly, others sporting gruesomedisfigurements such as elephant trunks or extra hands sticking out of theirchests. The room was scarcely less quiet than the street outside, for many of thepatients were making very peculiar noises: a sweaty-faced witch in the centre ofthe front row, who was fanning herself vigorously with a copy of the DailyProphet, kept letting off a high-pitched whistle as steam came pouring out of hermouth; a grubby-looking warlock in the corner clanged like a bell every time hemoved and, with each clang, his head vibrated horribly so that he had to seizehimself by the ears to hold it steady.

Witches and wizards in lime-green robes were walking up and down the rows,asking questions and making notes on clipboards like Umbridge's. Harry noticedthe emblem embroidered on their chests: a wand and bone, crossed.

'Are they doctors?' he asked Ron quietly.

'Doctors?' said Ron, looking startled. Those Muggle nutters that cut people up?

Nah, they're Healers.'

'Over here!' called Mrs Weasley above the renewed clanging of the warlock in thecorner, and they followed her to the queue in front of a plump blonde witchseated at a desk marked Enquiries. The wall behind her was covered in noticesand posters saying things like: A CLEAN CAULDRON KEEPS POTIONS FROMBECOMING POISONS and ANTIDOTES ARE ANTI-DON'TS UNLESSAPPROVED BY A QUALIFIED HEALER. There was also a large portrait of awitch with long silver ringlets which was labelled:

Dilys Derwent

St Mungo's Healer 1722-

Headmistress of Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry 1741-

Dilys was eyeing the Weasley party closely as though counting them; whenHarry caught her eye she gave a tiny wink, walked sideways out of her portraitand vanished.

Meanwhile, at the front of the queue, a young wizard was performing an odd onthe-spot jig and trying, in between yelps of pain, to explain his predicament tothe witch behind the desk.

'It's these - ouch - shoes my brother gave me - ow - they're eating my - OUCH - feet - look at them, there must be some kind of - AARGH - jinx on them and Ican't - AAAAARGH - get them off.' He hopped from one foot to the other asthough dancing on hot coals.

The shoes don't prevent you reading, do they?' said the blonde witch, irritablypointing at a large sign to the left of her desk. 'You want Spell Damage, fourthfloor. Just like it says on the floor guide. Next!'

As the wizard hobbled and pranced sideways out of the way, the Weasley partymoved forward a few steps and Harry read the floor guide:

ARTEFACT ACCIDENTS… Ground floorCauldron explosion, wand backfiring, broom crashes, etc.

CREATURE-INDUCED INJURIES… First floorBites, stings, burns, embedded spines, etc.

MAGICAL BUGS… Second floorContagious maladies, e.g. dragon pox, vanishing sickness, scrojungulus, etc.

POTION AND PLANT POISONING… Third floorRashes, regurgitation, uncontrollable 2, etc.

SPELL DAMAGE… Fourth floor

Unliftable jinxes, hexes, incorrectly applied charms, etc.

VISITORS' TEAROOM / HOSPITAL SHOP… Fifth floorIF YOU ARE UNSURE WHERE TO GO, INCAPABLE OF NORMAL SPEECHOR UNABLE TO REMEMBER WHY YOU ARE HERE, OUR WELCOMEWITCHWILL BE PLEASED TO HELP.

A very old, stooped wizard with a hearing trumpet had shuffled to the front ofthe queue now. 'I'm here to see Broderick Bode!' he wheezed.

'Ward forty-nine, but I'm afraid you're wasting your time,' said the witchdismissively. 'He's completely addled, you know - still thinks he's a teapot. Next!'
A harassed-looking wizard was holding his small daughter tightly by the anklewhile she flapped around his head using the immensely large, feathery wingsthat had sprouted right out through the back of her romper suit.
'Fourth floor,' said the witch, in a bored voice, without asking, and the mandisappeared through the double doors beside the desk, holding his daughter likean oddly shaped balloon. 'Next!'
Mrs Weasley moved forward to the desk.
'Hello,' she said, 'my husband, Arthur Weasley, was supposed to be moved to adifferent ward this morning, could you tell us -?'
'Arthur Weasley?' said the witch, running her finger down a long list in front ofher. 'Yes, first floor, second door on the right, Dai Llewellyn Ward.'
Thank you,' said Mrs Weasley. 'Come on, you lot.'
They followed her through the double doors and along the narrow corridorbeyond, which was lined with more portraits of famous Healers and lit by crystalbubbles full of candles that floated up on the ceiling, looking like giant soapsuds.
More witches and wizards in lime-green robes walked in and out of the doorsthey passed; a foul-smelling yellow gas wafted into the passageway as theypassed one door, and every now and then they heard distant wailing. Theyclimbed a flight of stairs and entered the Creature-Induced Injuries corridor,where the second door on the right bore the words: 'Dangerous' Dai LlewellynWard: Serious Bites. Underneath this was a card in a brass holder on which had been handwritten: Healer-in-Charge: Hippocrates Smethwyck. Trainee Healer: Augustus Pye.
'We'll wait outside, Molly,' Tonks said. 'Arthur won't want too many visitors atonce… it ought to be just the family first.'
Mad-Eye growled his approval of this idea and set himself with his back againstthe corridor wall, his magical eye spinning in all directions. Harry drew back,too, but Mrs Weasley reached out a hand and pushed him through the door,saying, 'Don't be silly, Harry, Arthur wants to thank you.'
The ward was small and rather dingy, as the only window was narrow and sethigh in the wall facing the door. Most of the light came from more shining crystalbubbles clustered in the middle of the ceiling. The walls were of panelled oakand there was a portrait of a rather vicious-looking wizard on the wall,captioned: Urquhart Rackharrow, 1612—1697, Inventor of the Entrail-expelling Curse.
There were only three patients. Mr Weasley was occupying the bed at the far endof the ward beside the tiny window. Harry was pleased and relieved to see thathe was propped up on several pillows and reading the Daily Prophet by thesolitary ray of sunlight falling on to his bed. He looked up as they walkedtowards him and, seeing who it was, beamed.
'Hello!' he called, throwing the Prophet aside. 'Bill just left, Molly, had to get backto work, but he says he'll drop in on you later.'
'How are you, Arthur?' asked Mrs Weasley, bending down to kiss his cheek andlooking anxiously into his face. 'You're still looking a bit peaky.'
'I feel absolutely fine,' said Mr Weasley brightly, holding out his good arm togive Ginny a hug. 'If they could only take the bandages off, I'd be fit to go home.'
'Why can't they take them off, Dad?' asked Fred.

'Well, I start bleeding like mad every time they try,' said Mr Weasley cheerfully,reaching across for his wand, which lay on his bedside cabinet, and waving it sothat six extra chairs appeared at his bedside to seat them all. 'It seems there wassome rather unusual kind of poison in that snake's fangs that keeps woundsopen. They're sure they'll find an antidote, though; they say they've had muchworse cases than mine, and in the meantime I just have to keep taking a Blood-Replenishing Potion every hour. But that fellow over there,' he said, dropping his voice and nodding towards the bed opposite in which a man lay looking greenand sickly and staring at the ceiling. 'Bitten by a werewolf, poor chap. No cure atall.'
'A werewolf?' whispered Mrs Weasley, looking alarmed. 'Is he safe in a publicward? Shouldn't he be in a private room?'
'It's two weeks till full moon,' Mr Weasley reminded her quietly. They've beentalking to him this morning, the Healers, you know, trying to persuade him he'llbe able to lead an almost normal life. I said to him - didn't mention names, ofcourse - but I said I knew a werewolf personally, very nice man, who finds thecondition quite easy to manage.'
'What did he say?' asked George.
'Said he'd give me another bite if I didn't shut up,' said Mr Weasley sadly. 'Andthat woman over there,' he indicated the only other occupied bed, which wasright beside the door, 'won't tell the Healers what bit her, which makes us allthink it must have been something she was handling illegally. Whatever it wastook a real chunk out of her leg, very nasty smell when they take off thedressings.'
'So, you going to tell us what happened, Dad?' asked Fred, pulling his chaircloser to the bed.
'Well, you already know, don't you?' said Mr Weasley, with a significant smile atHarry. 'It's very simple - I'd had a very long day, dozed off, got sneaked up onand bitten.'
'Is it in the Prophet, you being attacked?' asked Fred, indicating the newspaperMr Weasley had cast aside.
'No, of course not,' said Mr Weasley, with a slightly bitter smile, 'the Ministrywouldn't want everyone to know a dirty great serpent got —'
'Arthur!' Mrs Weasley warned him.
'- got - er - me,' Mr Weasley said hastily, though Harry was quite sure that wasnot what he had meant to say.
'So where were you when it happened, Dad?' asked George.

That's my business,' said Mr Weasley, though with a small smile. He snatched upthe Daily Prophet, shook it open again and said, 'I was just reading about WillyWiddershins's arrest when you arrived. You know Willy turned out to be behindthose regurgitating toilets back in the summer? One of his jinxes backfired, thetoilet exploded and they found him lying unconscious in the wreckage coveredfrom head to foot in -'
'When you say you were "on duty",' Fred interrupted in a low voice, 'what wereyou doing?'
'You heard your father,' whispered Mrs Weasley, 'we are not discussing thishere! Go on about Willy Widdershins, Arthur.'
'Well, don't ask me how, but he actually got off the toilet charge,' said MrWeasley grimly. 'I can only suppose gold changed hands -'
'You were guarding it, weren't you?' said George quietly. The weapon? The thingYou-Know-Who's after?'
'George, be quiet!' snapped Mrs Weasley.

'Anyway,' said Mr Weasley, in a raised voice, 'this time Willy's been caughtselling biting doorknobs to Muggles and I don't think he'll be able to worm hisway out of it because, according to this article, two Muggles have lost fingers andare now in St Mungo's for emergency bone re-growth and memory modification.

Just think of it, Muggles in St Mungo's! I wonder which ward they're in?'

And he looked eagerly around as though hoping to see a signpost.

'Didn't you say You-Know-Who's got a snake, Harry?' asked Fred, looking at hisfather for a reaction. 'A massive one? You saw it the night he returned, didn'tyou?'

That's enough,' said Mrs Weasley crossly. 'Mad-Eye and Tonks are outside,Arthur, they want to come and see you. And you lot can wait outside,' she addedto her children and Harry. 'You can come and say goodbye afterwards. Go on.'

They trooped back into the corridor. Mad-Eye and Tonks went in and closed thedoor of the ward behind them. Fred raised his eyebrows.

'Fine,' he said coolly, rummaging in his pockets, 'be like that. Don't tell usanything.'

'Looking for these?' said George, holding out what looked like a tangle of fleshcolouredstring.

'You read my mind,' said Fred, grinning. 'Let's see if St Mungo's putsImperturbable Charms on its ward doors, shall we?'

He and George disentangled the string and separated five Extendable Ears fromeach other. Fred and George handed them around. Harry hesitated to take one.

'Go on, Harry, take it! You saved Dad's life. If anyone's got the right to eavesdropon him, it's you.'

Grinning in spite of himself, Harry took the end of the string and inserted it intohis ear as the twins had done.

'OK, go!' Fred whispered.

The flesh-coloured strings wriggled like long skinny worms and snaked underthe door. At first, Harry could hear nothing, then he jumped as he heard Tonkswhispering as clearly as though she were standing right beside him.

'… they searched the whole area but couldn't find the snake anywhere. It justseems to have vanished after it attacked you, Arthur… but You-Know-Who can'thave expected a snake to get in, can he?'

'I reckon he sent it as a lookout,' growled Moody, "cause he's not had any luck sofar, has he? No, I reckon he's trying to get a clearer picture of what he's facingand if Arthur hadn't been there the beast would've had a lot more time to lookaround. So, Potter says he saw it all happen?'

'Yes,' said Mrs Weasley. She sounded rather uneasy. 'You know, Dumbledoreseems almost to have been waiting for Harry to see something like this.'

'Yeah, well,' said Moody, 'there's something funny about the Potter kid, we allknow that.'

'Dumbledore seemed worried about Harry when I spoke to him this morning,' whispered Mrs Weasley.

'Course he's worried,' growled Moody. 'The boy's seeing things from inside You-Know-Who's snake. Obviously, Potter doesn't realise what that means, but ifYou-Know-Who's possessing him —'

Harry pulled the Extendable Ear out of his own, his heart hammering very fastand heat rushing up his face. He looked around at the others. They were allstaring at him, the strings still trailing from their ears, looking suddenly fearful.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

— CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE —

Christmas on the Closed WardWas this why Dumbledore would no longer meet Harry's eyes? Did he expect to seeVoldemort staring out of them, afraid, perhaps, that their vivid green might turn suddenly toscarlet, with catlike slits for pupils? Harry remembered how the snakelike face of Voldemorthad once forced itself out of the back of Professor Quirrell's head and ran his hand over theback of his own, wondering what it would feel like if Voldemort burst out of his skull.

He felt dirty, contaminated, as though he were carrying some deadly germ, unworthy to siton the Underground train back from the hospital with innocent, clean people whose mindsand bodies were free of the taint of Voldemort… he had not merely seen the snake, he hadbeen the snake, he knew it now…

A truly terrible thought then occurred to him, a memory bobbing to the surface of his mind,one that made his insides writhe and squirm like serpents.

What's he after, apart from followers?

Stuff he can only get by stealth… like a weapon. Something he didn't have last time.

I'm the weapon, Harry thought, and it was as though poison were pumping through hisveins, chilling him, bringing him out in a sweat as he swayed with the train through the darktunnel. I'm the one Voldemorts trying to use, that's why they've got guards around meeverywhere I go, it's not for my protection, it's for other people's, only it's not working, theycan't have someone on me all the time at Hogwarts… I did attack Mr Weasley last night, it wasme. Voldemort made me do it and he could be inside me, listening to my thoughts right now -

'Are you all right, Harry, dear?' whispered Mrs Weasley leaning across Ginny to speak to himas the train rattled along through its dark tunnel. 'You don't look very well. Are you feelingsick?'

They were all watching him. He shook his head violently and stared up at an advertisementfor home insurance.

'Harry, dear, are you sure you're all right?' said Mrs Weasley in a worried voice, as theywalked around the unkempt patch of grass in the middle of Grimmauld Place. 'You look everso pale… are you sure you slept this morning? You go upstairs to bed right now and you canhave a couple of hours of sleep before dinner, all right?'

He nodded; here was a ready-made excuse not to talk to any of the others, which wasprecisely what he wanted, so when she opened the front door he hurried straight past thetroll's-leg umbrella stand, up the stairs and into his and Ron's bedroom.

Here, he began to pace up and down, past the two beds and Phineas Nigellus's empty pictureframe, his brain teeming and seething with questions and ever more dreadful ideas.

How had he become a snake? Perhaps he was an Animagus… no, he couldn't be, he wouldknow… perhaps Voldemort was an Animagus… yes, thought Harry, that would fit, he wouldturn into a snake of course… and when he's possessing me, then we both transform… thatstill doesn't explain how I got to London and back to my bed in the space of about fiveminutes… but then Voldemort's about the most powerful wizard in the world, apart fromDumbledore, it's probably no problem at all to him to transport people like that.

And then, with a terrible stab of panic, he thought, but this is insane - if Voldemort's possessingme, I'm giving him a dear view into the Headquarters of the Order of the Phoenix right now! He'llknow who's in the Order and where Sirius is… and I've heard loads of stuff I shouldn't have,everything Sirius told me the first night I was here…

There was only one thing for it: he would have to leave Grimmauld Place straightaway. Hewould spend Christmas atHogwarts without the others, which would keep them safe over the holidays at least… but no,that wouldn't do, there were still plenty of people at Hogwarts to maim and injure. What if itwas Seamus, Dean or Neville next time? He stopped his pacing and stood staring at PhineasNigellus's empty frame. A leaden sensation was settling in the pit of his stomach. He had noalternative: he was going to have to return to Privet Drive, cut himself off from other wizardsentirely. Well, if he had to do it, he thought, there was no point hanging around. Trying with all hismight not to think how the Dursleys were going to react when they found him on theirdoorstep six months earlier than they had expected, he strode over to his trunk, slammed thelid shut and locked it, then glanced around automatically for Hedwig before rememberingthat she was still at Hogwarts - well, her cage would be one less thing to carry - he seized oneend of his trunk and had dragged it halfway towards the door when a snide voice said,'Running away, are we?'
He looked around. Phineas Nigellus had appeared on the canvas of his portrait and wasleaning against the frame, watching Harry with an amused expression on his face.
'Not running away, no,' said Harry shortly, dragging his trunk a few more feet across theroom.

'I thought,' said Phineas Nigellus, stroking his pointed beard, 'that to belong in Gryffindorhouse you were supposed to be brave! It looks to me as though you would have been better offin my own house. We Slytherins are brave, yes, but not stupid. For instance, given the choice,we will always choose to save our own necks.'
'It's not my own neck I'm saving,' said Harry tersely, tugging the trunk over a patch ofparticularly uneven, moth-eaten carpet right in front of the door.
'Oh, I see,' said Phineas Nigellus, still stroking his beard, 'this is no cowardly flight - you arebeing noble.'
Harry ignored him. His hand was on the doorknob when Phineas Nigellus said lazily, 'I havea message for you from Albus Dumbledore.'
Harry span round.
'What is it?'
'"Stay where you are."'
'I haven't moved!' said Harry, his hand still upon the doorknob. 'So what's the message?'
'I have just given it to you, dolt,' said Phineas Nigellus smoothly. 'Dumbledore says, "Staywhere you are."'
'Why?' said Harry eagerly, dropping the end of his trunk. 'Why does he want me to stay?
What else did he say?'
'Nothing whatsoever,' said Phineas Nigellus, raising a thin black eyebrow as though he foundHarry impertinent.
Harry's temper rose to the surface like a snake rearing from long grass. He was exhausted, hewas confused beyond measure, he had experienced terror, relief, then terror again in the lasttwelve hours, and still Dumbledore did not want to talk to him!
'So that's it, is it?' he said loudly. '"Stay where you are"! That's all anyone could tell me after Igot attacked by those Dementors, too! Just stay put while the grown-ups sort it out, Harry! Wewon't bother telling you anything, though, because your tiny little brain might not be able tocope with it!'

'You know,' said Phineas Nigellus, even more loudly than Harry 'this is precisely why I loathed being a teacher! Young people are so infernally convinced that they are absolutelyright about everything. Has it not occurred to you, my poor puffed-up popinjay, that theremight be an excellent reason why the Headmaster of Hogwarts is not confiding every tinydetail of his plans to you? Have you never paused, while feeling hard-done-by, to note thatfollowing Dumbledores orders has never yet led you into harm? No. No, like all youngpeople, you are quite sure that you alone feel and think, you alone recognise danger, youalone are the only one clever enough to realise what the Dark Lord may be planning -'
'He is planning something to do with me, then?' said Harry swiftly.
'Did I say that?' said Phineas Nigellus, idly examining his silk gloves. 'Now, if you will excuseme, I have better things to do than listen to adolescent agonising… good-day to you.'
And he strolled to the edge of his frame and out of sight.
'Fine, go then!' Harry bellowed at the empty frame. 'And tell Dumbledore thanks for nothing!'
The empty canvas remained silent. Fuming, Harry dragged his trunk back to the foot of hisbed, then threw himself face down on the moth-eaten covers, his eyes shut, his body heavyand aching.
He felt as though he had journeyed for miles and miles… it seemed impossible that less thantwenty-four hours ago Cho Chang had been approaching him under the mistletoe… he wasso tired… he was scared to sleep… yet he did not know how long he could fight it…
Dumbledore had told him to stay… that must mean he was allowed to sleep… but he wasscared… what if it happened again?
He was sinking into shadows…
It was as though a film in his head had been waiting to start. He was walking down adeserted corridor towards a plain black door, past rough stone walls, torches, and an opendoorway on to a flight of stone steps leading downstairs on the left…
He reached the black door but could not open it… he stood gazing at it, desperate for entry…
something he wanted with all his heart lay beyond… a prize beyond his dreams… if only hisscar would stop prickling… then he would be able to think more clearly…
'Harry,' said Ron's voice, from far, far away, 'Mum says dinner's ready, but she'll save yousomething if you want to stay in bed.'
Harry opened his eyes, but Ron had already left the room.

He doesn't want to be on his own with me, Harry thought. Not after what he heard Moody say.
He supposed none of them would want him there any more, now that they knew what wasinside him.
He would not go down to dinner; he would not inflict his company on them. He turned overon to his other side and, after a while, dropped back off to sleep. He woke much later, in theearly hours of the morning, his insides aching with hunger and Ron snoring in the next bed.
Squinting around the room, he saw the dark outline of Phineas Nigellus standing again in hisportrait and it occurred to Harry that Dumbledore had probably sent Phineas Nigellus towatch over him, in case he attacked somebody else.
The feeling of being unclean intensified. He half-wished he had not obeyed Dumbledore… ifthis was how life was going to be for him in Grimmauld Place from now on, maybe he wouldbe better off in Privet Drive after all.
*Everybody else spent the following morning putting up Christmas decorations. Harry couldnot remember Sirius ever being in such a good mood; he was actually singing carols,apparently delighted that he was to have company over Christmas. Harry could hear hisvoice echoing up through the floor in the cold drawing room where he was sitting alone,watching the sky growing whiter outside the windows, threatening snow, all the time feelinga savage pleasure that he was giving the others the opportunity to keep talking about him, asthey were bound to be doing. When he heard Mrs Weasley calling his name softly up thestairs around lunchtime, he retreated further upstairs and ignored her.

Around six o'clock in the evening the doorbell rang and Mrs Black started screaming again.
Assuming that Mundungus or some other Order member had come to call, Harry merelysettled himself more comfortably against the wall of Buckbeak's room where he was hiding,trying to ignore how hungry he felt as he fed dead rats to the Hippogriff. It came as a slightshock when somebody hammered hard on the door a few minutes later.
'I know you're in there,' said Hermione's voice. 'Will you please come out? 1 want to talk toyou.'
'What are you doing here?' Harry asked her, pulling open the door as Buckbeak resumed hisscratching at the straw-strewn floor for any fragments of rat he may have dropped. 'I thoughtyou were skiing with your mum and dad?'
'Well, to tell the truth, skiing's not really my thing,' said Hermione. 'So, I've come here forChristmas.' There was snow in her hair and her face was pink with cold. 'But don't tell Ron. I told him skiing's really good because he kept laughing so much. Mum and Dad are a bitdisappointed, but I've told them that everyone who is serious about the exams is staying atHogwarts to study. They want me to do well, they'll understand. Anyway,' she said briskly,'let's go to your bedroom, Ron's mum has lit a fire in there and she's sent up sandwiches.'
Harry followed her back to the second floor. When he entered the bedroom, he was rathersurprised to see both Ron and Ginny waiting for them, sitting on Ron's bed.
'I came on the Knight Bus,' said Hermione airily, pulling off her jacket before Harry had timeto speak. 'Dumbledore told me what had happened first thing this morning, but I had to waitfor term to end officially before setting off. Umbridge is already livid that you lot disappearedright under her nose, even though Dumbledore told her Mr Weasley was in St Mungo's andhe'd given you all permission to visit. So…"
She sat down next to Ginny, and the two girls and Ron all looked up at Harry.
'How're you feeling?' asked Hermione.
Tine,' said Harry stiffly.
'Oh, don't lie, Harry,' she said impatiently. 'Ron and Ginny say you've been hiding fromeveryone since you got back from St Mungo's.'
They do, do they?' said Harry, glaring at Ron and Ginny. Ron looked down at his feet butGinny seemed quite unabashed.
'Well, you have!' she said. 'And you won't look at any of us!'
'It's you lot who won't look at me!' said Harry angrily.
'Maybe you're taking it in turns to look, and keep missing each other,' suggested Hermione,the corners of her mouth twitching.
'Very funny,' snapped Harry, turning away.
'Oh, stop feeling all misunderstood,' said Hermione sharply. 'Look, the others have told mewhat you overheard last night on the Extendable Ears -'
'Yeah?' growled Harry, his hands deep in his pockets as he watched the snow now fallingthickly outside. 'All been talking about me, have you? Well, I'm getting used to it.'

'We wanted to talk to you, Harry,' said Ginny, 'but as you've been hiding ever since we gotback -'
'I didn't want anyone to talk to me,' said Harry, who was feeling more and more nettled.
'Well, that was a bit stupid of you,' said Ginny angrily, 'seeing as you don't know anyone butme who's been possessed by You-Know-Who, and I can tell you how it feels.'
Harry remained quite still as the impact of these words hit him. Then he wheeled round.
'I forgot,' he said.
'Lucky you,' said Ginny coolly.
'I'm sorry' Harry said, and he meant it. 'So… so, do you think I'm being possessed, then?'
'Well, can you remember everything you've been doing?' Ginny asked. 'Are there big blankperiods where you don't know what you've been up to?'
Harry racked his brains.
'No,' he said.
Then You-Know-Who hasn't ever possessed you,' said Ginny simply. 'When he did it to me, Icouldn't remember what I'd been doing for hours at a time. I'd find myself somewhere andnot know how I got there.'
Harry hardly dared believe her, yet his heart was lightening almost in spite of himself.
'That dream I had about your dad and the snake, though —'
'Harry you've had these dreams before,' Hermione said. 'You had flashes of what Voldemortwas up to last year.'
This was different,' said Harry, shaking his head. 'I was inside that snake. It was like I was thesnake… what if Voldemort somehow transported me to London —?'
'One day,' said Hermione, sounding thoroughly exasperated, 'you'll read Hogwarts: A History,and perhaps it will remind you that you can't Apparate or Disapparate inside Hogwarts. EvenVoldemort couldn't just make you fly out of your dormitory, Harry.'

'You didn't leave your bed, mate,' said Ron. 'I saw you thrashing around in your sleep for atleast a minute before we could wake you up.'
Harry started pacing up and down the room again, thinking. What they were all saying wasnot only comforting, it made sense… without really thinking, he took a sandwich from theplate on the bed and crammed it hungrily into his mouth.
I'm not the weapon after all, thought Harry. His heart swelled with happiness and relief, and hefelt like joining in as they heardSirius tramping past their door towards Buckbeak's room, singing 'God Rest Ye, MerryHippogriffs' at the top of his voice.
*How could he have dreamed of returning to Privet Drive for Christmas? Sirius's delight athaving the house full again, and especially at having Harry back, was infectious. He was nolonger their sullen host of the summer; now he seemed determined that everyone shouldenjoy themselves as much, if not more than they would have done at Hogwarts, and heworked tirelessly in the run-up to Christmas Day, cleaning and decorating with their help, sothat by the time they all went to bed on Christmas Eve the house was barely recognisable. Thetarnished chandeliers were no longer hung with cobwebs but with garlands of holly and goldand silver streamers; magical snow glittered in heaps over the threadbare carpets; a greatChristmas tree, obtained by Mundungus and decorated with live fairies, blocked Sirius'sfamily tree from view, and even the stuffed elf-heads on the hall wall wore Father Christmashats and beards.

Harry awoke on Christmas morning to find a stack of presents at the foot of his bed and Ronalready halfway through opening his own, rather larger, pile.

'Good haul this year,' he informed Harry through a cloud of paper. Thanks for the BroomCompass, it's excellent; beats Hermiones - she got me a homework planner -

Harry sorted through his presents and found one with Hermiones handwriting on it. She hadgiven him, too, a book that resembled a diary except that every time he opened a page it saidaloud things like: 'Do it today or later you'll pay!'

Sirius and Lupin had given Harry a set of excellent books entitled Practical Defensive Magic andits Use Against the Dark Arts, which had superb, moving colour illustrations of all the counterjinxesand hexes it described. Harry flicked through the first volume eagerly; he could see itwas going to be highly useful in his plans for the DA. Hagrid had sent a furry brown walletthat had fangs, which were presumably supposed to be an anti-theft device, but unfortunately prevented Harry putting any money in without getting his fingers ripped off. Tonkss presentwas a small, working model of a Firebolt, which Harry watched fly around the room, wishinghe still had his full-size version; Ron had given him an enormous box of Every-Flavour Beans,Mr and Mrs Weasley the usual hand-knitted jumper and some mince pies, and Dobby a trulydreadful painting that Harry suspected had been done by the elf himself. He had just turned itupside-down to see whether it looked better that way when, with a loud crack, Fred andGeorge Apparated at the foot of his bed.

'Merry Christmas,' said George. 'Don't go downstairs for a bit.'

'Why not?' said Ron.

'Mum's crying again,' said Fred heavily. 'Percy sent back his Christmas jumper.'

'Without a note,' added George. 'Hasn't asked how Dad is or visited him or anything.'

'We tried to comfort her,' said Fred, moving around the bed to look at Harry's portrait. Toldher Percy's nothing more than a humungous pile of rat droppings.'

'Didn't work,' said George, helping himself to a Chocolate Frog. 'So Lupin took over. Best lethim cheer her up before we go down for breakfast, I reckon.'

'What's that supposed to be, anyway?' asked Fred, squinting at Dobby's painting. 'Looks like agibbon with two black eyes.'

'It's Harry!' said George, pointing at the back of the picture, 'says so on the back!'

'Good likeness,' said Fred, grinning. Harry threw his new homework diary at him; it hit thewall opposite and fell to the floor where it said happily: 'If you've dotted the "i"s and crossed the"t"s then you may do whatever you please!'

They got up and dressed. They could hear the various inhabitants of the house calling 'MerryChristmas' to one another. On their way downstairs they met Hermione.

Thanks for the book, Harry' she said happily. 'I've been wanting that New Theory ojNumerology for ages! And that perfume's really unusual, Ron.'

'No problem,' said Ron. 'Who's that for, anyway?' he added, nodding at the neatly wrappedpresent she was carrying.

'Kreacher,' said Hermione brightly. ;>

'It had better not be clothes!' Ron warned her. 'You know what Sirius said: Kreacher knowstoo much, we can't set him free!'

'It isn't clothes,' said Hermione, 'although if I had my way I'd certainly give him something towear other than that filthy old rag. No, it's a patchwork quilt, I thought it would brighten uphis bedroom.'

'What bedroom?' said Harry, dropping his voice to a whisper as they were passing theportrait of Sirius's mother.

'Well, Sirius says it's not so much a bedroom, more a kind of -den,' said Hermione.
'Apparently he sleeps under the boiler in that cupboard off the kitchen.'
Mrs Weasley was the only person in the basement when they arrived there. She was standingat the stove and sounded as though she had a bad head cold as she wished them 'MerryChristmas', and they all averted their eyes.
'So, is this Kreacher's bedroom?' said Ron, strolling over to a dingy door in the corner oppositethe pantry. Harry had never seen it open.
'Yes,' said Hermione, now sounding a little nervous. 'Er… I think we'd better knock.'
Ron rapped on the door with his knuckles but there was no reply.
'He must be sneaking around upstairs,' he said, and without further ado pulled open the door.
'Urgh!'
Harry peered inside. Most of the cupboard was taken up with a very large and old-fashionedboiler, but in the foot of space underneath the pipes Kreacher had made himself somethingthat looked like a nest. A jumble of assorted rags and smelly old blankets were piled on thefloor and the small dent in the middle of it showed where Kreacher curled up to sleep everynight. Here and there among the material were stale bread crusts and mouldy old bits ofcheese. In a far corner glinted small objects and coins that Harry guessed Kreacher had saved,magpie-like, from Sirius's purge of the house, and he had also managed to retrieve the silverframedfamily photographs that Sirius had thrown away over the summer. Their glass mightbe shattered, but still the little black-and-white people inside them peered up at himhaughtily, including - he felt a little jolt in his stomach - the dark, heavy-lidded woman whosetrial he had witnessed in Dumbledore's Pensieve: Bellatrix Lestrange. By the looks of it, herswas Kreacher's favourite photograph; he had placed it to the fore of all the others and hadmended the glass clumsily with Spellotape.

'I think I'll just leave his present here,' said Hermione, laying the package neatly in the middleof the depression in the rags and blankets and closing the door quietly. 'He'll find it later,that'll be fine.'
'Come to think of it,' said Sirius, emerging from the pantry carrying a large turkey as theyclosed the cupboard door, 'has anyone actually seen Kreacher lately?'
'I haven't seen him since the night we came back here,' said Harry. 'You were ordering himout of the kitchen.'
'Yeah…' said Sirius, frowning. 'You know, I think that's the last time I saw him, too… he mustbe hiding upstairs somewhere.'
'He couldn't have left, could he?' said Harry. 'I mean, when you said "out", maybe he thoughtyou meant get out of the house?'
'No, no, house-elves can't leave unless they're given clothes. They're tied to their family'shouse,' said Sirius.
They can leave the house if they really want to,' Harry contradicted him. 'Dobby did, he leftthe Malfoys' to give me warnings two years ago. He had to punish himself afterwards, but hestill managed it.'
Sirius looked slightly disconcerted for a moment, then said, Til look for him later, I expect I'llfind him upstairs crying his eyes out over my mother's old bloomers or something. Of course,he might have crawled into the airing cupboard and died… but 1 mustn't get my hopes up.'
Fred, George and Ron laughed; Hermione, however, looked reproachful. jOnce they had eaten their Christmas lunch, the Weasleys, Harry and Hermione wereplanning to pay Mr Weasley another visit, escorted by Mad-Eye and Lupin. Mundungusturned up in time for Christmas pudding and trifle, having managed to 'borrow' a car for theoccasion, as the Underground did not run on Christmas Day. The car, which Harry doubtedvery much had been taken with the consent of its owner, had been enlarged with a spell likethe Weasleys' old Ford Anglia had once been. Although normally proportioned outside, tenpeople with Mundungus driving were able to fit into it quite comfortably. Mrs Weasleyhesitated before getting inside - Harry knew her disapproval of Mundungus was battling withher dislike of travelling without magic - but, finally, the cold outside and her children'spleading triumphed, and she settled herself into the back seat between Fred and Bill withgood grace.

The journey to St Mungo's was quite quick as there was very little traffic on the roads. A small trickle of witches and wizards was creeping furtively up the otherwise deserted street to visitthe hospital. Harry and the others got out of the car, and Mundungus drove off around thecorner to wait for them. They strolled casually towards the window where the dummy ingreen nylon stood, then, one by one, stepped through the glass.

The reception area looked pleasantly festive: the crystal orbs that illuminated St Mungo's hadbeen coloured red and gold to become gigantic, glowing Christmas baubles; holly hungaround every doorway; and shining white Christmas trees covered in magical snow andicicles glittered in every corner, each one topped with a gleaming gold star. It was lesscrowded than the last time they had been there, although halfway across the room Harryfound himself shunted aside by a witch with a satsuma jammed up her left nostril.

'Family argument, eh?' smirked the blonde witch behind the desk. 'You're the third I've seentoday… Spell Damage, fourth floor.'

They found Mr Weasley propped up in bed with the remains of his turkey dinner on a tray onhis lap and a rather sheepish expression on his face.

'Everything all right, Arthur?' asked Mrs Weasley, after they had all greeted Mr Weasley andhanded over their presents.

'Fine, fine,' said Mr Weasley, a little too heartily. 'You — er — haven't seen HealerSmethwyck, have you?'

'No,' said Mrs Weasley suspiciously, 'why?'

'Nothing, nothing,' said Mr Weasley airily, starting to unwrap his pile of gifts. 'Well, everyonehad a good day? What did you all get for Christmas? Oh, Harry - this is absolutely wonderful!'

For he had just opened Harry's gift of fuse-wire and screwdrivers.

Mrs Weasley did not seem entirely satisfied with Mr Weasley's answer. As her husbandleaned over to shake Harry's hand, she peered at the bandaging under his nightshirt.

'Arthur,' she said, with a snap in her voice like a mousetrap, 'you've had your bandageschanged. Why have you had your bandages changed a day early, Arthur? They told me theywouldn't need doing until tomorrow.'

'What?' said Mr Weasley, looking rather frightened and pulling the bed covers higher up hischest. 'No, no - it's nothing - it's -l-

He seemed to deflate under Mrs Weasley's piercing gaze.

'Well - now don't get upset, Molly, but Augustus Pye had an idea… he's the Trainee Healer,you know, lovely young chap and very interested in… um… complementary medicine… 1mean, some of these old Muggle remedies… well, they're called stitches, Molly, and theywork very well on - on Muggle wounds -'

Mrs Weasley let out an ominous noise somewhere between a shriek and a snarl. Lupinstrolled away from the bed and over to the werewolf, who had no visitors and was lookingrather wistfully at the crowd around Mr Weasley; Bill muttered something about gettinghimself a cup of tea and Fred and George leapt up to accompany him, grinning.
'Do you mean to tell me,' said Mrs Weasley, her voice growing louder with every word andapparently unaware that her fellow visitors were scurrying for cover, 'that you have beenmessing about with Muggle remedies?'
'Not messing about, Molly, dear,' said Mr Weasley imploringly, 'it was just - just somethingPye and I thought we'd try - only, most unfortunately — well, with these particular kinds ofwounds - it doesn't seem to work as well as we'd hoped -'
'Meaning?'
'Well… well, 1 don't know whether you know what - what stitches are?'
'It sounds as though you've been trying to sew your skin back together,' said Mrs Weasleywith a snort of mirthless laughter, 'but even you, Arthur, wouldn't be that stupid —'
'I fancy a cup of tea, too,' said Harry, jumping to his feet.
Hermione, Ron and Ginny almost sprinted to the door with him. As it swung closed behindthem, they heard Mrs Weasley shriek, 'WHAT DO YOU MEAN, THAT'S THE GENERALIDEA?'
Typical Dad,' said Ginny, shaking her head as they set off up the corridor. 'Stitches… I askyou…'
'Well, you know, they do work well on non-magical wounds,' said Hermione fairly. 'I supposesomething in that snake's venom dissolves them or something. I wonder where the tearoomis?'
'Fifth floor,' said Harry, remembering the sign over the welcomewitch's desk.
They walked along the corridor, through a set of double doors and found a rickety staircase lined with more portraits of brutal-looking Healers. As they climbed it, the various Healerscalled out to them, diagnosing odd complaints and suggesting horrible remedies. Ron wasseriously affronted when a medieval wizard called out that he clearly had a bad case ofspattergroit.
'And what's that supposed to be?' he asked angrily, as the Healer pursued him through sixmore portraits, shoving the occupants out of the way.
'Tis a most grievous affliction of the skin, young master, that will leave you pockmarked andmore gruesome even than you are now -'
'Watch who you're calling gruesome!' said Ron, his ears turning red.
'- the only remedy is to take the liver of a toad, bind it tight about your throat, stand naked atthe full moon in a barrel of eels' eyes -'
'I have not got spattergroit!'
'But the unsightly blemishes upon your visage, young master -'
They're freckles!' said Ron furiously. 'Now get back in your own picture and leave me alone!'
He rounded on the others, who were all keeping determinedly straight faces.
'What floor's this?'
'I think it's the fifth,' said Hermione.
'Nah, it's the fourth,' said Harry, 'one more —'
But as he stepped on to the landing he came to an abrupt halt, staring at the small window setinto the double doors that marked the start of a corridor signposted SPELL DAMAGE. A manwas peering out at them all with his nose pressed against the glass. He had wavy blond hair,bright blue eyes and a broad vacant smile that revealed dazzlingly white teeth.
'Blimey!' said Ron, also staring at the man.

'Oh, my goodness,' said Hermione suddenly, sounding breathless. 'Professor Lockhart!'
Their ex-Defence Against the Dark Arts teacher pushed open the doors and moved towardsthem, wearing a long lilac dressing gown.

'Well, hello there!' he said. 'I expect you'd like my autograph, would you?'
'Hasn't changed much, has he?' Harry muttered to Ginny, who grinned.
'Er — how are you, Professor?' said Ron, sounding slightly guilty. It had been Ron'smalfunctioning wand that had damaged Professor Lockhart's memory so badly that he hadlanded in St Mungo's in the first place, though as Lockhart had been attempting topermanently wipe Harry and Ron's memories at the time, Harrys sympathy was limited.
'I'm very well indeed, thank you!' said Lockhart exuberantly, pulling a rather batteredpeacock-feather quill from his pocket. 'Now, how many autographs would you like? I can dojoined-up writing now, you know!'
'Er - we don't want any at the moment, thanks,' said Ron, raising his eyebrows at Harry, whoasked, 'Professor, should you be wandering around the corridors? Shouldn't you be in award?'
The smile faded slowly from Lockhart's face. For a few moments he gazed intently at Harry,then he said, 'Haven't we met?'
'Er… yeah, we have,' said Harry. 'You used to teach us at Hogwarts, remember?'
Teach?' repeated Lockhart, looking faintly unsettled. 'Me? Did I?'
And then the smile reappeared upon his face so suddenly it was rather alarming.
Taught you everything you know, I expect, did I? Well, how about those autographs, then?
Shall we say a round dozen, you can give them to all your little friends then and nobody willbe left out!'
But just then a head poked out of a door at the far end of the corridor and a voice called,'Gilderoy, you naughty boy, where have you wandered off to?'
A motherly-looking Healer wearing a tinsel wreath in her hair came bustling up the corridor,smiling warmly at Harry and the others.
'Oh, Gilderoy, you've got visitors! How lovely, and on Christmas Day, too! Do you know, henever gets visitors, poor lamb, and I can't think why, he's such a sweetie, aren't you?'
'We're doing autographs!' Gilderoy told the Healer with another glittering smile. They wantloads of them, won't take no for an answer! I just hope we've got enough photographs!'

'Listen to him,' said the Healer, taking Lockhart's arm and beaming fondly at him as thoughhe were a precocious two-year-old. 'He was rather well known a few years ago; we very muchhope that this liking for giving autographs is a sign that his memory might be starting to comeback. Will you step this way? He's in a closed ward, you know, he must have slipped outwhile I was bringing in the Christmas presents, the door's usually kept locked… not that he'sdangerous! But,' she lowered her voice to a whisper, 'he's a bit of a danger to himself, blesshim… doesn't know who he is, you see, wanders off and can't remember how to get back… itis nice of you to have come to see him.'
'Er,' said Ron, gesturing uselessly at the floor above, 'actually, we were just — er -'
But the Healer was smiling expectantly at them, and Ron's feeble mutter of 'going to have acup of tea' trailed away into nothingness. They looked at each other helplessly, then followedLockhart and his Healer along the corridor.
'Let's not stay long,' Ron said quietly.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

The Healer pointed her wand at the door of the Janus Thickey Ward and muttered,'Alohomora.' The door swung open and she led the way inside, keeping a firm grasp onGilderoys arm until she had settled him into an armchair beside his bed.
This is our long-term residents' ward,' she informed Harry, Ron,Hermione and Ginny in a low voice. 'For permanent spell damage, you know. Of course, withintensive remedial potions and charms and a bit of luck, we can produce some improvement.
Gilderoy does seem to be getting back some sense of himself; and we've seen a realimprovement in Mr Bode, he seems to be regaining the power of speech very well, though heisn't speaking any language we recognise yet. Well, 1 must finish giving out the Christmaspresents, I'll leave you all to chat.'
Harry looked around. The ward bore unmistakeable signs of being a permanent home to itsresidents. They had many more personal effects around their beds than in Mr Weasley's ward; the wall around Gilderoy's headboard, for instance, was papered with pictures of himself, allbeaming toothily and waving at the new arrivals. He had autographed many of them tohimself in disjointed, childish writing. The moment he had been deposited in his chair by theHealer, Gilderoy pulled a fresh stack of photographs towards him, seized a quill and startedsigning them all feverishly.
'You can put them in envelopes,' he said to Ginny, throwing the signed pictures into her lapone by one as he finished them. 'I am not forgotten, you know, no, I still receive a very greatdeal of fan mail… Gladys Gudgeon writes weekly … 1 just wish I knew why He paused, looking faintly puzzled, then beamed again and returned to his signing with renewed vigour.
'1 suspect it is simply my good looks…'
A sallow-skinned, mournful-looking wizard lay in the bed opposite staring at the ceiling; hewas mumbling to himself and seemed quite unaware of anything around him. Two bedsalong was a woman whose entire head was covered in fur; Harry remembered somethingsimilar happening to Hermione during their second year, although fortunately the damage, inher case, had not been permanent. At the far end of the ward flowery curtains had beendrawn around two beds to give the occupants and their visitors some privacy.
'Here you are, Agnes,' said the Healer brightly to the furry-faced woman, handing her a smallpile of Christmas presents. 'See, not forgotten, are you? And your son's sent an owl to say he'svisiting tonight, so that's nice, isn't it?'
Agnes gave several loud barks.
'And look, Broderick, you've been sent a pot plant and a lovely calendar with a different fancyHippogriff for each month; they'll brighten things up, won't they?' said the Healer, bustlingalong to the mumbling man, setting a rather ugly plant with long, swaying tentacles on thebedside cabinet and fixing the calendar to the wall with her wand. 'And - oh, MrsLongbottom, are you leaving already?'
Harry's head span round. The curtains had been drawn back from the two beds at the end ofthe ward and two visitors were walking back down the aisle between the beds: a formidablelookingold witch wearing a long green dress, a moth-eaten fox fur and a pointed hatdecorated with what was unmistakeably a stuffed vulture and, trailing behind her lookingthoroughly depressed - Neville.
With a sudden rush of understanding, Harry realised who the people in the end beds must be.
He cast around wildly for some means of distracting the others so that Neville could leave theward unnoticed and unquestioned, but Ron had also looked up at the sound of the name'Longbottom', and before Harry could stop him had called out, 'Neville!'
Neville jumped and cowered as though a bullet had narrowly missed him.
'It's us, Neville!' said Ron brightly, getting to his feet. 'Have you seen -? Lockhart's here!

Who've you been visiting?'
'Friends of yours, Neville, dear?' said Neville's grandmother graciously, bearing down uponthem all.
Neville looked as though he would rather be anywhere in the world but here. A dull purple flush was creeping up his plump face and he was not making eye contact with any of them.
'Ah, yes,' said his grandmother, looking closely at Harry and sticking out a shrivelled,clawlike hand for him to shake. 'Yes, yes, I know who you are, of course. Neville speaks mosthighly of you.'
'Er - thanks,' said Harry, shaking hands. Neville did not look at him, but surveyed his ownfeet, the colour deepening in his face all the while.
'And you two are clearly Weasleys,' Mrs Longbottom continued, proffering her hand regallyto Ron and Ginny in turn. 'Yes, I know your parents — not well, of course — but fine people,fine people… and you must be Hermione Granger?'
Hermione looked rather startled that Mrs Longbottom knew her name, but shook hands allthe same.
'Yes, Neville's told me all about you. Helped him out of a few sticky spots, haven't you? He's agood boy,' she said, casting a sternly appraising look down her rather bony nose at Neville,'but he hasn't got his father's talent, I'm afraid to say.' And she jerked her head in the directionof the two beds at the end of the ward, so that the stuffed vulture on her hat trembledalarmingly.
'What?' said Ron, looking amazed. (Harry wanted to stamp on Ron's foot, but that sort ofthing is much harder to bring off unnoticed when you're wearing jeans rather than robes.) 'Isthat your dad down the end, Neville?'
'What's this?' said Mrs Longbottom sharply. 'Haven't you told your friends about yourparents, Neville?'
Neville took a deep breath, looked up at the ceiling and shook his head. Harry could notremember ever feeling sorrier for anyone, but he could not think of any way of helpingNeville out of the situation.
'Well, it's nothing to be ashamed of!' said Mrs Longbottom angrily. 'You should be proud,Neville, proudl They didn't give their health and their sanity so their only son would beashamed of them, you know!'
'I'm not ashamed,' said Neville, very faintly, still looking anywhere but at Harry and theothers. Ron was now standing on tiptoe to look over at the inhabitants of the two beds.
'Well, you've got a funny way of showing it!' said Mrs Longbottom. 'My son and his wife,' shesaid, turning haughtily to Harry, Ron, Hermione and Ginny, 'were tortured into insanity by
You-Know-Who's followers.'
Hermione and Ginny both clapped their hands over their mouths. Ron stopped craning hisneck to catch a glimpse of Neville's parents and looked mortified.
They were Aurors, you know, and very well respected within the wizarding community' MrsLongbottom went on. 'Highly gifted, the pair of them. I - yes, Alice dear, what is it?'
Neville's mother had come edging down the ward in her nightdress. She no longer had theplump, happy-looking face Harry had seen in Moody's old photograph of the original Orderof the Phoenix. Her face was thin and worn now, her eyes seemed overlarge and her hair,which had turned white, was wispy and dead-looking. She did not seem to want to speak, orperhaps she was not able to, but she made timid motions towards Neville, holding somethingin her outstretched hand.
'Again?' said Mrs Longbottom, sounding slightly weary. 'Very well, Alice dear, very well - Neville, take it, whatever it is.'
But Neville had already stretched out his hand, into which his mother dropped an emptyDrooble's Best Blowing Gum wrapper.

'Very nice, dear,' said Neville's grandmother in a falsely cheery voice, patting his mother onthe shoulder.
But Neville said quietly, Thanks, Mum.'
His mother tottered away, back up the ward, humming to herself. Neville looked around atthe others, his expression defiant, as though daring them to laugh, but Harry did not thinkhe'd ever found anything less funny in his life.
'Well, we'd better get back,' sighed Mrs Longbottom, drawing on long green gloves. 'Very niceto have met you all. Neville, put that wrapper in the bin, she must have given you enough ofthem to paper your bedroom by now.'
But as they left, Harry was sure he saw Neville slip the sweet wrapper into his pocket.
The door closed behind them.
'I never knew,' said Hermione, who looked tearful.
'Nor did I,' said Ron rather hoarsely.

'Nor me,' whispered Ginny.
They all looked at Harry.
'I did,' he said glumly. 'Dumbledore told me but I promised I wouldn't tell anyone… that'swhat Bellatrix Lestrange got sent to Azkaban for, using the Cruciatus Curse on Neville'sparents until they lost their minds.'
'Bellatrix Lestrange did that?' whispered Hermione, horrified. That woman Kreacher's got aphoto of in his den?'
There was a long silence, broken by Lockharts angry voice.
'Look, I didn't learn joined-up writing for nothing, you know!'

— CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR —

OcclumencyKreacher, it transpired, had been lurking in the attic. Sirius said he had found him up there,covered in dust, no doubt looking for more relics of the Black family to hide in his cupboard.
Though Sirius seemed satisfied with this story, it made Harry uneasy. Kreacher seemed to bein a better mood on his reappearance, his bitter muttering had subsided somewhat and hesubmitted to orders more docilely than usual, though once or twice Harry caught the houseelfstaring at him avidly, but always looking quickly away whenever he saw that Harry hadnoticed.
Harry did not mention his vague suspicions to Sirius, whose cheerfulness was evaporatingfast now that Christmas was over. As the date of their departure back to Hogwarts drewnearer, he became more and more prone to what Mrs Weasley called 'fits of the sul-lens', inwhich he would become taciturn and grumpy, often withdrawing to Buckbeak's room forhours at a time. His gloom seeped through the house, oozing under doorways like somenoxious gas, so that all of them became infected by it.
Harry didn't want to leave Sirius again with only Kreacher for company; in fact, for the firsttime in his life, he was not looking forward to returning to Hogwarts. Going back to schoolwould mean placing himself once again under the tyranny of Dolores Umbridge, who had nodoubt managed to force through another dozen decrees in their absence; there was noQuidditch to look forward to now that he had been banned; there was every likelihood thattheir burden of homework would increase as the exams drew even nearer; and Dumbledoreremained as remote as ever. In fact, if it hadn't been for the DA, Harry thought he might havebegged Sirius to let him leave Hogwarts and remain in Grimmauld

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Place.

Then, on the very last day of the holidays, something happened that made Harry positivelydread his return to school.

'Harry, dear,' said Mrs Weasley, poking her head into his and Ron's bedroom, where the pairof them were playing wizard chess watched by Hermione, Ginny and Crookshanks, 'couldyou come down to the kitchen? Professor Snape would like a word with you.'

Harry did not immediately register what she had said; one of his castles was engaged in aviolent tussle with a pawn of Rons and he was egging it on enthusiastically.

'Squash him - squash him, he's only a pawn, you idiot. Sorry, Mrs Weasley, what did you say?'

'Professor Snape, dear. In the kitchen. He'd like a word.'

Harry's mouth fell open in horror. He looked around at Ron, Hermione and Ginny, all ofwhom were gaping back at him. Crookshanks, whom Hermione had been restraining withdifficulty for the past quarter of an hour, leapt gleefully on to the board and set the piecesrunning for cover, squealing at the top of their voices.

'Snape?' said Harry blankly.

'Professor Snape, dear,' said Mrs Weasley reprovingly. 'Now come on, quickly, he says he can'tstay long.'

'What's he want with you?' said Ron, looking unnerved as Mrs Weasley withdrew from theroom. 'You haven't done anything, have you?'

'No!' said Harry indignantly, racking his brains to think what he could have done that wouldmake Snape pursue him to Grimmauld Place. Had his last piece of homework perhaps earneda T?

A minute or two later, he pushed open the kitchen door to find Sirius and Snape both seatedat the long kitchen table, glaring in opposite directions. The silence between them was heavywith mutual dislike. A letter lay open on the table in front of Sirius.

'Er,' said Harry, to announce his presence.

Snape looked around at him, his face framed between curtains of greasy black hair.

'Sit down, Potter.'

'You know,' said Sirius loudly, leaning back on his rear chair legs and speaking to the ceiling,'I think I'd prefer it if you didn't give orders here, Snape. It's my house, you see.'

An ugly flush suffused Snape's pallid face. Harry sat down in a chair beside Sirius, facingSnape across the table.

'I was supposed to see you alone, Potter,' said Snape, the familiar sneer curling his mouth, 'butBlack -'

'I'm his godfather,' said Sirius, louder than ever.

'I am here on Dumbledore's orders,' said Snape, whose voice, by contrast, was becoming moreand more quietly waspish, 'but by all means stay, Black, I know you like to feel… involved.'

'What's that supposed to mean?' said Sirius, letting his chair fall back on to all four legs with aloud bang.

'Merely that I am sure you must feel - ah - frustrated by the fact that you can do nothinguseful,' Snape laid a delicate stress on the word, 'for the Order.'

It was Sirius's turn to flush. Snape's lip curled in triumph as he turned to Harry.

The Headmaster has sent me to tell you, Potter, that it is his wish for you to studyOcclumency this term.'

'Study what?' said Harry blankly.

Snape's sneer became more pronounced.

'Occlumency, Potter. The magical defence of the mind against external penetration. Anobscure branch of magic, but a highly useful one.'

Harry's heart began to pump very fast indeed. Defence against external penetration? But hewas not being possessed, they had all agreed on that…

'Why do I have to study Occlu— thing?' he blurted out.

'Because the Headmaster thinks it a good idea,' said Snape smoothly. 'You will receive privatelessons once a week, but you will not tell anybody what you are doing, least of all DoloresUmbridge. You understand?'

'Yes,' said Harry. 'Who's going to be teaching me?'

Snape raised an eyebrow.

'I am,' he said.

Harry had the horrible sensation that his insides were melting.

Extra lessons with Snape - what on earth had he done to deserve this? He looked quicklyround at Sirius for support.

'Why can't Dumbledore teach Harry?' asked Sirius aggressively. 'Why you?'

'I suppose because it is a headmaster's privilege to delegate less enjoyable tasks,' said Snape silkily. 'I assure you I did not beg for the job.' He got to his feet. 'I will expect you at six o'clockon Monday evening, Potter. My office. If anybody asks, you are taking remedial Potions. Nobody who has seen you in my classes could deny you need them.'

He turned to leave, his black travelling cloak billowing behind him.

'Wait a moment,' said Sirius, sitting up straighter in his chair.

Snape turned back to face them, sneering.

'I am in rather a hurry, Black. Unlike you, I do not have unlimited leisure time.'

Til get to the point, then,' said Sirius, standing up. He was rather taller than Snape who, Harrynoticed, balled his fist in the pocket of his cloak over what Harry was sure was the handle ofhis wand. 'If I hear you're using these Occlumency lessons to give Harry a hard time, you'llhave me to answer to.'

'How touching,' Snape sneered. 'But surely you have noticed that Potter is very like his father?'

'Yes, I have,' said Sirius proudly.

'Well then, you'll know he's so arrogant that criticism simply bounces off him,' Snape saidsleekly.

Sirius pushed his chair roughly aside and strode around the table towards Snape, pulling outhis wand as he went. Snape whipped out his own. They were squaring up to each other,Sirius looking livid, Snape calculating, his eyes darting from Sirius's wand-tip to his face.

'Sirius!' said Harry loudly, but Sirius appeared not to hear him.

'I've warned you, Snivdlus,' said Sirius, his face barely a foot from Snape's, 'I don't care ifDumbledore thinks you've reformed, I know better -'

'Oh, but why don't you tell him so?' whispered Snape. 'Or are you afraid he might not takevery seriously the advice of a man who has been hiding inside his mother's house for sixmonths?'

Tell me, how is Lucius Malfoy these days? I expect he's delighted his lapdog's working atHogwarts, isn't he?'

'Speaking of dogs,' said Snape softly, 'did you know that Lucius Malfoy recognised you last time you risked a little jaunt outside? Clever idea, Black, getting yourself seen on a safe stationplatform… gave you a cast-iron excuse not to leave your hidey-hole in future, didn't it?'

Sirius raised his wand.
'NO!' Harry yelled, vaulting over the table and trying to get in between them. 'Sirius, don't!'
'Are you calling me a coward?' roared Sirius, trying to push Harry out of the way, but Harrywould not budge.
'Why, yes, 1 suppose 1 am,' said Snape.
'Harry - get - out - of - it!' snarled Sirius, pushing him aside with his free hand.
The kitchen door opened and the entire Weasley family, plus Hermione, came inside, alllooking very happy, with Mr Weasley walking proudly in their midst dressed in a pair ofstriped pyjamas covered by a mackintosh.
'Cured!' he announced brightly to the kitchen at large. 'Completely cured!'
He and all the other Weasleys froze on the threshold, gazing at the scene in front of them,which was also suspended in mid-action, both Sirius and Snape looking towards the doorwith their wands pointing into each other's faces and Harry immobile between them, a handstretched out to each, trying to force them apart.
'Merlin's beard,' said Mr Weasley, the smile sliding off his face, 'what's going on here?'
Both Sirius and Snape lowered their wands. Harry looked from one to the other. Each wore anexpression of utmost contempt, yet the unexpected entrance of so many witnesses seemed tohave brought them to their senses. Snape pocketed his wand, turned on his heel and sweptback across the kitchen, passing the Weasleys without comment. At the door he looked back.
'Six o'clock, Monday evening, Potter.'
And he was gone. Sirius glared after him, his wand at his side.
'What's been going on?' asked Mr Weasley again.
'Nothing, Arthur,' said Sirius, who was breathing heavily as though he had just run a longdistance. 'Just a friendly little chat between two old school friends.' With what looked like anenormous effort, he smiled. 'So… you're cured? That's great news, really great.'

'Yes, isn't it?' said Mrs Weasley, leading her husband forward to a chair. 'Healer Smethwyckworked his magic in the end, found an antidote to whatever that snake's got in its fangs, andArthur's learned his lesson about dabbling in Muggle medicine, haven't you, dear?' she added,rather menacingly.
'Yes, Molly, dear,' said Mr Weasley meekly.
That night's meal should have been a cheerful one, with Mr Weasley back amongst them.
Harry could tell Sirius was trying to make it so, yet when his godfather was not forcinghimself to laugh loudly at Fred and George's jokes or offering everyone more food, his facefell back into a moody, brooding expression. Harry was separated from him by Mundungusand Mad-Eye, who had dropped in to offer Mr Weasley their congratulations. He wanted totalk to Sirius, to tell him he shouldn't listen to a word Snape said, that Snape was goading himdeliberately and that the rest of them didn't think Sirius was a coward for doing asDumbledore told him and remaining in Grimmauld Place. But he had no opportunity to doso, and, eyeing the ugly look on Sirius's face, Harry wondered occasionally whether he wouldhave dared to mention it even if he had the chance. Instead, he told Ron and Hermione underhis voice about having to take Occlumency lessons with Snape.
'Dumbledore wants to stop you having those dreams about Voldemort,' said Hermione atonce. 'Well, you won't be sorry not to have them any more, will you?'
'Extra lessons with Snape?' said Ron, sounding aghast. 'I'd rather have the nightmares!'
They were to return to Hogwarts on the Knight Bus the following day, escorted once again byTonks and Lupin, both of whom were eating breakfast in the kitchen when Harry, Ron andHermione came down next morning. The adults seemed to have been mid-way through awhispered conversation as Harry opened the door; all of them looked round hastily and fellsilent.

After a hurried breakfast, they all pulled on jackets and scarves . against the chilly greyJanuary morning. Harry had an unpleasant constricted sensation in his chest; he did not wantto say goodbye to Sirius. He had a bad feeling about this parting; he didn't know . when theywould next see each other and he felt it was incumbent upon him to say something to Sirius tostop him doing anything stupid - Harry was worried that Snape's accusation of cowardicehad stung Sirius so badly he might even now be planning some foolhardy trip beyondGrimmauld Place. Before he could think of what to say, however, Sirius had beckoned him tohis side.
'1 want you to take this,' he said quietly, thrusting a badly wrapped package roughly the sizeof a paperback book into Harry's hands.

'What is it?' Harry asked.
'A way of letting me know if Snape's giving you a hard time.r No, don't open it in here!' saidSirius, with a wary look at Mrs Weasley, who was trying to persuade the twins to wear handknittedmittens. 'I doubt Molly would approve - but I want you to use it if you need me, allright?'
'OK,' said Harry, stowing the package away in the inside pocket of his jacket, but he knew hewould never use whatever it was. It would not be he, Harry, who lured Sirius from his placeof safety, no matter how foully Snape treated him in their forthcoming Occlumency classes.
'Let's go, then,' said Sirius, clapping Harry on the shoulder and smiling grimly, and beforeHarry could say anything else, they were heading upstairs, stopping before the heavilychained and bolted front door, surrounded by Weasleys.
'Goodbye, Harry, take care,' said Mrs Weasley, hugging him.
'See you, Harry, and keep an eye out for snakes for me!' said Mr Weasley genially, shaking hishand.
'Right - yeah,' said Harry distractedly; it was his last chance to tell Sirius to be careful; heturned, looked into his godfather's face :. and opened his mouth to speak, but before he coulddo so Sirius ij il was giving him a brief, one-armed hug, and saying gruffly, 'Look afteryourself, Harry.' Next moment, Harry found himself being shunted out into the icy winter air,with Tonks (today heavily disguised as a tall, tweedy woman with iron-grey hair) chivvyinghim down the steps.
The door of number twelve slammed shut behind them. They followed Lupin down the frontsteps. As he reached the pavement, Harry looked round. Number twelve was shrinkingrapidly as those on either side of it stretched sideways, squeezing it out of sight. One blinklater, it had gone.
'Come on, the quicker we get on the bus the better,' said Tonks, and Harry thought there wasnervousness in the glance she threw around the square. Lupin flung out his right arm.
BANG.
A violently purple, triple-decker bus had appeared out of thin air in front of them, narrowlyavoiding the nearest lamppost, which jumped backwards out of its way.
A thin, pimply, jug-eared youth in a purple uniform leapt down on to the pavement and said,
'Welcome to the -'
'Yes, yes, we know, thank you,' said Tonks swiftly. 'On, on, get on -'
And she shoved Harry forwards towards the steps, past the conductor, who goggled at Harryas he passed.
'Ere - it's 'Any -!'

'If you shout his name I will curse you into oblivion,' muttered Tonks menacingly, nowshunting Ginny and Hermione forwards.

'I've always wanted to go on this thing,' said Ron happily, joining Harry on board and lookingaround.

It had been evening the last time Harry had travelled by Knight Bus and its three decks hadbeen full of brass bedsteads. Now, in the early morning, it was crammed with an assortmentof mismatched chairs grouped haphazardly around windows. Some of these appeared tohave fallen over when the bus stopped abruptly in Grimmauld Place; a few witches andwizards were still getting to their feet, grumbling, and somebody's shopping bag had slid thelength of the bus: an unpleasant mixture of frogspawn, cockroaches and custard creams wasscattered all over the floor.

'Looks like we'll have to split up,' said Tonks briskly, looking around for empty chairs. 'Fred,George and Ginny, if you just take those seats at the back… Remus can stay with you.'

She, Harry, Ron and Hermione proceeded up to the very top deck, where there were twounoccupied chairs at the very front of the bus and two at the back. Stan Shunpike, theconductor, followed Harry and Ron eagerly to the back. Heads turned as Harry passed and,when he sat down, he saw all the faces flick back to the front again.

As Harry and Ron handed Stan eleven Sickles each, the bus set off again, swaying ominously.

It rumbled around Grimmauld Place, weaving on and off the pavement, then, with anothertremendous BANG, they were all flung backwards; Ron's chair toppled right over andPigwidgeon, who had been on his lap, burst out of his cage and flew twittering wildly up tothe front of the bus where he fluttered down on to Hermione's shoulder instead. Harry, whohad narrowly avoided falling by seizing a candle bracket, looked out of the window: theywere now speeding down what appeared to be a motorway.

'Just outside Birmingham,' said Stan happily, answering Harry's unasked question as Ronstruggled up from the floor. 'You keepin' well, then, 'Arry? I seen your name in the paperloads over the summer, but it weren't never nuffink very nice. I said to Ern, I said, 'e didn't seem like a nutter when we met 'im, just goes to show, dunnit?'

He handed over their tickets and continued to gaze, enthralled, at Harry. Apparently, Standid not care how nutty somebody was, if they were famous enough to be in the paper. TheKnight Bus swayed alarmingly, overtaking a line of cars on the inside. Looking towards thefront of the bus, Harry saw Hermione cover her eyes with her hands, Pigwidgeon swayinghappily on her shoulder.

BANG.

Chairs slid backwards again as the Knight Bus jumped from the Birmingham motorway to aquiet country lane full of hairpin bends. Hedgerows on either side of the road were leapingout of their way as they mounted the verges. From here they moved to a main street in themiddle of a busy town, then to a viaduct surrounded by tall hills, then to a windswept roadbetween high-rise flats, each time with a loud BANG.

'I've changed my mind,' muttered Ron, picking himself up from the floor for the sixth time, 'Inever want to ride on this thing again.'

'Listen, it's 'Ogwarts stop after this,' said Stan brightly, swaying towards them. That bossywoman up front 'oo got on with you, she's given us a little tip to move you up the queue.

We're just gonna let Madam Marsh off first, though -' there was a retching sound fromdownstairs, followed by a horrible spattering noise '- she's not feeling 'er best.'

A few minutes later, the Knight Bus screeched to a halt outside a small pub, which squeezeditself out of the way to avoid a collision. They could hear Stan ushering the unfortunateMadam Marsh out of the bus and the relieved murmurings of her fellow passengers on thesecond deck. The bus moved on again, gathering speed, until -

BANG.
They were rolling through a snowy Hogsmeade. Harry caught a glimpse of the Hog's Headdown its side street, the severed boar's head sign creaking in the wintry wind. Flecks of snowhit the large window at the front of the bus. At last they rolled to a halt outside the gates toHogwarts.
Lupin and Tonks helped them off the bus with their luggage, then got off to say goodbye.
Harry glanced up at the three decks of the Knight Bus and saw all the passengers staringdown at them, noses flat against the windows.
'You'll be safe once you're in the grounds,' said Tonks, casting a careful eye around at thedeserted road. 'Have a good term, OK?'

'Look after yourselves,' said Lupin, shaking hands all round and reaching Harry last. 'Andlisten…" he lowered his voice while the rest of them exchanged last-minute goodbyes withTonks, 'Harry, I know you don't like Snape, but he is a superb Occlumens and we all - Siriusincluded - want you to learn to protect yourself, so work hard, all right?'
'Yeah, all right,' said Harry heavily, looking up into Lupin's prematurely lined face. 'See you,then.'
The six of them struggled up the slippery drive towards the castle, dragging their trunks.
Hermione was already talking about knitting a few elf hats before bedtime. Harry glancedback when they reached the oaken front doors; the Knight Bus had already gone and he halfwished,given what was coming the following evening, that he was still on board.
*Harry spent most of the next day dreading the evening. His morning double-Potions lessondid nothing to dispel his trepidation, as Snape was as unpleasant as ever. His mood wasfurther lowered by the DA members constantly approaching him in the corridors betweenclasses, asking hopefully if there would be a meeting that night.
Til let you know in the usual way when the next one is,' Harry said over and over again, 'but Ican't do it tonight, I've got to go to - er - remedial Potions.'
'You take remedial Potions!' asked Zacharias Smith superciliously, having cornered Harry inthe Entrance Hall after lunch. 'Good Lord, you must be terrible. Snape doesn't usually giveextra lessons, does he?'
As Smith strode away in an annoyingly buoyant fashion, Ron glared after him.
'Shall I jinx him? I can still get him from here,' he said, raising his wand and taking aimbetween Smith's shoulder blades.
'Forget it,' said Harry dismally. 'It's what everyone's going to think, isn't it? That I'm reallystup—'
'Hi, Harry,' said a voice behind him. He turned round and found Cho standing there.
'Oh,' said Harry as his stomach leapt uncomfortably. 'Hi.'
'We'll be in the library, Harry,' said Hermione firmly as she seized Ron above the elbow anddragged him off towards the marble staircase.

'Had a good Christmas?' asked Cho.
'Yeah, not bad,' said Harry.
'Mine was pretty quiet,' said Cho. For some reason, she was looking rather embarrassed.
'Erm… there's another Hogsmeade trip next month, did you see the notice?'
'What? Oh, no, I haven't checked the noticeboard since I got back.'
'Yes, it's on Valentine's Day…'

'Right,' said Harry, wondering why she was telling him this. 'Well, I suppose you want to -?'
'Only if you do,' she said eagerly.
Harry stared. He had been about to say, 'I suppose you want to know when the next DAmeeting is?' but her response did not seem to fit.
'I - er —' he said.
'Oh, it's OK if you don't,' she said, looking mortified. 'Don't worry. I - I'll see you around.'
She walked away. Harry stood staring after her, his brain working frantically. Thensomething clunked into place.
'Cho! Hey - CHO!'
He ran after her, catching her halfway up the marble staircase.
'Er - d'you want to come into Hogsmeade with me on Valentine's Day?'
'Oooh, yes!' she said, blushing crimson and beaming at him.
'Right… well… that's settled then,' said Harry, and feeling that the day was not going to be acomplete loss after all, he virtually bounced off to the library to pick -up Ron and Hermionebefore their afternoon lessons.
By six o'clock that evening, however, even the glow of having successfully asked out ChoChang could not lighten the ominous feelings that intensified with every step Harry tooktowards Snape's office.

He paused outside the door when he reached it, wishing he were almost anywhere else, then,taking a deep breath, he knocked and entered.
The shadowy room was lined with shelves bearing hundreds of glass jars in which slimy bitsof animals and plants were suspended in variously coloured potions. In one corner stood thecupboard full of ingredients that Snape had once accused Harry - not without reason - ofrobbing. Harry's attention was drawn towards the desk, however, where a shallow stonebasin engraved with runes and symbols lay in a pool of candlelight. Harry recognised it atonce - it was Dumbledore's Pensieve. Wondering what on earth it was doing there, he jumpedwhen Snape's cold voice came out of the shadows.
'Shut the door behind you, Potter.'
Harry did as he was told, with the horrible feeling that he was imprisoning himself. When heturned back into the room, Snape had moved into the light and was pointing silently at thechair opposite his desk. Harry sat down and so did Snape, his cold black eyes fixedunblinkingly upon Harry, dislike etched in every line of his face.
'Well, Potter, you know why you are here,' he said. The Headmaster has asked me to teachyou Occlumency. I can only hope that you prove more adept at it than at Potions.'
'Right,' said Harry tersely.
This may not be an ordinary class, Potter,' said Snape, his eyes narrowed malevolently, 'but Iam still your teacher and you will therefore call me "sir" or "Professor" at all times.'
'Yes… sir,' said Harry.
Snape continued to survey him through narrowed eyes for a moment, then said, 'Now,Occlumency. As I told you back in your dear godfather's kitchen, this branch of magic sealsthe mind against magical intrusion and influence.'
'And why does Professor Dumbledore think I need it, sir?' said Harry, looking directly intoSnape's eyes and wondering whether Snape would answer.
Snape looked back at him for a moment and then said contemptuously, 'Surely even youcould have worked that out by now, Potter? The Dark Lord is highly skilled at Legilimency -'

'What's that? Sir?'

'It is the ability to extract feelings and memories from another persons mind -'

'He can read minds?' said Harry quickly, his worst fears confirmed.

'You have no subtlety, Potter,' said Snape, his dark eyes glittering. 'You do not understandfine distinctions. It is one of the shortcomings that makes you such a lamentable potionmaker.'

Snape paused for a moment, apparently to savour the pleasure of insulting Harry, beforecontinuing.

'Only Muggles talk of "mind-reading". The mind is not a book, to be opened at will andexamined at leisure. Thoughts are not etched on the inside of skulls, to be perused by anyinvader. The mind is a complex and many-layered thing, Potter - or at least, most minds are.'

He smirked. 'It is true, however, that those who have mastered Legilimency are able, undercertain conditions, to delve into the minds of their victims and to interpret their findingscorrectly. The Dark Lord, for instance, almost always knows when somebody is lying to him.

Only those skilled at Occlumency are able to shut down those feelings and memories thatcontradict the lie, and so can utter falsehoods in his presence without detection.'

Whatever Snape said, Legilimency sounded like mind-reading to Harry, and he didn't like thesound of it at all.

'So he could know what we're thinking right now? Sir?'

The Dark Lord is at a considerable distance and the walls and grounds of Hogwarts areguarded by many ancient spells and charms to ensure the bodily and mental safety of thosewho dwell within them,' said Snape. Time and space matter in magic, Potter. Eye contact isoften essential to Legilimency.'

'Well then, why do I have to learn Occlumency?'

Snape eyed Harry, tracing his mouth with one long, thin finger as he did so.

The usual rules do not seem to apply with you, Potter. The curse that failed to kill you seemsto have forged some kind of connection between you and the Dark Lord. The evidencesuggests that at times, when your mind is most relaxed and vulnerable - when you are asleep,for instance - you are sharing the Dark Lord's thoughts and emotions. The Headmaster thinksit inadvisable for this to continue. He wishes me to teach you how to close your mind to theDark Lord.'

Harry's heart was pumping fast again. None of this added up.

'But why does Professor Dumbledore want to stop it?' he asked abruptly. 'I don't like it much,but it's been useful, hasn't it? I mean… I saw that snake attack Mr Weasley and if I hadn't,Professor Dumbledore wouldn't have been able to save him, would he? Sir?'

Snape stared at Harry for a few moments, still tracing his mouth with his finger. When hespoke again, it was slowly and deliberately, as though he weighed every word.

'It appears that the Dark Lord has been unaware of the connection between you and himselfuntil very recently. Up till now it seems that you have been experiencing his emotions, andsharing his thoughts, without his being any the wiser. However, the vision you had shortlybefore Christmas -'

The one with the snake and Mr Weasley?'

'Do not interrupt me, Potter,' said Snape in a dangerous voice. 'As I was saying, the vision youhad shortly before Christmas represented such a powerful incursion upon the Dark Lord'sthoughts -'

'I saw inside the snake's head, not his!'

'1 thought I just told you not to interrupt me, Potter?'

But Harry did not care if Snape was angry; at last he seemed to be getting to the bottom of thisbusiness;

he had moved forwards in his chair so that, without realising it, he was perched onthe very edge, tense as though poised for flight.
'How come I saw through the snakes eyes if it's Voldemort's thoughts I'm sharing?'
'Do not say the Dark Lord's name!' spat Snape.
There was a nasty silence. They glared at each other across the Pensieve.
'Professor Dumbledore says his name,' said Harry quietly.
'Dumbledore is an extremely powerful wizard,' Snape muttered. 'While he may feel secureenough to use the name… the rest of us…' He rubbed his left forearm, apparentlyunconsciously, on the spot where Harry knew the Dark Mark was burned into his skin.
'I just wanted to know,' Harry began again, forcing his voice back to politeness, 'why -'
'You seem to have visited the snake's mind because that was where the Dark Lord was at that particular moment,' snarled Snape. 'He was possessing the snake at the time and so youdreamed you were inside it, too.'
'And Vol— he - realised I was there?'
'It seems so,' said Snape coolly.
'How do you know?' said Harry urgently. 'Is this just Professor Dumbledore guessing, or -?'
'I told you,' said Snape, rigid in his chair, his eyes slits, 'to call me "sir".'
'Yes, sir,' said Harry impatiently, 'but how do you know -?'
'It is enough that we know,' said Snape repressively. The important point is that the DarkLord is now aware that you are gaining access to his thoughts and feelings. He has alsodeduced that the process is likely to work in reverse; that is to say, he has realised that hemight be able to access your thoughts and feelings in return -'
'And he might try and make me do things?' asked Harry. 'Sir?' he added hurriedly.
'He might,' said Snape, sounding cold and unconcerned. 'Which brings us back toOcclumency.'
Snape pulled out his wand from an inside pocket of his robes and Harry tensed in his chair,but Snape merely raised the wand to his temple and placed its tip into the greasy roots of hishair. When he withdrew it, some silvery substance came away, stretching from temple towand like a thick gossamer strand, which broke as he pulled the wand away from it and fellgracefully into the Pensieve, where it swirled silvery-white, neither gas nor liquid. Twicemore, Snape raised the wand to his temple and deposited the silvery substance into the stonebasin, then, without offering any explanation of his behaviour, he picked up the Pensievecarefully, removed it to a shelf out of their way and returned to face Harry with his wand heldat the ready.
'Stand up and take out your wand, Potter.'
Harry got to his feet, feeling nervous. They faced each other with the desk between them.
'You may use your wand to attempt to disarm me, or defend yourself in any other way youcan think of,' said Snape.
'And what are you going to do?' Harry asked, eyeing Snape's wand apprehensively.

'I am about to attempt to break into your mind,' said Snape softly. 'We are going to see howwell you resist. I have been told that you have already shown aptitude at resisting theImperius Curse. You will find that similar powers are needed for this… brace yourself, now.
Legilimens!'
Snape had struck before Harry was ready, before he had even begun to summon any force ofresistance. The office swam in front of his eyes and vanished; image after image was racingthrough his mind like a flickering film so vivid it blinded him to his surroundings.

He was five, watching Dudley riding a new red bicycle, and his heart was bursting withjealousy… he was nine, and Ripper the bulldog was chasing him up a tree and the Dursleyswere laughing below on the lawn… he was sitting under the Sorting Hat, and it was tellinghim he would do well in Slytherin… Hermione was lying in the hospital wing, her facecovered with thick black hair… a hundred Dementors were closing in on him beside the darklake… Cho Chang was drawing nearer to him under the mistletoe…
No, said a voice inside Harry's head, as the memory of Cho drew nearer, you're not watchingthat, you're not watching it, it's private -
He felt a sharp pain in his knee. Snape's office had come back into view and he realised thathe had fallen to the floor; one of his knees had collided painfully with the leg of Snape's desk.
He looked up at Snape, who had lowered his wand and was rubbing his wrist. There was anangry weal there, like a scorch mark.
'Did you mean to produce a Stinging Hex?' asked Snape coolly.
'No,' said Harry bitterly, getting up from the floor.
'I thought not,' said Snape, watching him closely. 'You let me get in too far. You lost control.'
'Did you see everything 1 saw?' Harry asked, unsure whether he wanted to hear the answer.
'Flashes of it,' said Snape, his lip curling. To whom did the dog belong?'
'My Aunt Marge,' Harry muttered, hating Snape.
'Well, for a first attempt that was not as poor as it might have been,' said Snape, raising hiswand once more. 'You managed to stop me eventually, though you wasted time and energyshouting. You must remain focused. Repel me with your brain and you will not need to resortto your wand.'

'I'm trying,' said Harry angrily, 'but you're not telling me how!'
'Manners, Potter,' said Snape dangerously. 'Now, I want you to close your eyes.'
Harry threw him a filthy look before doing as he was told. He did not like the idea of standingthere with his eyes shut while Snape faced him, carrying a wand.
'Clear your mind, Potter,' said Snape's cold voice. 'Let go of all emotion…"
But Harry's anger at Snape continued to pound through his veins like venom. Let go of hisanger? He could as easily detach his legs…
'You're not doing it, Potter… you will need more discipline than this… focus, now…"
Harry tried to empty his mind, tried not to think, or remember, or feel…
'Let's go again… on the count of three… one - two - three -Legilimens!'
A great black dragon was rearing in front of him… his father and mother were waving at himout of an enchanted mirror… Cedric Diggory was lying on the ground with blank eyes staringat him…
'NOOOOOOO!'
Harry was on his knees again, his face buried in his hands, his brain aching as thoughsomeone had been trying to pull it from his skull.
'Get up!' said Snape sharply. 'Get up! You are not trying, you are making no effort. You areallowing me access to memories you fear, handing me weapons!'
Harry stood up again, his heart thumping wildly as though he had reallyjust seen Cedric deadin the graveyard. Snape looked paler than usual, and angrier, though not nearly as angry asHarry was.
'I - am - making - an - effort,' he said through clenched teeth.
'I told you to empty yourself of emotion!'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Yeah? Well, I'm finding that hard at the moment,' Harry snarled.

Then you will find yourself easy prey for the Dark Lord!' said Snape savagely. 'Fools who wear their hearts proudly on their sleeves, who cannot control their emotions, who wallow insad memories and allow themselves to be provoked so easily - weak people, in other words - they stand no chance against his powers! He will penetrate your mind with absurd ease,Potter!'

'I am not weak,' said Harry in a low voice, fury now pumping through him so that he thoughthe might attack Snape in a moment.

Then prove it! Master yourself!' spat Snape. 'Control your anger, discipline your mind! Weshall try again! Get ready, now! Legüimens!'

He was watching Uncle Vernon hammering the letterbox shut… a hundred Dementors weredrifting across the lake in the grounds towards him… he was running along a windowlesspassage with Mr Weasley… they were drawing nearer to the plain black door at the end of thecorridor… Harry expected to go through it… but Mr Weasley led him off to the left, down aflight of stone steps…

'I KNOW! 1 KNOW!'

He was on all fours again on Snape's office floor, his scar was prickling unpleasantly, but thevoice that had just issued from his mouth was triumphant. He pushed himself up again tofind Snape staring at him, his wand raised. It looked as though, this time, Snape had lifted thespell before Harry had even tried to fight back.

'What happened then, Potter?' he asked, eyeing Harry intently.

'I saw - I remembered,' Harry panted. 'I've just realised…'

'Realised what?' asked Snape sharply.

Harry did not answer at once; he was still savouring the moment of blinding realisation as herubbed his forehead…

He had been dreaming about a windowless corridor ending in a locked door for months,without once realising that it was a real place. Now, seeing the memory again, he knew thatall along he had been dreaming about the corridor down which he had run with Mr Weasleyon the twelfth of August as they hurried to the courtrooms in the Ministry; it was the corridorleading to the Department of Mysteries and Mr Weasley had been there the night that he hadbeen attacked by Voldemort's snake.

He looked up at Snape.

'What's in the Department of Mysteries?'

'What did you say?' Snape asked quietly and Harry saw, with deep satisfaction, that Snapewas unnerved.

'1 said, what's in the Department of Mysteries, sir?' Harry said.

'And why,' said Snape slowly, 'would you ask such a thing?'

'Because,' said Harry, watching Snape's face closely, 'that corridorI've just seen - I've been dreaming about it for months — I've just recognised it - it leads to theDepartment of Mysteries… and I think Voldemort wants something from —'

'I have told you not to say the Dark Lord's name!'

They glared at each other. Harrys scar seared again, but he did not care. Snape lookedagitated; but when he spoke again he sounded as though he was trying to appear cool andunconcerned.

There are many things in the Department of Mysteries, Potter, few of which you wouldunderstand and none of which concern you. Do I make myself plain?'

'Yes,' Harry said, still rubbing his prickling scar, which was becoming more painful.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'I want you back here same time on Wednesday. We will continue work then.'
Tine,' said Harry. He was desperate to get out of Snape's office and find Ron and Hermione.
'You are to rid your mind of all emotion every night before sleep; empty it, make it blank andcalm, you understand?'
'Yes,' said Harry, who was barely listening.
'And be warned, Potter… I shall know if you have not practised'Right,' Harry mumbled. He picked up his schoolbag, swung it over his shoulder and hurriedtowards the office door. As he opened it, he glanced back at Snape, who had his back to Harryand was scooping his own thoughts out of the Pensieve with the tip of his wand and replacingthem carefully inside his own head. Harry left without another word, closing the doorcarefully behind him, his scar still throbbing painfully.

Harry found Ron and Hermione in the library, where they were working on Umbridge's mostrecent ream of homework. Other students, nearly all of them fifth-years, sat at lamp-lit tablesnearby, noses close to books, quills scratching feverishly, while the sky outside the mulhonedwindows grew steadily blacker. The only other sound was the slight squeaking of one ofMadam Pince's shoes, as the librarian prowled the aisles menacingly, breathing down thenecks of those touching her precious books.
Harry felt shivery; his scar was still aching, he felt almost feverish.
When he sat down opposite Ron and Hermione, he caught sight of himself in the windowopposite; he was very white and his scar seemed to be showing up more clearly than usual.
'How did it go?' Hermione whispered, and then, looking concerned. 'Are you all right, Harry?'
'Yeah… fine… I dunno,' said Harry impatiently, wincing as pain shot through his scar again.
'Listen… I've just realised somethingAnd he told them what he had just seen and deduced.
'So… so are you saying…' whispered Ron, as Madam Pince swept past, squeaking slightly,'that the weapon - the thing You-Know-Who's after — is in the Ministry of Magic?'
'In the Department of Mysteries, it's got to be,' Harry whispered. 'I saw that door when yourdad took me down to the courtrooms for my hearing and it's definitely the same one he wasguarding when the snake bit him.'
Hermione let out a long, slow sigh.
'Of course,' she breathed.
'Of course what?' said Ron rather impatiently.
'Ron, think about it… Sturgis Podmore was trying to get through a door at the Ministry ofMagic… it must have been that one, it's too much of a coincidence!'
'How come Sturgis was trying to break in when he's on our side?' said Ron.
'Well, I don't know,' Hermione admitted. That is a bit odd…'
'So what's in the Department of Mysteries?' Harry asked Ron. 'Has your dad ever mentionedanything about it?'

'I know they call the people who work in there "Unspeakables",' said Ron, frowning. 'Becauseno one really seems to know what they do - weird place to have a weapon.'
'It's not weird at all, it makes perfect sense,' said Hermione. 'It will be something top secretthat the Ministry has been developing, I expect… Harry, are you sure you're all right?'
For Harry had just run both his hands hard over his forehead as though trying to iron it.
'Yeah… fine…" he said, lowering his hands, which were trembling. 'I just feel a bit… I don'tlike Occlumency much.'

'I expect anyone would feel shaky if they'd had their mind attacked over and over again,' saidHermione sympathetically. 'Look, let's get back to the common room, we'll be a bit morecomfortable there.'
But the common room was packed and full of shrieks of laughter and excitement; Fred andGeorge were demonstrating their latest bit of joke shop merchandise.
'Headless Hats!' shouted George, as Fred waved a pointed hat decorated with a fluffy pinkfeather at the watching students. Two Galleons each, watch Fred, now!'
Fred swept the hat on to his head, beaming. For a second he merely looked rather stupid; thenboth hat and head vanished.
Several girls screamed, but everyone else was roaring with laughter.
'And off again!' shouted George, and Fred's hand groped for a moment in what seemed to bethin air over his shoulder; then his head reappeared as he swept the pink-feathered hat from it.
'How do those hats work, then?' said Hermione, distracted from her homework and watchingFred and George closely. 'I mean, obviously it's some kind of Invisibility Spell, but it's ratherclever to have extended the field of invisibility beyond the boundaries of the charmed object…
I'd imagine the charm wouldn't have a very long life though.'
Harry did not answer; he was feeling ill.
'I'm going to have to do this tomorrow,' he muttered, pushing the books he had just taken outof his bag back inside it.
'Well, write it in your homework planner then!' said Hermione encouragingly. 'So you don't forget!'
Harry and Ron exchanged looks as he reached into his bag, withdrew the planner and openedit tentatively.
'Don't leave it till later, you big second-rater!' chided the book as Harry scribbled downUmbridge's homework. Hermione beamed at it.
'I think I'll go to bed,' said Harry, stuffing the homework planner back into his bag andmaking a mental note to drop it in the fire the first opportunity he got.
He walked across the common room, dodging George, who tried to put a Headless Hat onhim, and reached the peace and cool of the stone staircase to the boys' dormitories. He wasfeeling sick again, just as he had the night he had had the vision of the snake, but thought thatif he could just lie down for a while he would be all right.
He opened the door of his dormitory and was one step inside it when he experienced pain sosevere he thought that someone must have sliced into the top of his head. He did not knowwhere he was, whether he was standing or lying down, he did not even know his own name.
Maniacal laughter was ringing in his ears… he was happier than he had been in a very longtime… jubilant, ecstatic, triumphant… a wonderful, wonderful thing had happened…
'Harry? HARRY!'
Someone had hit him around the face. The insane laughter was punctuated with a cry of pain.
The happiness was draining out of him, but the laughter continued…
He opened his eyes and, as he did so, he became aware that the wild laughter was coming outof his own mouth. The moment he realised this, it died away; Harry lay panting on the floor,staring up at the ceiling, the scar on his forehead throbbing horribly. Ron was bending overhim, looking very worried.
'What happened?' he said.
'I… dunno…' Harry gasped, sitting up again. 'He's really happy… really happy…"
'You-Know-Who is?'

'Something good's happened,' mumbled Harry. He was shaking as badly as he had done afterseeing the snake attack Mr Weasley and felt very sick. 'Something he's been hoping for.'

The words came, just as they had back in the Gryffindor changing room, as though a strangerwas speaking them through Harry's mouth, yet he knew they were true. He took deepbreaths, willing himself not to vomit all over Ron. He was very glad that Dean and Seamuswere not here to watch this time.

'Hermione told me to come and check on you,' said Ron in a low voice, helping Harry to hisfeet. 'She says your defences will be low at the moment, after Snape's been fiddling aroundwith your mind… still, I suppose it'll help in the long run, won't it?' He looked doubtfully atHarry as he helped him towards his bed. Harry nodded without any conviction and slumpedback on his pillows, aching all over from having fallen to the floor so often that evening, hisscar still prickling painfully. He could not help feeling that his first foray into Occlumencyhad weakened his mind's resistance rather than strengthening it, and he wondered, with afeeling of great trepidation, what had happened to make Lord Voldemort the happiest he hadbeen in fourteen years.

— CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE —

The Beetle at BayHarry's question was answered the very next morning. When Hermione's Daily Prophetarrived she smoothed it out, gazed for a moment at the front page and gave a yelp that causedeveryone in the vicinity to stare at her.

'What?' said Harry and Ron together.

For answer she spread the newspaper on the table in front of them and pointed at ten blackand-white photographs that filled the whole of the front page, nine showing wizards' facesand the tenth, a witch's. Some of the people in the photographs were silently jeering; otherswere tapping their fingers on the frame of their pictures, looking insolent. Each picture wascaptioned with a name and the crime for which the person had been sent to Azkaban.

Antonin Dolohov, read the legend beneath a wizard with a long, pale, twisted face who wassneering up at Harry, convicted of the brutal murders of Gideon and Fabian Prewett.

Algernon Rookwood, said the caption beneath a pockmarked man with greasy hair who wasleaning against the edge of his picture, looking bored, convicted of leaking Ministry of Magicsecrets to He Who Must Not Be Named.

But Harry's eyes were drawn to the picture of the witch. Her face had leapt out at him themoment he had seen the page. She had long, dark hair that looked unkempt and straggly inthe picture, though he had seen it sleek, thick and shining. She glared up at him throughheavily lidded eyes, an arrogant, disdainful smile playing around her thin mouth. Like Sirius,she retained vestiges of great good looks, but something - perhaps Azkaban - had taken mostof her beauty.

Bellatrix Lestrange, convicted of the torture and permanent inca-pacitation of Frank and AliceLongbottom.

Hermione nudged Harry and pointed at the headline over the pictures, which Harry,concentrating on Bellatrix, had not yet read.

MASS BREAKOUT FROM AZKABANMINISTRY FEARS BLACK IS 'RALLYING POINT'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

FOR OLD DEATH EATERS'Black?' said Harry loudly. 'Not -?'
'Shhh!' whispered Hermione desperately. 'Not so loud - just read it!'
The Ministry of Magic announced late last night that there has been a mass breakout from Azkaban.
Speaking to reporters in his private office, Cornelius Fudge, Minister for Magic, confirmed that tenhigh-security prisoners escaped in the early hours of yesterday evening and that he has alreadyinformed the Muggle Prime Minister of the dangerous nature of these individuals.
'We find ourselves, most unfortunately, in the same position we were two and a half years ago when themurderer Sinus Black escaped,' said Fudge last night. 'Nor do we think the two breakouts areunrelated. An escape of this magnitude suggests outside help, and we must remember that Black, as thefirst person ever to break out of Azkaban, would be ideally placed to help others follow in his footsteps.
We think it likely that these individuals, who include Black's cousin, Bellatrix Lestrange, have ralliedaround Black as their leader. We are, however, doing all we can to round up the criminals, and we begthe magical community to remain alert and cautious. On no account should any of these individuals beapproached.'
There you are, Harry,' said Ron, looking awestruck. That's why he was happy last night.'
'I don't believe this,' snarled Harry, 'Fudge is blaming the breakout on Sinus?'
'What other options does he have?' said Hermione bitterly. 'He can hardly say, "Sorry,everyone, Dumbledore warned me this might happen, the Azkaban guards have joined LordVoldemort" - stop whimpering, Ron - "and now Voldemort's worst supporters have brokenout, too." I mean, he's spent a good six months telling everyone you and Dumbledore are liars,hasn't he?'
Hermione ripped open the newspaper and began to read the report inside while Harry lookedaround the Great Hall. He could not understand why his fellow students were not lookingscared or at least discussing the terrible piece of news on the front page, but very few of themtook the newspaper every day like Hermione. There they all were, talking about homeworkand Quidditch and who knew what other rubbish, when outside these walls ten more DeathEaters had swollen Voldemort's ranks.
He glanced up at the staff table. It was a different story there: Dumbledore and ProfessorMcGonagall were deep in conversation, both looking extremely grave. Professor Sprout hadthe Prophet propped against a bottle of ketchup and was reading the front page with suchconcentration that she was not noticing the gentle drip of egg yolk falling into her lap from her stationary spoon. Meanwhile, at the far end of the table, Professor Umbridge was tuckinginto a bowl of porridge. For once her pouchy toad's eyes were not sweeping the Great Halllooking for misbehaving students. She scowled as she gulped down her food and every nowand then she shot a malevolent glance up the table to where Dumbledore and McGonagallwere talking so intently.
'Oh my -' said Hermione wonderingly, still staring at the newspaper.
'What now?' said Harry quickly; he was feeling jumpy.
'It's… horrible,' said Hermione, looking shaken. She folded back page ten of the newspaperand handed it to Harry and Ron.
TRAGIC DEMISE OF MINISTRY OF MAGIC WORKER St Mungo's Hospital promised a fullinquiry last night after Ministry of Magic worker Broderick Bode, 49, was discovered dead in his . bed,strangled by a pot plant. Healers called to the scene were unable to revive Mr Bode, who had beeninjured in a workplace accident some weeks prior to his death.
Healer Miriam Strout, who was in charge of Mr Bodes ward at the time of the incident, has beensuspended on full pay and was unavailable for comment yesterday, but a spokeswizard for the hospitalsaid in a statement:

'St Mungo's deeply regrets the death of Mr Bode, whose health was improving steadily prior to thistragic accident.
'We have strict guidelines on the decorations permitted on our wards but it appears that Healer Strout,busy over the Christmas period, overlooked the dangers of the plant on Mr Bode's bedside table. As hisspeech and mobility improved, Healer Strout encouraged Mr Bode to look after the plant himself,unaware that it was not an innocent Flitterbloom, but a cutting of Devil's Snare which, when touchedby the convalescent Mr Bode, throttled him instantly.
'St Mungo's is as yet unable to account for the presence of the plant on the ward and asks any witch orwizard with information to come forward.'
'Bode…' said Ron. 'Bode. It rings a bell…'
'We saw him,' Hermione whispered. 'In St Mungo's, remember? He was in the bed oppositeLockhart's, just lying there, staring at the ceiling. And we saw the Devil's Snare arrive. She - the Healer - said it was a Christmas present.'
Harry looked back at the story. A feeling of horror was rising like bile in his throat.

'How come we didn't recognise Devils Snare? We've seen it before… we could've stopped thisfrom happening.'
'Who expects Devils Snare to turn up in a hospital disguised as a pot plant?' said Ron sharply.
'It's not our fault, whoever sent it to the bloke is to blame! They must be a real prat, why didn'tthey check what they were buying?'
'Oh, come on, Ron!' said Hermione shakily. 'I don't think anyone could put Devils Snare in apot and not realise it tries to kill whoever touches it? This - this was murder… a clevermurder, as well… if the plant was sent anonymously, how's anyone ever going to find outwho did it?'
Harry was not thinking about Devil's Snare. He was remembering taking the lift down to theninth level of the Ministry on the day of his hearing and the sallow-faced man who had got inon the. Atrium level. ..
'I met Bode,' he said slowly. 'I saw him at the Ministry with your= dad.' :.
Rons mouth fell open.
'I've heard Dad talk about him at home! He was an Unspeakable- he worked in the Department of Mysteries!'
They looked at each other for a moment, then Hermione pulled the newspaper back towardsher, closed it, glared for a moment at the pictures of the ten escaped Death Eaters on the front,then leapt to her feet.
'Where are you going?' said Ron, startled.
To send a letter,' said Hermione, swinging her bag on to her shoulder. 'It… well, I don't knowwhether… but it's worth trying… and I'm the only one who can.'
'I hate it when she does that,' grumbled Ron, as he and Harry got up from the table and madetheir own, slower way out of the Great Hall. 'Would it kill her to tell us what she's up to foronce? It'd take her about ten more seconds - hey, Hagrid!'
Hagrid was standing beside the doors into the Entrance Hall, waiting for a crowd ofRavenclaws to pass. He was still as heavily bruised as he had been on the day he had comeback from his mission to the giants and there was a new cut right across the bridge of his nose.

'All righ', you two?' he said, trying to muster a smile but managing only a kind of painedgrimace.
'Are you OK, Hagrid?' asked Harry, following him as he lumbered after the Ravenclaws.
'Fine, fine,' said Hagrid with a feeble assumption of airiness; he waved a hand and narrowlymissed concussing a frightened-looking Professor Vector, who was passing. 'Jus' busy, yehknow, usual stuff-lessons ter prepare - couple o' salamanders got scale rot - an' I'm on probation,' he mumbled.
'You're on probation?' said Ron very loudly, so that many of the passing students lookedaround curiously. 'Sorry - I mean - you're on probation?' he whispered.
'Yeah,' said Hagrid. "S'no more'n I expected, ter tell yeh the truth. Yeh migh' not've picked upon it, bu' that inspection didn' go too well, yeh know… anyway,' he sighed deeply. 'Bes' go an' rub a bit more chilli powder on them salamanders or their tails'll be hangin' off 'em next. Seeyeh, Harry… Ron…'
He trudged away, out of the front doors and down the stone steps into the damp grounds.
Harry watched him go, wondering how much more bad news he could stand.
*The fact that Hagrid was now on probation became common knowledge within the schoolover the next few days, but to Harry's indignation, hardly anybody appeared to be upsetabout it; indeed, some people, Draco Malfoy prominent among them, seemed positivelygleeful. As for the freakish death of an obscure Department of Mysteries employee in StMungo's, Harry, Ron and Hermione seemed to be the only people who knew or cared. Therewas only one topic of conversation in the corridors now: the ten escaped Death Eaters, whosestory had finally filtered through the school from those few people who read the newspapers.
Rumours were flying that some of the convicts had been spotted in Hogsmeade, that theywere supposed to be hiding out in the Shrieking Shack and that they were going to break intoHogwarts, just as Sirius Black had once done.
Those who came from wizarding families had grown up hearing the names of these DeathEaters spoken with almost as much fear as Voldemorts; the crimes they had committedduring the days of Voldemort's reign of terror were legendary. There were relatives of theirvictims among the Hogwarts students, who now found themselves the unwilling objects of agruesome sort of reflected fame as they walked the corridors: Susan Bones, whose uncle, auntand cousins had all died at the hands of one of the ten, said miserably during Herbology thatshe now had a good idea what it felt like to be Harry.

'And I don't know how you stand it - it's horrible,' she said bluntly, dumping far too muchdragon manure on her tray of Screechsnap seedlings, causing them to wriggle and squeak indiscomfort.
It was true that Harry was the subject of much renewed muttering and pointing in thecorridors these days, yet he thought he detected a slight difference in the tone of thewhisperers' voices. They sounded curious rather than hostile now, and once or twice he wassure he overheard snatches of conversation that suggested that the speakers were not satisfiedwith the Prophets version of how and why ten Death Eaters had managed to break out of theAzkaban fortress. In their confusion and fear, these doubters now seemed to be turning to theonly other explanation available to them: the one that Harry and Dumbledore had beenexpounding since the previous year.
It was not only the students' mood that had changed. It was now quite common to comeacross two or three teachers conversing in low, urgent whispers in the corridors, breaking offtheir conversations the moment they saw students approaching.
They obviously can't talk freely in the staff room any more,' said Hermione in a low voice, asshe, Harry and Ron passed Professors McGonagall, Flitwick and Sprout huddled togetheroutside the Charms classroom one day. 'Not with Umbridge there.'

'Reckon they know anything new?' said Ron, gazing back over his shoulder at the threeteachers.
'If they do, we're not going to hear about it, are we?' said Harry angrily. 'Not after Decree…
what number are we on now?' For new notices had appeared on the house noticeboards themorning after news of the Azkaban breakout: ^BY ORDER OF THE HIGH INQUISITOR OF HOGWARTS ^Teachers are hereby banned from giving students any information ." that is not strictly related to thesubjects they are paid to teach.
The above is in accordance with Educational Decree Number Twenty-six.
Signed: Dolores jane Umbridge, High InquisitorThis latest Decree had been the subject of a great number of jokes among the students. LeeJordan had pointed out to Umbridge that by the terms of the new rule she was not allowed totell Fred and George off for playing Exploding Snap in the back of the class.

'Exploding Snap's got nothing to do with Defence Against the Dark Arts, Professor! That's notinformation relating to your subject!'
When Harry next saw Lee, the back of his hand was bleeding rather badly. Harryrecommended essence of Murtlap.
Harry had thought the breakout from Azkaban might have humbled Umbridge a little, thatshe might have been abashed at the catastrophe that had occurred right under the nose of herbeloved Fudge. It seemed, however, to have only intensified her furious desire to bring everyaspect of life at Hogwarts under her personal control. She seemed determined at the very leastto achieve a sacking before long, and the only question was whether it would be ProfessorTrelawney or Hagrid who went first.
Every single Divination and Care of Magical Creatures lesson was now conducted in thepresence of Umbridge and her clipboard. She lurked by the fire in the heavily perfumed towerroom, interrupting Professor Trelawney's increasingly hysterical talks with difficult questionsabout ornithomancy and heptomology, insisting that she predicted students' answers beforethey gave them and demanding that she demonstrate her skill at the crystal ball, the tea leavesand the rune stones in turn. Harry thought Professor Trelawney might soon crack under thestrain. Several times he passed her in the corridors - in itself a very unusual occurrence as shegenerally remained in her tower room - muttering wildly to herself, wringing her hands andshooting terrified glances over her shoulder, and all the while giving off a powerful smell ofcooking sherry. If he had not been so worried about Hagrid, he would have felt sorry for her - but if one of them was to be ousted from their job, there could be only one choice for Harry asto who should remain.
Unfortunately, Harry could not see that Hagrid was putting up a better show than Trelawney.
Though he seemed to be following Hermione's advice and had shown them nothing morefrightening than a Crup — a creature indistinguishable from a Jack Russell terrier except forits forked tail - since before Christmas, he too seemed to have lost his nerve. He was oddlydistracted and jumpy during lessons, losing the thread of what he was saying to the class,answering questions wrongly, and all the time glancing anxiously at Umbridge. He was alsomore distant with Harry, Ron and Hermione than he had ever been before, and had expresslyforbidden them to visit him after dark.
'If she catches yeh, it'll be all of our necks on the line,' he told them flatly, and with no desireto do anything that might jeopardise his job further they abstained from walking down to hishut in the evenings.

It seemed to Harry that Umbridge was steadily depriving him of everything that made his lifeat Hogwarts worth living: visits to Hagrid's house, letters from Sirius, his Firebolt andQuidditch. He took his revenge the only way he could - by redoubling his efforts for the DA.

Harry was pleased to see that all of them, even Zacharias Smith, had been spurred on to workharder than ever by the news that ten more Death Eaters were now on the loose, but innobody was this improvement more pronounced than in Neville. The news of his parents' attackers' escape had wrought a strange and even slightly alarming change in him. He hadnot once mentioned his meeting with Harry, Ron and Hermione on the closed ward in StMungo's and, taking their lead from him, they had kept quiet about it too. Nor had he saidanything on the subject of Bellatrix and her fellow torturers' escape. In fact, Neville barelyspoke during the DA meetings any more, but worked relentlessly on every new jinx andcounter-curse Harry taught them, his plump face screwed up in concentration, apparentlyindifferent to injuries or accidents and working harder than anyone else in the room. He wasimproving so fast it was quite unnerving and when Harry taught them the Shield Charm - ameans of deflecting minor jinxes so that they rebounded upon the attacker - only Hermionemastered the charm faster than Neville.
Harry would have given a great deal to be making as much progress at Occlumency asNeville was making during the DA meetings. Harry's sessions with Snape, which had startedbadly enough, were not improving. On the contrary Harry felt he was getting worse withevery lesson.
Before he had started studying Occlumency, his scar had prickled occasionally, usuallyduring the night, or else following one of those strange flashes of Voldemort's thoughts ormood that he experienced every now and then. Nowadays, however, his scar hardly everstopped prickling, and he often felt lurches of annoyance or cheerfulness that were unrelatedto what was happening to him at the time, which were always accompanied by a particularlypainful twinge from his scar. He had the horrible impression that he was slowly turning into akind of aerial that was tuned in to tiny fluctuations in Voldemorts mood, and he was sure hecould date this increased sensitivity firmly from his first Occlumency lesson with Snape. Whatwas more, he was now dreaming about walking down the corridor towards the entrance tothe Department of Mysteries almost every night, dreams which always culminated in himstanding longingly in front of the plain black door.
'Maybe it's a bit like an illness,' said Hermione, looking concerned when Harry confided inher and Ron. 'A fever or something. It has to get worse before it gets better.'
The lessons with Snape are making it worse,' said Harry flatly. 'I'm getting sick of my scarhurting and I'm getting bored with walking down that corridor every night.' He rubbed hisforehead angrily. 'I just wish the door would open, I'm sick of standing staring at it -'
That's not funny,' said Hermione sharply. 'Dumbledore doesn't want you to have dreamsabout that corridor at all, or he wouldn't have asked Snape to teach you Occlumency. You'rejust going to have to work a bit harder in your lessons.'

'I am working!' said Harry nettled. 'You try it some time - Snape trying to get inside your head- it's not a bundle of laughs, you know!'
'Maybe…' said Ron slowly.
'Maybe what?' said Hermione, rather snappishly.
'Maybe it's not Harry's fault he can't close his mind,' said Ron darkly.
'What do you mean?' said Hermione.

'Well, maybe Snape isn't really trying to help Harry…'
Harry and Hermione stared at him. Ron looked darkly and meaningfully from one to theother.
'Maybe,' he said again, in a lower voice, 'he's actually trying to open Harry's mind a bitwider… make it easier for You-Know—'
'Shut up, Ron,' said Hermione angrily. 'How many times have you suspected Snape, andwhen have you ever been right? Dumbledore trusts him, he works for the Order, that ought tobe enough.'
'He used to be a Death Eater,' said Ron stubbornly. 'And we've never seen proof that he reallyswapped sides.'
'Dumbledore trusts him,' Hermione repeated. 'And if we can't trust Dumbledore, we can'ttrust anyone.'
*With so much to worry about and so much to do - startling amounts of homework thatfrequently kept the fifth-years working until past midnight, secret DA sessions and regularclasses with Snape -January seemed to be passing alarmingly fast. Before Harry knew it,February had arrived, bringing with it wetter and warmer weather and the prospect of thesecond Hogsmeade visit of the year. Harry had had very little time to spare for conversationswith Cho since they had agreed to visit the village together, but suddenly found himselffacing a Valentine's Day spent entirely in her company.
On the morning of the fourteenth he dressed particularly carefully. He and Ron arrived atbreakfast just in time for the arrival of the post owls. Hedwig was not there - not that Harry had expected her - but Hermione was tugging a letter from the beak of an unfamiliar brownowl as they sat down.
'And about time! If it hadn't come today…' she said, eagerly tearing open the envelope andpulling out a small piece of parchment. Her eyes sped from left to right as she read throughthe message and a grimly pleased expression spread across her face.
'Listen, Harry,' she said, looking up at him, 'this is really important. Do you think you couldmeet me in the Three Broomsticks around midday?'
'Well… I dunno,' said Harry uncertainly. 'Cho might be expecting me to spend the whole daywith her. We never said what we were going to do.'
'Well, bring her along if you must,' said Hermione urgently. 'But will you come?'
'Well… all right, but why?'
'I haven't got time to tell you now, I've got to answer this quickly.'
And she hurried out of the Great Hall, the letter clutched in one hand and a piece of toast inthe other.
'Are you coming?' Harry asked Ron, but he shook his head, looking glum.
'I can't come into Hogsmeade at all; Angelina wants a full day's training. Like it's going tohelp; we're the worst team I've ever seen. You should see Sloper and Kirke, they're pathetic,even worse than I am.' He heaved a great sigh. 'I dunno why Angelina won't just let meresign.'
'It's because you're good when you're on form, that's why,' said Harry irritably.
He found it very hard to be sympathetic to Ron's plight, when he himself would have givenalmost anything to be playing in the forthcoming match against Hufflepuff. Ron seemed tohave noticed Harrys tone, because he did not mention Quidditch again during breakfast, andthere was a slight frostiness in the way they said goodbye to each other shortly afterwards.
Ron departed for the Quidditch pitch and Harry, after attempting to flatten his hair whilestaring at his reflection in the back of a teaspoon, proceeded alone to the Entrance Hall tomeet Cho, feeling very apprehensive and wondering what on earth they were going to talkabout.
She was waiting for him a little to the side of the oak front doors, looking very pretty with herhair tied back in a long pony-tail. Harry's feet seemed to be too big for his body as he walked towards her and he was suddenly horribly aware of his arms and how stupid they must lookswinging at his sides.

'Hi,' said Cho slightly breathlessly.
'Hi,' said Harry.
They stared at each other for a moment, then Harry said, 'Well - er — shall we go, then?'
'Oh - yes…'
They joined the queue of people being signed out by Filch, occasionally catching each other'seye and grinning shiftily, but not talking to each other. Harry was relieved when they reachedthe fresh air, finding it easier to walk along in silence than just stand about looking awkward.
It was a fresh, breezy sort of a day and as they passed the Quidditch stadium Harry glimpsedRon andGinny skimming along over the stands and felt a horrible pang that he was not up there withthem.
'You really miss it, don't you?' said Cho.
He looked round and saw her watching him.
'Yeah,' sighed Harry. 'I do.'
'Remember the first time we played against each other, in the third year?' she asked him.
'Yeah,' said Harry, grinning. 'You kept blocking me.'
'And Wood told you not to be a gentleman and knock me off my broom if you had to,' saidCho, smiling reminiscently. '1 heard he got taken on by Pride of Portree, is that right?'
'Nah, it was Puddlemere United; I saw him at the World Cup last year.'
'Oh, I saw you there, too, remember? We were on the same campsite. It was really good,wasn't it?'
The subject of the Quidditch World Cup carried them all the way down the drive and outthrough the gates. Harry could hardly believe how easy it was to talk to her - no moredifficult, in fact, than talking to Ron and Hermione - and he was just starting to feel confident and cheerful when a large gang of Slytherin girls passed them, including Pansy Parkinson.
'Potter and Chang!' screeched Pansy, to a chorus of snide giggles. 'Urgh, Chang, I don't thinkmuch of your taste… at least Diggory was good-looking!'
The girls sped up, talking and shrieking in a pointed fashion with many exaggerated glancesback at Harry and Cho, leaving an embarrassed silence in their wake. Harry could think ofnothing else to say about Quidditch, and Cho, slightly flushed, was watching her feet.
'So… where d'you want to go?' Harry asked as they entered Hogsmeade. The High Street wasfull of students ambling up and down, peering into the shop windows and messing abouttogether on the pavements.
'Oh… I don't mind,' said Cho, shrugging. 'Urn… shall we just have a look in the shops orsomething?'
They wandered towards Dervish and Banges. A large poster had been stuck up in thewindow and a few Hogsmeaders were looking at it. They moved aside when Harry and Choapproached and Harry found himself staring once more at the pictures of the ten escapedDeath Eaters. The poster, 'By Order of the Ministry of Magic', offered a thousand-Galleonreward to any witch or wizard with information leading to the recapture of any of theconvicts pictured.
Tt's funny, isn't it,' said Cho in a low voice, gazing up at the pictures of the Death Eaters,'remember when that Sirius Black escaped, and there were Dementors all over Hogsmeadelooking for him? And now ten Death Eaters are on the loose and there are no Dementorsanywhere…'
'Yeah,' said Harry, tearing his eyes away from Bellatrix Lestrange's face to glance up anddown the High Street. 'Yeah, that is weird.'
He wasn't sorry that there were no Dementors nearby, but now he came to think of it, theirabsence was highly significant. They had not only let the Death Eaters escape, they weren'tbothering to look for them… it looked as though they really were outside Ministry controlnow.

The ten escaped Death Eaters were staring out of every shop window he and Cho passed. Itstarted to rain as they passed Scrivenshaft's; cold, heavy drops of water kept hitting Harry'sface and the back of his neck.
'Urn… d'you want to get a coffee?' said Cho tentatively, as the rain began to fall more heavily.

'Yeah, all right,' said Harry, looking around. 'Where?'
'Oh, there's a really nice place just up here; haven't you ever been to Madam Puddifoot's?' shesaid brightly, leading him up a side road and into a small teashop that Harry had nevernoticed before. It was a cramped, steamy little place where everything seemed to have beendecorated with frills or bows. Harry was reminded unpleasantly of Umbridge's office.
'Cute, isn't it?' said Cho happily.
'Er… yeah,' said Harry untruthfully.
'Look, she's decorated it for Valentine's Day!' said Cho, indicating a number of golden cherubsthat were hovering over each of the small, circular tables, occasionally throwing pink confettiover the occupants.
'Aaah…'
They sat down at the last remaining table, which was over by the steamy window. RogerDavies, the Ravenclaw Quidditch Captain,i was sitting about a foot and a half away with apretty blonde girl. They were holding hands. The sight made Harry feel uncomfort-. able,particularly when, looking around the teashop, he saw that it was full of nothing but couples,all of them holding hands. Perhaps Cho would expect him to hold her hand.
'What can I get you, m'dears?' said Madam Puddifoot, a very stout woman with a shiny blackbun, squeezing between their table and Roger Davies's with great difficulty. '
Two coffees, please,' said Cho.
In the time it took for their coffees to arrive, Roger Davies and his girlfriend had startedkissing over their sugar bowl. Harry wished they wouldn't; he felt that Davies was setting astandard with which Cho would soon expect him to compete. He felt his face growing hotand tried staring out of the window, but it was so steamed up he couldn't see the streetoutside. To postpone the moment when he would have to look at Cho, he stared up at theceiling as though examining the paintwork and received a handful of confetti in the face fromtheir hovering cherub.
After a few more painful minutes, Cho mentioned Umbridge. Harry seized on the subjectwith relief and they passed a few happy moments abusing her, but the subject had alreadybeen so thoroughly canvassed during DA meetings it did not last very long. Silence fell again.
Harry was very conscious of the slurping noises coming from the table next door and castwildly around for something else to say.

'Er… listen, d'you want to come with me to the Three Broomsticks at lunchtime? I'm meetingHermione Granger there.'
Cho raised her eyebrows.
'You're meeting Hermione Granger? Today?'
'Yeah. Well, she asked me to, so I thought I would. D'you want to come with me? She said itwouldn't matter if you did.'
'Oh… well… that was nice of her.'

But Cho did not sound as though she thought it was nice at all. On the contrary, her tone wascold and all of a sudden she looked rather forbidding.
A few more minutes passed in total silence, Harry drinking his coffee so fast that he wouldsoon need a fresh cup. Beside them,Roger Davies and his girlfriend seemed glued together at the lips.
Cho's hand was lying on the table beside her coffee and Harry was feeling a mountingpressure to take hold of it. Just do it, he told himself, as a fount of mingled panic andexcitement surged up inside his chest, just reach out and grab it. Amazing, how much moredifficult it was to extend his arm twelve inches and touch her hand than it was to snatch aspeeding Snitch from midair…
But just as he moved his hand forwards, Cho took hers off the table. She was now watchingRoger Davies kissing his girlfriend with a mildly interested expression.
'He asked me out, you know,' she said in a quiet voice. 'A couple of weeks ago. Roger. Iturned him down, though.'
Harry, who had grabbed the sugar bowl to excuse his sudden lunging movement across thetable, could not think why she was telling him this. If she wished she were sitting at the nexttable being heartily kissed by Roger Davies, why had she agreed to come out with him?
He said nothing. Their cherub threw another handful of confetti over them; some of it landedin the last cold dregs of coffee Harry had been about to drink.
'I came in here with Cedric last year,' said Cho.

In the second or so it took for him to take in what she had said, Harry's insides had becomeglacial. He could not believe she wanted to talk about Cedric now, while kissing couplessurrounded them and a cherub floated over their heads.
Cho's voice was rather higher when she spoke again.
'I've been meaning to ask you for ages… did Cedric - did he - in - in - mention me at all beforehe died?'
This was the very last subject on earth Harry wanted to discuss, and least of all with Cho.
'Well - no -' he said quietly. There - there wasn't time for him to say anything. Erm… so…
d'you… d'you get to see a lot of Quidditch in the holidays? You support the Tornados, right?'
His voice sounded falsely bright and cheery. To his horror, he saw that her eyes wereswimming with tears again, just as they had been after the last DA meeting before Christmas.
'Look,' he said desperately, leaning in so that nobody else could overhear, 'let's not talk aboutCedric right now… let's talk about something elseBut this, apparently, was quite the wrong thing to say.
'I thought,' she said, tears spattering down on to the table, 'I thought you'd u - u - understand!
I need to talk about it! Surely you n - need to talk about it't - too! 1 mean, you saw it happen, d- didn't you?'
Everything was going nightmarishly wrong; Roger Davies's girlfriend had even ungluedherself to look round at Cho crying.
'Well - I have talked about it,' Harry said in a whisper, 'to Ron and Hermione, but -'
'Oh, you'll talk to Hermione Granger!' she said shrilly, her face now shining with tears.
Several more kissing couples broke apart to stare. 'But you won't talk to me! P - perhaps itwould be best if we just… just p - paid and you went and met up with Hermione G - Granger,like you obviously want to!'
Harry stared at her, utterly bewildered, as she seized a frilly napkin and dabbed at hershining face with it.
'Cho?' he said weakly, wishing Roger would seize his girlfriend and start kissing her again tostop her goggling at him and Cho.

PUTONG EBOOKS

'Go on, leave!' she said, now crying into the napkin. '1 don't know why you asked me out inthe first place if you're going to make arrangements to meet other girls right after me… howmany are you meeting after Hermione?'
'It's not like that!' said Harry, and he was so relieved at finally understanding what she wasannoyed about that he laughed, which he realised a split second too late was also a mistake.
Cho sprang to her feet. The whole tearoom was quiet and everybody was watching them now.
Til see you around, Harry' she said dramatically, and hiccoughing slightly she dashed to thedoor, wrenched it open and hurried off into the pouring rain.
'Cho!' Harry called after her, but the door had already swung shut behind her with a tunefultinkle.
There was total silence within the teashop. Every eye was on Harry. He threw a Galleon downon to the table, shook pink confetti out of his hair, and followed Cho out of the door.
It was raining hard now and she was nowhere to be seen. He simply did not understand whathad happened; half an hour ago they had been getting along fine.
'Women!' he muttered angrily, sloshing down the rain-washed street with his hands in hispockets. 'What did she want to talk about Cedric for, anyway? Why does she always want todrag up a subject that makes her act like a human hosepipe?'
He turned right and broke into a splashy run, and within minutes he was turning into thedoorway of the Three Broomsticks. He knew he was too early to meet Hermione, but hethought it likely there would be someone in here with whom he could spend the interveningtime. He shook his wet hair out of his eyes and looked around. Hagrid was sitting alone in acorner, looking morose.
'Hi, Hagrid!' he said, when he had squeezed through the crammed tables and pulled up achair beside him.
Hagrid jumped and looked down at Harry as though he barely recognised him. Harry sawthat he had two fresh cuts on his face and several new bruises.
'Oh, it's yeh, Harry,' said Hagrid. 'Yeh all righT'Yeah, I'm fine,' lied Harry; but, next to this battered and mournful-looking Hagrid, he felt hedidn't really have much to complain about. 'Er - are you OK?'

'Me?' said Hagrid. 'Oh yeah, I'm grand, Harry, grand.'
He gazed into the depths of his pewter tankard, which was the size of a large bucket, andsighed. Harry didn't know what to say to him. They sat side by side in silence for a moment.
Then Hagrid said abruptly, 'In the same boat, yeh an' me, aren' we, 'Arry?'
'Er -' said Harry.
'Yeah… I've said it before… both outsiders, like,' said Hagrid, nodding wisely. 'An' bothorphans. Yeah… both orphans.'
He took a great swig from his tankard.
'Makes a diff'rence, havin' a decent family,' he said. 'Me dad was decent. An' your mum an' dad were decent. If they'd lived, life woulda bin diff'rent, eh?'
'Yeah… I's'pose,' said Harry cautiously. Hagrid seemed to be in a very strange mood.
'Family,' said Hagrid gloomily. 'Whatever yeh say, blood's important…'
And he wiped a trickle of it out of his eye.
'Hagrid,' said Harry, unable to stop himself, 'where are you getting all these injuries?'
'Eh?' said Hagrid, looking startled. 'Wha' injuries?'

'All those!' said Harry, pointing at Hagrid's face.
'Oh… tha's jus' normal bumps an' bruises, Harry,' said Hagrid dismissively, '1 got a rough job.'
He drained his tankard, set it back on the table and got to his feet.
Til be seein' yeh, Harry… take care now.'
And he lumbered out of the pub looking wretched, and disappeared into the torrential rain.
Harry watched him go, feeling miserable. Hagrid was unhappy and he was hiding something,but he seemed determined not to accept help. What was going on? But before Harry couldthink about it any further, he heard a voice calling his name.
'Harry! Harry, over here!'

Hermione was waving at him from the other side of the room. He got up and made his waytowards her through the crowded pub. He was still a few tables away when he realised thatHermione was not alone. She was sitting at a table with the unlikeliest pair of drinking mateshe could ever have imagined: Luna Lovegood and none other than Rita Skeeter, ex-journaliston the Daily Prophet and one of Hermione's least favourite people in the world.
'You're early!' said Hermione, moving along to give him room to sit down. 'I thought youwere with Cho, I wasn't expecting you for another hour at least!'
'Cho?' said Rita at once, twisting round in her seat to stare avidly at Harry. 'A girl?'
She snatched up her crocodile-skin handbag and groped within it.
'It's none of your business if Harry's been with a hundred girls,' Hermione told Rita coolly. 'Soyou can put that away right now.'
Rita had been on the point of withdrawing an acid-green quill from her bag. Looking asthough she had been forced to swallow Stinksap, she snapped her bag shut again.
'What are you up to?' Harry asked, sitting down and staring from Rita to Luna to Hermione.
'Little Miss Perfect was just about to tell me when you arrived,' said Rita, taking a large slurpof her drink. 'I suppose I'm allowed to talk to him, am 1?' she shot at Hermione.
'Yes, I suppose you are,' said Hermione coldly.
Unemployment did not suit Rita. The hair that had once been set in elaborate curls now hunglank and unkempt around her face. The scarlet paint on her two-inch talons was chipped andthere were a couple of false jewels missing from her winged glasses. She took another greatgulp of her drink and said out of the corner of her mouth, 'Pretty girl, is she, Harry?'
'One more word about Harry's love life and the deal's off and that's a promise,' said Hermioneirritably.
'What deal?' said Rita, wiping her mouth on the back of her hand. 'You haven't mentioned adeal yet, Miss Prissy, you just told me to turn up. Oh, one of these days…" She took a deepshuddering breath.
'Yes, yes, one of these days you'll write more horrible stories about Harry and me,' saidHermione indifferently. 'Find someone who cares, why don't you?'

They've run plenty of horrible stories about Harry this year without my help,' said Rita,shooting a sideways look at him over the top of her glass and adding in a rough whisper,'How has that made you feel, Harry? Betrayed? Distraught? Misunderstood?'
'He feels angry, of course,' said Hermione in a hard, clear voice. 'Because he's told the Ministerfor Magic the truth and the Minister's too much of an idiot to believe him.'
'So you actually stick to it, do you, that He Who Must Not Be Named is back?' said Rita,lowering her glass and subjecting Harry to a piercing stare while her finger strayed longinglyto the clasp of the crocodile bag. 'You stand by all this garbage Dumbledore's been tellingeverybody about You-Know-Who returning and you being the sole witness?'

'I wasn't the sole witness,' snarled Harry. There were a dozen-odd Death Eaters there as well.
Want their names?'
'I'd love them,' breathed Rita, now fumbling in her bag once more and gazing at him asthough he was the most beautiful thing she had ever seen. 'A great bold headline: "PotterAccuses…" A sub-heading, "Harry Potter Names Death Eaters Still Among Us". And then,beneath a nice big photograph of you, "Disturbed teenage survivor of You-Know-Who's attack,Harry Potter, 15, caused outrage yesterday by accusing respectable and prominent members oj thewizarding community oj being Death Eaters …"'
The Quick-Quotes Quill was actually in her hand and halfway to her mouth when therapturous expression on her face died.
'But of course,' she said, lowering the quill and looking daggers at Hermione, 'Little MissPerfect wouldn't want that story out there, would she?'
'As a matter of fact,' said Hermione sweetly, 'that's exactly what Little Miss Perfect does want.'
Rita stared at her. So did Harry. Luna, on the other hand, sang 'Weasley is our King' dreamilyunder her breath and stirred her drink with a cocktail onion on a stick.
'You want me to report what he says about He Who Must Not Be Named?' Rita askedHermione in a hushed voice.
'Yes, I do,' said Hermione. The true story. All the facts. Exactly as Harry reports them. He'llgive you all the details, he'll tell you the names of the undiscovered Death Eaters he saw there,he'll tell you what Voldemort looks like now - oh, get a grip on yourself,' she addedcontemptuously, throwing a napkin across the table, for, at the sound of Voldemort's name,Rita had jumped so badly she had slopped half her glass of Firewhisky down herself.

Rita blotted the front of her grubby raincoat, still staring at Hermione. Then she said baldly,The Prophet wouldn't print it. In case you haven't noticed, nobody believes his cock-and-bullstory. Everyone thinks he's delusional. Now, if you let me write the story from that angle -'
'We don't need another story about how Harry's lost his marbles!' said Hermione angrily.
We've had plenty of those already, thank you! I want him given the opportunity to tell thetruth!'
There's no market for a story like that,' said Rita coldly.
'You mean the Prophet won't print it because Fudge won't let them,' said Hermione irritably.
Rita gave Hermione a long, hard look. Then, leaning forwards across the table towards her,she said in a businesslike tone, 'All right, Fudge is leaning on the Prophet, but it comes to thesame thing. They won't print a story that shows Harry in a good light. Nobody wants to readit. It's against the public mood. This last Azkaban breakout has got people quite worriedenough. People just don't want to believe You-Know-Whos back.'
'So the Daily Prophet exists to tell people what they want to hear, does it?' said Hermionescathingly.
Rita sat up straight again, her eyebrows raised, and drained her glass of Firewhisky.
The Prophet exists to sell itself, you silly girl,' she said coldly.
'My dad thinks it's an awful paper,' said Luna, chipping into the conversation unexpectedly.
Sucking on her cocktail onion, she gazed at Rita with her enormous, protuberant, slightly madeyes. 'He publishes important stories he thinks the public needs to know. He doesn't careabout making money.'
Rita looked disparagingly at Luna.
'I'm guessing your father runs some stupid little village newsletter?' she said. 'Probably,Twenty-Jive

Ways to Mingle With Muggles and the dates of the next Bring and Fly Sale?'
'No,' said Luna, dipping her onion back into her Gillywater, 'he's the editor of The Quibbler.'
Rita snorted so loudly that people at a nearby table looked round in alarm.
'"Important stories he thinks the public needs to know", eh?' she said witheringly. 'I couldmanure my garden with the contents of that rag.'

'Well, this is your chance to raise the tone of it a bit, isn't it?' said Hermione pleasantly. 'Lunasays her father's quite happy to take Harry's interview. That's who'll be publishing it.'
Rita stared at them both for a moment, then let out a great whoop of laughter.
'The Quibbler!' she said, cackling. 'You think people will take him seriously if he's published inThe QuibblerT'Some people won't,' said Hermione in a level voice. 'But the Daily Prophet's version of theAzkaban breakout had some gaping holes in it. I think a lot of people will be wonderingwhether there isn't a better explanation of what happened, and if there's an alternative storyavailable, even if it is published in a -' she glanced sideways at Luna, 'in a - well, an unusualmagazine - I think they might be rather keen to read it.'
Rita didn't say anything for a while, but eyed Hermione shrewdly, her head a little to one side.
'All right, let's say for a moment I'll do it,' she said abruptly. 'What kind of fee am I going toget?'
'I don't think Daddy exactly pays people to write for the magazine,' said Luna dreamily. Theydo it because it's an honour and, of course, to see their names in print.'
Rita Skeeter looked as though the taste of Stinksap was strong in her mouth again as sherounded on Hermione.
'I'm supposed to do this/or/ree?'
'Well, yes,' said Hermione calmly, taking a sip of her drink. 'Otherwise, as you very wellknow, 1 will inform the authorities that you are an unregistered Animagus. Of course, theProphet might give you rather a lot for an insider's account of life in Azkaban.'
Rita looked as though she would have liked nothing better than to seize the paper umbrellasticking out of Hermione's drink and thrust it up her nose.
'I don't suppose I've got any choice, have I?' said Rita, her voice shaking slightly. She openedher crocodile bag once more, withdrew a piece of parchment, and raised her Quick-QuotesQuill.
'Daddy will be pleased,' said Luna brightly. A muscle twitched in Rita's jaw.
'OK, Harry?' said Hermione, turning to him. 'Ready to tell the public the truth?'

'I suppose,' said Harry, watching Rita balancing the Quick-Quotes Quill at the ready on theparchment between them.
Tire away, then, Rita,' said Hermione serenely, fishing a cherry out from the bottom of herglass.

— CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX —

Seen and UnforeseenLuna said vaguely that she did not know how soon Rita's interview with Harry would appearin The Quibbler, that her father was expecting a lovely long article on recent sightings ofCrumple-Horned Snorkacks,"- and of course, that'll be a very important story, so Harrysmight have to wait for the following issue,' said Luna.

Harry had not found it an easy experience to talk about the night when Voldemort hadreturned. Rita had pressed him for every little detail and he had given her everything hecould remember, knowing that this was his one big opportunity to tell the world the truth. Hewondered how people would react to the story. He guessed that it would confirm a lot ofpeople in the view that he was completely insane, not least because his story would beappearing alongside utter rubbish about Crumple-Horned Snorkacks. But the breakout ofBellatrix Lestrange and her fellow Death Eaters had given Harry a burning desire to dosomething, whether or not it worked…

'Can't wait to see what Umbridge thinks of you going public,' said Dean, sounding awestruckat dinner on Monday night. Seamus was shovelling down large amounts of chicken and hampie on Dean's other side, but Harry knew he was listening.

'It's the right thing to do, Harry,' said Neville, who was sitting opposite him. He was ratherpale, but went on in a low voice, 'It must have been… tough… talking about it… was it?'

'Yeah,' mumbled Harry, 'but people have got to know what Voldemorts capable of, haven'tthey?'

'That's right,' said Neville, nodding, 'and his Death Eaters, too… people should know…'

Neville left his sentence hanging and returned to his baked potato. Seamus looked up, butwhen he caught Harrys eye he looked quickly back at his plate again. After a while, Dean,Seamus and Neville departed for the common room, leaving Harry and Hermione at the tablewaiting for Ron, who had not yet had dinner because of Quidditch practice.

Cho Chang walked into the Hall with her friend Marietta. Harry's stomach gave anunpleasant lurch, but she did not look over at the Gryffindor table, and sat down with herback to him.

'Oh, I forgot to ask you,' said Hermione brightly, glancing over at the Ravenclaw table, 'whathappened on your date with Cho? How come you were back so early?'

'Er… well, it was…' said Harry, pulling a dish of rhubarb crumble towards him and helpinghimself to seconds, 'a complete fiasco, now you mention it.'

And he told her what had happened in Madam Puddifoot's teashop.

'… so then,' he finished several minutes later, as the final bit of crumble disappeared, 'shejumps up, right, and says, "I'll see you around, Harry," and runs out of the place!' He putdown his spoon and looked at Hermione. '1 mean, what was all that about? What was goingon?'

Hermione glanced over at the back of Cho's head and sighed.

'Oh, Harry' she said sadly. 'Well, I'm sorry, but you were a bit tactless.'

'Me, tactless?' said Harry, outraged. 'One minute we were getting on fine, next minute shewas telling me that Roger Davies asked her out and how she used to go and snog Cedric inthat stupid teashop - how was I supposed to feel about that?'

'Well, you see,' said Hermione, with the patient air of someone explaining that one plus oneequals two to an over-emotional toddler, 'you shouldn't have told her that you wanted tomeet me halfway through your date.'

'But, but,' spluttered Harry, 'but - you told me to meet you at twelve and to bring her along,how was I supposed to do that without telling her?'

'You should have told her differently,' said Hermione, still with that maddeningly patient air.

'You should have said it was really annoying, but I'd made you promise to come along to theThree Broomsticks, and you really didn't want to go, you'd much rather spend the whole daywith her, but unfortunately you thought you really ought to meet me and would she please,please come along with you and hopefully you'd be able to get away more quickly. And itmight have been a good idea to mention how ugly you think I am, too,' Hermione added asan afterthought.

'But I don't think you're ugly,' said Harry, bemused.

Hermione laughed.

'Harry you're worse than Ron… well, no, you're not,' she sighed, as Ron himself camestumping into the Hall splattered with mud and looking grumpy. 'Look - you upset Chowhen you said you were going to meet me, so she tried to make you jealous. It was her way oftrying to find out how much you liked her.'

'Is that what she was doing?' said Harry, as Ron dropped on to the bench opposite them andpulled every dish within reach towards him. 'Well, wouldn't it have been easier if she'd justasked me whether I liked her better than you?'

'Girls don't often ask questions like that,' said Hermione.

'Well, they should!' said Harry forcefully. Then I could've just told her I fancy her, and shewouldn't have had to get herself all worked up again about Cedric dying!'

'I'm not saying what she did was sensible,' said Hermione, as Ginny joined them, just asmuddy as Ron and looking equally disgruntled. 'I'm just trying to make you see how she wasfeeling at the time.'

'You should write a book,' Ron told Hermione as he cut up his potatoes, 'translating madthings girls do so boys can understand them.'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Yeah,' said Harry fervently, looking over at the Ravenclaw table. Cho had just got up, and,still not looking at him, she left the Great Hall. Feeling rather depressed, he looked back atRon and Ginny. 'So, how was Quidditch practice?'

'It was a nightmare,' said Ron in a surly voice.

'Oh come on,' said Hermione, looking at Ginny, 'I'm sure it wasn't that -'

'Yes, it was,' said Ginny. 'It was appalling. Angelina was nearly in tears by the end of it.'

Ron and Ginny went off for baths after dinner; Harry and Hermione returned to the busyGryffindor common room and their usual pile of homework. Harry had been struggling witha new star-chart for Astronomy for half an hour when Fred and George turned up.

'Ron and Ginny not here?' asked Fred, looking around as he pulled up a chair, and whenHarry shook his head, he said, 'Good. We were watching their practice. They're going to beslaughtered. They're complete rubbish without us.'

'Come on, Ginny's not bad,' said George fairly, sitting down next to Fred. 'Actually, 1 dunnohow she got so good, seeing how we never let her play with us.'

'She's been breaking into your broom shed in the garden since the age of six and taking eachof your brooms out in turn when you weren't looking,' said Hermione from behind hertottering pile of Ancient Rune books.

'Oh,' said George, looking mildly impressed. 'Well - that'd explain it.'

'Has Ron saved a goal yet?' asked Hermione, peering over the top of Magical Hieroglyphs andLogograms.

'Well, he can do it if he doesn't think anyone's watching him,' said Fred, rolling his eyes. 'So allwe have to do is ask the crowd to turn their backs and talk among themselves every time theQuaffle goes up his end on Saturday.'

He got up again and moved restlessly to the window, staring out across the dark grounds.

'You know, Quidditch was about the only thing in this place worth staying for.'

Hermione cast him a stern look.

'You've got exams coming!'

Told you already, we're not fussed about NEWTs,' said Fred. The Snackboxes are ready toroll, we found out how to get rid of those boils, just a couple of drops of Murtlap essence sortsthem, Lee put us on to it.'

George yawned widely and looked out disconsolately at the cloudy night sky.

'I dunno if I even want to watch this match. If Zacharias Smith beats us I might have to killmyself.'

'Kill him, more like,' said Fred firmly.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

That's the trouble with Quidditch,' said Hermione absent-mindedly, once again bent over herRunes translation, 'it creates all this bad feeling and tension between the houses.'
She looked up to find her copy of Spellman's Syllabary, and caught Fred, George and Harry allstaring at her with expressions of mingled disgust and incredulity on their faces.
'Well, it does!' she said impatiently. 'It's only a game, isn't it?'
'Hermione,' said Harry, shaking his head, 'you're good on feelings and stuff, but you just don'tunderstand about Quidditch.'
'Maybe not,' she said darkly, returning to her translation, 'but at least my happiness doesn'tdepend on Ron's goalkeeping ability.'

And though Harry would rather have jumped off the Astronomy Tower than admit it to her,by the time he had watched the game the following Saturday he would have given anynumber of Galleons not to care about Quidditch either.
The very best thing you could say about the match was that it was short; the Gryffindorspectators had to endure only twenty-two minutes of agony. It was hard to say what theworst thing was: Harry thought it was a close-run contest between Ron's fourteenth failedsave, Sloper missing the Bludger but hitting Angelina in the mouth with his bat, and Kirkeshrieking and falling backwards off his broom when Zacharias Smith zoomed at him carryingthe Quaffle. The miracle was that Gryffindor only lost by ten points: Ginny managed to snatchthe Snitch from right under Hufflepuff Seeker Summerby's nose, so that the final score wastwo hundred and forty versus two hundred and thirty.
'Good catch,' Harry told Ginny back in the common room, where the atmosphere resembledthat of a particularly dismal funeral.
'I was lucky,' she shrugged. 'It wasn't a very fast Snitch and Summerby's got a cold, hesneezed and closed his eyes at exactly the wrong moment. Anyway, once you're back on theteam -'
'Ginny, I've got a lifelong ban.'
'You're banned as long as Umbridge is in the school,' Ginny corrected him. There's adifference. Anyway, once you're back, I thinkI'll try out for Chaser. Angelina and Alicia are both leaving next year and I prefer goal-scoringto Seeking anyway.'
Harry looked over at Ron, who was hunched in a corner, staring at his knees, a bottle ofButterbeer clutched in his hand.
'Angelina still won't let him resign,' Ginny said, as though reading Harry's mind. 'She says sheknows he's got it in him.'
Harry liked Angelina for the faith she was showing in Ron, but at the same time thought itwould really be kinder to let him leave the team. Ron had left the pitch to another boomingchorus of 'Weasley is our King' sung with great gusto by the Slytherins, who were nowfavourites to win the Quidditch Cup.

Fred and George wandered over.

'I haven't even got the heart to take the mickey out of him,' said Fred, looking over at Ron'scrumpled figure. 'Mind you… when he missed the fourteenth -'

He made wild motions with his arms as though doing an upright doggy-paddle.

'- well, I'll save it for parties, eh?'

Ron dragged himself up to bed shortly after this. Out of respect for his feelings, Harry waiteda while before going up to the dormitory himself, so that Ron could pretend to be asleep if hewanted to. Sure enough, when Harry finally entered the room Ron was snoring a little tooloudly to be entirely plausible.

Harry got into bed, thinking about the match. It had been immensely frustrating watchingfrom the sidelines. He was quite impressed by Ginny's performance but he knew if he hadbeen playing he could have caught the Snitch sooner… there had been a moment when it hadbeen fluttering near Kirke's ankle; if Ginny hadn't hesitated, she might have been able toscrape a win for Gryffindor.

Umbridge had been sitting a few rows below Harry and Hermione. Once or twice she hadturned squatly in her seat to look at him, her wide toad's mouth stretched in what he thoughthad been a gloating smile. The memory of it made him feel hot with anger as he lay there inthe dark. After a few minutes, however, he remembered that he was supposed to be emptyinghis mind of all emotion before he slept, as Snape kept instructing him at the end of everyOcclumency lesson.

He tried for a moment or two, but the thought of Snape on top of memories of Umbridgemerely increased his sense of grumbling resentment and he found himself focusing instead onhow much he loathed the pair of them. Slowly, Ron's snores died away, to be replaced by thesound of deep, slow breathing. It took Harry much longer to get to sleep; his body was tired,but it took his brain a long time to close down.

He dreamed that Neville and Professor Sprout were waltzing around the Room ofRequirement while Professor McGonagall played the bagpipes. He watched them happily fora while, then decided to go and find the other members of the DA.

But when he left the room he found himself facing, not the tapestry of Barnabas the Barmy,but a torch burning in its bracket on a stone wall. He turned his head slowly to the left. There,at the far end of the windowless passage, was a plain, black door.

He walked towards it with a sense of mounting excitement. He had the strangest feeling

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

thatthis time he was going to get lucky at last, and find the way to open it… he was feet from it,and saw with a leap of excitement that there was a glowing strip of faint blue light down the right-hand side… the door was ajar… he stretched out his hand to push it wide and -

Ron gave a loud, rasping, genuine snore and Harry awoke abruptly with his right handstretched in front of him in the darkness, to open a door that was hundreds of miles away. Helet it fall with a feeling of mingled disappointment and guilt. He knew he should not haveseen the door, but at the same time felt so consumed with curiosity about what was behind itthat he could not help feeling annoyed with Ron… if only he could have saved his snore forjust another minute.

*They entered the Great Hall for breakfast at exactly the same moment as the post owls onMonday morning. Hermione was not the only person eagerly awaiting her Daily Prophet:

nearly everyone was eager for more news about the escaped Death Eaters, who, despite manyreported sightings, had still not been caught. She gave the delivery owl a Knut and unfoldedthe newspaper eagerly while Harry helped himself to orange juice; as he had only receivedone note during the entire year, he was sure, when the first owl landed with a thud in front ofhim, that it had made a mistake.

'Who're you after?' he asked it, languidly removing his orange juice from underneath its beakand leaning forwards to see the recipient's name and address:

Harry Potter Great Hall Hogwarts SchoolFrowning, he made to take the letter from the owl, but before he could do so, three, four, fivemore owls had fluttered down beside it and were jockeying for position, treading in the butterand knocking over the salt as each one attempted to give him their letter first.

'What's going on?' Ron asked in amazement, as the whole of Gryffindor table leaned forwardsto watch and another seven owls landed amongst the first ones, screeching, hooting andflapping their wings.

'Harry!' said Hermione breathlessly, plunging her hands into the feathery mass and pullingout a screech owl bearing a long, cylindrical package. 'I think I know what this means - openthis one first!'

Harry ripped off the brown packaging. Out rolled a tightly furled copy of the March editionof The Quibbler. He unrolled it to see his own face grinning sheepishly at him from the frontcover. In large red letters across this picture were the words:

SPEAKS OUT AT LAST:

THE TRUTH ABOUT HE WHO MUST NOT BE NAMEDAND THE NIGHT I SAW HIM

RETURN'It's good, isn't it?' said Luna, who had drifted over to the Gryffindor table and now squeezedherself on to the bench between Fred and Ron. 'It came out yesterday, I asked Dad to send youa free copy. I expect all these,' she waved a hand at the assembled owls still scrabbling aroundon the table in front of Harry, 'are letters from readers.'

That's what I thought,' said Hermione eagerly. 'Harry, d'you mind if we -?'

'Help yourself,' said Harry, feeling slightly bemused.

Ron and Hermione both started ripping open envelopes.

This one's from a bloke who thinks you're off your rocker,' said Ron, glancing down his letter.

'Ah well…'

This woman recommends you try a good course of Shock Spells at St Mungo's,' saidHermione, looking disappointed and crumpling up a second.

This one looks OK, though,' said Harry slowly, scanning a long letter from a witch in Paisley.

'Hey, she says she believes me!'

This one's in two minds,' said Fred, who had joined in the letter-opening with enthusiasm. 'Says you don't come across as a mad person, but he really doesn't want to believe You-Know-

Who's back so he doesn't know what to think now. Blimey, what a waste of parchment.'

'Here's another one you've convinced, Harry!' said Hermione excitedly. 'Having read your sideof the story, 1 am forced to the conclusion that the Daily Prophet has treated you very unfairly… littlethough I want to think that He Who Must Not Be Named has returned, I am forced to accept that youare telling the truth… Oh, this is wonderful!'

'Another one who thinks you're barking,' said Ron, throwing a crumpled letter over hisshoulder '… but this one says you've got her converted and she now thinks you're a real hero - she's put in a photograph, too - wow!'

'What is going on here?' said a falsely sweet, girlish voice.

Harry looked up with his hands full of envelopes. Professor Umbridge was standing behindFred and Luna, her bulging toad's eyes scanning the mess of owls and letters on the table in front of Harry. Behind her he saw many of the students watching them avidly.

Why have you got all these letters, Mr Potter?' she asked slowly.

'Is that a crime now?' said Fred loudly. 'Getting mail?'

'Be careful, Mr Weasley, or I shall have to put you in detention,' said Umbridge. 'Well, MrPotter?'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Harry hesitated, but he did not see how he could keep what he had done quiet; it was surelyonly a matter of time before a copy of The Quibbler came to Umbridges attention.

'People have written to me because I gave an interview,' said Harry. 'About what happened tome last June.'

For some reason he glanced up at the staff table as he said this. Harry had the strangestteeling that Dumbledore had been watching him a second before, but when he lookedtowards the Headmaster he seemed to be absorbed in conversation with Professor Flitwick.

'An interview?' repeated Umbridge, her voice thinner and higher than ever. 'What do youmean?'

'I mean a reporter asked me questions and 1 answered them,' said Harry. 'Here -'

And he threw the copy of The Quibbler to her. She caught it and stared down at the cover. Herpale, doughy face turned an ugly, patchy violet.

'When did you do this?' she asked, her voice trembling slightly.

'Last Hogsmeade weekend,' said Harry.

She looked up at him, incandescent with rage, the magazine shaking in her stubby fingers.

There will be no more Hogsmeade trips for you, Mr Potter,' she whispered. 'How you dare…

how you could…' She took a deep breath. 'I have tried again and again to teach you not to telllies. The message, apparently, has still not sunk in. Fifty points from Gryffindor and anotherweek's worth of detentions.'

She stalked away, clutching The Quibbler to her chest, the eyes of many students following her.

By mid-morning enormous signs had been put up all over the school, not just on house noticeboards, but in the corridors and classrooms too.

BY ORDER OF THE HIGH INQUISITOR OF HOGWARTSAny student found in possession of the magazine The Quibbler will be expelled.

The above is in accordance with Educational Decree Number Twenty-seven.

Signed: Dolores Jane Umbridge, High Inquisitor.

For some reason, every time Hermione caught sight of one of these signs she beamed withpleasure.

'What exactly are you so happy about?' Harry asked her.

'Oh, Harry, don't you see?' Hermione breathed. 'If she could have done one thing to makeabsolutely sure that every single person in this school will read your interview, it was banningit!'

And it seemed that Hermione was quite right. By the end of the day, though Harry had notseen so much as a corner of The Quibbler anywhere in the school, the whole place seemed to bequoting the interview to each other. Harry heard them whispering about it as they queued upoutside classes, discussing it over lunch and in the back of lessons, while Hermione evenreported that every occupant of the cubicles in the girls' toilets had been talking about it whenshe nipped in there before Ancient Runes.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Then they spotted me, and obviously they know I know you, so they bombarded me withquestions,' Hermione told Harry, her eyes shining, 'and Harry, I think they believe you, Ireally do, I think you've finally got them convinced!'

Meanwhile, Professor Umbridge was stalking the school, stopping students at random anddemanding that they turn out their books and pockets: Harry knew she was looking forcopies of The Quibbler, but the students were several steps ahead of her. The pages carryingHarrys interview had been bewitched to resemble extracts from textbooks if anyone butthemselves read it, or else wiped magically blank until they wanted to peruse it again. Soon itseemed that every single person in the school had read it.

The teachers were of course forbidden from mentioning the interview by Educational DecreeNumber Twenty-six, but they found ways to express their feelings about it all the same.

Professor Sprout awarded Gryffindor twenty points when Harry passed her a watering can; a beaming Professor Flitwick pressed a box of squeaking sugar mice on him at the end ofCharms, said, 'Shh!' and hurried away; and Professor Trelawney broke into hysterical sobsduring Divination and announced to the startled class, and a very disapproving Umbridge,that Harry was not going to suffer an early death after all, but would live to a ripe old age,become Minister for Magic and have twelve children.

But what made Harry happiest was Cho catching up with him as he was hurrying along toTransfiguration the next day. Before he knew what had happened, her hand was in his andshe was breathing in his ear, 'I'm really, really sorry. That interview was so brave… it mademe cry.'

He was sorry to hear she had shed even more tears over it, but very glad they were onspeaking terms again, and even more pleased when she gave him a swift kiss on the cheekand hurried off again. And unbelievably, no sooner had he arrived outside Transfigurationthan something just as good happened: Seamus stepped out of the queue to face him.

'I just wanted to say,' he mumbled, squinting at Harry's left knee, '1 believe you. And I've senta copy of that magazine to me mam.'

If anything more was needed to complete Harry's happiness, it was the reaction he got fromMalfoy, Crabbe and Goyle. He saw them with their heads together later that afternoon in thelibrary; they were with a weedy-looking boy Hermione whispered was called Theodore Nott.

POTTER EBOOKS

They looked round at Harry as he browsed the shelves for the book he needed on PartialVanishment: Goyle cracked his knuckles threateningly and Malfoy whispered somethingundoubtedly malevolent to Crabbe. Harry knew perfectly well why they were acting like this:

he had named all of their fathers as Death Eaters.

'And the best bit,' whispered Hermione gleefully, as they left the library, 'is they can'tcontradict you, because they can't admit they've read the article!'

To cap it all, Luna told him over dinner that no issue of The Quibbler had ever sold out faster.

'Dad's reprinting!' she told Harry, her eyes popping excitedly. 'He can't believe it, he sayspeople seem even more interested in this than the Crumple-Horned Snorkacks!'

Harry was a hero in the Gryffindor common room that night. Daringly, Fred and George hadput an Enlargement Charm on the front cover of The Quibbler and hung it on the wall, so thatHarry's giant head gazed down upon the proceedings, occasionally saying things like THEMINISTRY ARE MORONS' and 'EAT DUNG, UMBRIDGE' in a booming voice. Hermione didnot find this very amusing; she said it interfered with her concentration, and she ended upgoing to bed early out of irritation. Harry had to admit that the poster was not quite as funnyafter an hour or two, especially when the talking spell had started to wear off, so that it merely shouted disconnected words like 'DUNG' and 'UMBRIDGE' at more and morefrequent intervals in a progressively higher voice. In fact, it started to make his head ache andhis scar began prickling uncomfortably again. To disappointed moans from the many peoplewho were sitting around him, asking him to relive his interview for the umpteenth time, heannounced that he too needed an early night.

The dormitory was empty when he reached it. He rested his forehead for a moment againstthe cool glass of the window beside his bed; it felt soothing against his scar. Then heundressed and got into bed, wishing his headache would go away. He also felt slightly sick.

He rolled over on to his side, closed his eyes, and fell asleep almost at once…

He was standing in a dark, curtained room lit by a single branch of candles. His hands wereclenched on the back of a chair in front of him. They were long-fingered and white as thoughthey had not seen sunlight for years and looked like large, pale spiders against the dark velvetof the chair.

Beyond the chair, in a pool of light cast upon the floor by the candles, knelt a man in blackrobes.

'I have been badly advised, it seems,' said Harry, in a high, cold voice that pulsed with anger.

'Master, I crave your pardon,' croaked the man kneeling on the floor. The back of his headglimmered in the candlelight. He seemed to be trembling.

'I do not blame you, Rookwood,' said Harry in that cold, cruel voice.

He relinquished his grip on the chair and walked around it, closer to the man cowering on thefloor, until he stood directly over him in the darkness, looking down from a far greater heightthan usual.

'You are sure of your facts, Rookwood?' asked Harry.

'Yes, My Lord, yes… I used to work in the Department after -after all…'

'Avery told me Bode would be able to remove it.'

'Bode could never have taken it, Master… Bode would have known he could not… undoubtedly, that is why he fought so hard against Malfoy's Imperius Curse…'

'Stand up, Rookwood,' whispered Harry.

The kneeling man almost fell over in his haste to obey. His face was pockmarked; the scarswere thrown into relief by the candlelight. He remained a little stooped when standing, asthough halfway through a bow, and he darted terrified looks up at Harry's face.

'You have done well to tell me this,' said Harry. 'Very well… I have wasted months onfruitless schemes, it seems… but no matter… we begin again, from now. You have LordVoldemort's gratitude, Rookwood…'

'My Lord… yes, My Lord,' gasped Rookwood, his voice hoarse with relief.

'I shall need your help. I shall need all the information you can give me.'

'Of course, My Lord, of course… anything…'

'Very well… you may go. Send Avery to me.'

Rookwood scurried backwards, bowing, and disappeared through a door.

Left alone in the dark room, Harry turned towards the wall. A cracked, age-spotted mirrorhung on the wall in the shadows. Harry moved towards it. His reflection grew larger andclearer in the darkness… a face whiter than a skull… red eyes with slits for pupils…

'NOOOOOOOOO!'

'What?' yelled a voice nearby.

Harry flailed around madly, became entangled in the hangings and fell out of his bed. For afew seconds he did not know where he was; he was convinced he was about to see the white,skull-like face looming at him out ol the dark again, then very near to him Ron's voice spoke. .

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Will you stop acting like a maniac so I can get you out of here!'

Ron wrenched the hangings apart and Harry stared up at him in the moonlight, flat on hisback, his scar searing with pain. Ron looked as though he had just been getting ready for bed; one arm was out of his robes.

'Has someone been attacked again?' asked Ron, pulling Harry roughly to his feet. 'Is it Dad? Isit that snake?'

'No - everyone's fine -' gasped Harry, whose forehead felt as though it were on fire. 'Well…

Avery isn't… he's in trouble… he gave him the wrong information… Voldemort's really angry

Harry groaned and sank, shaking, on to his bed, rubbing his scar.

'But Rookwood's going to help him now… he's on the right track again…"

'What are you talking about?' said Ron, sounding scared. 'D'you mean… did you just see You-

Know-Who?'

'I was You-Know-Who,' said Harry, and he stretched out his hands in the darkness and heldthem up to his face, to check that they were no longer deathly white and long-fingered. 'Hewas with Rookwood, he's one of the Death Eaters who escaped from Azkaban, remember?

Rookwood's just told him Bode couldn't have done it.'

'Done what?'

'Remove something… he said Bode would have known he couldn't have done it… Bode wasunder the Imperius Curse… I think he said Malfoy's dad put it on him.'

'Bode was bewitched to remove something?' Ron said. 'But -Harry, that's got to be -'

The weapon,' Harry finished the sentence for him. 'I know'

The dormitory door opened; Dean and Seamus came in. Harry swung his legs back into bed.

He did not want to look as though anything odd had just happened, seeing as Seamus hadonly just stopped thinking Harry was a nutter.

'Did you say,' murmured Ron, putting his head close to Harry's on the pretence of helpinghimself to water from the jug on his bedside table, 'that you were You-Know-Who?'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Yeah,' said Harry quietly.

Ron took an unnecessarily large gulp of water; Harry saw it spill over his chin on to his chest.

'Harry,' he said, as Dean and Seamus clattered around noisily, pulling off their robes andtalking, 'you've got to tell -'

'I haven't got to tell anyone,' said Harry shortly. '1 wouldn't have seen it at all if I could doOcclumency. I'm supposed to have learned to shut this stuff out. That's what they want.'

By 'they' he meant Dumbledore. He got back into bed and rolled over on to his side with hisback to Ron and after a while he heard Ron's mattress creak as he, too, lay back down. Harry'sscar began to burn; he bit hard on his pillow to stop himself making a noise. Somewhere, he knew, Avery was being punished.

*Harry and Ron waited until break next morning to tell Hermione exactly what had happened; they wanted to be absolutely sure they could not be overheard. Standing in their usual cornerof the cool and breezy courtyard, Harry told her every detail of the dream he couldremember. When he had finished, she said nothing at all for a few moments, but stared with akind of painful intensity at Fred and George, who were both headless and selling theirmagical hats from under their cloaks on the other side of the yard.

'So that's why they killed him,' she said quietly, withdrawing her gaze from Fred and Georgeat last. 'When Bode tried to steal this weapon, something funny happened to him. 1 thinkthere must be defensive spells on it, or around it, to stop people touching it. That's why hewas in St Mungo's, his brain had gone all funny and he couldn't talk. But remember what theHealer told us? He was recovering. And they couldn't risk him getting better, could they? Imean, the shock of whatever happened when he touched that weapon probably made theImperius Curse lift. Once he'd got his voice back, he'd explain what he'd been doing, wouldn'the? They would have known he'd been sent to steal the weapon. Of course, it would havebeen easy for Lucius Malfoy to put the curse on him. Never out of the Ministry, is he?'

'He was even hanging around that day I had my hearing,' said Harry. 'In the - hang on…' hesaid slowly. 'He was in the Department of Mysteries corridor that day! Your dad said he wasprobably trying to sneak down and find out what happened in my hearing, but what if -'

'Sturgis!' gasped Hermione, looking thunderstruck.

'Sorry?' said Ron, looking bewildered.

'Sturgis Podmore -' said Hermione breathlessly, 'arrested for trying to get through a door! Lucius Malfoy must have got him too! I bet he did it the day you saw him there, Harry. Sturgis had Moody's Invisibility Cloak, right? So, what if he was standing guard by the door,invisible, and Malfoy heard him move - or guessed someone was there - or just did theImperius Curse on the off-chance there'd be a guard there? So, when Sturgis next had anopportunity - probably when it was his turn on guard duty again - he tried to get into theDepartment to steal the weapon for Voldemort - Ron, be quiet - but he got caught and sent toAzkaban…"

She gazed at Harry.

'And now Rookwood's told Voldemort how to get the weapon?'

'I didn't hear all the conversation, but that's what it sounded like,' said Harry. 'Rookwoodused to work there… maybe Voldemort'll send Rookwood to do it?'

Hermione nodded, apparently still lost in thought. Then, quite abruptly, she said, 'But youshouldn't have seen this at all, Harry.'

'What?' he said, taken aback.

'You're supposed to be learning how to close your mind to this sort of thing,' said Hermione,suddenly stern.

'I know I am,' said Harry. 'But -'

'Well, I think we should just try and forget what you saw,' said Hermione firmly. 'And youought to put in a bit more effort on your Occlumency from now on.'

Harry was so angry with her he did not talk to her for the rest of the day, which proved to beanother bad one. When people were not discussing the escaped Death Eaters in the corridors,they were laughing at Gryffindor's abysmal performance in their match against Hufflepuff; the Slytherins were singing Weasley is our King' so loudly and frequently that by sundownFilch had banned it from the corridors out of sheer irritation.

The week did not improve as it progressed. Harry received two more 'D's in Potions; he wasstill on tenterhooks that Hagrid might get the sack; and he couldn't stop himself dwelling onthe dream in which he had been Voldemort - though he didn't bring it up with Ron andHermione again; he didn't want another telling-off from Hermione. He wished very muchthat he could have talked to Sirius about it, but that was out of the question, so he tried topush the matter to the back of his mind.

Unfortunately, the back of his mind was no longer the secure place it had once been.

'Get up, Potter.'

A couple of weeks after his dream of Rookwood, Harry was to be found, yet again, kneelingon the floor of Snape's office, trying to clear his head. He had just been forced, yet again, torelive a stream of very early memories he had not even realised he still had, most of themconcerning humiliations Dudley and his gang had inflicted upon him in primary school.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

That last memory,' said Snape. 'What was it?'

'I don't know,' said Harry, getting wearily to his feet. He was finding it increasingly difficultto disentangle separate memories from the rush of images and sound that Snape kept calling forth. 'You mean the one where my cousin tried to make me stand in the toilet?'

'No,' said Snape softly. 'I mean the one with a man kneeling in the middle of a darkenedroom…'

'It's… nothing,' said Harry.

Snape's dark eyes bored into Harry's. Remembering what Snape had said about eye contactbeing crucial to Legilimency, Harry blinked and looked away.

'How do that man and that room come to be inside your head, Potter?' said Snape.

'It -' said Harry, looking everywhere but at Snape, 'it was -just a dream I had.'

'A dream?' repeated Snape.

There was a pause during which Harry stared fixedly at a large dead frog suspended in a jarof purple liquid.

'You do know why we are here, don't you, Potter?' said Snape, in a low, dangerous voice. 'Youdo know why I am giving up my evenings to this tedious job?'

'Yes,' said Harry stiffly.

'Remind me why we are here, Potter.'

'So I can learn Occlumency,' said Harry, now glaring at a dead eel.

'Correct, Potter. And dim though you may be -' Harry looked back at Snape, hating him '-Iwould have thought that after over two months of lessons you might have made someprogress. How many other dreams about the Dark Lord have you had?'

'Just that one,' lied Harry.

'Perhaps,' said Snape, his dark, cold eyes narrowing slightly, 'perhaps you actually enjoyhaving these visions and dreams, Potter. Maybe they make you feel special - important?'

'No, they don't,' said Harry, his jaw set and his fingers clenched tightly around the handle ofhis wand.

That is just as well, Potter,' said Snape coldly, 'because you are neither special nor important, and it is not up to you to find out what the Dark Lord is saying to his Death Eaters.'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'No - that's your job, isn't it?' Harry shot at him.

He had not meant to say it; it had burst out of him in temper. For a long moment they staredat each other, Harry convinced he had gone too far. But there was a curious, almost satisfiedexpression on Snape's face when he answered.

'Yes, Potter,' he said, his eyes glinting. That is my job. Now, if you are ready, we will startagain.'

He raised his wand: 'One — two - three - Legilimensl'

A hundred Dementors were swooping towards Harry across the lake in the grounds… hescrewed up his face in concentration… they were coming closer… he could see the dark holesbeneath their hoods… yet he could also see Snape standing in front of him, his eyes fixed onHarry's face, muttering under his breath… and somehow, Snape was growing clearer, and theDementors were growing fainter…

Harry raised his own wand.

'Protego!'

Snape staggered - his wand flew upwards, away from Harry -and suddenly Harry's mind wasteeming with memories that were not his: a hook-nosed man was shouting at a coweringwoman, while a small dark-haired boy cried in a corner… a greasy-haired teenager sat alonein a dark bedroom, pointing his wand at the ceiling, shooting down flies… a girl was laughingas a scrawny boy tried to mount a bucking broomstick -

'ENOUGH!'

Harry felt as though he had been pushed hard in the chest; he staggered several stepsbackwards, hit some of the shelves covering Snape's walls and heard something crack. Snapewas shaking slightly, and was very white in the face.

The back of Harry's robes was damp. One of the jars behind him had broken when he fellagainst it; the pickled slimy thing within was swirling in its draining potion.

'Reparo,' hissed Snape, and the jar sealed itself at once. 'Well, Potter… that was certainly animprovement…' Panting slightly, Snape straightened the Pensieve in which he had againstored some of his thoughts before starting the lesson, almost as though he was checking theywere still there. 'I don't remember telling you to use a Shield Charm… but there is no doubt that it was effective…'

Harry did not speak; he felt that to say anything might be dangerous. He was sure he had justbroken into Snape's memories, that he had just seen scenes from Snape's childhood. It wasunnerving to think that the little boy who had been crying as he watched his parents shoutingwas actually standing in front of him with such loathing in his eyes.

'Let's try again, shall we?' said Snape.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Harry felt a thrill of dread; he was about to pay for what had just happened, he was sure of it.

They moved back into position with the desk between them, Harry feeling he was going tofind it much harder to empty his mind this time.

'On the count of three, then,' said Snape, raising his wand once more. 'One - two -'

Harry did not have time to gather himself together and attempt to clear his mind before Snapecried, 'Legilimens!'

He was hurtling along the corridor towards the Department of Mysteries, past the blank stonewalls, past the torches - the plain black door was growing ever larger; he was moving so fasthe was going to collide with it, he was feet from it and again he could see that chink of faintblue light -

The door had flown open! He was through it at last, inside a black-walled, black-flooredcircular room lit with blue-flamed candles, and there were more doors all around him - heneeded to go on - but which door ought he to take -?

TOTTER!'

Harry opened his eyes. He was flat on his back again with no memory of having got there; hewas also panting as though he really had run the length of the Department of Mysteriescorridor, really had sprinted through the black door and found the circular room.

'Explain yourself!' said Snape, who was standing over him, looking furious.

'I… dunno what happened,' said Harry truthfully, standing up. There was a lump on the backof his head from where he had hit the ground and he felt feverish. 'I've never seen that before.

I mean, I told you, I've dreamed about the door… but it's never opened before'You are not working hard enough!'

For some reason, Snape seemed even angrier than he had done two minutes before, whenHarry had seen into his teacher's memories.

'You are lazy and sloppy, Potter, it is small wonder that the Dark Lord -'

'Can you tell me something, sir?' said Harry, firing up again. 'Why do you call Voldemort theDark Lord? I've only ever heard Death Eaters call him that.'

Snape opened his mouth in a snarl - and a woman screamed from somewhere outside theroom.

Snapes head jerked upwards; he was gazing at the ceiling.

'What the -?' he muttered.

Harry could hear a muffled commotion coming from what he thought might be the EntranceHall. Snape looked round at him, frowning.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Did you see anything unusual on your way down here, Potter?'

Harry shook his head. Somewhere above them, the woman screamed again. Snape strode tohis office door, his wand still held at the ready, and swept out of sight. Harry hesitated for amoment, then followed.

The screams were indeed coming from the Entrance Hall; they grew louder as Harry rantowards the stone steps leading up from the dungeons. When he reached the top he found theEntrance Hall packed; students had come flooding out of the Great Hall, where dinner wasstill in progress, to see what was going on; others had crammed themselves on to the marblestaircase. Harry pushed forwards through a knot of tall Slytherins and saw that the onlookershad formed a great ring, some of them looking shocked, others even frightened. ProfessorMcGonagall was directly opposite Harry on the other side of the Hall; she looked as thoughwhat she was watching made her feel faintly sick.

Professor Trelawney was standing in the middle of the Entrance Hall with her wand in onehand and an empty sherry bottle in the other, looking utterly mad. Her hair was sticking upon end, her glasses were lopsided so that one eye was magnified more than the other; herinnumerable shawls and scarves were trailing haphazardly from her shoulders, giving theimpression that she was falling apart at the seams. Two large trunks lay on the floor besideher, one of them upside-down; it looked very much as though it had been thrown down thestairs after her. Professor Trelawney was staring, apparently terrified, at something Harrycould not see but which seemed to be standing at the foot of the stairs.

'No!' she shrieked. 'NO! This cannot be happening… it cannot… I refuse to accept it!'

'You didn't realise this was coming?' said a high girlish voice, sounding callously amused, andHarry, moving slightly to his right, saw that Trelawney's terrifying vision was nothing otherthan Professor Umbridge. 'Incapable though you are of predicting even tomorrow's weather,you must surely have realised that your pitiful performance during my inspections, and lackof any improvement, would make it inevitable that you would be sacked?'

'You c - can't!' howled Professor Trelawney, tears streaming down her face from behind herenormous lenses, 'you c - can't sack me! I've b - been here sixteen years! H - Hogwarts is in - my h - home!'

'It was your home,' said Professor Umbridge, and Harry was revolted to see the enjoymentstretching her toadlike face as she watched Professor Trelawney sink, sobbing uncontrollably,on to one of her trunks, 'until an hour ago, when the Minister for Magic countersigned yourOrder of Dismissal. Now kindly remove yourself from this Hall. You are embarrassing us.'

But she stood and watched, with an expression of gloating enjoyment, as Professor Trelawneyshuddered and moaned, rocking backwards and forwards on her trunk in paroxysms of grief.

Harry heard a muffled sob to his left and looked around. Lavender and Parvati were bothcrying quietly, their arms round each other. Then he heard footsteps. Professor McGonagallhad broken away from the spectators, marched straight up to Professor Trelawney and waspatting her firmly on the back while withdrawing a large handkerchief from within her robes.

There, there, Sybill… calm down… blow your nose on this… it's not as bad as you think,now… you are not going to have to leave Hogwarts…"

'Oh really, Professor McGonagall?' said Umbridge in a deadly voice, taking a few stepsforward. 'And your authority for that statement is… ?'

That would be mine,' said a deep voice.

The oaken front doors had swung open. Students beside them scuttled out of the way asDumbledore appeared in the entrance. What he had been doing out in the grounds Harrycould not imagine, but there was something impressive about the sight of him framed in thedoorway against an oddly misty night. Leaving the doors wide open behind him he strodeforwards through the circle of onlookers towards Professor Trelawney, tear-stained andtrembling, on her trunk, Professor McGonagall alongside her.

'Yours, Professor Dumbledore?' said Umbridge, with a singularly unpleasant little laugh. 'I'mafraid you do not understand the position. I have here -' she pulled a parchment scroll fromwithin her robes'- an Order of Dismissal signed by myself and the Minister for Magic. Under the terms of Educational Decree Number Twenty-three, the High Inquisitor of Hogwarts hasthe power to inspect, place upon probation and sack any teacher she - that is to say, I - feel isnot performing to the standards required by the Ministry of Magic. I have decided thatProfessor Trelawney is not up to scratch. I have dismissed her.'

To Harry's very great surprise, Dumbledore continued to smile. He looked down at ProfessorTrelawney, who was still sobbing and choking on her trunk, and said, 'You are quite right, ofcourse, Professor Umbridge. As High Inquisitor you have every right to dismiss my teachers.

You do not, however, have the authority to send them away from the castle. I am afraid,' hewent on, with a courteous little bow, that the power to do that still resides with theHeadmaster, and it is my wish that Professor Trelawney continue to live at Hogwarts.'

At this, Professor Trelawney gave a wild little laugh in which a hiccough was barely hidden.

'No - no, I'll g - go, Dumbledore! I sh - shall - leave Hogwarts and's - seek my fortuneelsewhere -'

'No,' said Dumbledore sharply. 'It is my wish that you remain, Sybill.'

He turned to Professor McGonagall.

'Might I ask you to escort Sybill back upstairs, Professor McGonagall?'

'Of course,' said McGonagall. 'Up you get, Sybill…'

Professor Sprout came hurrying forwards out of the crowd and grabbed ProfessorTrelawney's other arm. Together, they guided her past Umbridge and up the marble stairs.

Professor Flitwick went scurrying after them, his wand held out before him; he squeaked'Locomotor trunks!' and Professor Trelawney's luggage rose into the air and proceeded up thestaircase after her, Professor Flitwick bringing up the rear.

Professor Umbridge was standing stock still, staring at Dumbledore, who continued to smilebenignly.

'And what,' she said, in a whisper that carried all around the Entrance Hall, 'are you going todo with her once I appoint a new Divination teacher who needs her lodgings?'

'Oh, that won't be a problem,' said Dumbledore pleasantly. 'You see, I have already found us anew Divination teacher, and he will prefer lodgings on the ground floor.'

'You've found -?' said Umbridge shrilly. 'You've found? Might I remind you, Dumbledore,that under Educational Decree Number Twenty-two -'

The Ministry has the right to appoint a suitable candidate if -and only if- the Headmaster isunable to find one,' said Dumbledore. 'And I am happy to say that on this occasion I havesucceeded. May I introduce you?'

He turned to face the open front doors, through which night mist was now drifting. Harryheard hooves. There was a shocked murmur around the Hall and those nearest the doorshastily moved even further backwards, some of them tripping over in their haste to clear apath for the newcomer.

Through the mist came a face Harry had seen once before on a dark, dangerous night in theForbidden Forest: white-blond hair and astonishingly blue eyes; the head and torso of a manjoined to the palomino body of a horse.

This is Firenze,' said Dumbledore happily to a thunderstruck Umbridge. 'I think you'll findhim suitable.'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

— CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN —

The Centaur and the SneakTil bet you wish you hadn't given up Divination now, don't you, Hermione?' asked Parvati,smirking.

It was breakfast time, two days after the sacking of Professor Trelawney, and Parvati wascurling her eyelashes around her wand and examining the effect in the back of her spoon.

They were to have their first lesson with Firenze that morning.

'Not really' said Hermione indifferently, who was reading the Daily Prophet. 'I've never reallyliked horses.'

She turned a page of the newspaper and scanned its columns.

'He's not a horse, he's a centaur!' said Lavender, sounding shocked.

'A gorgeous centaur…' sighed Parvati.

'Either way, he's still got four legs,' said Hermione coolly. 'Anyway I thought you two were allupset that Trelawney had gone?'

'We are!' Lavender assured her. 'We went up to her office to see her; we took her somedaffodils - not the honking ones that Sprout's got, nice ones.'

'How is she?' asked Harry.

'Not very good, poor thing,' said Lavender sympathetically. 'She was crying and saying she'drather leave the castle for ever than stay here where Umbridge is, and I don't blame her,Umbridge was horrible to her, wasn't she?'

'I've got a feeling Umbridge has only just started being horrible,' said Hermione darkly.

'Impossible,' said Ron, who was tucking into a large plate of eggs and bacon. 'She can't get anyworse than she's been already.'

'You mark my words, she's going to want revenge on Dumbledore for appointing a newteacher without consulting her,' said Hermione, closing the newspaper. 'Especially anotherpart-human. You saw the look on her face when she saw Firenze.'

After breakfast Hermione departed for her Arithmancy class as Harry and Ron followedParvati and Lavender into the Entrance Hall, heading for Divination.

Aren't we going up to North Tower?' asked Ron, looking puzzled, as Parvati bypassed themarble staircase.

Parvati looked at him scornfully over her shoulder.

'How d'you expect Firenze to climb that ladder? We're in classroom eleven now, it was on thenoticeboard yesterday.'

Classroom eleven was on the ground floor along the corridor leading off the Entrance

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Hallfrom the opposite side to the Great Hall. Harry knew it was one of those classrooms that werenever used regularly, and therefore had the slightly neglected feeling of a cupboard orstoreroom. When he entered it right behind Ron, and found himself in the middle of a forestclearing, he was therefore momentarily stunned.

'What the -?'

The classroom floor had become springily mossy and trees were growing out of it; their leafybranches fanned across the ceiling and windows, so that the room was full of slanting shaftsof soft, dappled, green light. The students who had already arrived were sitting on the earthyfloor with their backs resting against tree trunks or boulders, arms wrapped around theirknees or folded tightly across their chests, and all looking rather nervous. In the middle of theclearing, where there were no trees, stood Firenze.

'Harry Potter,' he said, holding out a hand when Harry entered.

'Er - hi,' said Harry, shaking hands with the centaur, who surveyed him unblinkingly throughthose astonishingly blue eyes but did not smile. 'Er - good to see you.'

'And you,' said the centaur, inclining his white-blond head. 'It was foretold that we wouldmeet again.'

Harry noticed there was the shadow of a hoof-shaped bruise on Firenze's chest. As he turnedto join the rest of the class on the ground, he saw they were all looking at him in awe,apparently deeply impressed that he was on speaking terms with Firenze, whom they seemedto find intimidating.

When the door was closed and the last student had sat down on a tree stump beside thewastepaper basket, Firenze gestured around the room.

'Professor Dumbledore has kindly arranged this classroom for us,' said Firenze, wheneveryone had settled down, 'in imitation of my natural habitat. I would have preferred toteach you in the Forbidden Forest, which was - until Monday - my home… but that is nolonger possible.'

'Please - er - sir -' said Parvati breathlessly, raising her hand, '- why not? We've been in therewith Hagrid, we're not frightened!'

'It is not a question of your bravery,' said Firenze, 'but of my position. I cannot return to theForest. My herd has banished me.'

'Herd?' said Lavender in a confused voice, and Harry knew she was thinking of cows. 'What - oh!'

Comprehension dawned on her face. 'There are more of youT she said, stunned.

'Did Hagrid breed you, like the Thestrals?' asked Dean eagerly.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Firenze turned his head very slowly to face Dean, who seemed to realise at once that he hadsaid something very offensive.

'I didn't - I meant - sorry' he finished in a hushed voice.

'Centaurs are not the servants or playthings of humans,' said Firenze quietly. There was apause, then Parvati raised her hand again.

'Please, sir… why have the other centaurs banished you?'

'Because I have agreed to work for Professor Dumbledore,' said Firenze. 'They see this as abetrayal of our kind.'

Harry remembered how, nearly four years ago, the centaur Bane had shouted at Firenze forallowing Harry to ride to safety on his back; he had called him a 'common mule'. Hewondered whether it had been Bane who had kicked Firenze in the chest.

'Let us begin,' said Firenze. He swished his long palomino tail, raised his hand towards theleafy canopy overhead, then lowered it slowly, and as he did so, the light in the roomdimmed, so that they now seemed to be sitting in a forest clearing by twilight, and starsappeared on the ceiling. There were oofis and gasps and Ron said audibly, 'Blimey!'

'Lie back on the floor,' said Firenze in his calm voice, 'and observe the heavens. Here is written, for those who can see, the fortune of our races.'

Harry stretched out on his back and gazed upwards at the ceiling. A twinkling red starwinked at him from overhead.

'I know that you have learned the names of the planets and their moons in Astronomy,' saidFirenze's calm voice, 'and that you have mapped the stars' progress through the heavens.

Centaurs have unravelled the mysteries of these movements over centuries. Our findingsteach us that the future may be glimpsed in the sky above us -'

'Professor Trelawney did astrology with us!' said Parvati excitedly, raising her hand in frontof her so that it stuck up in the air as she lay on her back. 'Mars causes accidents and burnsand things like that, and when it makes an angle to Saturn, like now -' she drew a right-anglein the air above her '- that means people need to be extra careful when handling hot things -'

That,' said Firenze calmly, 'is human nonsense.'

Parvati's hand fell limply to her side.

Trivial hurts, tiny human accidents,' said Firenze, as his hooves thudded over the mossy floor.

These are of no more significance than the scurryings of ants to the wide universe, and areunaffected by planetary movements.'

'Professor Trelawney -' began Parvati, in a hurt and indignant voice.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'- is a human,' said Firenze simply. 'And is therefore blinkered and fettered by the limitationsof your kind.'

Harry turned his head very slightly to look at Parvati. She looked very offended, as didseveral of the people surrounding her.

'Sybill Trelawney may have Seen, I do not know,' continued Firenze, and Harry heard theswishing of his tail again as he walked up and down before them, 'but she wastes her time, inthe main, on the self-flattering nonsense humans call fortune-telling. I, however, am here toexplain the wisdom of centaurs, which is impersonal and impartial. We watch the skies forthe great tides of evil or change that are sometimes marked there. It may take ten years to besure of what we are seeing.'

Firenze pointed to the red star directly above Harry.

'In the past decade, the indications have been that wizardkind is living through nothing morethan a brief calm between two wars. Mars, bringer of battle, shines brightly above us, suggesting that the fight must soon break out again. How soon, centaurs may attempt todivine by the burning of certain herbs and leaves, by the observation of fume and flame…'

It was the most unusual lesson Harry had ever attended. They did indeed burn sage andmallowsweet there on the classroom floor, and Firenze told them to look for certain shapesand symbols in the pungent fumes, but he seemed perfectly unconcerned that not one of themcould see any of the signs he described, telling them that humans were hardly ever good atthis, that it took centaurs years and years to become competent, and finished by telling themthat it was foolish to put too much faith in such things, anyway, because even centaurssometimes read them wrongly. He was nothing like any human teacher Harry had ever had.

His priority did not seem to be to teach them what he knew, but rather to impress upon themthat nothing, not even centaurs' knowledge, was foolproof.

'He's not very definite on anything, is he?' said Ron in a low voice, as they put out theirmallowsweet fire. 'I mean, I could do with a few more details about this war we're about tohave, couldn't you?'

The bell rang right outside the classroom door and everyone jumped; Harry had completelyforgotten they were still inside the castle, and quite convinced that he was really in the Forest.

The class filed out, looking slightly perplexed.

Harry and Ron were on the point of following them when Firenze called, 'Harry Potter, aword, please.'

Harry turned. The centaur advanced a little towards him. Ron hesitated.

'You may stay,' Firenze told him. 'But close the door, please.' . Ron hastened to obey.
'Harry Potter, you are a friend of Hagrid's, are you not?' said the .centaur.
'Yes,' said Harry.
Then give him a warning from me. His attempt is not working. He would do better toabandon it.'
'His attempt is not working?' Harry repeated blankly.
'And he would do better to abandon it,' said Firenze, nodding. 'I would warn Hagrid myself,but I am banished - it would be unwise for me to go too near the Forest now - Hagrid hastroubles enough, without a centaurs' battle.'

'But - what's Hagrid attempting to do?' said Harry nervously.
Firenze surveyed Harry impassively.
'Hagrid has recently rendered me a great service,' said Firenze, 'and he has long since earnedmy respect for the care he shows all living creatures. 1 shall not betray his secret. But he mustbe brought to his senses. The attempt is not working. Tell him, Harry Potter. Good-day to you.'
*The happiness Harry had felt in the aftermath of The Quibbler interview had long sinceevaporated. As a dull March blurred into a squally April, his life seemed to have become onelong series of worries and problems again.
Umbridge had continued attending all Care of Magical Creatures lessons, so it had been verydifficult to deliver Firenzes warning to Hagrid. At last, Harry had managed it by pretendinghe'd lost his copy of Fantastic Beasts and Where to Find Them, and doubling back after class oneday. When he'd repeated Firenzes words, Hagrid gazed at him for a moment through hispuffy, blackened eyes, apparently taken aback. Then he seemed to pull himself together.
'Nice bloke, Firenze,' he said gruffly, 'but he don' know what he's talkin' abou' on this. Theattemp's comin' on fine.'
'Hagrid, what're you up to?' asked Harry seriously. 'Because you've got to be careful,Umbridge has already sacked Trelawney and, if you ask me, she's on a roll. If you're doinganything you shouldn't be, you'll be -'
There's things more importan' than keepin' a job,' said Hagrid, though his hands shookslightly as he said this and a basin full of Knarl droppings crashed to the floor. 'Don' worryabou' me, Harry jus' get along now, there's a good lad.'
Harry had no choice but to leave Hagrid mopping up the dung all over his floor, but he feltthoroughly dispirited as he trudged back up to the castle.
Meanwhile, as the teachers and Hermione persisted in reminding them, the OWLs weredrawing ever nearer. All the fifth-years were suffering from stress to some degree, butHannah Abbott became the first to receive a Calming Draught from Madam Pomfrey after sheburst into tears during Herbology and sobbed that she was too stupid to take exams andwanted to leave school now.

If it had not been for the DA lessons, Harry thought he would have been extremely unhappy.

He sometimes felt he was living for the hours he spent in the Room of Requirement, working hard but thoroughly enjoying himself at the same time, swelling with pride as he lookedaround at his fellow DA members and saw how far they had come. Indeed, Harry sometimeswondered how Umbridge was going to react when all the members of the DA received'Outstanding' in their Defence Against the Dark Arts OWLs.

They had finally started work on Patronuses, which everybody had been very keen topractise, though, as Harry kept reminding them, producing a Patronus in the middle of abrightly lit classroom when they were not under threat was very different from producing itwhen confronted by something like a Dementor.

'Oh, don't be such a killjoy,' said Cho brightly, watching her silvery swan-shaped Patronussoar around the Room of Requirement during their last lesson before Easter. They're so pretty!'

They're not supposed to be pretty, they're supposed to protect you,' said Harry patiently.

'What we really need is a Boggart or something; that's how 1 learned, I had to conjure aPatronus while the Boggart was pretending to be a Dementor -'

'But that would be really scary!' said Lavender, who was shooting puffs of silver vapour outof the end of her wand. 'And I still -can't - do it!' she added angrily.

Neville was having trouble, too. His face was screwed up in concentration, but only feeblewisps of silver smoke issued from his wand tip.

'You've got to think of something happy,' Harry reminded him.

'I'm trying,' said Neville miserably, who was trying so hard his round face was actuallyshining with sweat.

'Harry, I think I'm doing it!' yelled Seamus, who had been brought along to his first ever DAmeeting by Dean. 'Look - ah -it's gone… but it was definitely something hairy, Harry!'

Hermione's Patronus, a shining silver otter, was gambolling around her.

They are sort of nice, aren't they?' she said, looking at it fondly.

The door of the Room of Requirement opened, and closed. Harry looked round to see whohad entered, but there did not seem to be anybody there. It was a few moments before herealised that the people close to the door had fallen silent. Next thing he knew, something wastugging at his robes somewhere near the knee. He looked down and saw, to his very greatastonishment, Dobby the house-elf peering up at him from beneath his usual eight woollyhats.

'Hi, Dobby!' he said. 'What are you - What's wrong?'
The elf's eyes were wide with terror and he was shaking. The members of the DA closest toHarry had fallen silent; everybody in the room was watching Dobby. The few Patronusespeople had managed to conjure faded away into silver mist, leaving the room looking muchdarker than before.
'Harry Potter, sir…' squeaked the elf, trembling from head to foot, 'Harry Potter, sir… Dobbyhas come to warn you… but the house-elves have been warned not to tell…'
He ran head-first at the wall. Harry, who had some experience ofDobbys habits of selfpunishment,made to seize him, but Dobby merely bounced off the stone, cushioned by hiseight hats. Hermione and a few of the other girls let out squeaks of fear and sympathy.
'What's happened, Dobby?' Harry asked, grabbing the elf's tiny arm and holding him awayfrom anything with which he might seek to hurt himself.
'Harry Potter… she… she…"
Dobby hit himself hard on the nose with his free fist. Harry seized that, too.
'Who's "she", Dobby?'
But he thought he knew; surely only one 'she' could induce such fear in Dobby? The elflooked up at him, slightly cross-eyed, and mouthed wordlessly.
'Umbridge?' asked Harry, horrified.
Dobby nodded, then tried to bang his head on Harry's knees. Harry held him at arm's length.
'What about her? Dobby - she hasn't found out about this -about us - about the DA?'
He read the answer in the elf's stricken face. His hands held fast by Harry, the elf tried to kickhimself and fell to the floor.
'Is she coming?' Harry asked quietly.
Dobby let out a howl, and began beating his bare feet hard on the floor.
'Yes, Harry Potter, yes!'

Harry straightened up and looked around at the motionless, terrified people gazing at thethrashing elf.
'WHAT ARE YOU WAITING FOR?' Harry bellowed. 'RUN!'
They all pelted towards the exit at once, forming a scrum at the door, then people burstthrough. Harry could hear them sprinting along the corridors and hoped they had the sensenot to try and make it all the way to their dormitories. It was only ten to nine; if they just tookrefuge in the library or the Owlery, which were both nearer -

'Harry, come on!' shrieked Hermione from the centre of the knot of people now fighting to getout.

He scooped up Dobby, who was still attempting to do himself serious injury, and ran with theelf in his arms to join the back of the queue.

'Dobby - this is an order - get back down to the kitchen with the other elves and, if she asksyou whether you warned me, lie and say no!' said Harry. 'And I forbid you to hurt yourself!'

he added, dropping the elf as he made it over the threshold at last and slammed the doorbehind him.

Thank you, Harry Potter!' squeaked Dobby, and he streaked off. Harry glanced left and right,the others were all moving so fast he caught only glimpses of flying heels at either end of thecorridor before they vanished; he started to run right; there was a boys' bathroom up ahead,he could pretend he'd been in there all the time if he could just reach it -

'AAARGH!'

Something caught him around the ankles and he fell spectacularly, skidding along on hisfront for six feet before coming to a halt. Someone behind him was laughing. He rolled overon to his back and saw Malfoy concealed in a niche beneath an ugly dragon-shaped vase.

Trip Jinx, Potter!' he said. 'Hey Professor - PROFESSOR! I've got one!'

Umbridge came bustling round the far corner, breathless but wearing a delighted smile.

'It's him!' she said jubilantly at the sight of Harry on the floor. 'Excellent, Draco, excellent, oh,very good - fifty points to Slytherin! I'll take him from here… stand up, Potter!'

Harry got to his feet, glaring at the pair of them. He had never seen Umbridge looking sohappy. She seized his arm in a vice-like grip and turned, beaming broadly, to Malfoy.

'You hop along and see if you can round up any more of them, Draco,' she said. Tell the othersto look in the library - anybody out of breath - check the bathrooms, Miss Parkinson can dothe girls' ones - off you go - and you,' she added in her softest, most dangerous voice, asMalfoy walked away, 'you can come with me to the Headmasters office, Potter.'

They were at the stone gargoyle within minutes. Harry wondered how many of the othershad been caught. He thought of Ron - Mrs Weasley would kill him - and of how Hermionewould feel if she was expelled before she could take her OWLs. And it had been Seamus'svery first meeting… and Neville had been getting so good…

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Fizzing Whizzbee,' sang Umbridge; the stone gargoyle jumped aside, the wall behind splitopen, and they ascended the moving stone staircase. They reached the polished door with thegriffin knocker, but Umbridge did not bother to knock, she strode straight inside, still holdingtight to Harry.

The office was full of people. Dumbledore was sitting behind his desk, his expression serene,the tips of his long fingers together. Professor McGonagall stood rigidly beside him, her faceextremely tense. Cornelius Fudge, Minister for Magic, was rocking backwards and forwardson his toes beside the fire, apparently immensely pleased with the situation; KmgsleyShacklebolt and a tough-looking wizard with very short wiry hair whom Harry did notrecognise, were positioned either side of the door like guards, and the freckled, bespectacledform of Percy Weasley hovered excitedly beside the wall, a quill and a heavy scroll ofparchment in his hands, apparently poised to take notes.

The portraits of old headmasters and headmistresses were not shamming sleep tonight. All ofthem were alert and serious, watching what was happening below them. As Harry entered, afew flitted into neighbouring frames and whispered urgently into their neighbour's ear.

Harry pulled himself free of Umbridge's grasp as the door swung shut behind them.

Cornelius Fudge was glaring at him with a kind of vicious satisfaction on his face.

'Well,' he said. 'Well, well, well…"

Harry replied with the dirtiest look he could muster. His heart drummed madly inside him,but his brain was oddly cool and clear.

'He was heading back to Gryffindor Tower,' said Umbridge. There was an indecentexcitement in her voice, the same callous pleasure Harry had heard as she watched ProfessorTrelawney dissolving with misery in the Entrance Hall. The Malfoy boy cornered him.'

'Did he, did he?' said Fudge appreciatively. 'I must remember to tell Lucius. Well, Potter… Iexpect you know why you are here?'

Harry fully intended to respond with a defiant 'yes': his mouth had opened and the word washalf-formed when he caught sight of Dumbledore's face. Dumbledore was not lookingdirectly at Harry - his eyes were fixed on a point just over his shoulder - but as Harry stared athim, he shook his head a fraction of an inch to each side.

Harry changed direction mid-word.

'Ye—no.'

'I beg your pardon?' said Fudge.

'No,' said Harry, firmly.

'You don't know why you are here?'

'No, I don't,' said Harry.

Fudge looked incredulously from Harry to Professor Umbridge. Harry took advantage of hismomentary inattention to steal another quick look at Dumbledore, who gave the carpet thetiniest of nods and the shadow of a wink.

'So you have no idea,' said Fudge, in a voice positively sagging with sarcasm, 'why ProfessorUmbridge has brought you to this office? You are not aware that you have broken any schoolrules?'

'School rules?' said Harry. 'No.'

'Or Ministry Decrees?' amended Fudge angrily.

'Not that I'm aware of,' said Harry blandly.

His heart was still hammering very fast. It was almost worth telling these lies to watch Fudgesblood pressure rising, but he could not see how on earth he would get away with them; ifsomebody had tipped off Umbridge about the DA then he, the leader, might as well bepacking his trunk right now.

'So, it's news to you, is it,' said Fudge, his voice now thick with anger, 'that an illegal studentorganisation has been discovered within this school?'

'Yes, it is,' said Harry, hoisting an unconvincing look of innocent surprise on to his face.

'I think, Minister,' said Umbridge silkily from beside him, 'we might make better progress if Ifetch our informant.'

'Yes, yes, do,' said Fudge, nodding, and he glanced maliciously at Dumbledore as Umbridgeleft the room. There's nothing like a good witness, is there, Dumbledore?'

'Nothing at all, Cornelius,' said Dumbledore gravely, inclining his head.

There was a wait of several minutes, in which nobody looked at each other, then Harry heardthe door open behind him. Umbridge moved past him into the room, gripping by theshoulder Cho's curly-haired friend, Marietta, who was hiding her face in her hands.

'Don't be scared, dear, don't be frightened,' said Professor Umbridge softly, patting her on theback, 'it's quite all right, now. You have done the right thing. The Minister is very pleasedwith you. He'll be telling your mother what a good girl you've been.

Marietta's mother, Minister,' she added, looking up at Fudge, 'is Madam Edgecombe from theDepartment of Magical Transportation, Floo Network office - she's been helping us police theHogwarts fires, you know.'

'Jolly good, jolly good!' said Fudge heartily. 'Like mother, like daughter, eh? Well, come on,now, dear, look up, don't be shy, let's hear what you've got to - galloping gargoyles!'

As Marietta raised her head, Fudge leapt backwards in shock, nearly landing himself in thefire. He cursed, and stamped on the hem of his cloak which had started to smoke. Mariettagave a wail and pulled the neck of her robes right up to her eyes, but not before everyone hadseen that her face was horribly disfigured by a series of close-set purple pustules that hadspread across her nose and cheeks to form the word 'SNEAK'.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Never mind the spots now, dear,' said Umbridge impatiently, 'just take your robes away fromyour mouth and tell the Minister -'

But Marietta gave another muffled wail and shook her head frantically.

'Oh, very well, you silly girl, I'll tell him,' snapped Umbridge. She hitched her sickly smileback on to her face and said, 'Well, Minister, Miss Edgecombe here came to my office shortlyafter dinner this evening and told me she had something she wanted to tell me. She said thatif 1 proceeded to a secret room on the seventh floor, sometimes known as the Room ofRequirement, I would find out something to my advantage. I questioned her a little furtherand she admitted that there was to be some kind of meeting there. Unfortunately, at that pointthis hex,' she waved impatiently at Marietta's concealed face, 'came into operation and upon catching sight of her face in my mirror the girl became too distressed to tell me any more.'

'Well, now,' said Fudge, fixing Marietta with what he evidently imagined was a kind andfatherly look, 'it is very brave of you, my dear, coming to tell Professor Umbridge. You didexactly the right thing. Now, will you tell me what happened at this meeting? What was itspurpose? Who was there?'

But Marietta would not speak; she merely shook her head again, her eyes wide and fearful.

'Haven't we got a counter-jinx for this?' Fudge asked Umbridge impatiently, gesturing atMarietta's face. 'So she can speak freely?'

'I have not yet managed to find one,' Umbridge admitted grudgingly, and Harry felt a surgeof pride in Hermione's jinxing ability. 'But it doesn't matter if she won't speak, I can take upthe story from here.

'You will remember, Minister, that I sent you a report back in October that Potter had met anumber of fellow students in the Hog's Head in Hogsmeade -'

'And what is your evidence for that?' cut in Professor McGonagall.

'I have testimony from Willy Widdershins, Minerva, who happened to be in the bar at thetime. He was heavily bandaged, it is true, but his hearing was quite unimpaired,' saidUmbridge smugly. 'He heard every word Potter said and hastened straight to the school toreport to me -'

'Oh, so that's why he wasn't prosecuted for setting up all those regurgitating toilets!' saidProfessor McGonagall, raising her eyebrows. 'What an interesting insight into our justicesystem!'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Blatant corruption!' roared the portrait of the corpulent, red-nosed wizard on the wall behindDumbledore's desk. The Ministry did not cut deals with petty criminals in my day, no sir,they did not!'

Thank you, Fortescue, that will do,' said Dumbledore softly.

The purpose of Potter's meeting with these students,' continued Professor Umbridge, 'was topersuade them to join an illegal society, whose aim was to learn spells and curses the Ministryhas decided are inappropriate for school-age -'

'I think you'll find you're wrong there, Dolores,' said Dumbledore quietly, peering at her overthe half-moon spectacles perched halfway down his crooked nose.

Harry stared at him. He could not see how Dumbledore was going to talk him out of this one;

if Willy Widdershins had indeed heard every word he had said in the Hog's Head there wassimply no escaping it.

'Oho!' said Fudge, bouncing up and down on the balls of his feet again. 'Yes, do let's hear thelatest cock-and-bull story designed to pull Potter out of trouble! Go on, then, Dumbledore, goon -

Willy Widdershins was lying, was he? Or was it Potters identical twin in the Hog's Head thatday? Or is there the usual simple explanation involving a reversal of time, a dead man comingback to life and a couple of invisible Dementors?'

Percy Weasley let out a hearty laugh.

'Oh, very good, Minister, very good!'

Harry could have kicked him. Then he saw, to his astonishment, that Dumbledore wassmiling gently, too.

'Cornelius, I do not deny - and nor, I am sure, does Harry - -that he was in the Hog's Headthat day, nor that he was trying to recruit students to a Defence Against the Dark Arts group.

I am merely pointing out that Dolores is quite wrong to suggest that such a group was, at thattime, illegal. If you remember, the Ministry Decree banning all student societies was not putinto effect until two days after Harrys Hogsmeade meeting, so he was not breaking any rulesat all in the Hog's Head.'

Percy looked as though he had been struck in the face by something very heavy. Fudgeremained motionless in mid-bounce, his mouth hanging open.

Umbridge recovered first. :

'That's all very fine, Headmaster,' she said, smiling sweetly, 'but we are now nearly sixmonths on from the introduction of Educational Decree Number Twenty-four. If the firstmeeting was not illegal, all those that have happened since most certainly are.'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Well,' said Dumbledore, surveying her with polite interest over the top of his interlockedfingers, 'they certainly would be, if they had continued after the Decree came into effect. Doyou have any evidence that any such meetings continued?'

As Dumbledore spoke, Harry heard a rustle behind him and rather thought Kingsley whispered something. He could have sworn, too, that he felt something brush against hisside, a gentle something like a draught or bird wings, but looking down he saw nothing there.

'Evidence?' repeated Umbridge, with that horrible wide toad-like smile. 'Have you not beenlistening, Dumbledore? Why do you think Miss Edgecombe is here?'

'Oh, can she tell us about six months' worth of meetings?' saidDumbledore, raising his eyebrows. 'I was under the impression that she was merely reportinga meeting tonight.'

'Miss Edgecombe,' said Umbridge at once, 'tell us how long these meetings have been goingon, dear. You can simply nod or shake your head, I'm sure that won't make the spots worse.

Have they been happening regularly over the last six months?'

Harry felt a horrible plummeting in his stomach. This was it, they had hit a dead end of solidevidence that not even Dumbledore would be able to shift aside.

'Just nod or shake your head, dear,' Umbridge said coaxingly to Marietta, 'come on, now, thatwon't re-activate the jinx.'

Everyone in the room was gazing at the top of Marietta's face. Only her eyes were visiblebetween the pulled-up robes and her curly fringe. Perhaps it was a trick of the firelight, buther eyes looked oddly blank. And then - to Harry's utter amazement -Marietta shook her head.

Umbridge looked quickly at Fudge, then back at Marietta.

'I don't think you understood the question, did you, dear? I'm asking whether you've beengoing to these meetings for the past six months? You have, haven't you?'

Again, Marietta shook her head.

'What do you mean by shaking your head, dear?' said Umbridge in a testy voice.

'I would have thought her meaning was quite clear,' said Professor McGonagall harshly, 'therehave been no secret meetings for the past six months. Is that correct, Miss Edgecombe?'

Marietta nodded.

'But there was a meeting tonight!' said Umbridge furiously. 'There was a meeting, MissEdgecombe, you told me about it, in the Room of Requirement! And Potter was the leader, was he not, Potter organised it, Potter - why are you shaking your head, girl?'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Well, usually when a person shakes their head,' said McGonagall coldly, 'they mean "no". Sounless Miss Edgecombe is using a form of sign-language as yet unknown to humans -'

Professor Umbridge seized Marietta, pulled her round to face her and began shaking her veryhard. A split second later Dumbledore was on his feet, his wand raised; Kingsley startedforwards andUmbridge leapt back from Marietta, waving her hands in the air as though they had beenburned.

'I cannot allow you to manhandle my students, Dolores,' said Dumbledore and, for the firsttime, he looked angry.

'You want to calm yourself, Madam Umbridge,' said Kingsley, in his deep, slow voice. 'Youdon't want to get yourself into trouble, now.'

'No,' said Umbridge breathlessly, glancing up at the towering figure of Kingsley. 'I mean, yes - you're right, Shacklebolt - I - I forgot myself.'

Marietta was standing exactly where Umbridge had released her. She seemed neitherperturbed by Umbridge's sudden attack, nor relieved by her release; she was still clutchingher robe up to her oddly blank eyes and staring straight ahead of her.

A sudden suspicion, connected to Kingsley's whisper and the thing he had felt shoot past him,sprang into Harry's mind.

'Dolores,' said Fudge, with the air of trying to settle something once and for all, 'the meetingtonight - the one we know definitely happened -'

'Yes,' said Umbridge, pulling herself together, 'yes… well, Miss Edgecombe tipped me off andI proceeded at once to the seventh floor, accompanied by certain trustworthy students, so as tocatch those in the meeting red-handed. It appears that they were forewarned of my arrival,however, because when we reached the seventh floor they were running in every direction. Itdoes not matter, however. I have all their names here, Miss Parkinson ran into the Room ofRequirement for me to see if they had left anything behind. We needed evidence and theroom provided.'

And to Harry's horror, she withdrew from her pocket the list of names that had been pinnedupon the Room of Requirement's wall and handed it to Fudge.

The moment I saw Potter's name on the list, I knew what we were dealing with,' she saidsoftly.

'Excellent,' said Fudge, a smile spreading across his face, 'excellent, Dolores. And… bythunder…'

He looked up at Dumbledore, who was still standing beside Marietta, his wand held looselyin his hand.

'See what they've named themselves?' said Fudge quietly. 'Dumbledore's Army.'

Dumbledore reached out and took the piece of parchment from Fudge. He gazed at theheading scribbled by Hermione months before and for a moment seemed unable to speak.

Then he looked up, smiling.

'Well, the game is up,' he said simply. 'Would you like a written confession from me,Cornelius - or will a statement before these witnesses suffice?'

Harry saw McGonagall and Kingsley look at each other. There was fear in both faces. He didnot understand what was going on, and nor, apparently, did Fudge.

'Statement?' said Fudge slowly. 'What - I don't -?'

'Dumbledore's Army, Cornelius,' said Dumbledore, still smiling as he waved the list of namesbefore Fudge's face. 'Not Potter's Army. Dumbledore's Army.'

'But - but -'

Understanding blazed suddenly in Fudges face. He took a horrified step backwards, yelped,and jumped out of the fire again.

'You?' he whispered, stamping again on his smouldering cloak.

That's right,' said Dumbledore pleasantly.

'You organised this?'

'I did,' said Dumbledore.

'You recruited these students for - for your army?'

Tonight was supposed to be the first meeting,' said Dumbledore, nodding. 'Merely to seewhether they would be interested in joining me. I see now that it was a mistake to invite MissEdgecombe, of course.'

Marietta nodded. Fudge looked from her to Dumbledore, his chest swelling.

Then you have been plotting against me!' he yelled.

That's right,' said Dumbledore cheerfully.

'NO!' shouted Harry.

Kingsley flashed a look of warning at him, McGonagall widened her eyes threateningly, but ithad suddenly dawned on Harry what Dumbledore was about to do, and he could not let ithappen.

'No — Professor Dumbledore -!'

'Be quiet, Harry, or I am afraid you will have to leave my office,' said Dumbledore calmly.

'Yes, shut up, Potter!' barked Fudge, who was still ogling Dumbledore with a kind of horrifieddelight. 'Well, well, well - I came here tonight expecting to expel Potter and instead -'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Instead you get to arrest me,' said Dumbledore, smiling. 'It's like losing a Knut and finding aGalleon, isn't it?'

'Weasley!' cried Fudge, now positively quivering with delight, 'Weasley, have you written itall down, everything he's said, his confession, have you got it?'

'Yes, sir, 1 think so, sir!' said Percy eagerly, whose nose was splattered with ink from thespeed of his note-taking.

The bit about how he's been trying to build up an army against the Ministry, how he's beenworking to destabilise me?'

'Yes, sir, I've got it, yes!' said Percy, scanning his notes joyfully.

'Very well, then,' said Fudge, now radiant with glee, 'duplicate your notes, Weasley, and senda copy to the Daily Prophet at once. If we send a fast owl we should make the morning edition!'

Percy dashed from the room, slamming the door behind him, and Fudge turned back toDumbledore. 'You will now be escorted back to the Ministry, where you will be formally charged, then sent to Azkaban to await trial!'

'Ah,' said Dumbledore gently, 'yes. Yes, I thought we might hit that little snag.'

'Snag?' said Fudge, his voice still vibrating with joy. 'I see no snag, Dumbledore!'

'Well,' said Dumbledore apologetically, 'I'm afraid I do.'

'Oh, really?'

'Well - it's just that you seem to be labouring under the delusion that I am going to - what isthe phrase? - come quietly. I am afraid I am not going to come quietly at all, Cornelius. I haveabsolutely no intention of being sent to Azkaban. I could break out, of course - but what awaste of time, and frankly, I can think of a whole host of things I would rather be doing.'

Umbridge's face was growing steadily redder; she looked as though she was being filled withboiling water. Fudge stared at Dumbledore with a very silly expression on his face, as thoughheIhad just been stunned by a sudden blow and could not quite believe it had happened. Hemade a small choking noise, then looked round at Kingsley and the man with short grey hair,who alone of everyone in the room had remained entirely silent so far. The latter gave Fudgea reassuring nod and moved forwards a little, away from the wall. Harry saw his hand drift,almost casually, towards his pocket.

'Don't be silly, Dawlish,' said Dumbledore kindly. 'I'm sure you are an excellent Auror - Iseem to remember that you achieved "Outstanding" in all your NEWTs — but if you attemptto — er — bring me in by force, I will have to hurt you.'

The man called Dawlish blinked rather foolishly. He looked towards Fudge again, but thistime seemed to be hoping for a clue as to what to do next.

'So,' sneered Fudge, recovering himself, 'you intend to take on Dawlish, Shacklebolt, Doloresand myself single-handed, do you, Dumbledore?'

'Merlin's beard, no,' said Dumbledore, smiling, 'not unless you are foolish enough to force meto.'

'He will not be single-handed!' said Professor McGonagall loudly, plunging her hand inside her robes.

'Oh yes he will, Minerva!' said Dumbledore sharply. 'Hogwarts needs you!'

'Enough of this rubbish!' said Fudge, pulling out his own wand. 'Dawlish! Shacklebolt! Takehim!'

A streak of silver light flashed around the room; there was a bang like a gunshot and the floortrembled; a hand grabbed the scruff of Harry's neck and forced him down on the floor as asecond silver flash went off; several of the portraits yelled, Fawkes screeched and a cloud ofdust filled the air. Coughing in the dust, Harry saw a dark figure fall to the ground with acrash in front of him; there was a shriek and a thud and somebody cried, 'No!'; then there wasthe sound of breaking glass, frantically scuffling footsteps, a groan… and silence.

Harry struggled around to see who was half-strangling him and saw Professor McGonagallcrouched beside him; she had forced both him and Marietta out of harm's way. Dust was stillfloating gently down through the air on to them. Panting slightly, Harry saw a very tall figuremoving towards them.

'Are you all right?' Dumbledore asked.

'Yes!' said Professor McGonagall, getting up and dragging Harry and Marietta with her.

The dust was clearing. The wreckage of the office loomed into view: Dumbledore's desk hadbeen overturned, all of the spindly tables had been knocked to the floor, their silverinstruments in pieces. Fudge, Umbridge, Kingsley and Dawlish lay motionless on the floor.

Fawkes the phoenix soared in wide circles above them, singing softly.

'Unfortunately, I had to hex Kingsley too, or it would have looked very suspicious,' saidDumbledore in a low voice. 'He was remarkably quick on the uptake, modifying MissEdgecombe's memory like that while everyone was looking the other way - thank him, for me,won't you, Minerva?

'Now, they will all awake very soon and it will be best if they do not know that we had timeto communicate - you must act as though no time has passed, as though they were merelyknocked to the ground, they will not remember -'

'Where will you go, Dumbledore?' whispered Professor McGonagall. 'Grimmauld Place?'
'Oh no,' said Dumbledore, with a grim smile, 'I am not leaving to go into hiding. Fudge willsoon wish he'd never dislodged me from Hogwarts, I promise you.'

'Professor Dumbledore…' Harry began.
He did not know what to say first: how sorry he was that he had started the DA in the firstplace and caused all this trouble, or how terrible he felt that Dumbledore was leaving to savehim from expulsion? But Dumbledore cut him off before he could say another word.
'Listen to me, Harry,' he said urgently. 'You must study Occlumency as hard as you can, doyou understand me? Do everything Professor Snape tells you and practise it particularlyevery night before sleeping so that you can close your mind to bad dreams - you willunderstand why soon enough, but you must promise me -'
The man called Dawlish was stirring. Dumbledore seized Harry's wrist.
'Remember - close your mind -'
But as Dumbledore's fingers closed over Harrys skin, a pain shot through the scar on hisforehead and he felt again that terrible, snakelike longing to strike Dumbledore, to bite him, tohurt him -
'- you will understand,' whispered Dumbledore.
Fawkes circled the office and swooped low over him. Dumbledore released Harry, raised hishand and grasped the phoenix's long golden tail. There was a flash of fire and the pair of themwere gone.
'Where is he?' yelled Fudge, pushing himself up from the floor. 'Where is he?'
'I don't know!' shouted Kingsley, also leaping to his feet.
'Well, he can't have Disapparated!' cried Umbridge. 'You can't do it from inside this school -'
'The stairs!' cried Dawlish, and he flung himself upon the door, wrenched it open anddisappeared, followed closely by Kingsley and Umbridge. Fudge hesitated, then got slowly tohis feet, brushing dust from his front. There was a long and painful silence.
'Well, Minerva,' said Fudge nastily, straightening his torn shirtsleeve, 'I'm afraid this is theend of your friend Dumbledore.'
'You think so, do you?' said Professor McGonagall scornfully.
Fudge seemed not to hear her. He was looking around at the wrecked office. A few of the portraits hissed at him; one or two even made rude hand gestures.
'You'd better get those two off to bed,' said Fudge, looking back at Professor McGonagall witha dismissive nod towards Harry and Marietta.
Professor McGonagall said nothing, but marched Harry and Marietta to the door. As it swungclosed behind them, Harry heard Phineas Nigellus's voice.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'You know, Minister, I disagree with Dumbledore on many counts… but you cannot deny he'sgot style…'

— CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT —

Snape's Worst MemoryBY ORDER OF THE MINISTRY OF MAGICDolores Jane Umbridge (High Inquisitor) has replacedAlbus Dumbledore as Head of Hogwarts School ofWitchcraft and Wizardry.

The above is in accordance with Educational Decree Number Twenty-eight.

Signed: Cornelius Oswald Fudge, Minister for MagicThe notices had gone up all around the school overnight, but they did not explain how everysingle person within the castle seemed to know that Dumbledore had overcome two Aurors,the High Inquisitor, the Minister for Magic and his Junior Assistant to escape. No matterwhere Harry went within the castle, the sole topic of conversation was Dumbledore's flight,and though some of the details may have gone awry in the retelling (Harry overheard onesecond-year girl assuring another that Fudge was now lying in St Mungo's with a pumpkinfor a head) it was surprising how accurate the rest of their information was. Everybody knew,for instance, that Harry and Marietta were the only students to have witnessed the scene inDumbledore's office and, as Marietta was now in the hospital wing, Harry found himselfbesieged with requests to give a first-hand account.

'Dumbledore will be back before long,' said Ernie Macmillan confidently on the way backfrom Herbology, after listening intently to Harry's story. They couldn't keep him away in oursecond year and they won't be able to this time. The Fat Friar told me -' he dropped his voiceconspiratorially, so that Harry, Ron and Hermione had to lean closer to him to hear '- thatUmbridge tried to get back into his office last night after they'd searched the castle andgrounds for him. Couldn't get past the gargoyle. The Head's office has sealed itself againsther.' Ernie smirked. 'Apparently, she had a right little tantrum.'

'Oh, I expect she really fancied herself sitting up there in the Heads office,' said Hermioneviciously, as they walked up the stone steps into the Entrance Hall. 'Lording it over all theother teachers, the stupid puffed-up, power-crazy old -'

'Now, do you really want to finish that sentence, Granger?'

Draco Malfoy had slid out from behind the door, closely followed by Crabbe and Goyle. Hispale, pointed face was alight with malice.

'Afraid I'm going to have to dock a few points from Gryffindor and Hufflepuff,' he drawled.

'It's only teachers who can dock points from houses, Malfoy,' said Ernie at once.

'Yeah, we're prefects, too, remember?' snarled Ron.

'I know prefects can't dock points, Weasel King,' sneered Malfoy. Crabbe and Goyle sniggered.

'But members of the Inquisitorial Squad -'

The whatT said Hermione sharply.

The Inquisitorial Squad, Granger,' said Malfoy, pointing towards a tiny silver 'I on his robesjust beneath his prefect's badge. 'A select group of students who are supportive of theMinistry of Magic, hand-picked by Professor Umbridge. Anyway, members of theInquisitorial Squad do have the power to dock points… so, Granger, I'll have five from you forbeing rude about our new Headmistress. Macmillan, five for contradicting me. Five because Idon't like you, Potter. Weasley, your shirts untucked, so I'll have another five for that. Ohyeah, I forgot, you're a Mudblood, Granger, so ten off for that.'

Ron pulled out his wand, but Hermione pushed it away, whispering, 'Don't!'

'Wise move, Granger,' breathed Malfoy. 'New Head, new times… be good now, Potty… Weasel King…'

Laughing heartily, he strode away with Crabbe and Goyle.

'He was bluffing,' said Ernie, looking appalled. 'He can't be allowed to dock points… thatwould be ridiculous… it would completely undermine the prefect system.'

But Harry, Ron and Hermione had turned automatically towards the giant hour-glasses set inniches along the wall behind them, which recorded the house-points. Gryffindor andRavenclaw had been neck and neck in the lead that morning. Even as they watched, stonesflew upwards, reducing the amounts in the lower bulbs. In fact, the only glass that seemedunchanged was the emerald-filled one of Slytherin.

'Noticed, have you?' said Fred's voice.

He and George had just come down the marble staircase and joined Harry, Ron, Hermioneand Ernie in front of the hour-glasses.

'Malfoy just docked us all about fifty points,' said Harry furiously, as they watched severalmore stones fly upwards from the Gryffindor hour-glass.

'Yeah, Montague tried to do us during break,' said George.

'What do you mean, "tried"?' said Ron quickly.

'He never managed to get all the words out,' said Fred, 'due to the fact that we forced himhead-first into that Vanishing Cabinet on the first floor.'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Hermione looked very shocked.

'But you'll get into terrible trouble!'

'Not until Montague reappears, and that could take weeks, I dunno where we sent him,' saidFred coolly. 'Anyway… we've decided we don't care about getting into trouble any more.'

'Have you ever?' asked Hermione.

'Course we have,' said George. 'Never been expelled, have we?'

'We've always known where to draw the line,' said Fred.

'We might have put a toe across it occasionally,' said George.

'But we've always stopped short of causing real mayhem,' said Fred.

'But now?' said Ron tentatively.

'Well, now -' said George.

'- what with Dumbledore gone -' said Fred.

'- we reckon a bit of mayhem —' said George.

'— is exactly what our dear new Head deserves,' said Fred.

'You mustn't!' whispered Hermione. 'You really mustn't! She'd love a reason to expel you!'

'You don't get it, Hermione, do you?' said Fred, smiling at her. 'We don't care about stayingany more. We'd walk out right now if we weren't determined to do our bit for Dumbledorefirst. So, anyway,' he checked his watch, 'phase one is about to begin. I'd get in the Great Hallfor lunch, if I were you, that way the teachers will see you can't have had anything to do withit.'

'Anything to do with what?' said Hermione anxiously.

'You'll see,' said George. 'Run along, now.'

Fred and George turned away and disappeared into the swelling crowd descending the stairstowards lunch. Looking highly disconcerted, Ernie muttered something about unfinishedTransfiguration homework and scurried away.

'I think we should get out of here, you know,' said Hermione nervously. 'Just in case'Yeah, all right,' said Ron, and the three of them moved towards the doors to the Great Hall,but Harry had barely glimpsed the day's ceiling of scudding white clouds when somebodytapped him on the shoulder and, turning, he found himself almost nose-to-nose with Filch thecaretaker. He took several hasty steps backwards; Filch was best viewed at a distance.

The Headmistress would like to see you, Potter,' he leered.

'I didn't do it,' said Harry stupidly, thinking of whatever Fred and George were planning.

Filch's jowls wobbled with silent laughter.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Guilty conscience, eh?' he wheezed. 'Follow me.'

Harry glanced back at Ron and Hermione, who were both looking worried. He shrugged, andfollowed Filch back into the Entrance Hall, against the tide of hungry students.

Filch seemed to be in an extremely good mood; he hummed creakily under his breath as theyclimbed the marble staircase. As they reached the first landing he said, Things are changingaround here, Potter.'

'I've noticed,' said Harry coldly.

'Yerse… I've been telling Dumbledore for years and years he's too soft with you all,' said Filch,chuckling nastily. 'You filthy little beasts would never have dropped Stink Pellets if you'dknown I had it in my power to whip you raw, would you, now? Nobody would have thoughtof throwing Fanged Frisbees down the corridors if I could've strung you up by the ankles in my office, would they? But when Educational Decree Number Twenty-nine comes in, Potter,I'll be allowed to do them things… and she's asked the Minister to sign an order for theexpulsion of Peeves… oh, things are going to be very different around here with her in chargeUmbridge had obviously gone to some lengths to get Filch on her side, Harry thought, andthe worst of it was that he would probably prove an important weapon; his knowledge of theschool's secret passageways and hiding places was probably second only to that of theWeasley twins.

'Here we are,' he said, leering down at Harry as he rapped three times on ProfessorUmbridge's door and pushed it open. The Potter boy to see you, Ma'am.'

Umbridge's office, so very familiar to Harry from his many detentions, was the same as usualexcept for the large wooden block lying across the front of her desk on which golden lettersspelled the word: HEADMISTRESS. Also, his Firebolt and Fred and George's Cleansweeps,which he saw with a pang, were chained and padlocked to a stout iron peg in the wall behindthe desk.

Umbridge was sitting behind the desk, busily scribbling on some of her pink parchment, butshe looked up and smiled widely at their entrance.

Thank you, Argus,' she said sweetly.

'Not at all, Ma'am, not at all,' said Filch, bowing as low as his rheumatism would permit, andexiting backwards.

'Sit,' said Umbridge curtly, pointing towards a chair. Harry sat. She continued to scribble for afew moments. He watched some of the foul kittens gambolling around the plates over herhead, wondering what fresh horror she had in store for him.

'Well, now,' she said finally, setting down her quill and surveying him complacently, like atoad about to swallow a particularly juicy fly. 'What would you like to drink?'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'What?' said Harry, quite sure he had misheard her.

To drink, Mr Potter,' she said, smiling still more widely. Tea? Coffee? Pumpkin juice?'

As she named each drink, she gave her short wand a wave, and a cup or glass of it appearedon her desk.

'Nothing, thank you,' said Harry.

'I wish you to have a drink with me,' she said, her voice becoming dangerously sweet. 'Chooseone.'

'Fine… tea then,' said Harry, shrugging.

She got up and made quite a performance of adding milk with her back to him. She thenbustled around the desk with it, smiling in a sinisterly sweet fashion.

There,' she said, handing it to him. 'Drink it before it gets cold, won't you? Well, now, MrPotter… I thought we ought to have a little chat, after the distressing events of last night.'

He said nothing. She settled herself back into her seat and waited. When several longmoments had passed in silence, she said gaily, 'You're not drinking up!'

He raised the cup to his lips and then, just as suddenly, lowered it. One of the horrible paintedkittens behind Umbridge had great round blue eyes just like Mad-Eye Moody's magical oneand it had just occurred to Harry what Mad-Eye would say if he ever heard that Harry haddrunk anything offered by a known enemy.

'What's the matter?' said Umbridge, who was still watching him closely. 'Do you want sugar?'

'No,' said Harry.

He raised the cup to his lips again and pretended to take a sip, though keeping his mouthtightly closed. Umbridge's smile widened.

'Good,' she whispered. 'Very good. Now then…' She leaned forwards a little. 'Where is AlbusDumbledore?'

'No idea,' said Harry promptly.

'Drink up, drink up,' she said, still smiling. 'Now, Mr Potter, let us not play childish games. Iknow that you know where he has gone. You and Dumbledore have been in this togetherfrom the beginning. Consider your position, Mr Potter…'

'I don't know where he is,' Harry repeated.

He pretended to drink again. She was watching him very closely.

'Very well,' she said, though she looked displeased. 'In that case, you will kindly tell me thewhereabouts of Sirius Black.'

PUTCLUB BOOKS

Harry's stomach turned over and his hand holding the teacup shook so that it rattled in itssaucer. He tilted the cup to his mouth with his lips pressed together, so that some of the hotliquid trickled down on to his robes.

'I don't know,' he said, a little too quickly.

'Mr Potter,' said Umbridge, 'let me remind you that it was I who almost caught the criminalBlack in the Gryffindor fire in October. I know perfectly well it was you he was meeting and if1 had had any proof neither of you would be at large today, I promise you. I repeat, MrPotter… where is Sirius Black?'

'No idea,' said Harry loudly. 'Haven't got a clue.'

They stared at each other so long that Harry felt his eyes watering. Then Umbridge stood up.

'Very well, Potter, I will take your word for it this time, but be warned: the might of theMinistry stands behind me. All channels of communication in and out of this school are beingmonitored. A Floo Network Regulator is keeping watch over every fire in Hogwarts - exceptmy own, of course. My Inquisitorial Squad is opening and reading all owl post entering andleaving the castle. And Mr Filch is observing all secret passages in and out of the castle. If Ifind a shred of evidence…'

BOOM!

The very floor of the office shook. Umbridge slipped sideways, clutching her desk forsupport, and looking shocked.

'What was -?'

She was gazing towards the door. Harry took the opportunity to empty his almost-full cup oftea into the nearest vase of dried flowers. He could hear people running and screamingseveral floors below.

'Back to lunch you go, Potter!' cried Umbridge, raising her wand and dashing out of the office.

Harry gave her a few seconds' start, then hurried after her to see what the source of all theuproar was.

It was not difficult to find. One floor down, pandemonium reigned. Somebody (and Harryhad a very shrewd idea who) had set off what seemed to be an enormous crate of enchantedfireworks.

Dragons comprised entirely of green and gold sparks were soaring up and down thecorridors, emitting loud fiery blasts and bangs as they went; shocking-pink Catherine wheelsfive feet in diameter were whizzing lethally through the air like so many flying saucers;

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

rockets with long tails of brilliant silver stars were ricocheting off the walls; sparklers werewriting swear words in midair of their own accord; firecrackers were exploding like mineseverywhere Harry looked, and instead of burning themselves out, fading from sight orfizzling to a halt, these pyrotechnical miracles seemed to be gaining in energy and momentumthe longer he watched.

Filch and Umbridge were standing, apparently transfixed in horror, halfway down the stairs.

As Harry watched, one of the larger Catherine wheels seemed to decide that what it neededwas more room to manoeuvre; it whirled towards Umbridge and Filch with a sinister'wheeeeeeeeee'. They both yelled with fright and ducked, and it soared straight out of thewindow behind them and off across the grounds. Meanwhile, several of the dragons and alarge purple bat that was smoking ominously took advantage of the open door at the end ofthe corridor to escape towards the second floor.

'Hurry, Filch, hurry!' shrieked Umbridge, 'they'll be all over the school unless we dosomething - Stupefy]'

A jet of red light shot out of the end of her wand and hit one of the rockets. Instead of freezingin midair, it exploded with such force that it blasted a hole in a painting of a soppy-lookingwitch in the middle of a meadow; she ran for it just in time, reappearing seconds latersquashed into the next painting, where a couple of wizards playing cards stood up hastily tomake room for her.

'Don't Stun them, Filch!' shouted Umbridge angrily, for all the world as though it had been hisincantation.

'Right you are, Headmistress!' wheezed Filch, who as a Squib could no more have Stunned thefireworks than swallowed them. He dashed to a nearby cupboard, pulled out a broom andbegan swatting at the fireworks in midair; within seconds the head of the broom was ablaze.

Harry had seen enough; laughing, he ducked down low, ran to a door he knew was concealedbehind a tapestry a little way along the corridor and slipped through it to find Fred andGeorge hiding just behind it, listening to Umbridge and Filch's yells and quaking withsuppressed mirth.

'Impressive,' Harry said quietly, grinning. 'Very impressive… you'll put Dr Filibuster out ofbusiness, no problem…'

'Cheers,' whispered George, wiping tears of laughter from his face. 'Oh, I hope she tries Vanishing them next… they multiply by ten every time you try.'

The fireworks continued to burn and to spread all over the school that afternoon. Though theycaused plenty of disruption, particularly the firecrackers, the other teachers didn't seem tomind them very much.

'Dear, dear,' said Professor McGonagall sardonically, as one of the dragons soared around herclassroom, emitting loud bangs and exhaling flame. 'Miss Brown, would you mind runningalong to the Headmistress and informing her that we have an escaped firework in ourclassroom?'

The upshot of it all was that Professor Umbridge spent her first afternoon as Headmistressrunning all over the school answering the summonses of the other teachers, none of whomseemed able to rid their rooms of the fireworks without her. When the final bell rang and theywere heading back to Gryffindor Tower with their bags, Harry saw, with immensesatisfaction, a dishevelled and soot-blackened Umbridge tottering sweaty-faced fromProfessor Flitwick's classroom.

Thank you so much, Professor!' said Professor Flitwick in his squeaky little voice. 'I couldhave got rid of the sparklers myself, of course, but I wasn't sure whether or not I had theauthority.'

Beaming, he closed his classroom door in her snarling face.

Fred and George were heroes that night in the Gryffindor common room. Even Hermionefought her way through the excited crowd to congratulate them.

They were wonderful fireworks,' she said admiringly.

Thanks,' said George, looking both surprised and pleased. 'Weasleys' Wildfire Whiz-bangs. Only thing is, we used our whole stock; we're going to have to start again from scratch now.'

'It was worth it, though,' said Fred, who was taking orders from clamouring Gryffindors. 'Ifyou want to add your name to the waiting list, Hermione, it's five Galleons for your BasicBlaze box and twenty for the Deflagration Deluxe…'

Hermione returned to the table where Harry and Ron were sitting staring at their schoolbagsas though hoping their homework would spring out and start doing itself.

'Oh, why don't we have a night off?' said Hermione brightly, as a silver-tailed Weasley rocketzoomed past the window. 'After all, the Easter holidays start on Friday, we'll have plenty oftime then.'

'Are you feeling all right?' Ron asked, staring at her in disbelief.

'Now you mention it,' said Hermione happily,'d'you know… I think I'm feeling a bit… rebellious.'

Harry could still hear the distant bangs of escaped firecrackers when he and Ron went up tobed an hour later; and as he got undressed a sparkler floated past the tower, still resolutelyspelling out the word TOO'.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

He got into bed, yawning. With his glasses off, the occasional firework passing the windowhad become blurred, looking like sparkling clouds, beautiful and mysterious against the blacksky. He turned on to his side, wondering how Umbridge was feeling about her first day inDumbledore's job, and how Fudge would react when he heard that the school had spent mostof the day in a state of advanced disruption. Smiling to himself, Harry closed his eyes…

The whizzes and bangs of escaped fireworks in the grounds seemed to be growing moredistant… or perhaps he was simply speeding away from them…

He had fallen right into the corridor leading to the Department of Mysteries. He was speedingtowards the plain black door… let it open… let it open…

It did. He was inside the circular room lined with doors… he crossed it, placed his hand on anidentical door and it swung inwards…

Now he was in a long, rectangular room full of an odd mechanical clicking. There weredancing flecks of light on the walls but he did not pause to investigate… he had to go on…

There was a door at the far end… it, too, opened at his touch…

And now he was in a dimly lit room as high and wide as a church, full of nothing but rowsand rows of towering shelves, each laden with small, dusty, spun-glass spheres… now Harrysheart was beating fast with excitement… he knew where to go… he ran forwards, but hisfootsteps made no noise in the enormous, deserted room…

There was something in this room he wanted very, very much…

Something he wanted… or somebody else wanted…

His scar was hurting…

BANG!

Harry awoke instantly, confused and angry. The dark dormitory was full of the sound oflaughter.

'Cool!' said Seamus, who was silhouetted against the window. 'I think one of those Catherinewheels hit a rocket and it's like they mated, come and see!'

Harry heard Ron and Dean scramble out of bed for a better look. He lay quite still and silentwhile the pain in his scar subsided and disappointment washed over him. He felt as though awonderful treat had been snatched from him at the very last moment… he had got so closethat time.

Glittering pink and silver winged piglets were now soaring past the windows of GryffindorTower. Harry lay and listened to the appreciative whoops of Gryffindors in the dormitoriesbelow them. His stomach gave a sickening jolt as he remembered that he had

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Occlumency thefollowing evening.

*Harry spent the whole of the next day dreading what Snape was going to say if he found outhow much further into the Department of Mysteries Harry had penetrated during his lastdream. With a surge of guilt he realised that he had not practised Occlumency once since theirlast lesson: there had been too much going on since Dumbledore had left; he was sure hewould not have been able to empty his mind even if he had tried. He doubted, however,whether Snape would accept that excuse.

He attempted a little last-minute practice during classes that day, but it was no good.

Hermione kept asking him what was wrong whenever he fell silent trying to rid himself of allthought and emotion and, after all, the best moment to empty his brain was not while teacherswere firing revision questions at the class.

Resigned to the worst, he set off for Snape's office after dinner. Halfway across the EntranceHall, however, Cho came hurrying up to him.

'Over here,' said Harry, glad of a reason to postpone his meeting with Snape, and beckoningher across to the corner of the Entrance Hall where the giant hour-glasses stood. Gryffindor'swas now almost empty. 'Are you OK? Umbridge hasn't been asking you about the DA, hasshe?'

'Oh, no,' said Cho hurriedly. 'No, it was only… well, I just wanted to say… Harry, I neverdreamed Marietta would tell…'

'Yeah, well,' said Harry moodily. He did feel Cho might have chosen her friends a bit morecarefully; it was small consolation that the last he had heard, Marietta was still up in thehospital wing and Madam Pomfrey had not been able to make the slightest improvement toher pimples.

'She's a lovely person really,' said Cho. 'She just made a mistake -'

Harry looked at her incredulously.

'A lovely person who made a mistake? She sold us all out, including you!'

'Well… we all got away, didn't we?' said Cho pleadingly. 'You know, her mum works for theMinistry, it's really difficult for her -'

'Ron's dad works for the Ministry too!' Harry said furiously. 'And in case you hadn't noticed,he hasn't got sneak written across his face -'

That was a really horrible trick of Hermione Granger's,' said Cho fiercely. 'She should havetold us she'd jinxed that list -'

'I think it was a brilliant idea,' said Harry coldly. Cho flushed and her eyes grew brighter.

'Oh yes, I forgot - of course, if it was darling Hermione's idea -'

'Don't start crying again,' said Harry warningly.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'I wasn't going to!' she shouted.

'Yeah… well… good,' he said. I've got enough to cope with at the moment.'

'Go and cope with it then!' Cho said furiously, turning on her heel and stalking off.

Fuming, Harry descended the stairs to Snape's dungeon and, though he knew fromexperience how much easier it would be for Snape to penetrate his mind if he arrived angryand resentful, he succeeded in nothing but thinking of a few more things he should have saidto Cho about Marietta before reaching the dungeon door.

'You're late, Potter,' said Snape coldly, as Harry closed the door behind him.

Snape was standing with his back to Harry, removing, as usual, certain of his thoughts and placing them carefully in Dumbledores Pensieve. He dropped the last silvery strand into thestone basin and turned to face Harry.

'So,' he said. 'Have you been practising?'

'Yes,' Harry lied, looking carefully at one of the legs of Snape's desk.

'Well, we'll soon find out, won't we?' said Snape smoothly. 'Wand out, Potter.'

Harry moved into his usual position, facing Snape with the desk between them. His heart waspumping fast with anger at Cho and anxiety about how much Snape was about to extractfrom his mind.

'On the count of three then,' said Snape lazily. 'One - two -'

Snape's office door banged open and Draco Malfoy sped in.

'Professor Snape, sir - oh - sorry -'

Malfoy was looking at Snape and Harry in some surprise.

'It's all right, Draco,' said Snape, lowering his wand. 'Potter is here for a little remedial Potions.'

Harry had not seen Malfoy look so gleeful since Umbridge had turned up to inspect Hagrid.

'I didn't know,' he said, leering at Harry, who knew his face was burning. He would havegiven a great deal to be able to shout the truth at Malfoy - or, even better, to hit him with agood curse.

'Well, Draco, what is it?' asked Snape.

'It's Professor Umbridge, sir - she needs your help,' said Malfoy.

They've found Montague, sir, he's turned up jammed inside a toilet on the fourth floor.'

'How did he get in there?' demanded Snape.

'I don't know, sir, he's a bit confused.'

'Very well, very well. Potter,' said Snape, 'we shall resume this lesson tomorrow evening.'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

He turned and swept from his office. Malfoy mouthed, 'Remedial Potions?' at Harry behindSnape's back before following him.

Seething, Harry replaced his wand inside his robes and made to leave the room. At least hehad twenty-four more hours in which to practise; he knew he ought to feel grateful for thenarrow escape, though it was hard that it came at the expense of Malfoy telling the wholeschool that he needed remedial Potions.

He was at the office door when he saw it: a patch of shivering light dancing on the doorframe.

He stopped, and stood looking at it, reminded of something… then he remembered: it was alittle like the lights he had seen in his dream last night, the lights in the second room he hadwalked through on his journey through the Department of Mysteries.

He turned around. The light was coming from the Pensieve sitting on Snape's desk. The silverwhitecontents were ebbing and swirling within. Snape's thoughts… things he did not wantHarry to see if he broke through Snape's defences accidentally…

Harry gazed at the Pensieve, curiosity welling inside him… what was it that Snape was sokeen to hide from Harry?

The silvery lights shivered on the wall… Harry took two steps towards the desk, thinkinghard. Could it possibly be information about the Department of Mysteries that Snape wasdetermined to keep from him?

Harry looked over his shoulder, his heart now pumping harder and faster than ever. Howlong would it take Snape to release Montague from the toilet? Would he come straight back tohis office afterwards, or accompany Montague to the hospital wing? Surely the latter…

Montague was Captain of the Slytherin Quidditch team, Snape would want to make sure hewas all right.

Harry walked the remaining few feet to the Pensieve and stood over it, gazing into its depths.

He hesitated, listening, then pulled out his wand again. The office and the corridor beyondwere completely silent. He gave the contents of the Pensieve a small prod with the end of hiswand.

The silvery stuff within began to swirl very fast. Harry leaned forwards over it and saw that ithad become transparent. He was, once again, looking down into a room as though through acircular window in the ceiling… in fact, unless he was much mistaken, he was looking downinto the Great Hall.

His breath was actually fogging the surface of Snape's thoughts… his brain seemed to be inlimbo… it would be insane to do the thing he was so strongly tempted to do… he was trembling… Snape could be back at any moment… but Harry thought of Chos anger, ofMalfoy's jeering face, and a reckless daring seized him.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

He took a great gulp of breath, and plunged his face into the surface of Snape's thoughts. Atonce, the floor of the office lurched, tipping Harry head-first into the Pensieve…

He was falling through cold blackness, spinning furiously as he went, and then -

He was standing in the middle of the Great Hall, but the four house tables were gone. Instead,there were more than a hundred smaller tables, all facing the same way, at each of which sat astudent, head bent low, scribbling on a roll of parchment. The only sound was the scratchingof quills and the occasional rustle as somebody adjusted their parchment. It was clearly examtime.

Sunshine was streaming through the high windows on to the bent heads, which shonechestnut and copper and gold in the bright light. Harry looked around carefully. Snape had tobe here somewhere… this was his memory…

And there he was, at a table right behind Harry. Harry stared. Snape-the-teenager had astringy, pallid look about him, like a plant kept in the dark. His hair was lank and greasy andwas flopping on to the table, his hooked nose barely half an inch from the surface of theparchment as he scribbled. Harry moved around behind Snape and read the heading of theexamination paper: DEFENCE AGAINST THE DARK ARTS - ORDINARY WIZARDINGLEVEL.

So Snape had to be fifteen or sixteen, around Harry's own age. His hand was flying across theparchment; he had written at least a foot more than his closest neighbours, and yet his writingwas minuscule and cramped.

'Five more minutes!'

The voice made Harry jump. Turning, he saw the top of Professor Flitwick's head movingbetween the desks a short distance away. Professor Flitwick was walking past a boy withuntidy black hair… very untidy black hair…

Harry moved so quickly that, had he been solid, he would have knocked desks flying. Insteadhe seemed to slide, dreamlike, across two aisles and up a third. The back of the black-hairedboy's head drew nearer and… he was straightening up now, putting down his quill, pullinghis roll of parchment towards him so as to reread what he had written…

Harry stopped in front of the desk and gazed down at his fifteen-year-old father.

Excitement exploded in the pit of his stomach: it was as though he was looking at himself butwith deliberate mistakes. James's eyes were hazel, his nose was slightly longer than Harry'sand there was no scar on his forehead, but they had the same thin face, same mouth, sameeyebrows; James's hair stuck up at the back exactly as Harry's did, his hands could have beenHarry's and Harry could tell that, when James stood up, they would be within an inch of eachother in height.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

James yawned hugely and rumpled up his hair, making it even messier than it had been. Then, with a glance towards Professor Flitwick, he turned in his seat and grinned at a boysitting four seats behind him.

With another shock of excitement, Harry saw Sirius give James the thumbs-up. Sirius was. lounging in his chair at his ease, tilting it back on two legs. He was very good-looking; hisdark hair fell into his eyes with a sort of casual elegance neither James's nor Harry's couldever have achieved, and a girl sitting behind him was eyeing him hopefully, though he didn'tseem to have noticed. And two seats along from this girl - Harry's stomach gave anotherpleasurable squirm - was Remus Lupin. He looked rather pale and peaky (was the full moonapproaching?) and was absorbed in the exam: as he reread his answers, he scratched his chinwith the end of his quill, frowning slightly.

So that meant Wormtail had to be around here somewhere, too… and sure enough, Harryspotted him within seconds: a small, mousy-haired boy with a pointed nose. Wormtail lookedanxious; he was chewing his fingernails, staring down at his paper, scuffing the ground withhis toes. Every now and then he glanced hopefully at his neighbours paper. Harry stared atWormtail for a moment, then back at James, who was now doodling on a bit of scrapparchment. He had drawn a Snitch and was now tracing the letters 'L.E.'. What did they standfor?

'Quills down, please!' squeaked Professor Flitwick. That means you too, Stebbins! Pleaseremain seated while I collect your parchment! Accio!'

Over a hundred rolls of parchment zoomed into the air and into Professor Flitwick'soutstretched arms, knocking him backwards off his feet. Several people laughed. A couple ofstudents at the front desks got up, took hold of Professor Flitwick beneath the elbows andlifted him back on to his feet.

Thank you… thank you,' panted Professor Flitwick. 'Very well, everybody, you're free to go!'

Harry looked down at his father, who had hastily crossed out the 'L.E.' he had beenembellishing, jumped to his feet, stuffed his quill and the exam paper into his bag, which heslung over his back, and stood waiting for Sirius to join him.

Harry looked around and glimpsed Snape a short way away, moving between the tablestowards the doors to the Entrance Hall, still absorbed in his own exam paper. Roundshoulderedyet angular, he walked in a twitchy manner that recalled a spider, and his oilyhair was jumping about his face.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

A gang of chattering girls separated Snape from James, Sirius and Lupin, and by plantinghimself in their midst, Harry managed to keep Snape in sight while straining his ears to catchthe voices of James and his friends.

'Did you like question ten, Moony?' asked Sirius as they emerged into the Entrance Hall.

'Loved it,' said Lupin briskly. 'Give five signs that identify the werewolf. Excellent question.'

'D'you think you managed to get all the signs?' said James in tones of mock concern.

Think I did,' said Lupin seriously, as they joined the crowd thronging around the front doorseager to get out into the sunlit grounds. 'One: he's sitting on my chair. Two: he's wearing myclothes. Three: his name's Remus Lupin.'

Wormtail was the only one who didn't laugh.

'I got the snout shape, the pupils of the eyes and the tufted tail,' he said anxiously, 'but Icouldn't think what else -'

'How thick are you, Wormtail?' said James impatiently. 'You run round with a werewolf oncea month -'

'Keep your voice down,' implored Lupin.

Harry looked anxiously behind him again. Snape remained close by, still buried in his examquestions - but this was Snape's memory and Harry was sure that if Snape chose to wanderoff in a different direction once outside in the grounds, he, Harry, would not be able to followJames any further. To his intense relief, however, when James and his three friends strode offdown the lawn towards the lake, Snape followed, still poring over the exam paper andapparently with no fixed idea of where he was going. By keeping a little ahead of him, Harrymanaged to maintain a close watch on James and the others.

'Well, I thought that paper was a piece of cake,' he heard Sirius say. Til be surprised if I don'tget "Outstanding" on it at least.'

'Me too,' said James. He put his hand in his pocket and took out a struggling Golden Snitch.

'Where'd you get that?'

'Nicked it,' said James casually. He started playing with the Snitch, allowing it to fly as muchas a foot away before seizing it again; his reflexes were excellent. Wormtail watched him inawe.

They stopped in the shade of the very same beech tree on the edge of the lake where Harry,Ron and Hermione had once spent a Sunday finishing their homework, and threw themselvesdown on the grass. Harry looked over his shoulder yet again and saw, to his delight, thatSnape had settled himself on the grass in the dense shadow of a clump of bushes. He was asdeeply immersed in the OWL paper as ever, which left Harry free to sit down on the grassbetween the beech and the bushes and watch the foursome under the tree. The sunlight wasdazzling on the smooth surface of the lake, on the bank of which the group of laughing girlswho had just left the Great Hall were sitting, with their shoes and socks off, cooling their feetin the water.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Lupin had pulled out a book and was reading. Sirius stared around at the students millingover the grass, looking rather haughty and bored, but very handsomely so. James was stillplaying with the Snitch, letting it zoom further and further away, almost escaping but alwaysgrabbed at the last second. Wormtail was watching him with his mouth open. Every timeJames made a particularly difficult catch, Wormtail gasped and applauded. After five minutesof this, Harry wondered why James didn't tell Wormtail to get a grip on himself, but Jamesseemed to be enjoying the attention. Harry noticed that his father had a habit of rumpling uphis hair as though to keep it from getting too tidy, and he also kept looking over at the girls bythe water's edge.

Tut that away, will you,' said Sirius finally, as James made a fine catch and Wormtail let out acheer, 'before Wormtail wets himself with excitement.'

Wormtail turned slightly pink, but James grinned.

'If it bothers you,' he said, stuffing the Snitch back in his pocket. Harry had the distinctimpression that Sirius was the only one for whom James would have stopped showing off.

'I'm bored,' said Sirius. 'Wish it was full moon.'

'You might,' said Lupin darkly from behind his book. 'We've still got Transfiguration, if you'rebored you could test me. Here…" and he held out his book.

But Sirius snorted. 'I don't need to look at that rubbish, I know it all.'

This'll liven you up, Padfoot,' said James quietly. 'Look who it is…'

Sirius's head turned. He became very still, like a dog that has scented a rabbit.

'Excellent,' he said softly. 'Snivellus.'

Harry turned to see what Sirius was looking at.

Snape was on his feet again, and was stowing the OWL paper in his bag. As he left theshadows of the bushes and set off across the grass, Sirius and James stood up.

Lupin and Wormtail remained sitting: Lupin was still staring down at his book, though hiseyes were not moving and a faint frown line had appeared between his eyebrows; Wormtailwas looking from Sirius and James to Snape with a look of avid anticipation on his face.

'All right, Snivellus?' said James loudly.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Snape reacted so fast it was as though he had been expecting an attack: dropping his bag, heplunged his hand inside his robes and his wand was halfway into the air when Jamesshouted, 'Expelliarmus!'

Snape's wand flew twelve feet into the air and fell with a little thud in the grass behind him.

Sirius let out a bark of laughter.

'Impedimenta!' he said, pointing his wand at Snape, who was knocked off his feet halfwaythrough a dive towards his own fallen wand.

Students all around had turned to watch. Some of them had got to their feet and were edgingnearer. Some looked apprehensive, others entertained.

Snape lay panting on the ground. James and Sirius advanced on him, wands raised, Jamesglancing over his shoulder at the girls at the water's edge as he went. Wormtail was on his feetnow, watching hungrily, edging around Lupin to get a clearer view.

'How'd the exam go, Snivelly?' said James.

'I was watching him, his nose was touching the parchment,' said Sirius viciously. There'll begreat grease marks all over it, they won't be able to read a word.'

Several people watching laughed; Snape was clearly unpopular. Wormtail sniggered shrilly.

Snape was trying to get up, but the jinx was still operating on him; he was struggling, asthough bound by invisible ropes.

'You - wait,' he panted, staring up at James with an expression of purest loathing, 'you - wait!'

'Wait for what?' said Sirius coolly. 'What're you going to do, Snivelly, wipe your nose on us?'

Snape let out a stream of mixed swear words and hexes, but with his wand ten feet awaynothing happened.

'Wash out your mouth,' said James coldly. 'Scourgify!'

Pink soap bubbles streamed from Snape's mouth at once; the froth was covering his lips,making him gag, choking him -

'Leave him ALONE!'

James and Sirius looked round. James's free hand immediately jumped to his hair.

It was one of the girls from the lake edge. She had thick, dark red hair that fell to hershoulders, and startlingly green almond-shaped eyes - Harry's eyes.

Harry's mother.

'All right, Evans?' said James, and the tone of his voice was suddenly pleasant, deeper, moremature.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Leave him alone,' Lily repeated. She was looking at James with every sign of great dislike. 'What's he done to you?'

'Well,' said James, appearing to deliberate the point, 'it's more the fact that he exists, if youknow what I mean…'

Many of the surrounding students laughed, Sirius and Wormtail included, but Lupin, stillapparently intent on his book, didn't, and nor did Lily.

'You think you're funny,' she said coldly. 'But you're just an arrogant, bullying toerag, Potter.

Leave him alone.'

'I will if you go out with me, Evans,' said James quickly. 'Go on… go out with me and I'llnever lay a wand on old Snivelly again.'

Behind him, the Impediment Jinx was wearing off. Snape was beginning to inch towards hisfallen wand, spitting out soapsuds as he crawled.

'I wouldn't go out with you if it was a choice between you and the giant squid,' said Lily.

'Bad luck, Prongs,' said Sirius briskly, and turned back to Snape. 'OI!'

But too late; Snape had directed his wand straight at James; there was a flash of light and agash appeared on the side of James's face, spattering his robes with blood. James whirledabout: a second flash of light later, Snape was hanging upside-down in the air, his robesfalling over his head to reveal skinny, pallid legs and a pair of greying underpants.

Many people in the small crowd cheered; Sirius, James and Wormtail roared with laughter. Lily, whose furious expression had twitched for an instant as though she was going to smile,said, 'Let him down!'

'Certainly,' said James and he jerked his wand upwards; Snape fell into a crumpled heap onthe ground. Disentangling himself from his robes he got quickly to his feet, wand up, butSirius said, 'Petrificus Totalus!' and Snape keeled over again, rigid as a board.

'LEAVE HIM ALONE!' Lily shouted. She had her own wand out now. James and Sirius eyedit warily.

'Ah, Evans, don't make me hex you,' said James earnestly.

Take the curse off him, then!'

James sighed deeply, then turned to Snape and muttered the counter-curse.

There you go,' he said, as Snape struggled to his feet. 'You're lucky Evans was here, Snivellus—'

'I don't need help from filthy little Mudbloods like her!'

Lily blinked.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Fine,' she said coolly. 'I won't bother in future. And I'd wash your pants if I were you,Snivellus.'

'Apologise to Evans!' James roared at Snape, his wand pointed threateningly at him.

'I don't want you to make him apologise,' Lily shouted, rounding on James. 'You're as bad as he is.'

'What?' yelped James. I'd NEVER call you a - you-know-what!'

'Messing up your hair because you think it looks cool to look like you've just got off yourbroomstick, showing off with that stupid Snitch, walking down corridors and hexing anyonewho annoys you just because you can - I'm surprised your broomstick can get off the groundwith that fat head on it. You make me SICK.'

She turned on her heel and hurried away.

'Evans!' James shouted after her. 'Hey, EVANS!'

But she didn't look back.

'What is it with her?' said James, trying and failing to look as though this was a throwawayquestion of no real importance to him.

'Reading between the lines, I'd say she thinks you're a bit conceited, mate,' said Sirius.

'Right,' said James, who looked furious now, 'right -'

There was another flash of light, and Snape was once again hanging upside-down in the air.

'Who wants to see me take off Snivelly's pants?'

But whether James really did take off Snapes pants, Harry never found out. A hand hadclosed tight over his upper arm, closed with a pincer-like grip. Wincing, Harry looked roundto see who had hold of him, and saw, with a thrill of horror, a fully grown, adult-sized Snapestanding right beside him, white with rage.

'Having fun?'

Harry felt himself rising into the air; the summer's day evaporated around him; he wasfloating upwards through icy blackness, Snape's hand still tight upon his upper arm. Then,with a swooping feeling as though he had turned head-over-heels in midair, his feet hit thestone floor of Snape's dungeon and he was standing again beside the Pensieve on Snape'sdesk in the shadowy, present-day Potion masters study.

'So,' said Snape, gripping Harry's arm so tightly Harry's hand was starting to feel numb. 'So…

been enjoying yourself, Potter?'

'N-no,' said Harry, trying to free his arm.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

It was scary: Snape's lips were shaking, his face v:as white, his teeth were bared.

'Amusing man, your father, wasn't he?' said Snape, shaking Harry so hard his glasses slippeddown his nose.

'I - didn't -'

Snape threw Harry from him with all his might. Harry fell hard on to the dungeon floor. <;

'You will not repeat what you saw to anybody!' Snape bellowed.

'No,' said Harry, getting to his feet as far from Snape as he could. 'No, of course I w—'

'Get out, get out, I don't want to see you in this office ever again!'

And as Harry hurtled towards the door, a jar of dead cockroaches exploded over his head. Hewrenched the door open and flew along the corridor, stopping only when he had put threefloors between himself and Snape. There he leaned against the wall, panting, and rubbing hisbruised arm.

He had no desire at all to return to Gryffindor Tower so early, nor to tell Ron and Hermionewhat he had just seen. What was making Harry feel so horrified and unhappy was not beingshouted at or having jars thrown at him; it was that he knew how it felt to be humiliated in themiddle of a circle of onlookers, knew exactly how Snape had felt as his father had tauntedhim, and that judging from what he had just seen, his father had been every bit as arrogant asSnape had always told him.

— CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE —

Careers Advice'But why haven't you got Occlumency lessons any more?' said Hermione, frowning.

'I've told you,' Harry muttered. 'Snape reckons I can carry on by myself now I've got the basics.'

'So you've stopped having funny dreams?' said Hermione sceptically.

'Pretty much,' said Harry, not looking at her.

'Well, I don't think Snape should stop until you're absolutely sure you can control them!' saidHermione indignantly. 'Harry, I think you should go back to him and ask -'

'No,' said Harry forcefully. 'Just drop it, Hermione, OK?'

It was the first day of the Easter holidays and Hermione, as was her custom, had spent a largepart of the day drawing up revision timetables for the three of them. Harry and Ron had lether do it; it was easier than arguing with her and, in any case, they might come in useful.

Ron had been startled to discover there were only six weeks left until their exams.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'How can that come as a shock?' Hermione demanded, as she tapped each little square onRon's timetable with her wand so that it flashed a different colour according to its subject.

'I dunno,' said Ron, 'there's been a lot going on.'

'Well, there you are,' she said, handing him his timetable, 'if you follow that you should dofine.'

Ron looked down it gloomily, but then brightened.

'You've given me an evening off every week!'

That's for Quidditch practice,' said Hermione.

The smile faded from Ron's face.

'What's the point?' he said dully. 'We've got about as much chance of winning the Quidditch Cup this year as Dad's got of becoming Minister for Magic.'

Hermione said nothing; she was looking at Harry, who was staring blankly at the oppositewall of the common room while Crookshanks pawed at his hand, trying to get his earsscratched.

'What's wrong, Harry?'

'What?' he said quickly. 'Nothing.'

He seized his copy of Defensive Magical Theory and pretended to be looking something up inthe index. Crookshanks gave him up as a bad job and slunk away under Hermione's chair.

'I saw Cho earlier,' said Hermione tentatively. 'She looked really miserable, too… have youtwo had a row again?'

'Wha— oh, yeah, we have,' said Harry, seizing gratefully on the excuse.

'What about?'

That sneak friend of hers, Marietta,' said Harry.

'Yeah, well, I don't blame you!' said Ron angrily, setting down his revision timetable. 'If ithadn't been for her…'

Ron went into a rant about Marietta Edgecombe, which Harry found helpful; all he had to dowas look angry, nod and say 'Yeah' and That's right' whenever Ron drew breath, leaving hismind free to dwell, ever more miserably, on what he had seen in the Pensieve.

He felt as though the memory of it was eating him from inside. He had been so sure hisparents were wonderful people that he had never had the slightest difficulty in disbelievingthe aspersions Snape cast on his father's character. Hadn't people like Hagrid and Sirius toldHarry how wonderful his father had been? (Yeah, well, look what Sirius was like himself, said anagging voice inside Harry's head… he was as bad, wasn't he?) Yes, he had once overheardProfessor McGonagall saying that his father and Sirius had been troublemakers at school, butshe had described them as forerunners of the Weasley twins, and Harry could not imagineFred and George dangling someone upside-down for the fun of it… not unless they reallyloathed them… perhaps Malfoy, or somebody who really deserved it…

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Harry tried to make a case for Snape having deserved what he had suffered at James's hands:

but hadn't Lily asked, 'What's he done to you?' And hadn't James replied, 'It's more the factthat he exists, if you know what I mean.' Hadn't James started it all simply because Sirius had said he was bored? Harry remembered Lupin saying back in Grimmauld Place thatDumbledore had made him prefect in the hope that he would be able to exercise some controlover James and Sirius… but in the Pensieve, he had sat there and let it all happen…

Harry kept reminding himself that Lily had intervened; his mother had been decent. Yet, thememory of the look on her face as she had shouted at James disturbed him quite as much asanything else; she had clearly loathed James, and Harry simply could not understand howthey could have ended up married. Once or twice he even wondered whether James hadforced her into it…

For nearly five years the thought of his father had been a source of comfort, of inspiration. Whenever someone had told him he was like James, he had glowed with pride inside. Andnow… now he felt cold and miserable at the thought of him.

The weather grew breezier, brighter and warmer as the Easter holidays passed, but Harry,along with the rest of the fifth- and seventh-years, was trapped inside, revising, traipsing backand forth to the library. Harry pretended his bad mood had no other cause but theapproaching exams, and as his fellow Gryffindors were sick of studying themselves, hisexcuse went unchallenged.

'Harry, I'm talking to you, can you hear me?'

'Huh?'

He looked round. Ginny Weasley, looking very windswept, had joined him at the library tablewhere he had been sitting alone. It was late on Sunday evening: Hermione had gone back toGryffindor Tower to revise Ancient Runes, and Ron had Quidditch practice.

'Oh, hi,' said Harry, pulling his books towards him. 'How come you're not at practice?'

'It's over,' said Ginny. 'Ron had to take Jack Sloper up to the hospital wing.'

'Why?'

'Well, we're not sure, but we think he knocked himself out with his own bat.' She sighedheavily. 'Anyway… a package just arrived, it's only just got through Umbridge's newscreening process.'

She hoisted a box wrapped in brown paper on to the table; it had clearly been unwrapped andcarelessly re-wrapped. There was a scribbled note across it in red ink, reading: Inspected andPassed by the Hogwarts High Inquisitor.

'It's Easter eggs from Mum,' said Ginny. There's one for you… there you go.'

She handed him a handsome chocolate egg decorated with small, iced Snitches and, accordingto the packaging, containing a bag of Fizzing Whizzbees. Harry looked at it for a moment,then, to his horror, felt a lump rise in his throat.

'Are you OK, Harry?' Ginny asked quietly.

'Yeah, I'm fine,' said Harry gruffly. The lump in his throat was painful. He did not understandwhy an Easter egg should have made him feel like this.

'You seem really down lately,' Ginny persisted. 'You know, I'm sure if you just talked to Cho…'

'It's not Cho I want to talk to,' said Harry brusquely.

'Who is it, then?' asked Ginny, watching him closely.

'I…'

He glanced around to make quite sure nobody was listening. Madam Pince was severalshelves away, stamping out a pile of books for a frantic-looking Hannah Abbott.

'I wish I could talk to Sirius,' he muttered. 'But I know I can't.'

Ginny continued to watch him thoughtfully. More to give himself something to do thanbecause he really wanted any, Harry unwrapped his Easter egg, broke off a large bit and putit into his mouth.

'Well,' said Ginny slowly, helping herself to a bit of egg, too, 'if you really want to talk toSirius, I expect we could think of a way to do it.'

'Come on,' said Harry dully. 'With Umbridge policing the fires and reading all our mail?'

The thing about growing up with Fred and George,' said Ginny thoughtfully, 'is that you sortof start thinking anything's possible if you've got enough nerve.'

Harry looked at her. Perhaps it was the effect of the chocolate - Lupin had always advisedeating some after encounters with Dementors - or simply because he had finally spoken aloudthe wish that had been burning inside him for a week, but he felt a bit more hopeful.

'WHAT DO YOU THINK YOU ARE DOING?'

'Oh damn,' whispered Ginny, jumping to her feet. 'I forgot -' Madam Pince was swoopingdown on them, her shrivelled face contorted with rage.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Chocolate in the library!' she screamed. 'Out - out - OUT!' And whipping out her wand, shecaused Harry's books, bag and ink bottle to chase him and Ginny from the library, whackingthem repeatedly over the head as they ran.

*As though to underline the importance of their upcoming examinations, a batch of pamphlets,leaflets and notices concerning various wizarding careers appeared on the tables inGryffindor Tower shortly before the end of the holidays, along with yet another notice on theboard, which read:

All fifth-years are required to attend a short meeting with theirHead of House during the first week of the summer term to discusstheir future careers. Times of individual appointments are listed below.

Harry looked down the list and found that he was expected in Professor McGonagall's officeat half past two on Monday, which would mean missing most of Divination. He and the otherfifth-years spent a considerable part of the final weekend of the Easter break reading all thecareers information that had been left there for their perusal.

'Well, I don't fancy Healing,' said Ron on the last evening of the holidays. He was immersed ina leaflet that carried the crossed bone-and-wand emblem of St Mungo's on its front. 'It sayshere you need at least "E" at NEWT level in Potions, Herbology, Transfiguration, Charms andDefence Against the Dark Arts. I mean… blimey… don't want much, do they?'

'Well, it's a very responsible job, isn't it?' said Hermione absently.

She was poring over a bright pink and orange leaflet that was headed, 'SO YOU THINKYOU'D LIKE TO WORK IN MUGGLE RELATIONS?'

'You don't seem to need many qualifications to liaise with Muggles; all they want is an OWLin Muggle Studies: Much more important is your enthusiasm, patience and a good sense offunl'

'You'd need more than a good sense of fun to liaise with my uncle,' said Harry darkly. 'Goodsense of when to duck, more like.' He was halfway through a pamphlet on wizard banking.

'Listen to this: Are you seeking a challenging career involving travel, adventure and substantial, danger-related treasure bonuses? Then consider a position with Gringotts Wizarding Bank, who arecurrently recruiting Curse-Breakers for thrilling opportunities abroad… They want Arithmancy,though; you could do it, Hermione!'

'I don't much fancy banking,' said Hermione vaguely, now immersed in: 'HAVE YOU GOTWHAT IT TAKES TO TRAIN SECURITY TROLLS?'

'Hey,' said a voice in Harry's ear. He looked round; Fred and George had come to join them.

'Ginnys had a word with us about you,' said Fred, stretching out his legs on the table in frontof them and causing several booklets on careers with the Ministry of Magic to slide off on tothe floor. 'She says you need to talk to Sirius?'

'What?' said Hermione sharply, freezing with her hand halfway towards picking up 'MAKE ABANG AT THE DEPARTMENT OF MAGICAL ACCIDENTS AND CATASTROPHES'.

'Yeah…' said Harry, trying to sound casual, 'yeah, I thought I'd like -'

'Don't be so ridiculous,' said Hermione, straightening up and looking at him as though shecould not believe her eyes. 'With Umbridge groping around in the fires and frisking all theowls?'

'Well, we think we can find a way around that,' said George, stretching and smiling. 'It's asimple matter of causing a diversion. Now, you might have noticed that we have been ratherquiet on the mayhem front during the Easter holidays?'

'What was the point, we asked ourselves, of disrupting leisure time?' continued Fred. 'Nopoint at all, we answered ourselves. And of course, we'd have messed up people's revision,too, which would be the very last thing we'd want to do.'

He gave Hermione a sanctimonious little nod. She looked rather taken aback by thisthoughtfulness.

'But its business as usual from tomorrow,' Fred continued briskly. 'And if we're going to becausing a bit of uproar, why not do it so that Harry can have his chat with Sirius?'

'Yes, but still,' said Hermione, with an air of explaining something very simple to somebodyvery obtuse, 'even if you do cause a diversion, how is Harry supposed to talk to him?'

'Umbridge's office,' said Harry quietly.

He had been thinking about it for a fortnight and could come up with no alternative.

Umbridge herself had told him that the only fire that was not being watched was her own.

'Are - you - insane?' said Hermione in a hushed voice.

Ron had lowered his leaflet on jobs in the Cultivated Fungus Trade and was watching theconversation warily.

'I don't think so,' said Harry, shrugging.

'And how are you going to get in there in the first place?'

Harry was ready for this question.

'Sirius's knife,' he said.

'Excuse me?'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Christmas before last Sirius gave me a knife that'll open any lock,' said Harry. 'So even if she'sbewitched the door so Alohomora won't work, which I bet she has -'

'What do you think about this?' Hermione demanded of Ron, and Harry was remindedirresistibly of Mrs Weasley appealing to her husband during Harry's first dinner inGrimmauld Place.

'I dunno,' said Ron, looking alarmed at being asked to give an opinion. 'If Harry wants to doit, it's up to him, isn't it?'

'Spoken like a true friend and Weasley,' said Fred, clapping Ron hard on the back. 'Right,then. We're thinking of doing it tomorrow, just after lessons, because it should causemaximum impact if everybody's in the corridors - Harry, we'll set it off in the east wingsomewhere, draw her right away from her own office — I reckon we should be able toguarantee you, what, twenty minutes?' he said, looking at George.

'Easy,' said George.

'What sort of diversion is it?' asked Ron.

'You'll see, little bro',' said Fred, as he and George got up again. 'At least, you will if you trotalong to Gregory the Smarmy's corridor round about five o'clock tomorrow.'

*

Harry awoke very early the next day, feeling almost as anxious as he had done on themorning of his disciplinary hearing at the Ministry of Magic. It was not only the prospect ofbreaking into Umbridge's office and using her fire to speak to Sirius that was making him feelnervous, though that was certainly bad enough; today also happened to be the first timeHarry would be in close proximity to Snape since Snape had thrown him out of his office.

After lying in bed for a while thinking about the day ahead, Harry got up very quietly andmoved across to the window beside Nevilles bed, and stared out on a truly glorious morning.

The sky was a clear, misty, opalescent blue. Directly ahead of him, Harry could see thetowering beech tree below which his father had once tormented Snape. He was not sure whatSirius could possibly say to him that would make up for what he had seen in the Pensieve, buthe was desperate to hear Sirius's own account of what had happened, to know of anymitigating factors there might have been, any excuse at all for his father's behaviour…

Something caught Harry's attention: movement on the edge of the Forbidden Forest. Harrysquinted into the sun and saw Hagrid emerging from between the trees. He seemed to belimping. As Harry watched, Hagrid staggered to the door of his cabin and disappeared insideit. Harry watched the cabin for several minutes. Hagrid did not emerge again, but smokefurled from the chimney, so Hagrid could not be so badly injured that he was unequal tostoking the fire.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Harry turned away from the window, headed back to his trunk and started to dress.

With the prospect of forcing entry into Umbridge's office ahead, Harry had never expectedthe day to be a restful one, but he had not reckoned on Hermione's almost continual attemptsto dissuade him from what he was planning to do at five o'clock. For the first time ever, shewas at least as inattentive to Professor Binns inHistory of Magic as Harry and Ron were, keeping up a stream of whispered admonitions thatHarry tried very hard to ignore.

'… and if she does catch you there, apart from being expelled, she'll be able to guess you'vebeen talking to Snuffles and this time I expect she'll force you to drink Veritaserum and answerher questions…'

'Hermione,' said Ron in a low and indignant voice, 'are you going to stop telling Harry off andlisten to Binns, or am I going to have to take my own notes?'

'You take notes for a change, it won't kill you!'

By the time they reached the dungeons, neither Harry nor Ron was speaking to Hermione. Undeterred, she took advantage of their silence to maintain an uninterrupted flow of dire warnings, all uttered under her breath in a vehement hiss that caused Seamus to waste fivewhole minutes checking his cauldron for leaks.

Snape, meanwhile, seemed to have decided to act as though Harry were invisible. Harry was,of course, well-used to this tactic, as it was one of Uncle Vernon's favourites, and on the wholewas grateful he had to suffer nothing worse. In fact, compared to what he usually had toendure from Snape in the way of taunts and snide remarks, he found the new approachsomething of an improvement, and was pleased to find that when left well alone, he was ableto concoct an Invigoration Draught quite easily. At the end of the lesson he scooped some ofthe potion into a flask, corked it and took it up to Snape's desk for marking, feeling that hemight at last have scraped an 'E'.

He had just turned away when he heard a smashing noise. Malfoy gave a gleeful yell oflaughter. Harry whipped around. His potion sample lay in pieces on the floor and Snape wassurveying him with a look of gloating pleasure.

'Whoops,' he said softly. 'Another zero, then, Potter.'

Harry was too incensed to speak. He strode back to his cauldron, intending to fill anotherflask and force Snape to mark it, but saw to his horror that the rest of the contents hadvanished.

'I'm sorry!' said Hermione, with her hands over her mouth. 'I'm really sorry, Harry. I thoughtyou'd finished, so I cleared up!'

Harry could not bring himself to answer. When the bell rang, he hurried out of the dungeonwithout a backwards glance, and made sure that he found himself a seat between Neville andSeamus for lunch so that Hermione could not start nagging him again about usingUmbridge's office.

He was in such a bad mood by the time he got to Divination that he had quite forgotten hiscareers appointment with Professor McGonagall, remembering it only when Ron asked himwhy he wasn't in her office. He hurtled back upstairs and arrived out of breath, only a fewminutes late.

'Sorry, Professor,' he panted, as he closed the door. '1 forgot.'

'No matter, Potter,' she said briskly, but as she spoke, somebody else sniffed from the corner.

Harry looked round.

Professor Umbridge was sitting there, a clipboard on her knee, a fussy little pie-frill aroundher neck and a small, horribly smug smile on her face.

'Sit down, Potter,' said Professor McGonagall tersely. Her hands shook slightly as she shuffledthe many pamphlets littering her desk.

Harry sat down with his back to Umbridge and did his best to pretend he could not hear thescratching of her quill on her clipboard.

'Well, Potter, this meeting is to talk over any career ideas you might have, and to help youdecide which subjects you should continue into the sixth and seventh years,' said ProfessorMcGonagall. 'Have you had any thoughts about what you would like to do after you leaveHogwarts?'

'Er -' said Harry.

He was finding the scratching noise from behind him very distracting.

'Yes?' Professor McGonagall prompted Harry.

'Well, I thought of, maybe, being an Auror,' Harry mumbled.

'You'd need top grades for that,' said Professor McGonagall, extracting a small, dark leafletfrom under the mass on her desk and opening it. They ask for a minimum of five NEWTs, andnothing under "Exceeds Expectations" grade, I see. Then you would be required to undergo astringent series of character and aptitude tests at the Auror office. It's a difficult career path,Potter, they only take the best. In fact, I don't think anybody has been taken on in the lastthree years.'

At this moment, Professor Umbridge gave a very tiny cough, as though she was trying to seehow quietly she could do it. Professor McGonagall ignored her.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'You'll want to know which subjects you ought to take, 1 suppose?' she went on, talking alittle louder than before.
'Yes,' said Harry. 'Defence Against the Dark Arts, I suppose?'
'Naturally,' said Professor McGonagall crisply. 'I would also advise -'
Professor Umbridge gave another cough, a little more audible this time. ProfessorMcGonagall closed her eyes for a moment, opened them again, and continued as thoughnothing had happened.

'I would also advise Transfiguration, because Aurors frequently need to Transfigure orUntransfigure in their work. And I ought to tell you now, Potter, that I do not accept studentsinto my NEWT classes unless they have achieved "Exceeds Expectations" or higher atOrdinary Wizarding Level. I'd say you're averaging "Acceptable" at the moment, so you'llneed to put in some good hard work before the exams to stand a chance of continuing. Thenyou ought to do Charms, always useful, and Potions. Yes, Potter, Potions,' she added, with themerest flicker of a smile. 'Poisons and antidotes are essential study for Aurors. And I must tellyou that Professor Snape absolutely refuses to take students who get anything other than"Outstanding" in their OWLs, so -'
Professor Umbridge gave her most pronounced cough yet.
'May I offer you a cough drop, Dolores?' Professor McGonagall asked curtly, without lookingat Professor Umbridge.
'Oh, no, thank you very much,' said Umbridge, with that simpering laugh Harry hated somuch. 'I just wondered whether I could make the teensiest interruption, Minerva?'
'I daresay you'll find you can,' said Professor McGonagall through tightly gritted teeth.
'I was just wondering whether Mr Potter has quite the temperament for an Auror?' saidProfessor Umbridge sweetly.
'Were you?' said Professor McGonagall haughtily. 'Well, Potter,' she continued, as though there had been no interruption, 'if you are serious in this ambition, Iwould advise you to concentrate hard on bringing your Transfiguration and Potions up toscratch. I see Professor Flitwick has graded you between "Acceptable" and "ExceedsExpectations" for the last two years, so your Charmwork seems satisfactory. As for DefenceAgainst the Dark Arts, your marks have been generally high, Professor Lupin in particularthought you - are you quite sure you wouldn't like a cough drop, DoloresT'Oh, no need, thank you, Minerva; simpered Professor Umbridge, who had just coughed herloudest yet. 'I was just concerned that you might not have Harrys most recent DefenceAgainst the Dark Arts marks in front of you. I'm quite sure I slipped in a note.'
'What, this thing?' said Professor McGonagall in a tone of revulsion, as she pulled a sheet ofpink parchment from between the leaves of Harry's folder. She glanced down it, her eyebrowsslightly raised, then placed it back into the folder without comment.

'Yes, as I was saying, Potter, Professor Lupin thought you showed a pronounced aptitude forthe subject, and obviously for an Auror -'

'Did you not understand my note, Minerva?' asked Professor Umbridge in honeyed tones,quite forgetting to cough.

'Of course I understood it,' said Professor McGonagall, her teeth clenched so tightly the wordscame out a little muffled.

'Well, then, I am confused… I'm afraid I don't quite understand how you can give Mr Potterfalse hope that -'

'False hope?' repeated Professor McGonagall, still refusing to look round at ProfessorUmbridge. 'He has achieved high marks in all his Defence Against the Dark Arts tests -'

'I'm terribly sorry to have to contradict you, Minerva, but as you will see from my note, Harryhas been achieving very poor results in his classes with me -'

'I should have made my meaning plainer,' said Professor McGonagall, turning at last to lookUmbridge directly in the eyes. 'He has achieved high marks in all Defence Against the DarkArts tests set by a competent teacher.'

Professor Umbridge's smile vanished as suddenly as a light bulb blowing. She sat back in herchair, turned a sheet on her clipboard and began scribbling very fast indeed, her bulging eyesrolling from side to side. Professor McGonagall turned back to Harry, her thin nostrils flared,her eyes burning.

'Any questions, Potter?'

'Yes,' said Harry. 'What sort of character and aptitude tests do the Ministry do on you, if youget enough NEWTs?'

'Well, you'll need to demonstrate the ability to react well to pressure and so forth,' saidProfessor McGonagall, 'perseverance and dedication, because Auror training takes a furtherthree years, not to mention very high skills in practical Defence. It will mean a lot more studyeven after you've left school, so unless you're prepared to -'

'I think you'll also find,' said Umbridge, her voice very cold now, 'that the Ministry looks intothe records of those applying to be Aurors. Their criminal records.'

'- unless you're prepared to take even more exams after Hogwarts, you should really look atanother -'

'Which means that this boy has as much chance of becoming an Auror as Dumbledore has of ever returning to this school.'

'A very good chance, then,' said Professor McGonagall.

'Potter has a criminal record,' said Umbridge loudly.

'Potter has been cleared of all charges,' said McGonagall, even more loudly.

Professor Umbridge stood up. She was so short that this did not make a great deal ofdifference, but her fussy, simpering demeanour had given place to a hard fury that made herbroad, flabby face look oddly sinister.

'Potter has no chance whatsoever of becoming an Auror!'

Professor McGonagall got to her feet, too, and in her case this was a much more impressivemove; she towered over Professor Umbridge.

'Potter,' she said in ringing tones, 'I will assist you to become an Auror if it is the last thing Ido! If I have to coach you nightly, I will make sure you achieve the required results!'

The Minister for Magic will never employ Harry Potter!' said Umbridge, her voice risingfuriously.

There may well be a new Minister for Magic by the time Potter is ready to join!' shoutedProfessor McGonagall.

'Aha!' shrieked Professor Umbridge, pointing a stubby finger at McGonagall. 'Yes! Yes, yes,yes! Of course! That's what you want, isn't it, Minerva McGonagall? You want CorneliusFudge replaced by Albus Dumbledore! You think you'll be where I am, don't you: SeniorUndersecretary to the Minister and Headmistress to boot!'

'You are raving,' said Professor McGonagall, superbly disdainful. 'Potter, that concludes ourcareers consultation.'

Harry swung his bag over his shoulder and hurried out of the room, not daring to look atProfessor Umbridge. He could hear her and Professor McGonagall continuing to shout at eachother all the way back along the corridor.

Professor Umbridge was still breathing as though she had just run a race when she strode intotheir Defence Against the Dark Arts lesson that afternoon.

'I hope you've thought better of what you were planning to do, Harry,' Hermione whispered,the moment they had opened their books to 'Chapter Thirty-four, Non-Retaliation andNegotiation'. 'Umbridge looks like she's in a really bad mood already…'

Every now and then Umbridge shot glowering looks at Harry, who kept his head down,staring at Defensive Magical Theory, his eyes unfocused, thinking…

He could just imagine Professor McGonagall's reaction if he was caught trespassing inProfessor Umbridge's office mere hours after she had vouched for him… there was nothing tostop him simply going back to Gryffindor Tower and hoping that some time during the nextsummer holidays he would have a chance to ask Sirius about the scene he had witnessed inthe Pensieve… nothing, except that the thought of taking this sensible course of action madehim feel as though a lead weight had dropped into his stomach… and then there was thematter of Fred and George, whose diversion was already planned, not to mention the knifeSirius had given him, which was currently residing in his schoolbag along with his father'sold Invisibility Cloak.

PUTCLUB BOOKS

But the fact remained that if he was caught…

'Dumbledore sacrificed himself to keep you in school, Harry!' whispered Hermione, raisingher book to hide her face fromUmbridge. 'And if you get thrown out today it will all have been for nothing!'

He could abandon the plan and simply learn to live with the memory of what his father haddone on a summer's day more than twenty years ago…

And then he remembered Sirius in the fire upstairs in the Gryffindor common room…

You're less like your father than I thought… the risk would've been what made it fun for James…

But did he want to be like his father any more?

'Harry, don't do it, please don't do it!' Hermione said in anguished tones as the bell rang at theend of the class.

He did not answer; he did not know what to do.

Ron seemed determined to give neither his opinion nor his advice; he would not look atHarry, though when Hermione opened her mouth to try dissuading Harry some more, hesaid in a low voice, 'Give it a rest, OK? He can make up his own mind.'

Harrys heart beat very fast as he left the classroom. He was halfway along the corridoroutside when he heard the unmistake-able sounds of a diversion going off in the distance.

There were screams and yells reverberating from somewhere above them; people exiting theclassrooms all around Harry were stopping in their tracks and looking up at the ceilingfearfully -

Umbridge came pelting out of her classroom as fast as her short legs would carry her. Pullingout her wand, she hurried off in the opposite direction: it was now or never.

'Harry - please!' Hermione pleaded weakly.

But he had made up his mind; hitching his bag more securely on to his shoulder, he set off ata run, weaving in and out of students now hurrying in the opposite direction to see what allthe fuss was about in the east wing.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Harry reached the corridor to Umbridge's office and found it deserted. Dashing behind alarge suit of armour whose helmet creaked around to watch him, he pulled open his bag,seized Siriuss knife and donned the Invisibility Cloak. He then crept slowly and carefullyback out from behind the suit of armour and along the corridor until he reached Umbridge'sdoor.

He inserted the blade of the magical knife into the crack around it and moved it gently up anddown, then withdrew it. There was a tiny click, and the door swung open. He ducked insidethe office, closed the door quickly behind him and looked around.

Nothing was moving except the horrible kittens that were still frolicking on the wall platesabove the confiscated broomsticks.

Harry pulled off his Cloak and, striding over to the fireplace, found what he was looking forwithin seconds: a small box containing glittering Floo powder.

He crouched down in front of the empty grate, his hands shaking. He had never done thisbefore, though he thought he knew how it must work. Sticking his head into the fireplace, hetook a large pinch of powder and dropped it on to the logs stacked neatly beneath him. Theyexploded at once into emerald green flames.

'Number twelve, Grimmauld Place!' Harry said loudly and clearly.

It was one of the most curious sensations he had ever experienced. He had travelled by Floopowder before, of course, but then it had been his entire body that had spun around andaround in the flames through the network of wizarding fireplaces that stretched over thecountry. This time, his knees remained firm upon the cold floor of Umbridge's office, and only his head hurtled through the emerald fire…

And then, as abruptly as it had begun, the spinning stopped. Feeling rather sick and asthough he were wearing an exceptionally hot muffler around his head, Harry opened his eyesto find that he was looking up out of the kitchen fireplace at the long, wooden table, where aman sat poring over a piece of parchment.

'Sirius?'

The man jumped and looked around. It was not Sirius, but Lupin.

'Harry!' he said, looking thoroughly shocked. 'What are you -what's happened, is everythingall right?'

'Yeah,' said Harry. 'I just wondered — I mean, I just fancied a -a chat with Sirius.'

'I'll call him,' said Lupin, getting to his feet, still looking perplexed, 'he went upstairs to lookfor Kreacher, he seems to be hiding in the attic again…'

And Harry saw Lupin hurry out of the kitchen. Now he was left with nothing to look at butthe chair and table legs. He wondered why Sirius had never mentioned how veryuncomfortable it was to speak out of the fire; his knees were already objecting painfully totheir prolonged contact with Umbridge's hard stone floor.

Lupin returned with Sirius at his heels moments later.

'What is it?' said Sirius urgently, sweeping his long dark hair out of his eyes and dropping tothe ground in front of the fire, so that he and Harry were on a level. Lupin knelt down too,looking very concerned. 'Are you all right? Do you need help?'

'No,' said Harry, 'it's nothing like that… I just wanted to talk… about my dad.'

They exchanged a look of great surprise, but Harry did not have time to feel awkward orembarrassed; his knees were becoming sorer by the second and he guessed five minutes hadalready passed from the start of the diversion; George had only guaranteed him twenty. Hetherefore plunged immediately into the story of what he had seen in the Pensieve.

When he had finished, neither Sirius nor Lupin spoke for a moment. Then Lupin said quietly,'I wouldn't like you to judge your father on what you saw there, Harry. He was only fifteen -'

'I'm fifteen!' said Harry heatedly.

'Look, Harry' said Sirius placatingly, 'James and Snape hated each other from the momentthey set eyes on each other, it was just one of those things, you can understand that, can't you?

I think James was everything Snape wanted to be - he was popular, he was good at Quidditch- good at pretty much everything. And Snape was just this little oddball who was up to hiseyes in the Dark Arts, and James - whatever else he may have appeared to you, Harry - always hated the Dark Arts.'

'Yeah,' said Harry, 'but he just attacked Snape for no good reason, just because - well, justbecause you said you were bored,' he finished, with a slightly apologetic note in his voice.

'I'm not proud of it,' said Sirius quickly.

Lupin looked sideways at Sirius, then said, 'Look, Harry, what you've got to understand isthat your father and Sirius were the best in the school at whatever they did - everyonethought they were the height of cool - if they sometimes got a bit carried away -'

'If we were sometimes arrogant little berks, you mean,' said Sirius.

Lupin smiled.

'He kept messing up his hair,' said Harry in a pained voice.

Sirius and Lupin laughed.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'I'd forgotten he used to do that,' said Sirius affectionately.

'Was he playing with the Snitch?' said Lupin eagerly.

'Yeah,' said Harry, watching uncomprehendingly as Sirius and Lupin beamed reminiscently.

'Well… I thought he was a bit of an idiot.'

'Of course he was a bit of an idiot!' said Sirius bracingly, 'we were all idiots! Well - not Moonyso much,' he said fairly, looking at Lupin.

But Lupin shook his head. 'Did I ever tell you to lay off Snape?' he said. 'Did I ever have theguts to tell you I thought you were out of order?'

'Yeah, well,' said Sirius, 'you made us feel ashamed of ourselves sometimes… that wassomething…"

'And,' said Harry doggedly, determined to say everything that was on his mind now he was here, 'he kept looking over at the girls by the lake, hoping they were watching him!'

'Oh, well, he always made a fool of himself whenever Lily was around,' said Sirius,shrugging, 'he couldn't stop himself showing off whenever he got near her.'

'How come she married him?' Harry asked miserably. 'She hated him!'

'Nah, she didn't,' said Sirius.

'She started going out with him in seventh year,' said Lupin.

'Once James had deflated his head a bit,' said Sirius.

'And stopped hexing people just for the fun of it,' said Lupin.

'Even Snape?' said Harry.

Well,' said Lupin slowly, 'Snape was a special case. I mean, he never lost an opportunity tocurse James so you couldn't really expect James to take that lying down, could you?'

'And my mum was OK with that?'

'She didn't know too much about it, to tell you the truth,' said Sirius. '1 mean, James didn'ttake Snape on dates with her and jinx him in front of her, did he?'

Sirius frowned at Harry, who was still looking unconvinced.

'Look,' he said, 'your father was the best friend I ever had and he was a good person. A lot ofpeople are idiots at the age of fifteen. He grew out of it.'

'Yeah, OK,' said Harry heavily. 'I just never thought I'd feel sorry for Snape.'

'Now you mention it,' said Lupin, a faint crease between his eyebrows, 'how did Snape reactwhen he found you'd seen all this?'

'He told me he'd never teach me Occlumency again,' said Harry indifferently, 'like that's a bigdisappoint—'

'He WHAT?' shouted Sirius, causing Harry to jump and inhale a mouthful of ashes.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Are you serious, Harry?' said Lupin quickly. 'He's stopped giving you lessons?'

'Yeah,' said Harry, surprised at what he considered a great over-reaction. 'But it's OK, I don'tcare, it's a bit of a relief to tell you the -'

'I'm coming up there to have a word with Snape!' said Sirius forcefully, and he actually madeto stand up, but Lupin wrenched him back down again.

'If anyone's going to tell Snape it will be me!' he said firmly. 'But Harry, first of all, you're togo back to Snape and tell him that on no account is he to stop giving you lessons — whenDumbledore hears -'

'I can't tell him that, he'd kill me!' said Harry, outraged. 'You didn't see him when we got outof the Pensieve.'

'Harry there is nothing so important as you learning Occlumency!' said Lupin sternly. 'Do youunderstand me? Nothing!'

'OK, OK,' said Harry, thoroughly discomposed, not to mention annoyed. Til… I'll try and saysomething to him… but it won't be-'

He fell silent. He could hear distant footsteps.

'Is that Kreacher coming downstairs?'

'No,' said Sirius, glancing behind him. 'It must be somebody your end.'

Harrys heart skipped several beats.

I'd better go!' he said hastily and pulled his head backwards out of the Grimmauld Place fire.

For a moment his head seemed to be revolving on his shoulders, then he found himselfkneeling in front of Umbridge's fire with it firmly back on and watching the emerald flamesflicker and die.

'Quickly, quickly!' he heard a wheezy voice mutter right outside the office door. 'Ah, she's leftit open -'

Harry dived for the Invisibility Cloak and had just managed to pull it back over himself whenFilch burst into the office. He looked absolutely delighted about something and was talking tohimself feverishly as he crossed the room, pulled open a drawer in Umbridge's desk andbegan rifling through the papers inside it.

'Approval for Whipping… Approval for Whipping… I can do it at last… they've had it coming to them for years…'

He pulled out a piece of parchment, kissed it, then shuffled rapidly back out of the door,clutching it to his chest.

Harry leapt to his feet and, making sure he had his bag and that the Invisibility Cloak wascompletely covering him, he wrenched open the door and hurried out of the office after Filch,who was hobbling along faster than Harry had ever seen him go.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

One landing down from Umbridge's office, Harry thought it was safe to become visible again.

He pulled off the Cloak, shoved it in his bag and hurried onwards. There was a great deal ofshouting and movement coming from the Entrance Hall. He ran down the marble staircaseand found what looked like most of the school assembled there.

It was just like the night when Trelawney had been sacked. Students were standing all aroundthe walls in a great ring (some of them, Harry noticed, covered in a substance that looked verylike Stinksap); teachers and ghosts were also in the crowd. Prominent among the onlookerswere members of the Inquisitorial Squad, who were all looking exceptionally pleased withthemselves, and Peeves, who was bobbing overhead, gazed down at Fred and George whostood in the middle of the floor with the unmistakeable look of two people who had just beencornered.

'So!' said Umbridge triumphantly. Harry realised she was standing just a few stairs in front ofhim, once more looking down upon her prey. 'So - you think it amusing to turn a schoolcorridor into a swamp, do you?'

'Pretty amusing, yeah,' said Fred, looking up at her without the slightest sign of fear.

Filch elbowed his way closer to Umbridge, almost crying with happiness.

'I've got the form, Headmistress,' he said hoarsely, waving the piece of parchment Harry hadjust seen him take from her desk. 'I've got the form and I've got the whips waiting… oh, let medo it now…"

'Very good, Argus,' she said. 'You two,' she went on, gazing down at Fred and George, 'areabout to learn what happens to wrongdoers in my school.'

'You know what?' said Fred. 'I don't think we are.'

He turned to his twin.

'George,' said Fred, 'I think we've outgrown full-time education.'

'Yeah, I've been feeling that way myself,' said George lightly.

Time to test our talents in the real world, d'you reckon?' asked Fred.

'Definitely,' said George.

And before Umbridge could say a word, they raised their wands and said together:

'Accio brooms!'

Harry heard a loud crash somewhere in the distance. Looking to his left, he ducked just intime. Fred and George's broomsticks, one still trailing the heavy chain and iron peg withwhich Umbridge had fastened them to the wall, were hurtling along the corridor towardstheir owners; they turned left, streaked down the stairs and stopped sharply in front of thetwins, the chain clattering loudly on the flagged stone floor.

'We won't be seeing you,' Fred told Professor Umbridge, swinging his leg over his broomstick.

'Yeah, don't bother to keep in touch,' said George, mounting his own.

Fred looked around at the assembled students, at the silent, watchful crowd.

'If anyone fancies buying a Portable Swamp, as demonstrated upstairs, come to numberninety-three, Diagon Alley - Weasleys' Wizarding Wheezes,' he said in a loud voice. 'Our newpremises!'

'Special discounts to Hogwarts students who swear they're going to use our products to getrid of this old bat,' added George, pointing at Professor Umbridge.

'STOP THEM!' shrieked Umbridge, but it was too late. As the Inquisitorial Squad closed in,Fred and George kicked off from the floor, shooting fifteen feet into the air, the iron pegswinging dangerously below. Fred looked across the hall at the poltergeist bobbing on hislevel above the crowd.

'Give her hell from us, Peeves.'

And Peeves, who Harry had never seen take an order from a student before, swept his belledhat from his head and sprang to a salute as Fred and George wheeled about to tumultuousapplause from the students below and sped out of the open front doors into the glorious sunset.

just a few stairs in front of him, once more looking down upon her prey. 'So - you think itamusing to turn a school corridor into a swamp, do you?'

'Pretty amusing, yeah,' said Fred, looking up at her without the slightest sign of fear.

Filch elbowed his way closer to Umbridge, almost crying with happiness.

'I've got the form, Headmistress,' he said hoarsely, waving the piece of parchment Harry hadjust seen him take from her desk. 'I've got the form and I've got the whips waiting… oh, let medo it now'Very good, Argus,' she said. 'You two,' she went on, gazing down at Fred and George, 'areabout to learn what happens to wrongdoers in my school.'

'You know what?' said Fred. 'I don't think we are.'

He turned to his twin.

'George,' said Fred, 'I think we've outgrown full-time education.'

'Yeah, I've been feeling that way myself,' said George lightly.

Time to test our talents in the real world, d'you reckon?' asked Fred.

'Definitely,' said George.

And before Umbridge could say a word, they raised their wands and said together:

'Accio brooms!'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Harry heard a loud crash somewhere in the distance. Looking to his left, he ducked just intime. Fred and George's broomsticks, one still trailing the heavy chain and iron peg withwhich Umbridge had fastened them to the wall, were hurtling along the corridor towardstheir owners; they turned left, streaked down the stairs and stopped sharply in front of thetwins, the chain clattering loudly on the flagged stone floor.

'We won't be seeing you,' Fred told Professor Umbridge, swinging his leg over his broomstick.

'Yeah, don't bother to keep in touch,' said George, mounting his own.

Fred looked around at the assembled students, at the silent, watchful crowd.

'If anyone fancies buying a Portable Swamp, as demonstrated upstairs, come to numberninety-three, Diagon Alley - Weasleys' Wizarding Wheezes,' he said in a loud voice. 'Our newpremises!'

'Special discounts to Hogwarts students who swear they're going to use our products to getrid of this old bat,' added George, pointing at Professor Umbridge.

'STOP THEM!' shrieked Umbridge, but it was too late. As the Inquisitorial Squad closed in,Fred and George kicked off from the floor, shooting fifteen feet into the air, the iron pegswinging dangerously below. Fred looked across the hall at the poltergeist bobbing on hislevel above the crowd.

'Give her hell from us, Peeves.'

And Peeves, who Harry had never seen take an order from a student before, swept his belledhat from his head and sprang to a salute as Fred and George wheeled about to tumultuousapplause from the students below and sped out of the open front doors into the glorioussunset.

— CHAPTER THIRTY —

GrawpThe story of Fred and George's flight to freedom was retold so often over the next few daysthat Harry could tell it would soon become the stuff of Hogwarts legend: within a week, eventhose who had been eye-witnesses were half-convinced they had seen the twins dive-bombUmbridge on their brooms and pelt her with Dungbombs before zooming out of the doors. Inthe immediate aftermath of their departure there was a great wave of talk about copyingthem. Harry frequently heard students saying things like, 'Honestly some days I just feel likejumping on my broom and leaving this place,' or else, 'One more lesson like that and 1 mightjust do a Weasley.'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Fred and George had made sure nobody was likely to forget them too soon. For one thing,they had not left instructions on how to remove the swamp that now filled the corridor on thefifth floor of the east wing. Umbridge and Filch had been observed trying different means ofremoving it but without success. Eventually the area was roped off and Filch, gnashing histeeth furiously, was given the task of punting students across it to their classrooms. Harry wascertain that teachers like McGonagall or Flitwick could have removed the swamp in an instantbut, just as in the case of Fred and Georges Wildfire Whiz-bangs, they seemed to prefer towatch Umbridge struggle.

Then there were the two large broom-shaped holes in Umbridge's office door, through whichFred and George's Cleansweeps had smashed to rejoin their masters. Filch fitted a new doorand removed Harry's Firebolt to the dungeons where, it was rumoured, Umbridge had set anarmed security troll to guard it. However, her troubles were far from over.

Inspired by Fred and George's example, a great number of students were now vying for thenewly vacant positions of Troublemakers-in-Chief. In spite of the new door, somebodymanaged to slip a hairy-snouted Niffler into Umbridge's office, which promptly tore the placeapart in its search for shiny objects, leapt on Umbridge when she entered and tried to gnawthe rings off her stubby fingers. Dungbombs and Stink Pellets were dropped so frequently inthe corridors that it became the new fashion for students to perform Bubble-Head Charms onthemselves before leaving lessons, which ensured them a supply of fresh air, even though itgave them all the peculiar appearance of wearing upside-down goldfish bowls on their heads.

Filch prowled the corridors with a horsewhip ready in his hands, desperate to catchmiscreants, but the problem was that there were now so many of them he never knew whichway to turn. The Inquisitorial Squad was attempting to help him, but odd things kepthappening to its members. Warrington of the Slytherin Quidditch team reported to thehospital wing with a horrible skin complaint that made him look as though he had been coated in cornflakes; Pansy Parkinson, to Hermiones delight, missed all her lessons thefollowing day as she had sprouted antlers.

Meanwhile, it became clear just how many Skiving Snackboxes Fred and George hadmanaged to sell before leaving Hogwarts. Umbridge only had to enter her classroom for thestudents assembled there to faint, vomit, develop dangerous fevers or else spout blood fromboth nostrils. Shrieking with rage and frustration, she attempted to trace the mysterioussymptoms to their source, but the students told her stubbornly they were suffering from'Umbridge -itis'. After putting four successive classes in detention and failing to discover theirsecret, she was forced to give up and allow the bleeding, swooning, sweating and vomitingstudents to leave her classes in droves.

But not even the users of the Snackboxes could compete with that master of chaos, Peeves,who seemed to have taken Fred's parting words deeply to heart. Cackling madly, he soaredthrough the school, upending tables, bursting out of blackboards, toppling statues and vases; twice he shut Mrs Norris inside a suit of armour, from which she was rescued, yowlingloudly, by the furious caretaker. Peeves smashed lanterns and snuffed out candles, juggledburning torches over the heads of screaming students, caused neatly stacked piles ofparchment to topple into fires or out of windows; flooded the second floor when he pulled offall the taps in the bathrooms, dropped a bag of tarantulas in the middle of the Great Hallduring breakfast and, whenever he fancied a break, spent hours at a time floating along afterUmbridge and blowing loud raspberries every time she spoke.

None of the staff but Filch seemed to be stirring themselves to help her. Indeed, a week afterFred and George's departure Harry witnessed Professor McGonagall walking right pastPeeves, who was determinedly loosening a crystal chandelier, and could have sworn he heardher tell the poltergeist out of the corner of her mouth, 'It unscrews the other way.'

To cap matters, Montague had still not recovered from his sojourn in the toilet; he remainedconfused and disorientated and his parents were to be observed one Tuesday morningstriding up the front drive, looking extremely angry.

'Should we say something?' said Hermione in a worried voice, pressing her cheek against theCharms window so that she could see Mr and Mrs Montague marching inside. 'About whathappened to him? In case it helps Madam Pomfrey cure him?'

'Course not, he'll recover,' said Ron indifferently.

'Anyway, more trouble for Umbridge, isn't it?' said Harry in a satisfied voice.

He and Ron both tapped the teacups they were supposed to be charming with their wands. Harry's spouted four very short legs that could not reach the desk and wriggled pointlessly in midair. Ron's grew four very thin spindly legs that hoisted the cup off the desk with greatdifficulty, trembled for a few seconds, then folded, causing the cup to crack into two.

'Reparo,' said Hermione quickly, mending Ron's cup with a wave of her wand. That's all verywell, but what if Montague's permanently injured?'

'Who cares?' said Ron irritably, while his teacup stood up drunk-enly again, tremblingviolently at the knees. 'Montague shouldn't have tried to take all those points from Gryffindor,should he? If you want to worry about anyone, Hermione, worry about me!'

'You?' she said, catching her teacup as it scampered happily away across the desk on foursturdy little willow-patterned legs, and replacing it in front of her. 'Why should I be worriedabout you?'

'When Mum's next letter finally gets through Umbridge's screening process,' said Ron bitterly,now holding his cup up while its frail legs tried feebly to support its weight, 'I'm going to bein deep trouble. I wouldn't be surprised if she's sent another Howler.'

'But -'

'It'll be my fault Fred and George left, you wait,' said Ron darkly. 'She'll say I should'vestopped them leaving, I should've grabbed the ends of their brooms and hung on orsomething… yeah, it'll be all my fault.'

'Well, if she does say that it'll be very unfair, you couldn't have done anything! But I'm sureshe won't, I mean, if it's really true they've got premises in Diagon Alley, they must have beenplanning this for ages.'

'Yeah, but that's another thing, how did they get premises?' said Ron, hitting his teacup sohard with his wand that its legs collapsed again and it lay twitching before him. 'It's a bitdodgy isn't it? They'll need loads of Galleons to afford the rent on a place in Diagon Alley.

She'll want to know what they've been up to, to get their hands on that sort of gold.'

'Well, yes, that occurred to me, too,' said Hermione, allowing her teacup to jog in neat littlecircles around Harry's, whose stubby little legs were still unable to touch the desktop, 'I'vebeen wondering whether Mundungus has persuaded them to sell stolen goods or somethingawful.'

'He hasn't,' said Harry curtly.

'How do you know?' said Ron and Hermione together.

'Because -' Harry hesitated, but the moment to confess finally seemed to have come. Therewas no good to be gained in keeping silent if it meant anyone suspected that Fred and Georgewere criminals. 'Because they got the gold from me. I gave them my Triwizard winnings lastJune.'

There was a shocked silence, then Hermione's teacup jogged right over the edge of the deskand smashed on the floor.

'Oh, Harry, you didn't!' she said.

'Yes, I did,' said Harry mutinously. 'And I don't regret it, either. I didn't need the gold andthey'll be great at running a joke shop.'

'But this is excellent!' said Ron, looking thrilled. 'It's all your fault, Harry - Mum can't blameme at all! Can I tell her?'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Yeah, 1 suppose you'd better,' said Harry dully, "specially if she thinks they're receivingstolen cauldrons or something.'

Hermione said nothing at all for the rest of the lesson, but Harry had a shrewd suspicion thather self-restraint was bound to crack before long. Sure enough, once they had left the castlefor break and were standing around in the weak May sunshine, she fixed Harry with a beadyeye and opened her mouth with a determined air.

Harry interrupted her before she had even started.

'It's no good nagging me, it's done,' he said firmly. 'Fred and George have got the gold - spenta good bit of it, too, by the sounds of it - and I can't get it back from them and I don't want to.

So save your breath, Hermione.'

'I wasn't going to say anything about Fred and George!' she said in an injured voice.

Ron snorted disbelievingly and Hermione threw him a very dirty look.

'No, I wasn't!' she said angrily. 'As a matter of fact, I was going to ask Harry when he's goingto go back to Snape and ask for more Occlumency lessons!'

Harry's heart sank. Once they had exhausted the subject of Fred and George's dramaticdeparture, which admittedly had taken many hours, Ron and Hermione had wanted to hearnews of Sirius. As Harry had not confided in them the reason he had wanted to talk to Siriusin the first place, it had been hard to think of what to tell them; he had ended up saying, truthfully, that Sirius wanted Harry to resume Occlumency lessons. He had been regrettingthis ever since; Hermione would not let the subject drop and kept reverting to it when Harryleast expected it.

'You can't tell me you've stopped having funny dreams,' Hermione said now, 'because Rontold me you were muttering in your sleep again last night.'

Harry threw Ron a furious look. Ron had the grace to look ashamed of himself.

'You were only muttering a bit,' he mumbled apologetically. 'Something about "just a bitfurther".'

'I dreamed I was watching you lot play Quidditch,' Harry lied brutally. 'I was trying to getyou to stretch out a bit further to grab the Quaffle.'

Ron's ears went red. Harry felt a kind of vindictive pleasure; he had not, of course, dreamedanything of the sort.

Last night, he had once again made the journey along the Department of Mysteries corridor.

He had passed through the circular room, then the room full of clicking and dancing light,until he found himself again inside that cavernous room full of shelves on which were rangeddusty glass spheres.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

He had hurried straight towards row number ninety-seven, turned left and run along it… ithad probably been then that he had spoken aloud… just a bit further… for he felt his consciousself struggling to wake… and before he had reached the end of the row, he had found himselflying in bed again, gazing up at the canopy of his four-poster.

'You are trying to block your mind, aren't you?' said Hermione, looking beadily at Harry. 'Youare keeping going with your Occlumency?'

'Of course I am,' said Harry, trying to sound as though this question was insulting, but notquite meeting her eye. The truth was he was so intensely curious about what was hidden inthat room full of dusty orbs, that he was quite keen for the dreams to continue.

The problem was that with just under a month to go until the exams and every free momentdevoted to revision, his mind seemed so saturated with information when he went to bed hefound it very difficult to get to sleep at all; and when he did, his overwrought brain presentedhim most nights with stupid dreams about the exams. He also suspected that part of his mind- the part that often spoke in Hermione's voice — now felt guilty on the occasions it strayeddown that corridor ending in the black door, and sought to wake him before he could reachthe journeys end.

'You know,' said Ron, whose ears were still flaming red, 'if Montague doesn't recover beforeSlytherin play Hufflepuff, we might be in with a chance of winning the Cup.'

'Yeah, I's'pose so,' said Harry, glad of a change of subject.

'I mean, we've won one, lost one - if Slytherin lose to Hufflepuff next Saturday -'

'Yeah, that's right,' said Harry, losing track of what he was agreeing to. Cho Chang had justwalked across the courtyard, determinedly not looking at him.

*The final match of the Quidditch season, Gryffindor versus Ravenclaw, was to take place onthe last weekend of May. Although Slytherin had been narrowly defeated by Hufflepuff intheir last match, Gryffindor were not daring to hope for victory, due mainly (though of coursenobody said it to him) to Ron's abysmal goal-keeping record. He, however, seemed to havefound a new optimism.

'I mean, 1 can't get any worse, can I?' he told Harry and Hermione grimly over breakfast onthe morning of the match. 'Nothing to lose now, is there?'

'You know,' said Hermione, as she and Harry walked down to the pitch a little later in themidst of a very excitable crowd, 'I think Ron might do better without Fred and Georgearound. They never exactly gave him a lot of confidence.'

Luna Lovegood overtook them with what appeared to be a live eagle perched on top of herhead.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Oh, gosh, I forgot!' said Hermione, watching the eagle flapping its wings as Luna walkedserenely past a group of cackling and pointing Slytherins. 'Cho will be playing, won't she?'

Harry, who had not forgotten this, merely grunted.

They found seats in the topmost row of the stands. It was a fine, clear day; Ron could not wishfor better, and Harry found himself hoping against hope that Ron would not give theSlytherins cause for more rousing choruses of 'Weasley is our King'.

Lee Jordan, who had been very dispirited since Fred and George had left, was commentatingas usual. As the teams zoomed out on to the pitch he named the players with something lessthan his usual gusto.

'… Bradley… Davies… Chang,' he said, and Harry felt his stomach perform, less of a back flip,more a feeble lurch as Cho walked out on to the pitch, her shiny black hair rippling in theslight breeze. He was not sure what he wanted to happen any more, except that he could notstand any more rows. Even the sight of her chatting animatedly to Roger Davies as theyprepared to mount their brooms caused him only a slight twinge of jealousy.

'And they're off!' said Lee. 'And Davies takes the Quaffle immediately, Ravenclaw CaptainDavies with the Quaffle, he dodges Johnson, he dodges Bell, he dodges Spinnet as well… he'sgoing straight for goal! He's going to shoot - and - and -' Lee swore very loudly. 'And he'sscored.'

Harry and Hermione groaned with the rest of the Gryffindors. Predictably, horribly, theSlytherins on the other side of the stands began to sing:

"Weasley cannot save a thing He cannot block a single ring…'

'Harry' said a hoarse voice in Harrys ear. 'Hermione…'

Harry looked round and saw Hagrid's enormous bearded face sticking between the seats. Apparently, he had squeezed his way all along the row behind, for the first- and second-yearshe had just passed had a ruffled, flattened look about them. For some reason, Hagrid was bentdouble as though anxious not to be seen, though he was still at least four feet taller thaneverybody else.

'Listen,' he whispered, 'can yeh come with me? Now? While ev'ryone's watchin' the match?'

'Er… can't it wait, Hagrid?' asked Harry. Till the match is over?'

'No,' said Hagrid. 'No, Harry, it's gotta be now… while ev'ryone's lookin' the other way… please?'

Hagrid's nose was gently dripping blood. His eyes were both blackened. Harry had not seenhim this close-up since his return to the school; he looked utterly woebegone.

'Course,' said Harry at once, 'course we'll come.'

He and Hermione edged back along their row of seats, causing much grumbling among thestudents who had to stand up for them. The people in Hagrid's row were not complaining,merely attempting to make themselves as small as possible.

'I 'ppreciate this, you two, I really do,' said Hagrid as they reached the stairs. He kept looking around nervously as they descended towards the lawn below. 'I jus' hope she doesn' notice usgoin'.'

'You mean Umbridge?' said Harry. 'She won't, she's got her whole Inquisitorial Squad sittingwith her, didn't you see? She must be expecting trouble at the match.'

'Yeah, well, a bit o' trouble wouldn' hurt,' said Hagrid, pausing to peer around the edge of thestands to make sure the stretch of lawn between there and his cabin was deserted. 'Give usmore time.'

'What is it, Hagrid?' said Hermione, looking up at him with a concerned expression on herface as they hurried across the grass towards the edge of the Forest.

'Yeh - yeh'll see in a mo',' said Hagrid, looking over his shoulder as a great roar rose from thestands behind them. 'Hey - did someone jus' score?'

'It'll be Ravenclaw,' said Harry heavily.

'Good… good…' said Hagrid distractedly. Tha's good…'

They had to jog to keep up with him as he strode across the lawn, looking around with everyother step. When they reached his cabin, Hermione turned automatically left towards thefront door. Hagrid, however, walked straight past it into the shade of the trees on theoutermost edge of the Forest, where he picked up a crossbow that was leaning against a tree.

When he realised they were no longer with him, he turned.

'We're goin' in here,' he said, jerking his shaggy head behind him.

'Into the Forest?' said Hermione, perplexed.

'Yeah,' said Hagrid. 'C'mon now, quick, before we're spotted!'

Harry and Hermione looked at each other, then ducked into the cover of the trees behindHagrid, who was already striding away from them into the green gloom, his crossbow overhis arm. Harry and Hermione ran to catch up with him.

'Hagrid, why are you armed?' said Harry.

'Jus' a precaution,' said Hagrid, shrugging his massive shoulders.

'You didn't bring your crossbow the day you showed us the Thestrals,' said Hermione timidly.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Nah, well, we weren' goin' in so far then,' said Hagrid. 'An' anyway, tha' was before Firenzeleft the Forest, wasn' it?'

'Why does Firenze leaving make a difference?' asked Hermione curiously.

'Cause the other centaurs are good an' riled at me, tha's why,' said Hagrid quietly, glancingaround. 'They used ter be - well, yeh couldn' call 'em friendly — but we got on all righ'. Kept'emselves to 'emselves, bu' always turned up if I wanted a word. Not any more.' He sighed deeply.

'Firenze said they're angry because he went to work for Dumbledore,' Harry said, tripping ona protruding root because he was busy watching Hagrid's profile.

'Yeah,' said Hagrid heavily. 'Well, angry doesn' cover it. Ruddy livid. If 1 hadn' stepped in, 1reckon they'd've kicked Firenze ter death -'

'They attacked him?' said Hermione, sounding shocked.

'Yep,' said Hagrid gruffly, forcing his way through several low-hanging branches. 'He hadhalf the herd on to him.'

'And you stopped it?' said Harry, amazed and impressed. 'By yourself?'

'Course I did, couldn't stand by an' watch 'em kill 'im, could I?' said Hagrid. 'Lucky I waspassin', really… an' I'd've thought Firenze mighta remembered tha' before he started sendin' me stupid warnin's!' he added hotly and unexpectedly.

Harry and Hermione looked at each other, startled, but Hagrid, scowling, did not elaborate.,'Anyway,' he said, breathing a little more heavily than -usual, 'since then the other centaurs'vebin livid with me, an' the trouble is they've got a lot of influence in the Forest… cleverestcreatures in here.'

'Is that why we're here, Hagrid?' asked Hermione. 'The centaurs?'

'Ah, no,' said Hagrid, shaking his head dismissively, 'no, it's not them. Well, o' course, theycould complicate the problem, yeah… but yeh'll see what I mean in a bit.'

On this incomprehensible note he fell silent and forged a little ahead, taking one stride forevery three of theirs, so that they had great trouble keeping up with him.

The path was becoming increasingly overgrown and the trees grew so closely together as theywalked further and further into the Forest that it was as dark as dusk. They were soon a longway past the clearing where Hagrid had shown them the Thestrals, but Harry felt no sense ofunease until Hagrid stepped unexpectedly off the path and began wending his way in andout of trees towards the dark heart of the Forest.

'Hagrid!' said Harry, fighting his way through thickly knotted brambles, over which Hagridhad stepped with ease, and remembering very vividly what had happened to him on theother occasion he had stepped off the Forest path. 'Where are we going?'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Bit further,' said Hagrid over his shoulder. 'C'mon, Harry… we need ter keep together now.'

It was a great struggle to keep up with Hagrid, what with branches and thickets of thornthrough which Hagrid marched as easily as if they were cobwebs, but which snagged Harryand Hermione's robes, frequently entangling them so severely that they had to stop forminutes at a time to free themselves. Harry's arms and legs were soon covered in small cutsand scratches. They were so deep in the Forest now that sometimes all Harry could see ofHagrid in the gloom was a massive dark shape ahead of him. Any sound seemed threateningin the muffled silence. The breaking of a twig echoed loudly and the tiniest rustle ofmovement, even though it might have been made by an innocent sparrow, caused Harry topeer through the gloom for a culprit. It occurred to him that he had never managed to get thisfar into the Forest without meeting some kind of creature; their absence struck him as ratherominous.

'Hagrid, would it be all right if we lit our wands?' said Hermione quietly.

'Er… all righ',' Hagrid whispered back. 'In fact -'

He stopped suddenly and turned around; Hermione walked right into him and was knockedover backwards. Harry caught her just before she hit the Forest floor.

'Maybe we bes' jus' stop fer a momen', so I can… fill yeh in,' said Hagrid. 'Before we ge' there,like.'

'Good!' said Hermione, as Harry set her back on her feet. They both murmured 'Lumos!' andtheir wand-tips ignited. Hagrid's face swam through the gloom by the light of the twowavering beams and Harry saw again that he looked nervous and sad.

'Righ',' said Hagrid. 'Well… see… the thing is…'

He took a great breath.

'Well, there's a good chance I'm goin' ter be gettin' the sack any day now,' he said.

Harry and Hermione looked at each other, then back at him.

'But you've lasted this long -' Hermione said tentatively. 'What makes you think -'

'Umbridge reckons it was me that put tha' Niffler in her office.'

'And was it?' said Harry, before he could stop himself.

'No, it ruddy well wasn'!' said Hagrid indignantly. 'On'y any-thin' ter do with magicalcreatures an' she thinks it's got somethin' ter do with me. Yeh know she's bin lookin' fer achance ter get rid of me ever since I got back. I don' wan' ter go, o' course, but if it wasn' fer…

well… the special circumstances I'm abou' ter explain to yeh, I'd leave righ' now, before she'sgo' the chance ter do it in front o' the whole school, like she did with Trelawney.'

Harry and Hermione both made noises of protest, but Hagrid overrode them with a wave ofone of his enormous hands.

'It's not the end o' the world, I'll be able ter help Dumbledore once I'm outta here, I can beuseful ter the Order. An' you lot'll have Grubbly-Plank, yeh'll - yeh'll get through yer examsfine…"

His voice trembled and broke.

'Don' worry abou' me,' he said hastily, as Hermione made to pat his arm. He pulled hisenormous spotted handkerchief from the pocket of his waistcoat and mopped his eyes with it.

'Look, I wouldn' be tellin' yer this at all if I didn' have ter. See, if I go… well, I can' leavewithou'… withou' tellin' someone… because I'll - I'll need yeh two ter help me. An' Ron, if he'swillin'.'

'Of course we'll help you,' said Harry at once. 'What do you want us to do?'

Hagrid gave a great sniff and patted Harry wordlessly on the shoulder with such force Harrywas knocked sideways into a tree.

'1 knew yeh'd say yes,' said Hagrid into his handkerchief, 'but I won'… never… forget… well… c'mon… jus' a little bit further through here… watch yerselves, now, there's nettles…'

They walked on in silence for another fifteen minutes; Harry had opened his mouth to ask how much further they had to go when Hagrid threw out his right arm to signal that theyshould stop.

'Really easy' he said softly. 'Very quiet, now…'

They crept forwards and Harry saw that they were facing a large, smooth mound of earthnearly as tall as Hagrid that he thought, with a jolt of dread, was sure to be the lair of someenormous animal. Trees had been ripped up at the roots all around the mound, so that itstood on a bare patch of ground surrounded by heaps of trunks and boughs that formed akind of fence or barricade, behind which Harry, Hermione and Hagrid now stood.

'Sleepin',' breathed Hagrid.

Sure enough, Harry could hear a distant, rhythmic rumbling that sounded like a pair ofenormous lungs at work. He glanced sideways at Hermione, who was gazing at the moundwith her mouth slightly open. She looked utterly terrified.

'Hagrid,' she said in a whisper barely audible over the sound of the sleeping creature, 'who ishe?'

Harry found this an odd question… 'What is it?' was the one he had been planning on asking.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Hagrid, you told us -' said Hermione, her wand now shaking in her hand, 'you told us noneof them wanted to come!'

Harry looked from her to Hagrid and then, as realisation hit him, he looked back at themound with a small gasp of horror.

The great mound of earth, on which he, Hermione and Hagrid could easily have stood, wasmoving slowly up and down in time with the deep, grunting breathing. It was not a mound atall. It was the curved back of what was clearly —'Well - no - he didn' want ter come,' said Hagrid, sounding desperate. 'But I had ter bring him,Hermione, I had ter!'

'But why?' asked Hermione, who sounded as though she wanted to cry. 'Why - what - oh,Hagridr'I knew if I jus' got him back,' said Hagrid, sounding close to tears himself, 'an' - an' taughthim a few manners - I'd be able ter take him outside an' show ev'ryone he's harmless!'

'Harmless!' said Hermione shrilly, and Hagrid made frantic hushing noises with his hands asthe enormous creature before them grunted loudly and shifted in its sleep. 'He's been hurtingyou all this time, hasn't he? That's why you've had all these injuries!'

'He don' know his own strength!' said Hagrid earnestly. 'An' he's gettin' better, he's notfightin' so much any more —'

'So, this is why it took you two months to get home!' said Hermione distractedly. 'Oh, Hagrid,why did you bring him back if he didn't want to come? Wouldn't he have been happier withhis own people?'

They were all bullyin' him, Hermione, 'cause he's so small!' said Hagrid.

'Small?' said Hermione. 'Small?'

'Hermione, I couldn' leave him,' said Hagrid, tears now trickling down his bruised face intohis beard. 'See - he's my brother!'

Hermione simply stared at him, her mouth open.

'Hagrid, when you say "brother",' said Harry slowly, 'do you mean —?'

'Well - half-brother,' amended Hagrid. Turns put me mother took up with another giant whenshe left me dad, an' she went an' had Grawp here -'

'Grawp?' said Harry.

'Yeah… well, tha's what it sounds like when he says his name,' said Hagrid anxiously. 'Hedon' speak a lot of English… I've bin tryin' ter teach him… anyway, she don' seem ter haveliked him much more'n she liked me. See, with giantesses, what counts is producin' good bigkids, and he's always been a bit on the runty side fer a giant - on'y sixteen foot -'

'Oh, yes, tiny!' said Hermione, with a kind of hysterical sarcasm. 'Absolutely minuscule!'

'He was bein' kicked aroun' by all o' them - I jus' couldn' leave him -'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Did Madame Maxime want to bring him back?' asked Harry.

'She - well, she could see it was right importan' ter me,' said Hagrid, twisting his enormoushands. 'Bu' - bu' she got a bit tired o' him after a while, I must admit… so we split up on thejourney home… she promised not ter tell anyone, though…"

'How on earth did you get him back without anyone noticing?' said Harry.

'Well, tha's why it took so long, see,' said Hagrid. 'Could on'y travel by nigh' an' through wildcountry an' stuff. Course, he covers the ground pretty well when he wants ter, but he kep' wantin' ter go back.'

'Oh, Hagrid, why on earth didn't you let him!' said Hermione, flopping down on to a rippedup tree and burying her face in her hands. 'What do you think you're going to do with aviolent giant who doesn't even want to be here!'

'Well, now - "violent" - tha's a bit harsh,' said Hagrid, still twisting his hands agitatedly. Tiladmit he mighta taken a couple o' swings at me when he's bin in a bad mood, but he's gettin' better, loads better, settlin' down well.'

'What are those ropes for, then?' Harry asked.

He had just noticed ropes thick as saplings stretching from around the trunks of the largestnearby trees towards the place where Grawp lay curled on the ground with his back to them.

'You have to keep him tied up?' said Hermione faintly.

'Well… yeah…' said Hagrid, looking anxious. 'See - it's like I say - he doesn' really know 'isown strength.'

Harry understood now why there had been such a suspicious lack of any other living creaturein this part of the Forest.

'So, what is it you want Harry and Ron and me to do?' Hermione asked apprehensively.

'Look after him,' said Hagrid croakily. 'After I'm gone.'

Harry and Hermione exchanged miserable looks, Harry uncomfortably aware that he hadalready promised Hagrid that he would do whatever he asked.

'What - what does that involve, exactly?' Hermione enquired.

'Not food or anythin'!' said Hagrid eagerly. 'He can get his own food, no problem. Birds an' deer an' stuff… no, it's company he needs. If I jus' knew someone was carryin' on tryin' terhelp him a bit… teachin' him, yeh know.'

Harry said nothing, but turned to look back at the gigantic form lying asleep on the ground in front of them. Unlike Hagrid, who simply looked like an oversized human, Grawp lookedstrangely misshapen. What Harry had taken to be a vast mossy boulder to the left of the greatearthen mound he now recognised as Grawp's head. It was much larger in proportion to thebody than a human head, and was almost perfectly round and covered with tightly curling,close-growing hair the colour of bracken. The rim of a single large, fleshy ear was visible ontop of the head, which seemed to sit, rather like Uncle Vernon's, directly upon the shoulderswith little or no neck in between. The back, under what looked like a dirty brownish smockcomprised of animal skins sewn roughly together, was very broad; and as Grawp slept, itseemed to strain a little at the rough seams of the skins. The legs were curled up under thebody. Harry could see the soles of enormous, filthy, bare feet, large as sledges, resting one ontop of the other on the earthy Forest floor.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'You want us to teach him,' Harry said in a hollow voice. He now understood what Firenze'swarning had meant. His attempt is not working. He would do better to abandon it. Of course, theother creatures who lived in the Forest would have heard Hagrids fruitless attempts to teachGrawp English.

'Yeah - even if yeh jus' talk ter him a bit,' said Hagrid hopefully. "Cause I reckon, if he can talkter people, he'll understand more that we all like 'im really, an' want 'im ter stay.'

Harry looked at Hermione, who peered back at him from between the fingers over her face.

'Kind of makes you wish we had Norbert back, doesn't it?' he said, and she gave a very shakylaugh.

'Yeh'll do it, then?' said Hagrid, who did not seem to have caught what Harry had just said.

'We'll…' said Harry, already bound by his promise. 'We'll try, Hagrid.'

'I knew I could count on yeh, Harry,' Hagrid said, beaming in a very watery way and dabbingat his face with his handkerchief again. 'An' I don' wan1 yeh ter put yerself out too much,like… I know yeh've got exams… if yeh could jus' nip down here in yer Invisibility Cloakmaybe once a week an' have a little chat with 'im. I'll wake 'im up, then - introduce yeh -'

'Wha— no!' said Hermione, jumping up. 'Hagrid, no, don't wake him, really, we don't need -'

But Hagrid had already stepped over the great tree trunk in front of them and was proceedingtowards Grawp. When he was about ten feet away, he lifted a long, broken bough from theground, smiled reassuringly over his shoulder at Harry and Hermione, then poked Grawphard in the middle of the back with the end of the bough.

The giant gave a roar that echoed around the silent Forest; birds in the treetops overhead

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

rose
twittering from their perches and soared away. In front of Harry and Hermione, meanwhile,the gigantic Grawp was rising from the ground, which shuddered as he placed an enormoushand upon it to push himself on to his knees. He turned his head to see who and what haddisturbed him.

'All righ', Grawpy?' said Hagrid, in a would-be cheery voice, backing away with the longbough raised, ready to poke Grawp again. 'Had a nice sleep, eh?'

Harry and Hermione retreated as far as they could while still keeping the giant within theirsights. Grawp knelt between two trees he had not yet uprooted. They looked up into hisstartlingly huge face that resembled a grey full moon swimming in the gloom of the clearing.

It was as though the features had been hewn on to a great stone ball. The nose was stubby andshapeless, the mouth lopsided and full of misshapen yellow teeth the size of half-bricks; theeyes, small by giant standards, were a muddy greenish-brown and just now were halfgummedtogether with sleep. Grawp raised dirty knuckles, each as big as a cricket ball, to hiseyes, rubbed vigorously, then, without warning, pushed himself to his feet with surprisingspeed and agility.

'Oh my!' Harry heard Hermione squeal, terrified, beside him.

The trees to which the other ends of the ropes around Grawp's wrists and ankles wereattached creaked ominously. He was, asHagrid had said, at least sixteen feet tall. Gazing blearily around, Grawp reached out a handthe size of a beach umbrella, seized a bird's nest from the upper branches of a towering pineand turned it upside-down with a roar of apparent displeasure that there was no bird in it; eggs fell like grenades towards the ground and Hagrid threw his arms over his head toprotect himself.

'Anyway, Grawpy,' shouted Hagrid, looking up apprehensively in case of further falling eggs,'I've brought some friends ter meet yeh. Remember, I told yeh I might? Remember, when Isaid I might have ter go on a little trip an' leave them ter look after yeh fer a bit? Rememberthat, Grawpy?'

But Grawp merely gave another low roar; it was hard to say whether he was listening toHagrid or whether he even recognised the sounds Hagrid was making as speech. He had nowseized the top of the pine tree and was pulling it towards him, evidently for the simplepleasure of seeing how far it would spring back when he let go.

'Now, Grawpy, don' do that!' shouted Hagrid. 'Tha's how you ended up pullin' up the others -'

And sure enough, Harry could see the earth around the tree's roots beginning to crack.

'I got company for yeh!' Hagrid shouted. 'Company, see! Look down, yeh big buffoon, Ibrought yeh some friends!'
'Oh, Hagrid, don't,' moaned Hermione, but Hagrid had already raised the bough again andgave Grawp's knee a sharp poke.
The giant let go of the top of the tree, which swayed alarmingly and deluged Hagrid with arain of pine needles, and looked down.
This,' said Hagrid, hastening over to where Harry and Hermione stood, 'is Harry, Grawp! Harry Potter! He migh' be comin' ter visit yeh if I have ter go away, understand?'
The giant had only just realised that Harry and Hermione were there. They watched, in greattrepidation, as he lowered his huge boulder of a head so that he could peer blearily at them.
'An' this is Hermione, see? Her—' Hagrid hesitated. Turning to Hermione, he said, 'Wouldyeh mind if he called yeh Hermy, Hermione? On'y it's a difficult name fer him ter remember.'
'No, not at all,' squeaked Hermione.
This is Hermy, Grawp! An' she's gonna be comin' an' all! Is'n' tha' nice? Eh? Two friends feryeh ter - GRAWPY, NO!'
Grawp's hand had shot out of nowhere towards Hermione; Harry seized her and pulled herbackwards behind the tree, so that Grawp's fist scraped the trunk but closed on thin air.
'BAD BOY, GRAWPY!' they heard Hagrid yelling, as Hermione clung to Harry behind thetree, shaking and whimpering. 'VERY BAD BOY! YEH DON' GRAB - OUCH!'
Harry poked his head out from around the trunk and saw Hagrid lying on his back, his handover his nose. Grawp, apparently losing interest, had straightened up and was again engagedin pulling back the pine as far as it would go.
'Righ',' said Hagrid thickly, getting up with one hand pinching his bleeding nose and theother grasping his crossbow, 'well… there yeh are… yeh've met him an' - an' now he'll knowyeh when yeh come back. Yeah… well…'
He looked up at Grawp, who was now pulling back the pine with an expression of detachedpleasure on his boulderish face; the roots were creaking as he ripped them away from theground.

'Well, I reckon tha's enough fer one day,' said Hagrid. 'We'll -er - we'll go back now, shall we?'
Harry and Hermione nodded. Hagrid shouldered his crossbow again and, still pinching hisnose, led the way back into the trees.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Nobody spoke for a while, not even when they heard the distant crash that meant Grawp hadpulled over the pine tree at last. Hermione's face was pale and set. Harry could not think of asingle thing to say. What on earth was going to happen when somebody found out thatHagrid had hidden Grawp in the Forbidden Forest? And he had promised that he, Ron andHermione would continue Hagrid's totally pointless attempts to civilise the giant. How couldHagrid, even with his immense capacity to delude himself that fanged monsters wereloveably harmless, fool himself that Grawp would ever be fit to mix with humans?

'Hold it,' said Hagrid abruptly, just as Harry and Hermione were struggling through a patchof thick knotgrass behind him. He pulled an arrow out of the quiver over his shoulder andfitted it into the crossbow. Harry and Hermione raised their wands; now that they hadstopped walking, they, too, could hear movement close by.

'Oh, blimey' said Hagrid quietly.

'I thought we told you, Hagrid,' said a deep male voice, 'that you are no longer welcome here?'

A man's naked torso seemed for an instant to be floating towards them through the dappledgreen half-light; then they saw that his waist joined smoothly into a horse's chestnut body.

This centaur had a proud, high-cheekboned face and long black hair. Like Hagrid, he wasarmed; a quiverful of arrows and a longbow were slung over his shoulders.

'How are yeh, Magorian?' said Hagrid warily.

The trees behind the centaur rustled and four or five more centaurs emerged behind him.

Harry recognised the black-bodied and bearded Bane, whom he had met nearly four yearsago on the same night he had met Firenze. Bane gave no sign that he had ever seen Harrybefore.

'So,' he said, with a nasty inflection in his voice, before turning immediately to Magorian. 'Weagreed, I think, what we would do if this human ever showed his face in the Forest again?'

'This human" now, am I?' said Hagrid testily. 'Jus' fer stoppin' all of yeh committin' murder?'

'You ought not to have meddled, Hagrid,' said Magorian. 'Our ways are not yours, nor are ourlaws. Firenze has betrayed and dishonoured us.'

'I dunno how yeh'work that out,' said Hagrid impatiently. 'He's done nothin' except helpAlbus Dumbledore -'

'Firenze has entered into servitude to humans,' said a grey centaur with a hard, deeply linedface.

'Servitude!' said Hagrid scathingly. 'He's doin' Dumbledore a favour is all -'

'He is peddling our knowledge and secrets among humans,' said Magorian quietly. There canbe no return from such disgrace.'

'If yeh say so,' said Hagrid, shrugging, 'but personally I think yeh're makin' a big mistake -'

'As are you, human,' said Bane, 'coming back into our Forest when we warned you -'

'Now, yeh listen ter me,' said Hagrid angrily. Til have less of the'our" Forest, if it's all the same ter yeh. It's not up ter yeh who comes an' goes in here -'

'No more is it up to you, Hagrid,' said Magorian smoothly. 'I shall let you pass today becauseyou are accompanied by your young —'

They're not his!' interrupted Bane contemptuously. 'Students, Magorian, from up at theschool! They have probably already profited from the traitor Firenze's teachings.'

'Nevertheless,' said Magorian calmly, 'the slaughter of foals is a terrible crime - we do nottouch the innocent. Today, Hagrid, you pass. Henceforth, stay away from this place. Youforfeited the friendship of the centaurs when you helped the traitor Firenze escape us.'

'I won' be kept outta the Fores' by a bunch o' old mules like yeh!' said Hagrid loudly.

'Hagrid,' said Hermione in a high-pitched and terrified voice, as both Bane and the greycentaur pawed at the ground, 'let's go, please let's go!'

Hagrid moved forwards, but his crossbow was still raised and his eyes were still fixedthreateningly upon Magorian.

'We know what you are keeping in the Forest, Hagrid!' Magorian called after them, as thecentaurs slipped out of sight. 'And our tolerance is waning!'

Hagrid turned and gave every appearance of wanting to walk straight back to Magorian.

'Yeh'll tolerate 'im as long as he's here, it's as much his Forest as yours!' he yelled, as Harryand Hermione both pushed with all their might against Hagrid's moleskin waistcoat in aneffort to keep him moving forwards. Still scowling, he looked down; his expression changedto mild surprise at the sight of them both pushing him; he seemed not to have felt it.

'Calm down, you two,' he said, turning to walk on while they panted along behind him. 'Ruddy old mules, though, eh?'

'Hagrid,' said Hermione breathlessly, skirting the patch of nettles they had passed on theirway there, 'if the centaurs don't want humans in the Forest, it doesn't really look as thoughHarry and I will be able -'

'Ah, you heard what they said, 'said Hagrid dismissively, 'they wouldn't hurt foals - I mean,kids. Anyway, we can' let ourselves be pushed aroun' by that lot.'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Nice try,' Harry murmured to Hermione, who looked crestfallen.

At last they rejoined the path and, after another ten minutes, the trees began to thin; they wereable to see patches of clear blue sky again and, in the distance, the definite sounds of cheeringand shouting.

'Was that another goal?' asked Hagrid, pausing in the shelter of the trees as the Quidditchstadium came into view. 'Or d'yeh reckon the match is over?'

'I don't know,' said Hermione miserably. Harry saw that she looked much the worse for wear; her hair was full of twigs and leaves, her robes were ripped in several places and there werenumerous scratches on her face and arms. He knew he must look little better.

'I reckon it's over, yeh know!' said Hagrid, still squinting towards the stadium. 'Look - there'speople comin' out already - if yeh two hurry yeh'll be able ter blend in with the crowd an' noone'll know yeh weren't there!'

'Good idea,' said Harry. 'Well… see you later, then, Hagrid.'

'I don't believe him,' said Hermione in a very unsteady voice, the moment they were out ofearshot of Hagrid. 'I don't believe him. I really don't believe him.'

'Calm down,' said Harry.

'Calm down!' she said feverishly. 'A giant! A giant in the Forest! And we're supposed to givehim English lessons! Always assuming, of course, we can get past the herd of murderous centaurs on the way in and out! I - don't - believe - him!'

'We haven't got to do anything yet!' Harry tried to reassure her in a quiet voice, as they joineda stream of jabbering Hufflepuffs heading back towards the castle. 'He's not asking us to doanything unless he gets chucked out and that might not even happen.'

'Oh, come off it, Harry!' said Hermione angrily, stopping dead in her tracks so that the peoplebehind had to swerve to avoid her. 'Of course he's going to be chucked out and, to beperfectly honest, after what we've just seen, who can blame Umbridge?'

There was a pause in which Harry glared at her, and her eyes filled slowly with tears.

'You didn't mean that,' said Harry quietly.

'No… well… all right… 1 didn't,' she said, wiping her eyes angrily. 'But why does he have tomake life so difficult for himself - for us?'

'I dunno -'

'Weasley is our King, Weasley is our King, He didn't let the Quaffle in, Weasley is our King…"

'And 1 wish they'd stop singing that stupid song,' said Hermione miserably, 'haven't theygloated enough?'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

A great tide of students was moving up the sloping lawns from the pitch.

'Oh, let's get in before we have to meet the Slytherins,' said Hermione.

'Weasley can save anything, He never leaves a single ring, That's why.Gryffindors all sing: Weasley isour King.'

'Hermione…' said Harry slowly.

The song was growing louder, but it was issuing not from a crowd of green-and-silver-cladSlytherins, but from a mass of red and gold moving slowly towards the castle, bearing asolitary figure upon its many shoulders.

'Weasley is our King, Weasley is our King, He didn't let the Quaffle in, Weasley is our King…"

'No?' said Hermione in a hushed voice.

'YES!' said Harry loudly.

'HARRY! HERMIONE!' yelled Ron, waving the silver Quidditch cup in the air and lookingquite beside himself. 'WE DID IT! WE WON!'

They beamed up at him as he passed. There was a scrum at the door of the castle and Ron'shead got rather badly bumped on the lintel, but nobody seemed to want to put him down.

Still singing, the crowd squeezed itself into the Entrance Hall and out of sight. Harry andHermione watched them go, beaming, until the last echoing strains of 'Weasley is our King' died away. Then they turned to each other, their smiles fading.

'We'll save our news till tomorrow, shall we?' said Harry.

'Yes, all right,' said Hermione wearily. 'I'm not in any hurry.'

They climbed the steps together. At the front doors both instinctively looked back at theForbidden Forest. Harry was not sure whether or not it was his imagination, but he ratherthought he saw a small cloud of birds erupting into the air over the tree tops in the distance,almost as though the tree in which they had been nesting had just been pulled up by the roots.

— CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE —

Ron's euphoria at helping Gryffindor scrape the Quidditch cup was such that he couldn'tsettle to anything next day. All he wanted to do was talk over the match, so Harry andHermione found it very difficult to find an opening in which to mention Grawp. Not thateither of them tried very hard; neither was keen to be the one to bring Ron back to reality inquite such a brutal fashion. As it was another fine, warm day, they persuaded him to jointhem in revising under the beech tree at the edge of the lake, where they had less chance ofbeing overheard than in the common room. Ron was not particularly keen on this idea at first- he was thoroughly enjoying being patted on the back by every Gryffindor who walked pasthis chair, not to mention the occasional outbursts of 'Weasley is our King' - but after a whilehe agreed that some fresh air might do him good.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

They spread their books out in the shade of the beech tree and sat down while Ron talkedthem through his first save of the match for what felt like the dozenth time.

'Well, I mean, I'd already let in that one of Davies's, so I wasn't feeling all that confident, but Idunno, when Bradley came towards me, just out of nowhere, I thought - you can do this! And Ihad about a second to decide which way to fly, you know, because he looked like he wasaiming for the right goalhoop - my right, obviously, his left - but I had a funny feeling that hewas feinting, and so I took the chance and flew left - his right, I mean - and - well - you sawwhat happened,' he concluded modestly, sweeping his hair back quite unnecessarily so that itlooked interestingly windswept and glancing around to see whether the people nearest tothem — a bunch of gossiping third-year Hufflepuffs — had heard him. 'And then, whenChambers came at me about five minutes later - What?' Ron asked, having stopped midsentenceat the look on Harry's face. 'Why are you grinning?'

'I'm not,' said Harry quickly, and looked down at his Transfiguration notes, attempting tostraighten his face. The truth was that Ron had just reminded Harry forcibly of anotherGryffindor Quidditch player who had once sat rumpling his hair under this very tree. 'I'm justglad we won, that's all.'

'Yeah,' said Ron slowly, savouring the words, 'we won. Did you see the look on Changs facewhen Ginny got the Snitch right out from under her nose?'

'I suppose she cried, did she?' said Harry bitterly.

'Well, yeah - more out of temper than anything, though…' Ron frowned slightly. 'But you sawher chuck her broom away when she got back to the ground, didn't you?'

'Er -' said Harry.

'Well, actually… no, Ron,' said Hermione with a heavy sigh, putting down her book andlooking at him apologetically. 'As a matter of fact, the only bit of the match Harry and I sawwas Davies's first goal.'

Ron's carefully ruffled hair seemed to wilt with disappointment. 'You didn't watch?' he saidfaintly, looking from one to the other. 'You didn't see me make any of those saves?'

'Well - no,' said Hermione, stretching out a placatory hand towards him. 'But Ron, we didn'twant to leave — we had to!'

'Yeah?' said Ron, whose face was growing rather red. 'How come?'

'It was Hagrid,' said Harry. 'He decided to tell us why he's been covered in injuries ever sincehe got back from the giants. He wanted us to go into the Forest with him, we had no choice,you know how he gets. Anyway…'

The story was told in five minutes, by the end of which Ron's indignation had been replacedby a look of total incredulity.

'He brought one back and hid it in the Forest?'

'Yep,' said Harry grimly.

'No,' said Ron, as though by saying this he could make it untrue. 'No, he can't have.'

'Well, he has,' said Hermione firmly. 'Grawp's about sixteen feet tall, enjoys ripping uptwenty-foot pine trees, and knows me,' she snorted, 'as Hermy.'

Ron gave a nervous laugh.

'And Hagrid wants us to… ?'

Teach him English, yeah,' said Harry.

'He's lost his mind,' said Ron in an almost awed voice.

'Yes,' said Hermione irritably, turning a page of Intermediate Transfiguration and glaring at aseries of diagrams showing an owl turning into a pair of opera glasses. 'Yes, I'm starting tothink he has. But, unfortunately, he made Harry and me promise.'

'Well, you're just going to have to break your promise, that's all,' said Ron firmly. 'I mean,come on… we've got exams and we're about that far -' he held up his hand to show thumband forefinger almost touching '- from being chucked out as it is. And anyway… rememberNorbert? Remember Aragog? Have we ever come off better for mixing with any of Hagrid'smonster mates?'

'I know, it's just that - we promised,' said Hermione in a small voice.

Ron smoothed his hair flat again, looking preoccupied.

'Well,' he sighed, 'Hagrid hasn't been sacked yet, has he? He's hung on this long, maybe he'llhang on till the end of term and we won't have to go near Grawp at all.'

*The castle grounds were gleaming in the sunlight as though freshly painted; the cloudless skysmiled at itself in the smoothly sparkling lake; the satin green lawns rippled occasionally in agentle breeze. June had arrived, but to the fifth-years this meant only one thing: their OWLswere upon them at last.

Their teachers were no longer setting them homework; lessons were devoted to revising thosetopics the teachers thought most likely to come up in the exams. The purposeful, feverishatmosphere drove nearly everything but the OWLs from Harry's mind, though he did wonderoccasionally during Potions lessons whether Lupin had ever told Snape that he must continuegiving Harry Occlumency tuition. If he had, then Snape had ignored Lupin as thoroughly ashe was now ignoring Harry. This suited Harry veryUWLS OZJwell; he was quite busy and tense enough without extra classes with Snape, and to his reliefHermione was much too preoccupied these days to badger him about Occlumency; she wasspending a lot of time muttering to herself, and had not laid out any elf clothes for days.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

She was not the only person acting oddly as the OWLs drew steadily nearer. Ernie Macmillanhad developed an irritating habit of interrogating people about their revision practices.

'How many hours d'you think you're doing a day?' he demanded of Harry and Ron as theyqueued outside Herbology, a manic gleam in his eyes.

'I dunno,' said Ron. 'A few.'

'More or less than eight?'

'Less, I's'pose,' said Ron, looking slightly alarmed.

'I'm doing eight,' said Ernie, puffing out his chest. 'Eight or nine. I'm getting an hour in beforebreakfast every day. Eights my average. I can do ten on a good weekend day. I did nine and ahalf on Monday. Not so good on Tuesday - only seven and a quarter. Then on Wednesday -'

Harry was deeply thankful that Professor Sprout ushered them into greenhouse three at thatpoint, forcing Ernie to abandon his recital.

Meanwhile, Draco Malfoy had found a different way to induce panic.

'Of course, it's not what you know,' he was heard to tell Crabbe and Goyle loudly outsidePotions a few days before the exams were to start, 'it's who you know. Now, Father's beenfriendly with the head of the Wizarding Examinations Authority for years — old GriseldaMarchbanks - we've had her round for dinner and everything…'

'Do you think that's true?' Hermione whispered in alarm to Harry and Ron.

'Nothing we can do about it if it is,' said Ron gloomily.

'I don't think it's true,' said Neville quietly from behind them. 'Because Griselda Marchbanksis a friend of my gran's, and she's never mentioned the Malfoys.'

'What's she like, Neville?' asked Hermione at once. 'Is she strict?'

'Well, he has,' said Hermione firmly. 'Grawp's about sixteen feet tall, enjoys ripping uptwenty-foot pine trees, and knows me,' she snorted, 'as Hermy.'

Ron gave a nervous laugh. ..;

'And Hagrid wants us to…?'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Teach him English, yeah,' said Harry.
'He's lost his mind,' said Ron in an almost awed voice.
'Yes,' said Hermione irritably, turning a page of Intermediate Transfiguration and glaring at aseries of diagrams showing an owl turning into a pair of opera glasses. 'Yes, I'm starting tothink he has. But, unfortunately, he made Harry and me promise.'

'Well, you're just going to have to break your promise, that's all,' said Ron firmly. 'I mean,come on… we've got exams and we're about that far -' he held up his hand to show thumband forefinger almost touching '- from being chucked out as it is. And anyway… rememberNorbert? Remember Aragog? Have we ever come off better for mixing with any of Hagrid'smonster mates?'
'I know, it's just that - we promised,' said Hermione in a small voice.
Ron smoothed his hair flat again, looking preoccupied.
'Well,' he sighed, 'Hagrid hasn't been sacked yet, has he? He's hung on this long, maybe he'llhang on till the end of term and we won't have to go near Grawp at all.'
*The castle grounds were gleaming in the sunlight as though freshly painted; the cloudless skysmiled at itself in the smoothly sparkling lake; the satin green lawns rippled occasionally in agentle breeze. June had arrived, but to the fifth-years this meant only one thing: their OWLswere upon them at last.
Their teachers were no longer setting them homework; lessons were devoted to revising thosetopics the teachers thought most likely to come up in the exams. The purposeful, feverishatmosphere drove nearly everything but the OWLs from Harry's mind, though he did wonderoccasionally during Potions lessons whether Lupin had ever told Snape that he must continuegiving Harry Occlumency tuition. If he had, then Snape had ignored Lupin as thoroughly ashe was now ignoring Harry. This suited Harry very well; he was quite busy and tense enoughwithout extra classes with Snape, and to his relief Hermione was much too preoccupied thesedays to badger him about Occlumency; she was spending a lot of time muttering to herself,and had not laid out any elf clothes for days.
She was not the only person acting oddly as the OWLs drew steadily nearer. Ernie Macmillanhad developed an irritating habit of interrogating people about their revision practices.
'How many hours d'you think you're doing a day?' he demanded of Harry and Ron as theyqueued outside Herbology a manic gleam in his eyes.
'I dunno,' said Ron. 'A few.'
'More or less than eight?'
'Less, I's'pose,' said Ron, looking slightly alarmed.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'I'm doing eight,' said Ernie, puffing out his chest. 'Eight or nine. I'm getting an hour in beforebreakfast every day. Eight's my average. I can do ten on a good weekend day. I did nine and ahalf on Monday. Not so good on Tuesday - only seven and a quarter. Then on Wednesday -'

Harry was deeply thankful that Professor Sprout ushered them into greenhouse three at thatpoint, forcing Ernie to abandon his recital.

Meanwhile, Draco Malfoy had found a different way to induce panic.

'Of course, it's not what you know,' he was heard to tell Crabbe and Goyle loudly outsidePotions a few days before the exams were to start, 'it's who you know. Now, Father's beenfriendly with the head of the Wizarding Examinations Authority for years - old GriseldaMarchbanks - we've had her round for dinner and everything…'

'Do you think that's true?' Hermione whispered in alarm to Harry and Ron.

'Nothing we can do about it if it is,' said Ron gloomily.

'I don't think it's true,' said Neville quietly from behind them. 'Because Griselda Marchbanksis a friend of my gran's, and she's never mentioned the Malfoys.'

'What's she like, Neville?' asked Hermione at once. 'Is she strict?'

'Bit like Gran, really,' said Neville in a subdued voice.

'Knowing her won't hurt your chances, though, will it?' Ron told him encouragingly.

'Oh, I don't think it will make any difference,' said Neville, still more miserably. 'Grans alwaystelling Professor Marchbanks I'm not as good as my dad… well… you saw what she's like atSt Mungo'sNeville looked fixedly at the floor. Harry, Ron and Hermione glanced at each other, but didn'tknow what to say. It was the first time Neville had acknowledged that they had met at thewizarding hospital.

Meanwhile, a flourishing black-market trade in aids to concentration, mental agility andwakefulness had sprung up among the fifth- and seventh-years. Harry and Ron were muchtempted by the bottle of Baruffio's Brain Elixir offered to them by Ravenclaw sixth-year EddieCarmichael, who swore it was solely responsible for the nine 'Outstanding' OWLs he hadgained the previous summer and was offering a whole pint for a mere twelve Galleons. Ronassured Harry he would reimburse him for his half the moment he left Hogwarts and got a job, but before they could close the deal, Hermione had confiscated the bottle fromCarmichael and poured the contents down a toilet.

'Hermione, we wanted to buy that!' shouted Ron.

'Don't be stupid,' she snarled. 'You might as well take Harold Dingle's powdered dragon clawand have done with it.'

'Dingle's got powdered dragon claw?' said Ron eagerly.

'Not any more,' said Hermione. 'I confiscated that, too. None of these things actually work,you know.'

'Dragon claw does work!' said Ron. 'It's supposed to be incredible, really gives your brain aboost, you come over all cunning for a few hours - Hermione, let me have a pinch, go on, itcan't hurt -'

This stuff can,' said Hermione grimly. 'I've had a look at it, and it's actually dried Doxydroppings.'

This information took the edge off Harry and Rons desire for brain stimulants.

They received their examination timetables and details of the procedure for OWLs duringtheir next Transfiguration lesson.

'As you can see,' Professor McGonagall told the class as they copied down the dates and timesof their exams from the blackboard, 'your OWLs are spread over two successive weeks. Youwill sit the theory papers in the mornings and the practice in the afternoons. Your practicalAstronomy examination will, of course, take place at night.

'Now, I must warn you that the most stringent anti-cheating charms have been applied toyour examination papers. Auto-Answer Quills are banned from the examination hall, as areRemembralls, Detachable Cribbing Cuffs and Self-Correcting Ink. Every year, I am afraid tosay, seems to harbour at least one student who thinks that he or she can get around theWizarding Examinations Authority's rules. I can only hope that it is nobody in Gryffindor.

Our new - Headmistress —' Professor McGonagall pronounced the word with the same lookon her face that Aunt Petunia had whenever she was contemplating a particularly stubbornbit of dirt '- has asked the Heads of House to tell their students that cheating will be punishedmost severely - because, of course, your examination results will reflect upon theHeadmistress's new regime at the school -'

Professor McGonagall gave a tiny sigh; Harry saw the nostrils of her sharp nose flare.

'- however, that is no reason not to do your very best. You have your own futures to thinkabout.'

'Please, Professor,' said Hermione, her hand in the air, 'when will we find out our results?'

'An owl will be sent to you some time in July' said Professor McGonagall.

'Excellent,' said Dean Thomas in an audible whisper, 'so we don't have to worry about it tillthe holidays.'

Harry imagined sitting in his bedroom in Privet Drive in six weeks' time, waiting for his OWLresults. Well, he thought dully, at least he would be sure of one bit of post that summer.

PUTCLUB BOOKS

Their first examination, Theory of Charms, was scheduled for Monday morning. Harryagreed to test Hermione after lunch on Sunday, but regretted it almost at once; she was veryagitated and kept snatching the book back from him to check that she had got the answercompletely right, finally hitting him hard on the nose with the sharp edge of Achievements inCharming.

'Why don't you just do it yourself?' he said firmly, handing the book back to her, his eyeswatering.

Meanwhile, Ron was reading two years' worth of Charms notes with his fingers in his ears,his lips moving soundlessly; Seamus Finnigan was lying flat on his back on the floor, recitingthe definition of a Substantive Charm while Dean checked it against The Standard Book ofSpells, Grade 5; and Parvati and Lavender, who were practising basic Locomotion Charms,were making their pencil-cases race each other around the edge of the table.

Dinner was a subdued affair that night. Harry and Ron did not talk much, but ate with gusto,having studied hard all day. Hermione, on the other hand, kept putting down her knife andfork and diving under the table for her bag, from which she would seize a book to check somefact or figure. Ron was just telling her that she ought to eat a decent meal or she would notsleep that night, when her fork slid from her limp fingers and landed with a loud tinkle on herplate.

'Oh, my goodness,' she said faintly, staring into the Entrance Hall. 'Is that them? Is that theexaminers?'

Harry and Ron whipped around on their bench. Through the doors to the Great Hall theycould see Umbridge standing with a small group of ancient-looking witches and wizards.

Umbridge, Harry was pleased to see, looked rather nervous.

'Shall we go and have a closer look?' said Ron.

Harry and Hermione nodded and they hastened towards the double doors into the EntranceHall, slowing down as they stepped over the threshold to walk sedately past the examiners.

Harry thought Professor Marchbanks must be the tiny, stooped witch with a face so lined itlooked as though it had been draped in cobwebs; Umbridge was speaking to her deferentially.

Professor Marchbanks seemed to be a little deaf; she was answering Professor Umbridge veryloudly considering they were only a foot apart.

'Journey was fine, journey was fine, we've made it plenty of times before!' she saidimpatiently. 'Now, I haven't heard from Dumbledore lately!' she added, peering around theHall as though hopeful he might suddenly emerge from a broom cupboard. 'No idea wherehe is, 1 suppose?'

'None at all,' said Umbridge, shooting a malevolent look at Harry, Ron and Hermione, whowere now dawdling around the foot of the stairs as Ron pretended to do up his shoelace. 'ButI daresay the Ministry of Magic will track him down soon enough.'

'I doubt it,' shouted tiny Professor Marchbanks, 'not if Dumbledore doesn't want to be found!

I should know… examined him personally in Transfiguration and Charms when he didNEWTs… did things with a wand I'd never seen before.'

'Yes… well…' said Professor Umbridge as Harry, Ron and Hermione dragged their feet upthe marble staircase as slowly as they dared, 'let me show you to the staff room. I daresayyou'd like a cup of tea after your journey.'

It was an uncomfortable sort of an evening. Everyone was trying to do some last-minuterevising but nobody seemed to be getting very far. Harry went to bed early but then layawake for what felt like hours. He remembered his careers consultation and McGonagall'sfurious declaration that she would help him become an Auror if it was the last thing she did.

He wished he had expressed a more achievable ambition now that exam time was here. Heknew he was not the only one lying awake, but none of the others in the dormitory spoke andfinally, one by one, they fell asleep.

None of the fifth-years talked very much at breakfast next day, either: Parvati was practisingincantations under her breath while the salt cellar in front of her twitched; Hermione wasrereading Achievements in Charming so fast that her eyes appeared blurred; and Neville keptdropping his knife and fork and knocking over the marmalade.

Once breakfast was over, the fifth- and seventh-years milled around in the Entrance Hallwhile the other students went off to lessons; then, at half past nine, they were called forwards class by class to re-enter the Great Hall, which had been rearranged exactly as Harry had seenit in the Pensieve when his father, Sirius and Snape had been taking their OWLs; the fourhouse tables had been removed and replaced instead with many tables for one, all facing thestaff-table end of the Hall where Professor McGonagall stood facing them. When they were allseated and quiet, she said, 'You may begin,' and turned over an enormous hour-glass on thedesk beside her, on which there were also spare quills, ink bottles and rolls of parchment.

Harry turned over his paper, his heart thumping hard - three rows to his right and four seatsahead Hermione was already scribbling - and lowered his eyes to the first question: a) Give theincantation and b) describe the wand movement required to make objects fly.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Harry had a fleeting memory of a club soaring high into the air and landing loudly on thethick skull of a troll… smiling slightly, he bent over the paper and began to write.

*'Well, it wasn't too bad, was it?' asked Hermione anxiously in the Entrance Hall two hourslater, still clutching the exam paper. 'I'm not sure I did myself justice on Cheering Charms, Ijust ran out of time. Did you put in the counter-charm for hiccoughs? I wasn't, sure whether Iought to, it felt like too much - and on question twenty-three -'

'Hermione,' said Ron sternly, 'we've been through this before… we're not going through everyexam afterwards, it's bad enough doing them once.'

The fifth-years ate lunch with the rest of the school (the four house tables had reappeared forthe lunch hour), then they trooped off into the small chamber beside the Great Hall, wherethey were to wait until called for their practical examination. As small groups of studentswere called forwards in alphabetical order, those left behind muttered incantations andpractised wand movements, occasionally poking each other in the back or eye by mistake.

Hermione's name was called. Trembling, she left the chamber with Anthony Goldstein,Gregory Goyle and Daphne Greengrass. Students who had already been tested did not returnafterwards, so Harry and Ron had no idea how Hermione had done.

'She'll be fine, remember she got a hundred and twelve per cent on one of our Charms tests?'

said Ron.

Ten minutes later, Professor Flitwick called, 'Parkinson, Pansy - Patil, Padma - Patil, Parvati -

Potter, Harry.'

'Good luck,' said Ron quietly. Harry walked into the Great Hall, clutching his wand so tightlyhis hand shook.

'Professor Tofty is free, Potter,' squeaked Professor Flitwick, who was standing just inside thedoor. He pointed Harry towards what looked like the very oldest and baldest examiner whowas sitting behind a small table in a far corner, a short distance from Professor Marchbanks,who was halfway through testing Draco Malfoy.

'Potter, is it?' said Professor Tofty, consulting his notes and peering over his pince-nez atHarry as he approached. The famous Potter?'

Out of the corner of his eye, Harry distinctly saw Malfoy throw a scathing look over at him; the wine-glass Malfoy had been levitating fell to the floor and smashed. Harry could notsuppress a grin; Professor Tofty smiled back at him encouragingly.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

That's it,' he said in his quavery old voice, 'no need to be nervous. Now, if I could ask you totake this egg cup and make it do some cartwheels for me.'

On the whole, Harry thought it went rather well. His Levitation Charm was certainly muchbetter than Malfoy's had been, though he wished he had not mixed up the incantations forColour Change and Growth Charms, so that the rat he was supposed to be turning orangeswelled shockingly and was the size of a badger before Harry could rectify his mistake. Hewas glad Hermione had not been in the Hall at the time and neglected to mention it to herafterwards. He could tell Ron, though; Ron had caused a dinner plate to mutate into a largemushroom and had no idea how it had happened.

There was no time to relax that night; they went straight to the common room after dinnerand submerged themselves in revision for Transfiguration next day; Harry went to bed withhis head buzzing with complex spell models and theories.

He forgot the definition of a Switching Spell during his written paper next morning butthought his practical could have been a lot worse. At least he managed to Vanish the whole ofhis iguana, whereas poor Hannah Abbott lost her head completely at the next table andsomehow managed to multiply her ferret into a flock of flamingos, causing the examination tobe halted for ten minutes while the birds were captured and carried out of the Hall.

They had their Herbology exam on Wednesday (other than a small bite from a FangedGeranium, Harry ielt he had done reasonably well); and then, on Thursday, Defence Againstthe Dark. Arts. Here, for the first time, Harry felt sure he had passed. He had no problem withany of the written questions and took particular pleasure, during the practical examination, inperforming all the counter-jinxes and defensive spells right in front of Umbridge, who waswatching coolly from near the doors into the Entrance Hall.

'Oh, bravo!' cried Professor Tofty, who was examining Harry again, when Harry demonstrated a perfect Boggart banishing spell. 'Very good indeed! Well, I think that's all,Potter… unless…"

He leaned forwards a little.

'I heard, from my dear friend Tiberius Ogden, that you can produce a Patronus? For a bonuspoint… ?'

Harry raised his wand, looked directly at Umbridge and imagined her being sacked.

'Expecto patronum!'

His silver stag erupted from the end of his wand and cantered the length of the Hall. All ofthe examiners looked around to watch its progress and when it dissolved into silver mistProfessor Tofty clapped his veined and knotted hands enthusiastically.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Excellent!' he said. 'Very well, Potter, you may go!'

As Harry passed Umbridge beside the door, their eyes met. There was a nasty smile playingaround her wide, slack mouth, but he did not care. Unless he was very much mistaken (andhe was not planning on telling anybody, in case he was), he had just achieved an'Outstanding' OWL.

On Friday, Harry and Ron had a day off while Hermione sat her Ancient Runes exam, and asthey had the whole weekend in front of them they permitted themselves a break fromrevision. They stretched and yawned beside the open window, through which warm summerair was wafting as they played wizard chess. Harry could see Hagnd in the distance, teachinga class on the edge of the Forest. He was trying to guess what creatures they were examining - he thought it must be unicorns, because the boys seemed to be standing back a little - whenthe portrait hole opened and Hermione clambered in, looking thoroughly bad-tempered.

'How were the Runes?' said Ron, yawning and stretching.

'I mis-translated ehwaz,' said Hermione furiously. 'It means partnership, not defence; I mixed itup with eihwaz.'

'Ah well,' said Ron lazily, 'that's only one mistake, isn't it, you'll still get -'

'Oh, shut up!' said Hermione angrily. 'It could be the one mistake that makes the differencebetween a pass and a fail. And what's more, someone's put another Niffler in Umbridge'soffice. I don't know how they got it through that new door, but I just walked past there andUmbridge is shrieking her head off - by the sound of it, it tried to take a chunk out of her leg -'

'Good,' said Harry and Ron together.

'It is not good!' said Hermione hotly. 'She thinks it's Hagrid doing it, remember? And we donot want Hagrid chucked out!'

'He's teaching at the moment; she can't blame him,' said Harry, gesturing out of the window.

'Oh, you're so naive sometimes, Harry. You really think Umbridge will wait for proof?' saidHermione, who seemed determined to be in a towering temper, and she swept off towardsthe girls' dormitories, banging the door behind her.

'Such a lovely, sweet-tempered girl,' said Ron, very quietly, prodding his queen forward tobeat up one of Harry's knights.

Hermione's bad mood persisted for most of the weekend, though Harry and Ron found itquite easy to ignore as they spent most of Saturday and Sunday revising for Potions onMonday, the exam which Harry had been looking forward to least - and which he was surewould be the downfall of his ambitions to become an Auror. Sure enough, he found thewritten paper difficult, though he thought he might have got full marks on the question aboutPolyjuice Potion; he could describe its effects accurately, having taken it illegally in his secondyear.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

The afternoon practical was not as dreadful as he had expected it to be. With Snape absentfrom the proceedings, he found that he was much more relaxed than he usually was whilemaking potions. Neville, who was sitting very near Harry, also looked happier than Harryhad ever seen him during a Potions class. When Professor Marchbanks said, 'Step away fromyour cauldrons, please, the examination is over,' Harry corked his sample flask feeling that hemight not have achieved a good grade but he had, with luck, avoided a fail.

'Only four exams left,' said Parvati Patil wearily as they headed back to Gryffindor commonroom.

'Only!' said Hermione snappishly. 'I've got Arithmancy and it's probably the toughest subjectthere is!'

Nobody was foolish enough to snap back, so she was unable to vent her spleen on any ofthem and was reduced to telling off some first-years for giggling too loudly in the commonroom.

Harry was determined to perform well in Tuesdays Care of Magical Creatures exam so as notto let Hagnd down. The practical examination took place in the afternoon on the lawn on the edge of the Forbidden Forest, where students were required to correctly identify the Knarlhidden among a dozen hedgehogs (the trick was to offer them all milk in turn: Knarls, highlysuspicious creatures whose quills had many magical properties, generally went berserk atwhat they saw as an attempt to poison them); then demonstrate correct handling of aBowtruckle; feed and clean out a Fire Crab without sustaining serious burns; and choose,from a wide selection of food, the diet they would give a sick unicorn.

Harry could see Hagrid watching anxiously out of his cabin window. When Harry's examiner,a plump little witch this time, smiled at him and told him he could leave, Harry gave Hagrid afleeting thumbs-up before heading back to the castle.

The Astronomy theory paper on Wednesday morning went well enough. Harry was notconvinced he had got the names of all Jupiter's moons right, but was at least confident thatnone of them was inhabited by mice. They had to wait until evening for their practicalAstronomy; the afternoon was devoted instead to Divination.

Even by Harry's low standards in Divination, the exam went very badly. He might as wellhave tried to see moving pictures on the desktop as in the stubbornly blank crystal ball; helost his head completely during tea-leaf reading, saying it looked to him as though ProfessorMarchbanks would shortly be meeting a round, dark, soggy stranger, and rounded off thewhole fiasco by mixing up the life and head lines on her palm and informing her that sheought to have died the previous Tuesday.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Well, we were always going to fail that one,' said Ron gloomily as they ascended the marblestaircase. He had just made Harry feel rather better by telling him how he had told theexaminer in detail about the ugly man with a wart on his nose in his crystal ball, only to lookup and realise he had been describing his examiner's reflection.

'We shouldn't have taken the stupid subject in the first place,' said Harry.

'Still, at least we can give it up now.'

'Yeah,' said Harry. 'No more pretending we care what happens when Jupiter and Uranus gettoo friendly.'

'And from now on, I don't care if my tea-leaves spell die, Ron, die - I'm just chucking them inthe bin where they belong.'

Harry laughed just as Hermione came running up behind them. He stopped laughing at once,in case it annoyed her.

'Well, I think I've done all right in Arithmancy' she said, and Harry and Ron both sighed with relief. 'Just time for a quick look over our star-charts before dinner, then…"

When they reached the top of the Astronomy Tower at eleven o'clock, they found a perfectnight for stargazing, cloudless and still. The grounds were bathed in silvery moonlight andthere was a slight chill in the air. Each of them set up his or her telescope and, when ProfessorMarchbanks gave the word, proceeded to fill in the blank star-chart they had been given.

Professors Marchbanks and Tofty strolled among them, watching as they entered the precisepositions of the stars and planets they were observing. All was quiet except for the rustle ofparchment, the occasional creak of a telescope as it was adjusted on its stand, and thescribbling of many quills. Half an hour passed, then an hour; the little squares of reflectedgold light flickering on the ground below started to vanish as lights in the castle windowswere extinguished.

As Harry completed the constellation Orion on his chart, however, the front doors of thecastle opened directly below the parapet where he was standing, so that light spilled downthe stone steps a little way across the lawn. Harry glanced down as he made a slightadjustment to the position of his telescope and saw five or six elongated shadows movingover the brightly lit grass before the doors swung shut and the lawn became a sea of darknessonce more.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Harry put his eye back to his telescope and refocused it, now examining Venus. He lookeddown at his chart to enter the planet there, but something distracted him; pausing with hisquill suspended over the parchment, he squinted down into the shadowy grounds and sawhalf a dozen figures walking over the lawn. If they had not been moving, and the moonlighthad not been gilding the tops of their heads, they would have been indistinguishable from thedark ground on which they walked. Even at this distance, Harry had a funny feeling herecognised the walk of the squattest of them, who seemed to be leading the group.

He could not think why Umbridge would be taking a stroll outside after midnight, much lessaccompanied by five others. Then somebody coughed behind him, and he remembered thathe was halfway through an exam. He had quite forgotten Venus's position. Jamming his eyeto his telescope, he found it again and was once more about to enter it on his chart when, alertfor any odd sound, he heard a distant knock which echoed through the deserted grounds,followed immediately by the muffled barking of a large dog.

He looked up, his heart hammering. There were lights on in Hagrid's windows and thepeople he had observed crossing the lawn were now silhouetted against them. The dooropened and he distinctly saw six sharply defined figures walk over the threshold. The doorclosed again and there was silence.

Harry felt very uneasy. He glanced around to see whether Ron or Hermione had noticed what he had, but Professor Marchbanks came walking behind him at that moment and, not wantingto look as though he was sneaking looks at anyone else's work, Harry hastily bent over hisstar-chart and pretended to be adding notes to it while really peering over the top of theparapet towards Hagrid's cabin. Figures were now moving across the cabin windows,temporarily blocking the light.

He could feel Professor Marchbanks's eyes on the back of his neck and pressed his eye againto his telescope, staring up at the moon though he had marked its position an hour ago, but asProfessor Marchbanks moved on he heard a roar from the distant cabin that echoed throughthe darkness right to the top of the Astronomy Tower. Several of the people around Harryducked out from behind their telescopes and peered instead in the direction of Hagrid's cabin.

Professor Tofty gave another dry little cough.

Try and concentrate, now, boys and girls,' he said softly.

Most people returned to their telescopes. Harry looked to his left. Hermione was gazingtransfixed at Hagrid's cabin.

'Ahem - twenty minutes to go,' said Professor Tofty.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Hermione jumped and returned at once to her star-chart; Harry looked down at his own andnoticed that he had mis-labelled Venus as Mars. He bent to correct it.

There was a loud BANG from the grounds. Several people cried 'Ouch!' when they pokedthemselves in the face with the ends of their telescopes as they hastened to see what wasgoing on below.

Hagrid's door had burst open and by the light flooding out of the cabin they saw him quiteclearly a massive figure roaring and brandishing his fists, surrounded by six people, all ofwhom, judging by the tiny threads of red light they were casting in his direction, seemed to beattempting to Stun him.

'No!' cried Hermione.

'My dear!' said Professor Tofty in a scandalised voice. This is an examination!'

But nobody was paying the slightest attention to their star-charts any more. Jets of red lightwere still flying about beside Hagrid's cabin, yet somehow they seemed to be bouncing offhim; he was still upright and still, as far as Harry could see, fighting. Cries and yells echoedacross the grounds; a man yelled, 'Be reasonable, Hagrid!'

Hagrid roared, 'Reasonable be damned, yeh won' take me like this, Dawlish!'

Harry could see the tiny outline of Fang, attempting to defend Hagrid, leaping repeatedly atthe wizards surrounding him until aStunning Spell caught him and he fell to the ground. Hagrid gave a howl of fury, lifted theculprit bodily from the ground and threw him; the man flew what looked like ten feet and didnot get up again. Hermione gasped, both hands over her mouth; Harry looked round at Ronand saw that he, too, was looking scared. None of them had ever seen Hagrid in a real temperbefore.

'Look!' squealed Parvati, who was leaning over the parapet and pointing to the foot of thecastle where the front doors had opened again; more light was spilling out on to the darklawn and a single long black shadow was now rippling across the lawn.

'Now, really!' said Professor Tofty anxiously. 'Only sixteen minutes left, you know!'

But nobody paid him the slightest attention: they were watching the person now sprintingtowards the battle beside Hagrid's cabin.

'How dare you!' the figure shouted as she ran. 'How dare you!'

'It's McGonagall!' whispered Hermione.

'Leave him alone! Alone, I say!' said Professor McGonagall's voice through the darkness. 'Onwhat grounds are you attacking him? He has done nothing, nothing to warrant such -'

Hermione, Parvati and Lavender all screamed. The figures around the cabin had shot nofewer than four Stunners at Professor McGonagall. Halfway between cabin and castle the redbeams collided with her; for a moment she looked luminous and glowed an eerie red, thenshe lifted right off her feet, landed hard on her back, and moved no more.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Galloping gargoyles!' shouted Professor Tofty, who also seemed to have forgotten the examcompletely. 'Not so much as a warning! Outrageous behaviour!'

'COWARDS!' bellowed Hagrid; his voice carried clearly to the top of the tower, and severallights flickered back on inside the castle. 'RUDDY COWARDS! HAVE SOME O' THAT - AN'

THAT -'

'Oh my —' gasped Hermione.

Hagrid took two massive swipes at his closest attackers; judging by their immediate collapse,they had been knocked cold. Harry saw Hagrid double over, and thought he had finally beenovercome by a spell. But, on the contrary, next moment Hagrid was standing again with whatappeared to be a sack on his back - then Harry realised that Fang's limp body was draped around his shoulders.

'Get him, get him!' screamed Umbridge, but her remaining helper seemed highly reluctant togo within reach of Hagrid's fists; indeed, he was backing away so fast he tripped over one ofhis unconscious colleagues and fell over. Hagrid had turned and begun to run with Fang stillhung around his neck. Umbridge sent one last Stunning Spell after him but it missed; andHagrid, running full-pelt towards the distant gates, disappeared into the darkness.

There was a long minutes quivering silence as everybody gazed open-mouthed into thegrounds. Then Professor Tofty's voice said feebly, 'Um… five minutes to go, everybody.'

Though he had only filled in two-thirds of his chart, Harry was desperate for the exam to end.

When it came at last he, Ron and Hermione forced their telescopes haphazardly back intotheir holders and dashed back down the spiral staircase. None of the students were going tobed; they were all talking loudly and excitedly at the foot of the stairs about what they hadwitnessed.

That evil woman!' gasped Hermione, who seemed to be having difficulty talking due to rage.

Trying to sneak up on Hagrid in the dead of night!'

'She clearly wanted to avoid another scene like Trelawney's,' said Ernie Macmillan sagely,squeezing over to join them.

'Hagrid did well, didn't he?' said Ron, who looked more alarmed than impressed. 'How comeall the spells bounced off him?'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'It'll be his giant blood,' said Hermione shakily. 'Its very hard to Stun a giant, they're liketrolls, really tough… but poor Professor McGonagall… four Stunners straight in the chest andshe's not exactly young, is she?'

'Dreadful, dreadful,' said Ernie, shaking his head pompously. 'Well, I'm off to bed. Night, all.'

People around them were drifting away, still talking excitedly about what they had just seen.

'At least they didn't get to take Hagrid off to Azkaban,' said Ron. 'I spect he's gone to joinDumbledore, hasn't he?'

'I suppose so,' said Hermione, who looked tearful. 'Oh, this is awful, I really thoughtDumbledore would be back before long, but now we've lost Hagrid too.'

They traipsed back to the Gryffindor common room to find it full. The commotion out in thegrounds had woken several people, who had hastened to rouse their friends. Seamus andDean, who had arrived ahead of Harry, Ron and Hermione, were now telling everyone whatthey had seen and heard from the top of the Astronomy Tower.

'But why sack Hagrid now?' asked Angelina Johnson, shaking her head. 'It's not likeTrelawney; he's been teaching much better than usual this year!'

'Umbridge hates part-humans,' said Hermione bitterly, flopping down into an armchair. 'Shewas always going to try and get Hagrid out.'

'And she thought Hagrid was putting Nifflers in her office,' piped up Katie Bell.

'Oh, blimey,' said Lee Jordan, covering his mouth. 'It's me who's been putting the Nifflers inher office. Fred and George left me a couple; I've been levitating them in through her window.'

'She'd have sacked him anyway' said Dean. 'He was too close to Dumbledore.'

That's true,' said Harry, sinking into an armchair beside Hermione's.

'I just hope Professor McGonagall's all right,' said Lavender tearfully.

They carried her back up to the castle, we watched through the dormitory window,' saidColin Creevey 'She didn't look very well.'

'Madam Pomfrey will sort her out,' said Alicia Spinnet firmly. 'She's never failed yet.'

It was nearly four in the morning before the common room cleared. Harry felt wide awake; the image of Hagrid sprinting away into the dark was haunting him; he was so angry withUmbridge he could not think of a punishment bad enough for her, though Ron's suggestion ofhaving her fed to a box of starving Blast-Ended Skrewts had its merits. He fell asleepcontemplating hideous revenges and arose from bed three hours later feeling distinctlyunrested.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Their final exam, History of Magic, was not to take place until that afternoon. Harry wouldvery much have liked to go back to bed after breakfast, but he had been counting on themorning for a spot of last-minute revision, so instead he sat with his head in his hands by thecommon-room window, trying hard not to doze off as he read through some of the three-and a-half-feet-high stack of notes that Hermione had lent him.

The fifth-years entered the Great Hall at two o'clock and took their places in front of their facedownexamination papers. Harry felt exhausted. He just wanted this to be over, so that hecould go and sleep; then tomorrow, he and Ron were going to go down to the Quidditch pitch- he was going to have a fly on Rons broom - and savour their freedom from revision.

Turn over your papers,' said Professor Marchbanks from the front of the Hall, flicking overthe giant hour-glass. 'You may begin.'

Harry stared fixedly at the first question. It was several seconds before it occurred to him thathe had not taken in a word of it; there was a wasp buzzing distractingly against one of thehigh windows. Slowly, tortuously, he at last began to write an answer.

He was finding it very difficult to remember names and kept confusing dates. He simplyskipped question four (In your opinion, did wand legislation contribute to, or lead to better controlof, goblin riots of the eighteenth century?), thinking that he would go back to it if he had time atthe end. He had a stab at question five (How was the Statute of Secrecy breached in 1749 and whatmeasures were introduced to prevent a recurrence?) but had a nagging suspicion that he hadmissed several important points; he had a feeling vampires had come into the storysomewhere.

He looked ahead for a question he could definitely answer and his eyes alighted uponnumber ten: Describe the circumstances that led to the formation of the International Confederation ofWizards and explain why the warlocks of Liechtenstein refused to join.

I know this, Harry thought, though his brain felt torpid and slack. He could visualise aheading, in Hermione's handwriting: The formation of the International Confederation of Wizards… he had read those notes only this morning.

He began to write, looking up now and again to check the large hour-glass on the desk besideProfessor Marchbanks. He was sitting right behind Parvati Patil, whose long dark hair fellbelow the back of her chair. Once or twice he found himself staring at the tiny golden lightsthat glistened in it when she moved her head slightly, and had to give his own head a littleshake to clear it.

… the first Supreme Mugwump of the International Confederation of Wizards was Pierre Bonaccord,but his appointment was contested by the wizarding community of Liechtenstein, because -

All around Harry quills were scratching on parchment like scurrying, burrowing rats. The sunwas very hot on the back of his head. What was it that Bonaccord had done to offend thewizards of Liechtenstein? Harry had a feeling it had something to do with trolls… he gazed blankly at the back of Parvati's head again. If he could only perform Legilimency and open awindow in the back of her head and see what it was about trolls that had caused the breachbetween Pierre Bonaccord and Liechtenstein…

Harry closed his eyes and buried his face in his hands, so that the glowing red of his eyelidsgrew dark and cool. Bonaccord had wanted to stop troll-hunting and give the trolls rights…

but Liechtenstein was having problems with a tribe of particularly vicious mountain trolls…

that was it.

He opened his eyes; they stung and watered at the sight of the blazing white parchment. Slowly, he wrote two lines about the trolls, then read through what he had done so far. It didnot seem very informative or detailed, yet he was sure Hermione's notes on the Confederationhad gone on for pages and pages.

He closed his eyes again, trying to see them, trying to remember… the Confederation had metfor the first time in France, yes, he had written that already…

Goblins had tried to attend and been ousted… he had written that, too…

And nobody from Liechtenstein had wanted to come…

Think, he told himself, his face in his hands, while all around him quills scratched out neverendinganswers and the sand trickled through the hour-glass at the front…

He was walking along the cool, dark corridor to the Department of Mysteries again, walkingwith a firm and purposeful tread, breaking occasionally into a run, determined to reach hisdestination at last… the black door swung open for him as usual, and here he was in thecircular room with its many doors…

Straight across the stone floor and through the second door… patches of dancing light on thewalls and floor and that odd mechanical clicking, but no time to explore, he must hurry…

He jogged the last few feet to the third door, which swung open just like the others…

Once again he was in the cathedral-sized room full of shelves and glass spheres… his heartwas beating very fast now… he was going to get there this time… when he reached numberninety-seven he turned left and hurried along the aisle between two rows…

But there was a shape on the floor at the very end, a black shape moving on the floor like awounded animal… Harry's stomach contracted with fear… with excitement…

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

A voice issued from his own mouth, a high, cold voice empty of any human kindness…

Take it for me… lift it down, now… I cannot touch it… but you canThe black shape on the floor shifted a little. Harry saw a long-fingered white hand clutching awand rise at the end of his own arm… heard the high, cold voice say 'Crucio!'
The man on the floor let out a scream of pain, attempted to stand but fell back, writhing.
Harry was laughing. He raised his wand, the curse lifted and the figure groaned and becamemotionless.
'Lord Voldemort is waitingVery slowly, his arms trembling, the man on the ground raised his shoulders a few inches andlifted his head. His face was bloodstained and gaunt, twisted in pain yet rigid with defiance…
'You'll have to kill me,' whispered Sirius.
'Undoubtedly I shall in the end,' said the cold voice. 'But you will fetch it for me first, Black…
you think you have felt pain thus far? Think again… we have hours ahead of us and nobodyto hear you scream…'
But somebody screamed as Voldemort lowered his wand again; somebody yelled and fellsideways off a hot desk on to the cold stone floor; Harry awoke as he hit the ground, stillyelling, his scar on fire, as the Great Hall erupted all around him.

— CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO —

Out of the Fire'I'm not going… I don't need the hospital wing… I don't wantHe was gibbering as he tried to pull away from Professor Tofty, who was looking at Harrywith much concern after helping him out into the Entrance Hall with the students all aroundthem staring.
'I'm - I'm fine, sir,' Harry stammered, wiping the sweat from his face. 'Really… I just fellasleep… had a nightmare…"
'Pressure of examinations!' said the old wizard sympathetically, patting Harry shakily on theshoulder. 'It happens, young man, it happens! Now, a cooling drink of water, and perhapsyou will be ready to return to the Great Hall? The examination is nearly over, but you may beable to round off your last answer nicely?'
'Yes,' said Harry wildly. 'I mean… no… I've done - done as much as I can, I think…'
'Very well, very well,' said the old wizard gently. 'I shall go and collect your examinationpaper and 1 suggest that you go and have a nice lie down.'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Til do that,' said Harry, nodding vigorously. Thanks very much.'

The second that the old man's heels disappeared over the threshold into the Great Hall, Harryran up the marble staircase, hurtled along the corridors so fast the portraits he passedmuttered reproaches, up more flights of stairs, and finally burst like a hurricane through thedouble doors of the hospital wing, causing Madam Pomfrey - who had been spooning somebright blue liquid into Montague's open mouth - to shriek in alarm.

Totter, what do you think you're doing?'

'I need to see Professor McGonagall,' gasped Harry, the breath tearing his lungs. 'Now… it'surgent!'

'She's not here, Potter,' said Madam Pomfrey sadly. 'She was transferred to St Mungo's thismorning. Four Stunning Spells straight to the chest at her age? It's a wonder they didn't killher.'

'She's… gone?' said Harry, shocked.

The bell rang just outside the dormitory and he heard the usual distant rumbling of studentsstarting to flood out into the corridors above and below him. He remained quite still, lookingat Madam Pomfrey. Terror was rising inside him.

There was nobody left to tell. Dumbledore had gone, Hagrid had gone, but he had alwaysexpected Professor McGonagall to be there, irascible and inflexible, perhaps, but alwaysdependably, solidly present…

'I don't wonder you're shocked, Potter,' said Madam Pomfrey, with a kind of fierce approvalin her face. 'As if one of them could have Stunned Minerva McGonagall face-on by daylight!

Cowardice, . that's what it was… despicable cowardice… if I wasn't worried what wouldhappen to you students without me, I'd resign in protest.'

'Yes,' said Harry blankly.

He wheeled around and strode blindly from the hospital wing into the teeming corridorwhere he stood, buffeted by the crowd, panic expanding inside him like poison gas so that hishead swam and he could not think what to do…

Ron and Hermione, said a voice in his head.

He was running again, pushing students out of the way, oblivious to their angry protests. Hesprinted back down two floors and was at the top of the marble staircase when he saw themhurrying towards him.

'Harry!' said Hermione at once, looking very frightened. 'What happened? Are you all right?

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Are you ill?'

'Where have you been?' demanded Ron.

'Come with me,' Harry said quickly. 'Come on, I've got to tell you something.'

He led them along the first-floor corridor, peering through doorways, and at last found anempty classroom into which he dived, closing the door behind Ron and Hermione themoment they were inside, and leaned against it, facing them.

'Voldemort's got Sirius.'

'What?'

'How d'you -?'

'Saw it. Just now. When I fell asleep in the exam.'

'But - but where? How?' said Hermione, whose face was white.

'I dunno how,' said Harry. 'But I know exactly where. There's a room in the Department ofMysteries full of shelves covered in these little glass balls and they're at the end of row ninetyseven…

he's trying to use Sirius to get whatever it is he wants from in there… he's torturinghim… says he'll end by killing him!'

Harry found his voice was shaking, as were his knees. He moved over to a desk and sat downon it, trying to master himself.

'How're we going to get there?' he asked them.

There was a moment's silence. Then Ron said, 'G-get there?'

'Get to the Department of Mysteries, so we can rescue Sirius!' Harry said loudly.

'But - Harry…' said Ron weakly.

'What? What?' said Harry.

He could not understand why they were both gaping at him as though he was asking themsomething unreasonable.

'Harry,' said Hermione in a rather frightened voice, 'er… how… how did Voldemort get intothe Ministry of Magic without anybody realising he was there?'

'How do I know?' bellowed Harry. The question is how we're going to get in there!'

'But… Harry, think about this,' said Hermione, taking a step towards him, 'it's five o'clock inthe afternoon… the Ministry of Magic must be full of workers… how would Voldemort andSirius have got in without being seen? Harry… they're probably the two most wanted wizardsin the world… you think they could get into a building full of Aurors undetected?'

'I dunno, Voldemort used an Invisibility Cloak or something!' Harry shouted. 'Anyway, theDepartment of Mysteries has always been completely empty whenever I've been -'

'You've never been there, Harry,' said Hermione quietly. 'You've dreamed about the place,

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

that's all.'

They're not normal dreams!' Harry shouted in her face, standing up and taking a step closer toher in turn. He wanted to shake her. 'How d'you explain Ron's dad then, what was all thatabout, how come I knew what had happened to him?'

'He's got a point,' said Ron quietly, looking at Hermione.

'But this is just — just so unlikely*.' said Hermione desperately. 'Harry, how on earth couldVoldemort have got hold of Sirius when he's been in Grimmauld Place all the time?'

'Sirius might've cracked and just wanted some fresh air,' said Ron, sounding worried. 'He'sbeen desperate to get out of that house for ages -'

'But why,' Hermione persisted, 'why on earth would Voldemort want to use Sirius to get theweapon, or whatever the thing is?'

'I dunno, there could be loads of reasons!' Harry yelled at her. 'Maybe Sirius is just someoneVoldemort doesn't care about seeing hurt -'

'You know what, I've just thought of something,' said Ron in a hushed voice. 'Sirius's brotherwas a Death Eater, wasn't he? Maybe he told Sirius the secret of how to get the weapon!'

'Yeah - and that's why Dumbledore's been so keen to keep Sirius locked up all the time!' saidHarry.

'Look, I'm sorry,' cried Hermione, 'but neither of you is making sense, and we've got no prooffor any of this, no proof Voldemort and Sirius are even there -'

'Hermione, Harrys seen them!' said Ron, rounding on her.

'OK,' she said, looking frightened yet determined, 'I've just got to say this -'

'What?'

'You… this isn't a criticism, Harry! But you do… sort of… I mean - don't you think you've gota bit of a - a - saving-people thing!' she said.

He glared at her.

'And what's that supposed to mean, a "saving-people thing"?'

'Well… you…' she looked more apprehensive than ever. 'I mean… last year, for instance… inthe lake… during the Tournament… you shouldn't have… I mean, you didn't need to savethat little Delacour girl… you got a bit… carried away…'

A wave of hot, prickly anger swept through Harrys body; how could she remind him of thatblunder now?

'1 mean, it was really great of you and everything,' said Hermione quickly, looking positivelypetrified at the look on Harrys face, 'everyone thought it was a wonderful thing to do -'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

That's funny,' said Harry through gritted teeth, 'because I definitely remember Ron saying I'dwasted time acting the hero … is that what you think this is? You reckon 1 want to act the heroagain?'

'No, no, no!' said Hermione, looking aghast. That's not what I mean at all!'

'Well, spit out what you've got to say, because we're wasting time here!' Harry shouted.

'I'm trying to say - Voldemort knows you, Harry! He took Ginny down into the Chamber ofSecrets to lure you there, it's the kind of thing he does, he knows you're the - the sort of personwho'd go to Sirius's aid! What if he's just trying to get you into the Department of Myst—?'

'Hermione, it doesn't matter if he's done it to get me there or not - they've taken McGonagallto St Mungo's, there isn't anyone from the Order left at Hogwarts who we can tell, and if wedon't go, Sirius is dead!'

'But Harry - what if your dream was - was just that, a dream?'

Harry let out a roar of frustration. Hermione actually stepped back from him, looking alarmed.

'You don't get it!' Harry shouted at her, 'I'm not having nightmares, I'm not just dreaming! What d'you think all the Occlumency was for, why d'you think Dumbledore wanted meprevented from seeing these things? Because they're REAL, Hermione - Sirius is trapped, I'veseen him. Voldemort's got him, and no one else knows, and that means we're the only oneswho can save him, and if you don't want to do it, fine, but I'm going, understand? And if Iremember rightly, you didn't have a problem with my saving-people thing when it was you Iwas saving from the Dementors, or -' he rounded on Ron '- when it was your sister I wassaving from the Basilisk -'

'I never said I had a problem!' said Ron heatedly.

'But Harry, you've just said it,' said Hermione fiercely, 'Dumbledore wanted you to learn toshut these things out of your mind, if you'd done Occlumency properly you'd never have seenthis -'

'IF YOU THINK I'M JUST GOING TO ACT LIKE I HAVEN'T SEEN -'

'Sirius told you there was nothing more important than you learning to close your mind!'

'WELL, I EXPECT HE'D SAY SOMETHING DIFFERENT IF HE KNEW WHAT I'D JUST -'

The classroom door opened. Harry, Ron and Hermione whipped around. Ginny walked in,looking curious, closely followed by Luna, who as usual looked as though she had drifted inaccidentally.

'Hi,' said Ginny uncertainly. 'We recognised Harry's voice. What are you yelling about?'

'Never you mind,' said Harry roughly.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Ginny raised her eyebrows.

There's no need to take that tone with me,' she said coolly, 'I was only wondering whether Icould help.'

'Well, you can't,' said Harry shortly.

'You're being rather rude, you know,' said Luna serenely.

Harry swore and turned away. The very last thing he wanted now was a conversation withLuna Lovegood.

'Wait,' said Hermione suddenly. 'Wait… Harry, they can help.'

Harry and Ron looked at her.

'Listen,' she said urgently, 'Harry, we need to establish whether Sirius really has leftHeadquarters.'

'I've told you, I saw -'

'Harry, I'm begging you, please!' said Hermione desperately. 'Please let's just check that Siriusisn't at home before we go charging off to London. If we find out he's not there, then I swear 1 won't try to stop you. I'll come, I'll d - do whatever it takes to try and save him.'

'Sirius is being tortured NOW!' shouted Harry. 'We haven't got time to waste.'

'But if this is a trick of Voldemort's, Harry, we've got to check, we've got to.'

'How?' Harry demanded. 'How're we going to check?'

'We'll have to use Umbridge's fire and see if we can contact him,' said Hermione, who lookedpositively terrified at the thought. 'We'll draw Umbridge away again, but we'll need lookouts,and that's where we can use Ginny and Luna.'

Though clearly struggling to understand what was going on, Ginny said immediately, 'Yeah,we'll do it,' and Luna said, 'When you say "Sirius", are you talking about Stubby Boardman?'

Nobody answered her.

'OK,' Harry said aggressively to Hermione, 'OK, if you can think of a way of doing thisquickly, I'm with you, otherwise I'm going to the Department of Mysteries right now.'

The Department of Mysteries?' said Luna, looking mildly surprised. 'But how are you going toget there?'

Again, Harry ignored her.

'Right,' said Hermione, twisting her hands together and pacing up and down between thedesks. 'Right… well… one of us has to go and find Umbridge and - and send her off in thewrong direction, keep her away from her office. They could tell her - 1 don't know - thatPeeves is up to something awful as usualTil do it,' said Ron at once. Til tell her Peeves is smashing up the Transfiguration departmentor something, it's miles away from her office. Come to think of it, 1 could probably persuadePeeves to do it if I met him on the way.'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

It was a mark of the seriousness of the situation that Hermione made no objection to thesmashing up of the Transfiguration department.

'OK,' she said, her brow furrowed as she continued to pace. 'Now, we need to keep studentsright away from her office while we force entry, or some Slytherins bound to go and tip heroff.'

'Luna and I can stand at either end of the corridor,' said Ginny promptly, 'and warn peoplenot to go down there because someone's let off a load of Garrotting Gas.' Hermione lookedsurprised at the readiness with which Ginny had come up with this lie; Ginny shrugged andsaid, 'Fred and George were planning to do it before they left.'

'OK,' said Hermione. 'Well then, Harry, you and I will be under the Invisibility Cloak andwe'll sneak into the office and you can talk to Sirius -'

'He's not there, Hermione!'

'I mean, you can - can check whether Sirius is at home or not while I keep watch, I don't thinkyou should be in there alone, Lee's already proved the windows a weak spot, sending thoseNifflers through it.'

Even through his anger and impatience, Harry recognised Hermiones offer to accompany himinto Umbridge's office as a sign of solidarity and loyalty.

'I… OK, thanks,' he muttered.

'Right, well, even if we do all of that, I don't think we're going to be able to bank on more thanfive minutes,' said Hermione, looking relieved that Harry seemed to have accepted the plan,'not with Filch and the wretched Inquisitorial Squad floating around.'

'Five minutes'll be enough,' said Harry. 'C'mon, let's go -'

'Now?' said Hermione, looking shocked.

'Of course now!' said Harry angrily. 'What did you think, we're going to wait until afterdinner or something? Hermione, Sirius is being tortured right now!'

'I - oh, all right,' she said desperately. 'You go and get the Invisibility Cloak and we'll meetyou at the end of Umbridge's corridor, OK?'

Harry didn't answer, but flung himself out of the room and began to fight his way throughthe milling crowds outside. Two floors up he met Seamus and Dean, who hailed him joviallyand told him they were planning a dusk-till-dawn end-of-exams celebration in the commonroom. Harry barely heard them. He scrambled through the portrait hole while they were stillarguing about how many black-market Butterbeers they would need and was climbing backout of it, the Invisibility Cloak and Sirius's knife secure in his bag, before they noticed he hadleft them.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Harry, d'you want to chip in a couple of Galleons? Harold Dingle reckons he could sell us some Firewhisky -'

But Harry was already tearing away back along the corridor, and a couple of minutes laterwas jumping the last few stairs to join Ron, Hermione, Ginny and Luna, who were huddledtogether at the end of Umbridge's corridor.

'Got it,' he panted. 'Ready to go, then?' :.

'All right,' whispered Hermione as a gang of loud sixth-years passed them. 'So Ron - you goand head Umbridge off… Ginny, Luna, if you can start moving people out of the corridor…

Harry and I will get the Cloak on and wait until the coast is clear…"

Ron strode away, his bright-red hair visible right to the end of the passage; meanwhile Ginnysequally vivid head bobbed between the jostling students surrounding them in the otherdirection, trailed by Luna's blonde one.

'Get over here,' muttered Hermione, tugging at Harry's wrist and pulling him back into arecess where the ugly stone head of a medieval wizard stood muttering to itself on a column.

'Are - are you sure you're OK, Harry? You're still very pale.'

'I'm fine,' he said shortly, tugging the Invisibility Cloak from out of his bag. In truth, his scarwas aching, but not so badly that he thought Voldemort had yet dealt Sirius a fatal blow; ithad hurt much worse than this when Voldemort had been punishing Avery…

'Here,' he said; he threw the Invisibility Cloak over both of them and they stood listeningcarefully over the Latin mumblings of the bust in front of them.

'You can't come down here!' Ginny was calling to the crowd. 'No, sorry, you're going to haveto go round by the swivelling staircase, someone's let off Garrotting Gas just along here -'

They could hear people complaining; one surly voice said, 'I can't see no gas.'

That's because it's colourless,' said Ginny in a convincingly exasperated voice, 'but if you wantto walk through it, carry on, then we'll have your body as proof for the next idiot who doesn'tbelieve us.'

Slowly, the crowd thinned. The news about the Garrotting Gas seemed to have spread; peoplewere not coming this way any more. When at last the surrounding area was quite clear,Hermione said quietly, 'I think that's as good as we're going to get, Harry — come on, let's doit.'

They moved forwards, covered by the Cloak. Luna was standing with her back to them at thefar end of the corridor. As they passed Ginny, Hermione whispered, 'Good one… don't forgetthe signal.'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'What's the signal?' muttered Harry, as they approached Umbridge's door.

'A loud chorus of "Weasley is our King" if they see Umbridge coming,' replied Hermione, asHarry inserted the blade of Sirius's knife in the crack between door and wall. The lock clickedopen and they entered the office.

The garish kittens were basking in the late-afternoon sunshine that was warming their plates,but otherwise the office was as still and unoccupied as last time. Hermione breathed a sigh ofrelief.

'I thought she might have added extra security after the second Niffler.'

They pulled off the Cloak; Hermione hurried over to the window and stood out of sight,peering down into the grounds with her wand out. Harry dashed over to the fireplace, seizedthe pot of Floo powder and threw a pinch into the grate, causing emerald flames to burst intolife there. He knelt down quickly, thrust his head into the dancing fire and cried, 'Numbertwelve, Grimmauld Place!'

His head began to spin as though he had just got off a iair-ground ride though his kneesremained firmly planted on the cold office floor. He kept his eyes screwed up against thewhirling ash and when the spinning stopped he opened them to find himself looking out atthe long, cold kitchen of Grimmauld Place.

There was nobody there. He had expected this, yet was not prepared for the molten wave ofdread and panic that seemed to burst through his stomach at the sight of the deserted room.

'Sirius?' he shouted. 'Sirius, are you there?'

His voice echoed around the room, but there was no answer except a tiny scuffing sound tothe right of the fire.

'Who's there?' he called, wondering whether it was just a mouse.

Kreacher the house-elf crept into view. He looked highly delighted about something, thoughhe seemed to have recently sustained a nasty injury to both hands, which were heavilybandaged.

'It's the Potter boy's head in the fire,' Kreacher informed the empty kitchen, stealing furtive, oddly triumphant glances at Harry. 'What has he come for, Kreacher wonders?'

'Where's Sirius, Kreacher?' Harry demanded.

The house-elf gave a wheezy chuckle.

'Master has gone out, Harry Potter.'

'Where's he gone? Where's he gone, Kreacher?'

Kreacher merely cackled.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'I'm warning you!' said Harry, fully aware that his scope for inflicting punishment uponKreacher was almost non-existent in this position. 'What about Lupin? Mad-Eye? Any ofthem, are any of them there?'

'Nobody here but Kreacher!' said the elf gleefully, and turning away from Harry he began towalk slowly towards the door at the end of the kitchen. 'Kreacher thinks he will have a littlechat with his mistress now, yes, he hasn't had a chance in a long time, Kreacher's master hasbeen keeping him away from her -'

'Where has Sirius gone?' Harry yelled after the elf. 'Kreacher, has he gone to the Department ofMysteries?'

Kreacher stopped in his tracks. Harry could just make out the back of his bald head throughthe forest of chair legs before him.

'Master does not tell poor Kreacher where he is going,' said the elf quietly.

'But you know!' shouted Harry. 'Don't you? You know where he is!'

There was a moment's silence, then the elf let out his loudest cackle yet.

'Master will not come back from the Department of Mysteries!' he said gleefully. 'Kreacherand his mistress are alone again!'

And he scurried forwards and disappeared through the door to the hall.

'You -!'

But before he could utter a single curse or insult, Harry felt a great pain at the top of his head;

he inhaled a lot of ash and, choking, found himself being dragged backwards through theflames, until with a horrible abruptness he was staring up into the wide, pallid face ofProfessor Umbridge who had dragged him backwards out of the fire by the hair and was nowbending his neck back as far as it would go, as though she were going to slit his throat.

'You think,' she whispered, bending Harry's neck back even further, so that he was looking upat the ceiling, 'that after two NifflersI was going to let one more foul, scavenging little creature enter my office without myknowledge? I had Stealth Sensoring Spells placed all around my doorway after the last onegot in, you foolish boy. Take his wand,' she barked at someone he could not see, and he felt ahand grope inside the chest pocket of his robes and remove the wand. 'Hers, too.'

Harry heard a scuffle over by the door and knew that Hermione had also just had her wandwrested from her.

'1 want to know why you are in my office,' said Umbridge, shaking the fist clutching his hairso that he staggered.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'I was - trying to get my Firebolt!' Harry croaked.

'Liar.' She shook his head again. 'Your Firebolt is under strict guard in the dungeons, as youvery well know, Potter. You had your head in my fire. With whom have you beencommunicating?'

'No one -' said Harry, trying to pull away from her. He felt several hairs part company withhis scalp.

'Liar!' shouted Umbridge. She threw him from her and he slammed into the desk. Now hecould see Hermione pinioned against the wall by Millicent Bulstrode. Malfoy was leaning onthe windowsill, smirking as he threw Harry's wand into the air one-handed and caught itagain.

There was a commotion outside and several large Slytherins entered, each gripping Ron,Ginny, Luna and - to Harry's bewilderment - Neville, who was trapped in a stranglehold byCrabbe and looked in imminent danger of suffocation. All four of them had been gagged.

'Got 'em all,' said Warrington, shoving Ron roughly forwards into the room. That one,' hepoked a thick finger at Neville, 'tried to stop me taking her,' he pointed at Ginny, who wastrying to kick the shins of the large Slytherin girl holding her, 'so I brought him along too.'

'Good, good,' said Umbridge, watching Ginny's struggles. 'Well, it looks as though Hogwarts will shortly be a Weasley-free zone, doesn't it?'

Malfoy laughed loudly and sycophantically. Umbridge gave her wide, complacent smile andsettled herself into a chintz-covered armchair, blinking up at her captives like a toad in aflowerbed.

'So, Potter,' she said. 'You stationed lookouts around my office and you sent this buffoon,' shenodded at Ron — Malfoy laughed even louder - 'to tell me the poltergeist was wreakinghavoc in the Transfiguration department when I knew perfectly well that he was busysmearing ink on the eyepieces of all the school telescopes -Mr Filch having just informed meso.

'Clearly, it was very important for you to talk to somebody. Was it Albus Dumbledore? Or thehalf-breed, Hagrid? I doubt it was Minerva McGonagall, I hear she is still too ill to talk toanyone.'

Malfoy and a few of the other members of the Inquisitorial Squad laughed some more at that.

Harry found he was so full of rage and hatred he was shaking.

'It's none of your business who I talk to,' he snarled.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Umbridge's slack face seemed to tighten.

'Very well,' she said in her most dangerous and falsely sweet voice. 'Very well, Mr Potter… Ioffered you the chance to tell me freely. You refused. I have no alternative but to force you.

Draco- fetch Professor Snape.'

Malfoy stowed Harry's wand inside his robes and left the room smirking, but Harry hardlynoticed. He had just realised something; he could not believe he had been so stupid as toforget it. He had thought that all the members of the Order, all those who could help him saveSirius, were gone - but he had been wrong. There was still a member of the Order of thePhoenix at Hogwarts- Snape.

There was silence in the office except for the fidgetings and scuf-flings resulting from theSlytherins' efforts to keep Ron and the others under control. Ron's lip was bleeding on toUmbridge's carpet as he struggled against Warrington's half-nelson; Ginny was still trying tostamp on the feet of the sixth-year girl who had both her upper arms in a tight grip; Nevillewas turning steadily more purple in the face while tugging at Crabbe's arms; and Hermione was attempting, in vain, to throw Millicent Bulstrode off her. Luna, however, stood limply bythe side of her captor, gazing vaguely out of the window as though rather bored by theproceedings.

Harry looked back at Umbridge, who was watching him closely. He kept his face deliberatelysmooth and blank as footsteps were heard in the corridor outside and Draco Malfoy enteredthe room, closely followed by Snape.

'You wanted to see me, Headmistress?' said Snape, looking around at all the pairs ofstruggling students with an expression of complete indifference.

'Ah, Professor Snape,' said Umbridge, smiling widely and standing up again. 'Yes, 1 wouldlike another bottle of Veritaserum, as quick as you can, please.'

'You took my last bottle to interrogate Potter,' he said, surveying her coolly through his greasycurtains of black hair. 'Surely you did not use it all? I told you that three drops would besufficient.'

Umbridge flushed.

'You can make some more, can't you?' she said, her voice becoming more sweetly girlish as italways did when she was furious.

'Certainly,' said Snape, his lip curling. 'It takes a full moon-cycle to mature, so I should have itready for you in around a month.'

'A month?' squawked Umbridge, swelling toadishly. 'A month? But I need it this evening,Snape! I have just found Potter using my fire to communicate with a person or personsunknown!'

'Really?' said Snape, showing his first, faint sign of interest as he looked round at Harry. 'Well,it doesn't surprise me. Potter has never shown much inclination to follow school rules.'

His cold, dark eyes were boring into Harry's, who met his gaze unflinchingly, concentratinghard on what he had seen in his dream, willing Snape to read it in his mind, to understand…

'I wish to interrogate him!' repeated Umbridge angrily, and Snape looked away from Harryback into her furiously quivering face. 'I wish you to provide me with a potion that will forcehim to tell me the truth!'

'I have already told you,' said Snape smoothly, 'that I have no further stocks of Veritaserum.

Unless you wish to poison Potter -and I assure you I would have the greatest sympathy with you if you did - I cannot help you. The only trouble is that most venoms act too fast to givethe victim much time for truth-telling.'

Snape looked back at Harry, who stared at him, frantic to communicate without words.

Voldemort's got Sirius in the Department of Mysteries, he thought desperately. Voldemort's gotSirius -

'You are on probation!' shrieked Professor Umbridge, and Snape looked back at her, hiseyebrows slightly raised. 'You are being deliberately unhelpful! I expected better, LuciusMalfoy always speaks most highly of you! Now get out of my office!'

Snape gave her an ironic bow and turned to leave. Harry knew his last chance of letting theOrder know what was going on was walking out of the door.

'He's got Padfoot!' he shouted. 'He's got Padfoot at the place where it's hidden!'

Snape had stopped with his hand on Umbridges door handle.

'Padfoot?' cried Professor Umbridge, looking eagerly from Harry to Snape. 'What is Padfoot?

Where what is hidden? What does he mean, Snape?'

Snape looked round at Harry. His face was inscrutable. Harry could not tell whether he hadunderstood or not, but he did not dare speak more plainly in front of Umbridge.

'I have no idea,' said Snape coldly. 'Potter, when 1 want nonsense shouted at me I shall giveyou a Babbling Beverage. And Crabbe, loosen your hold a little. If Longbottom suffocates itwill mean a lot of tedious paperwork and I am afraid I shall have to mention it on yourreference if ever you apply for a job.'

He closed the door behind him with a snap, leaving Harry in a state of worse turmoil thanbefore: Snape had been his very last hope. He looked at Umbridge, who seemed to be feelingthe same way; her chest was heaving with rage and frustration.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Very well,' she said, and she pulled out her wand. 'Very well… I am left with no alternative…

this is more than a matter of school discipline… this is an issue of Ministry security… yes…

yes…'

She seemed to be talking herself into something. She was shifting her weight nervously fromfoot to foot, staring at Harry, beating her wand against her empty palm and breathing heavily.

As he watched her, Harry felt horribly powerless without his own wand.

'You are forcing me, Potter… I do not want to,' said Umbridge, still moving restlessly on thespot, 'but sometimes circumstances justify the use… I am sure the Minister will understandthat I had no choiceMalfoy was watching her with a hungry expression on his face.

The Cruciatus Curse ought to loosen your tongue,' said Umbridge quietly.

'No!' shrieked Hermione. 'Professor Umbridge - it's illegal.'

But Umbridge took no notice. There was a nasty, eager, excited look on her face that Harryhad never seen before. She raised her wand.

The Minister wouldn't want you to break the law, Professor Umbridge!' cried Hermione.

'What Cornelius doesn't know won't hurt him,' said Umbridge, who was now panting slightlyas she pointed her wand at different parts of Harry's body in turn, apparently trying to decidewhere it would hurt most. 'He never knew 1 ordered Dementors to go after Potter lastsummer, but he was delighted to be given the chance to expel him, all the same.'

'It was youT gasped Harry. 'You sent the Dementors after me?'

'Somebody had to act,' breathed Umbridge, as her wand came to rest pointing directly atHarrys forehead. They were all bleating about silencing you somehow - discrediting you - but1 was the one who actually did something about it… only you wriggled out of that one, didn'tyou, Potter? Not today though, not now -' And taking a deep breath, she cried, 'Cruc—'

'NO!' shouted Hermione in a cracked voice from behind Millicent Bulstrode. 'No - Harry - we'll have to tell her!'

'No way!' yelled Harry, staring at the little of Hermione he could see.

'We'll have to, Harry, she'll force it out of you anyway, what's… what's the point?'

POTCLUB EBOOKS

And Hermione began to cry weakly into the back of Millicent Bulstrode's robes. Millicentstopped trying to squash her against the wall immediately and dodged out of her way lookingdisgusted.

'Well, well, well!' said Umbridge, looking triumphant. 'Little Miss Question-all is going to giveus some answers! Come on then, girl, come on!'

'Er - my - nee - no!' shouted Ron through his gag.

Ginny was staring at Hermione as though she had never seen her before. Neville, still chokingfor breath, was gazing at her, too. But Harry had just noticed something. Though Hermionewas sobbing desperately into her hands, there was no trace of a tear.

'I'm - I'm sorry everyone,' said Hermione. 'But - I can't stand it -'

That's right, that's right, girl!' said Umbridge, seizing Hermione by the shoulders, thrustingher into the abandoned chintz chair and leaning over her. 'Now then… with whom was Pottercommunicating just now?'

'Well,' gulped Hermione into her hands, 'well, he was trying to speak to ProfessorDumbledore.'

Ron froze, his eyes wide; Ginny stopped trying to stamp on her Slytherin captor's toes; andeven Luna looked mildly surprised. Fortunately, the attention of Umbridge and her minionswas focused too exclusively upon Hermione to notice these suspicious signs.

'Dumbledore?' said Umbridge eagerly. 'You know where Dumbledore is, then?'

'Well… no!' sobbed Hermione. 'We've tried the Leaky Cauldron in Diagon Alley and theThree Broomsticks and even the Hog's Head -'

'Idiot girl - Dumbledore won't be sitting in a pub when the whole Ministry's looking lor him!'

shouted Umbridge, disappointment etched in every sagging line of her face.

'But - but we needed to tell him something important!' wailed Hermione, holding her handsmore tightly over her face, not, Harry knew, out of anguish, but to disguise the continuedabsence of tears.

'Yes?' said Umbridge with a sudden resurgence of excitement. 'What was it you wanted to tellhim?'

We… we wanted to tell him it's r - ready!' choked Hermione.

What's ready?' demanded Umbridge, and now she grabbed Hermione's shoulders again andshook her slightly. What's ready, girl?'

The… the weapon,' said Hermione.

'Weapon? Weapon?' said Umbridge, and her eyes seemed to pop with excitement. 'You havebeen developing some method of resistance? A weapon you could use against the Ministry?

On Professor Dumbledore's orders, of course?'

'Y — y - yes,' gasped Hermione, 'but he had to leave before it was finished and n - n - nowwe've finished it for him, and we c - c - can't find him't -'t - to tell him!'

'What kind of weapon is it?' said Umbridge harshly, her stubby hands still tight onHermione's shoulders.

'We don't r - r - really understand it,' said Hermione, sniffing loudly. 'We j - j - just did what P- P - Professor Dumbledore told us't -'t - to do.'

Umbridge straightened up, looking exultant.

'Lead me to the weapon,' she said.

'I'm not showing… them,' said Hermione shrilly, looking around at the Slytherins through herfingers.

'It is not for you to set conditions,' said Professor Umbridge harshly.

'Fine,' said Hermione, now sobbing into her hands again. 'Fine… let them see it, I hope theyuse it on you! In fact, I wish you'd invite loads and loads of people to come and see! Th - thatwould serve you right - oh, I'd love it if the wh - whole school knew where it was, and how tou - use it, and then if you annoy any of them they'll be able to's - sort you out!'

These words had a powerful impact on Umbridge: she glanced swiftly and suspiciouslyaround at her Inquisitorial Squad, her bulging eyes resting for a moment on Malfoy, who wastoo slow to disguise the look of eagerness and greed that had appeared on his face.

Umbridge contemplated Hermione for another long moment, then spoke in what she clearlythought was a motherly voice.

'All right, dear, let's make it just you and me… and we'll take Potter, too, shall we? Get up,now.'

'Professor,' said Malfoy eagerly, 'Professor Umbridge, I think some of the Squad should comewith you to look after -'

'I am a fully qualified Ministry official, Malfoy, do you really think I cannot manage two wandless teenagers alone?' asked Umbridge sharply. 'In any case, it does not sound as thoughthis weapon is something that schoolchildren should see. You will remain here until I returnand make sure none of these -' she gestured around at Ron, Ginny, Neville and Luna '- escape.'

'All right,' said Malfoy, looking sulky and disappointed.

'And you two can go ahead of me and show me the way' said Umbridge, pointing at Harryand Hermione with her wand. 'Lead on.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

— CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE —

Fight and FlightHarry had no idea what Hermione was planning, or even whether she had a plan. He walkedhalf a pace behind her as they headed down the corridor outside Umbridge's office, knowingit would look very suspicious if he appeared not to know where they were going. He did notdare attempt to talk to her; Umbridge was walking so closely behind them that he could hearher ragged breathing.

Hermione led the way down the stairs into the Entrance Hall. The din of loud voices and theclatter of cutlery on plates echoed from out of the double doors to the Great Hall - it seemedincredible to Harry that twenty feet away were people who were enjoying dinner, celebratingthe end of exams, not a care in the world…

Hermione walked straight out of the oak front doors and down the stone steps into the balmyevening air. The sun was falling towards the tops of the trees in the Forbidden Forest now,and as Hermione marched purposefully across the grass - Umbridge jogging to keep up - theirlong dark shadows rippled over the grass behind them like cloaks.

'It's hidden in Hagrid's hut, is it?' said Umbridge eagerly in Harry's ear.

'Of course not,' said Hermione scathingly. 'Hagrid might have set it off accidentally'

'Yes,' said Umbridge, whose excitement seemed to be mounting. 'Yes, he would have done, ofcourse, the great half-breed oaf.'

She laughed. Harry felt a strong urge to swing round and seize her by the throat, but resisted.

His scar was throbbing in the soft evening air but it had not yet burned white-hot, as he knewit would if Voldemort had moved in for the kill.

Then… where is it?' asked Umbridge, with a hint of uncertainty in her voice as Hermionecontinued to stride towards the Forest.

'In there, of course,' said Hermione, pointing into the dark trees. 'It had to be somewhere thatstudents weren't going to find it accidentally, didn't it?'

'Of course,' said Umbridge, though she sounded a little apprehensive now. 'Of course… verywell, then… you two stay ahead of me.'

'Can we have your wand, then, if we're going first?' Harry asked her.

'No, I don't think so, Mr Potter,' said Umbridge sweetly, poking him in the back with it. TheMinistry places a rather higher value on my life than yours, I'm afraid.'

As they reached the cool shade of the first trees, Harry tried to catch Hermiones eye; walkinginto the Forest without wands seemed to him to be more foolhardy than anything they haddone so far this evening. She, however, merely gave Umbridge a contemptuous glance andplunged straight into the trees, moving at such a pace that Umbridge, with her shorter legs,had difficulty in keeping up.

'Is it very far in?' Umbridge asked, as her robe ripped on a bramble.

'Oh yes,' said Hermione, 'yes, it's well hidden.'

Harry's misgivings increased. Hermione was not taking the path they had followed to visitGrawp, but the one he followed three years ago to the lair of the monster Aragog. Hermionehad not been with him on that occasion; he doubted she had any idea what danger lay at theend of it.

'Er - are you sure this is the right way?' he asked her pointedly.

'Oh yes,' she said in a steely voice, crashing through the undergrowth with what he thoughtwas a wholly unnecessary amount of noise. Behind them, Umbridge tripped over a fallensapling. Neither of them paused to help her up again; Hermione merely strode on, callingloudly over her shoulder, 'It's a bit further in!'

'Hermione, keep your voice down,' Harry muttered, hurrying to catch up with her. 'Anythingcould be listening in here -'

'I want us heard,' she answered quietly, as Umbridge jogged noisily after them. 'You'll see…"

They walked on for what seemed a long time, until they were once again so deep into theForest that the dense tree canopy blocked out all light. Harry had the feeling he had hadbefore in the Forest, one of being watched by unseen eyes.

'How much further?' demanded Umbridge angrily from behind him.

'Not far now!' shouted Hermione, as they emerged into a dim, dank clearing. 'Just a little bit -'

An arrow flew through the air and landed with a menacing thud in the tree just over her head. The air was suddenly full of the sound of hooves; Harry could feel the Forest floortrembling; Umbridge gave a little scream and pushed him in front of her like a shield -

He wrenched himself free of her and turned. Around fifty centaurs were emerging on everyside, their bows raised and loaded, pointing at Harry Hermione and Umbridge. They backedslowly into the centre of the clearing, Umbridge uttering odd little whimpers of terror. Harrylooked sideways at Hermione. She was wearing a triumphant smile.

'Who are you?' said a voice.

Harry looked left. The chestnut-bodied centaur called Magorian was walking towards themout of the circle: his bow, like those of the others, was raised. On Harry's right, Umbridge wasstill whimpering, her wand trembling violently as she pointed it at the advancing centaur.

'I asked you who are you, human,' said Magorian roughly.

'I am Dolores Umbridge!' said Umbridge in a high-pitched, terrified voice. 'SeniorUndersecretary to the Minister for Magic and Headmistress and High Inquisitor of Hogwarts!'

'You are from the Ministry of Magic?' said Magorian, as many of the centaurs in thesurrounding circle shifted restlessly.

That's right!' said Umbridge, in an even higher voice, 'so be very careful! By the laws laiddown by the Department for the Regulation and Control of Magical Creatures, any attack byhalf-breeds such as yourselves on a human -'

'What did you call us?' shouted a wild-looking black centaur, whom Harry recognised asBane. There was a great deal of angry muttering and tightening of bowstrings around them.

'Don't call them that!' Hermione said furiously, but Umbndge did not appear to have heardher. Still pointing her shaking wand at Magorian, she continued, 'Law Fifteen "B" statesclearly that "any attack by a magical creature who is deemed to have near-human intelligence,and therefore considered responsible for its actions —"'

'"Near-human intelligence"?' repeated Magorian, as Bane and several others roared with rageand pawed the ground. 'We consider that a great insult, human! Our intelligence, thankfully,far outstrips your own.'

'What are you doing in our Forest?' bellowed the hard-faced grey centaur Harry andHermione had seen on their last trip into the Forest. 'Why are you here?'

'Your Forest?' said Umbridge, shaking now not only with fright but also, it seemed, with indignation. 'I would remind you that you live here only because the Ministry of Magicpermits you certain areas of land -'

An arrow flew so close to her head that it caught at her mousy hair in passing: she let out anear-splitting scream and threw her hands over her head, while some of the centaurs bellowedtheir approval and others laughed raucously. The sound of their wild, neighing laughterechoing around the dimly lit clearing and the sight of their pawing hooves was extremelyunnerving.

'Whose Forest is it now, human?' bellowed Bane.

'Filthy half-breeds!' she screamed, her hands still tight over her head. 'Beasts! Uncontrolledanimals!'

'Be quiet!' shouted Hermione, but it was too late: Umbridge pointed her wand at Magorianand screamed, 'Incarcerous!'

Ropes flew out of midair like thick snakes, wrapping themselves tightly around the centaur'storso and trapping his arms: he gave a cry of rage and reared on to his hind legs, attemptingto free himself, while the other centaurs charged.

Harry grabbed Hermione and pulled her to the ground; face down on the Forest floor, heknew a moment of terror as hooves thundered around him, but the centaurs leapt over andaround them, bellowing and screaming with rage.

'Nooooo!' he heard Umbridge shriek. 'Noooooo… I am SeniorUndersecretary… you cannot - Unhand me, you animals… nooooo!'

Harry saw a flash of red light and knew she had attempted to Stun one of them; then shescreamed very loudly. Lifting his head a few inches, Harry saw that Umbridge had beenseized from behind by Bane and lifted high into the air, wriggling and yelling with fright. Herwand fell from her hand to the ground, and Harry's heart leapt. If he could just reach it -

But as he stretched out a hand towards it, a centaur's hoof descended upon the wand and itbroke cleanly in half.

'Now!' roared a voice in Harry's ear and a thick hairy arm descended from thin air anddragged him upright. Hermione, too, had been pulled to her feet. Over the plunging, manycolouredbacks and heads of the centaurs, Harry saw Umbridge being borne away throughthe trees by Bane. Screaming non-stop, her voice grew fainter and fainter until they could nolonger hear it over the trampling of hooves surrounding them.

'And these?' said the hard-faced, grey centaur holding Hermione.

They are young,' said a slow, doleful voice from behind Harry. 'We do not attack foals.'

They brought her here, Ronan,' replied the centaur who had such a firm grip on Harry. 'Andthey are not so young… he is nearing manhood, this one.'

He shook Harry by the neck of his robes.

'Please,' said Hermione breathlessly, 'please, don't attack us, we don't think like her, we aren'tMinistry of Magic employees! We only came in here because we hoped you'd drive her off forus.'

Harry knew at once, from the look on the face of the grey centaur holding Hermione, that shehad made a terrible mistake in saying this. The grey centaur threw back his head, his backlegs stamping furiously, and bellowed, 'You see, Ronan? They already have the arrogance oftheir kind! So we were to do your dirty work, were we, human girl? We were to act as yourservants, drive away your enemies like obedient hounds?'

'No!' said Hermione in a horrorstruck squeak. 'Please - I didn't mean that! I just hoped you'dbe able to - to help us -'

But she seemed to be going from bad to worse.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'We do not help humans!' snarled the centaur holding Harry, tightening his grip and rearing alittle at the same time, so that Harry's feet left the ground momentarily. 'We are a race apartand proud to be so. We will not permit you to walk from here, boasting that we did yourbidding!'

'We're not going to say anything like that!' Harry shouted. 'We know you didn't do what youdid because we wanted you to -'

But nobody seemed to be listening to him.

A bearded centaur towards the back of the crowd shouted, They came here unasked, theymust pay the consequences!'

A roar of approval met these words and a dun-coloured centaur shouted, They can join thewoman!'

'You said you didn't hurt the innocent!' shouted Hermione, real tears sliding down her facenow. 'We haven't done anything to hurt you, we haven't used wands or threats, we just wantto go back to school, please let us go back -'

'We are not all like the traitor Firenze, human girl!' shouted the grey centaur, to more neighingroars of approval from his fellows. 'Perhaps you thought us pretty talking horses? We are anancient people who will not stand wizard invasions and insults! We do not recognise yourlaws, we do not acknowledge your superiority, we are -'

But they did not hear what else centaurs were, for at that moment there came a crashing noiseon the edge of the clearing so loud that all of them, Harry, Hermione and the filty or socentaurs filling the clearing, looked around. Harry's centaur let him fall to the ground again ashis hands flew to his bow and quiver of arrows. Hermione had been dropped, too, and Harryhurried towards her as two thick tree trunks parted ominously and the monstrous form ofGrawp the giant appeared in the gap.

The centaurs nearest him backed into those behind; the clearing was now a forest of bows andarrows waiting to be fired, all pointing upwards at the enormous greyish face now loomingover them from just beneath the thick canopy of branches. Grawp's lopsided mouth wasgaping stupidly; they could see his bricklike yellow teeth glimmering in the half-light, his dullsludge-coloured eyes narrowed as he squinted down at the creatures at his feet. Broken ropestrailed from both ankles.

He opened his mouth even wider.

'Hagger.'

Harry did not know what 'hagger' meant, or what language it was from, nor did he muchcare; he was watching Grawp's feet, which were almost as long as Harry's whole body.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Hermione gripped his arm tightly; the centaurs were quite silent, staring up at the giant,whose huge, round head moved from side to side as he continued to peer amongst them asthough looking for something he had dropped.

'Hagger!' he said again, more insistently.

'Get away from here, giant!' called Magorian. 'You are not welcome among us!'

These words seemed to make no impression whatsoever on Grawp. He stooped a little (thecentaurs' arms tensed on their bows), then bellowed, 'HAGGER!'

A few of the centaurs looked worried now. Hermione, however, gave a gasp.

'Harry!' she whispered. 'I think he's trying to say "Hagrid"!'

At this precise moment Grawp caught sight of them, the only two humans in a sea ofcentaurs. He lowered his head another foot or so, staring intently at them. Harry could feelHermione shaking as Grawp opened his mouth wide again and said, in a deep, rumblingvoice, 'Hermy.'

'Goodness,' said Hermione, gripping Harry's arm so tightly it was growing numb and lookingas though she was about to faint, 'he - he remembered!'

'HERMY!' roared Grawp. 'WHERE HAGGER?'

'I don't know!' squealed Hermione, terrified. 'I'm sorry, Grawp, I don't know!'

'GRAWP WANT HAGGER!'

One of the giant's massive hands reached down. Hermione let out a real scream, ran a fewsteps backwards and fell over. Devoid of a wand, Harry braced himself to punch, kick, bite orwhatever else it took as the hand swooped towards him and knocked a snow-white centauroff his legs.

It was what the centaurs had been waiting for — Grawp's outstretched fingers were a footfrom Harry when fifty arrows soared through the air at the giant, peppering his enormousface, causing him to howl with pain and rage and straighten up, rubbing his face with hisenormous hands, breaking off the arrow shafts but forcing the arrowheads in still deeper.

He yelled and stamped his enormous feet and the centaurs scattered out of the way; pebblesizeddroplets of Grawp's blood showered Harry as he pulled Hermione to her feet and thepair of them ran as fast as they could for the shelter of the trees. Once there they looked back;

Grawp was snatching blindly at the centaurs as blood ran down his face; they were retreatingin disorder, galloping away through the trees on the other side of the clearing. Harry andHermione watched Grawp give another roar of fury and plunge after them, smashing moretrees aside as he went.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Oh no,' said Hermione, quaking so badly that her knees gave way. 'Oh, that was horrible. And he might kill them all.'

'I'm not that fussed, to be honest,' said Harry bitterly.

The sounds of the galloping centaurs and the blundering giant grew fainter and fainter. AsHarry listened to them, his scar gave another great throb and a wave of terror swept over him.

They had wasted so much time - they were even further from rescuing Sirius than they hadbeen when he had had the vision. Not only had Harry managed to lose his wand but theywere stuck in the middle of the Forbidden Forest with no means of transport whatsoever.

'Smart plan,' he spat at Hermione, having to release some of his fury. 'Really smart plan. Where do we go from here?'

'We need to get back up to the castle,' said Hermione faintly.

'By the time we've done that, Sirius'll probably be dead!' said Harry, kicking a nearby tree intemper. A high-pitched chattering started up overhead and he looked up to see an angryBowtruckle flexing its long twiglike fingers at him.

'Well, we can't do anything without wands,' said Hermione hopelessly, dragging herself upagain. 'Anyway, Harry, how exactly were you planning to get all the way to London?'

'Yeah, we were just wondering that,' said a familiar voice from behind her.

Harry and Hermione moved together instinctively and peered through the trees.

Ron came into sight, closely followed by Ginny, Neville and Luna. All of them looked a littlethe worse for wear - there were several long scratches running the length of Ginny's cheek; alarge purple lump was swelling above Neville's right eye; Ron's lip was bleeding worse thanever - but all were looking rather pleased with themselves.

'So,' said Ron, pushing aside a low-hanging branch and holding out Harry's wand, 'had anyideas?'

'How did you get away?' asked Harry in amazement, taking his wand from Ron.

'Couple of Stunners, a Disarming Charm, Neville brought off a really nice little ImpedimentJinx,' said Ron airily, now handing back Hermione's wand, too. 'But Ginny was best, she gotMalfoy - Bat Bogey Hex - it was superb, his whole face was covered in the great flappingthings. Anyway, we saw you out of the window heading into the Forest and followed.

What've you done with Umbridge?'

'She got carried away,' said Harry. 'By a herd of centaurs.'

'And they left you behind?' asked Ginny, looking astonished.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'No, they got chased off by Grawp,' said Harry

'Who's Grawp?' Luna asked interestedly.

'Hagrid's little brother,' said Ron promptly. 'Anyway, never mind that now. Harry, what didyou find out in the fire? Has You-Know-Who got Sirius or -?'

'Yes,' said Harry, as his scar gave another painful prickle, 'and I'm sure Sirius is still alive, butI can't see how we're going to get there to help him.'

They all fell silent, looking rather scared; the problem facing them seemed insurmountable.

'Well, we'll have to fly, won't we?' said Luna, in the closest thing to a matter-of-fact voiceHarry had ever heard her use.

'OK,' said Harry irritably, rounding on her. 'First of all, "we" aren't doing anything if you'reincluding yourself in that, and second of all, Ron's the only one with a broomstick that isn'tbeing guarded by a security troll, so -'

'I've got a broom!' said Ginny.

'Yeah, but you're not coming,' said Ron angrily.

'Excuse me, but 1 care what happens to Sirius as much as you do!' said Ginny, her jaw set sothat her resemblance to Fred and George was suddenly striking.

'You're too -' Harry began, but Ginny said fiercely, 'I'm three years older than you were whenyou fought You-Know-Who over the Philosopher's Stone, and it's because of me that Malfoy'sstuck back in Umbridge's office with giant flying bogies attacking him -'

'Yeah, but -'

'We were all in the DA together,' said Neville quietly. 'It was all supposed to be about fightingYou-Know-Who, wasn't it? And this is the first chance we've had to do something real - orwas that all just a game or something?'

'No — of course it wasn't -' said Harry impatiently.

Then we should come too,' said Neville simply. 'We want to help.'

That's right,' said Luna, smiling happily.

Harry's eyes met Ron's. He knew Ron was thinking exactly what he was: if he could have chosen any members of the DA, in addition to himself, Ron and Hermione, to join him in theattempt to rescue Sirius, he would not have picked Ginny, Neville or Luna.

'Well, it doesn't matter, anyway,' said Harry through gritted teeth, 'because we still don'tknow how to get there -'

'I thought we'd settled that,' said Luna maddeningly. 'We're flying!'

'Look,' said Ron, barely containing his anger, 'you might be able to fly without a broomstickbut the rest of us can't sprout wings whenever we -'

There are ways of flying other than with broomsticks,' said Luna serenely.

'I's'pose we're going to ride on the back of the Kacky Snorgle or whatever it is?'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Rondemanded.

The Crumple-Horned Snorkack can't fly,' said Luna in a dignified voice, 'but they can, andHagrid says they're very good at finding places their riders are looking for.'

Harry whirled round. Standing between two trees, their white eyes gleaming eerily, were twoThestrals, watching the whispered conversation as though they understood every word,'Yes!' he whispered, moving towards them. They tossed their reptilian heads, throwing backlong black manes, and Harry stretched out his hand eagerly and patted the nearest one'sshining neck; how could he ever have thought them ugly?

'Is it those mad horse things?' said Ron uncertainly, staring at a point slightly to the left of theThestral Harry was patting. Those ones you can't see unless you've watched someone snuff it?'

'Yeah,' said Harry.

'How many?'

'Just two.'

'Well, we need three,' said Hermione, who was still looking a little shaken, but determinedjust the same.

Tour, Hermione,' said Ginny, scowling.

'I think there are six of us, actually,' said Luna calmly, counting.

'Don't be stupid, we can't all go!' said Harry angrily. 'Look, you three -' he pointed at Neville,Ginny and Luna, 'you're not involved in this, you're not -'

They burst into more protests. His scar gave another, more painful, twinge. Every momentthey delayed was precious; he did not have time to argue.

'OK, fine, it's your choice,' he said curtly, 'but unless we can find more Thestrals you're notgoing to be able -'

'Oh, more of them will come,' said Ginny confidently, who like Ron was squinting in quite thewrong direction, apparently under the impression that she was looking at the horses.

'What makes you think that?'

'Because, in case you hadn't noticed, you and Hermione are both covered in blood,' she saidcoolly, 'and we know Hagrid lures Thestrals with raw meat. That's probably why these twoturned up in the first place.'

Harry felt a soft tug on his robes at that moment and looked down to see the closest Thestrallicking his sleeve, which was damp with Grawp's blood.

'OK, then,' he said, a bright idea occurring, 'Ron and 1 will take these two and go ahead, andHermione can stay here with you three and she'll attract more Thestrals -'

'I'm not staying behind!' said Hermione furiously.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

There's no need,' said Luna, smiling. 'Look, here come more now… you two must reallysmell…'

Harry turned: no fewer than six or seven Thestrals were picking their way through the trees,their great leathery wings folded tight to their bodies, their eyes gleaming through thedarkness. He had no excuse now.

'All right,' he said angrily, 'pick one and get on, then.'

— CHAPTER THIRTY-FOUR —

The Department of MysteriesHarry wound his hand tightly into the mane of the nearest Thestral, placed a foot on a stumpnearby and scrambled clumsily on to the horses silken back. It did not object, but twisted itshead around, fangs bared, and attempted to continue its eager licking of his robes.

He found there was a way of lodging his knees behind the wing joints that made him feelmore secure, then looked around at the others. Neville had heaved himself over the back ofthe next Thestral and was now attempting to swing one short leg over the creature's back.

Luna was already in place, sitting side-saddle and adjusting her robes as though she did thisevery day. Ron, Hermione and Ginny, however, were still standing motionless on the spot,open-mouthed and staring.

'What?' he said.

'How're we supposed to get on?' said Ron faintly. 'When we can't see the things?'

'Oh, it's easy,' said Luna, sliding obligingly from her Thestral and marching over to him,Hermione and Ginny. 'Come here…'

She pulled them over to the other Thestrals standing around and one by one managed to helpthem on to the back of their mount. All three looked extremely nervous as she wound theirhands into their horses mane and told them to grip tightly before she got back on to her ownsteed.

This is mad,' Ron murmured, moving his free hand gingerly up and down his horse's neck.

'Mad… if I could just see it -'

'You'd better hope it stays invisible,' said Harry darkly. 'We all ready, then?'

They all nodded and he saw five pairs of knees tighten beneath their robes.

'OK…'

He looked down at the back of his Thestral's glossy black head and swallowed.

'Ministry of Magic, visitors' entrance, London, then,' he said uncertainly. 'Er… if you know…

where to go…"

For a moment Harry's Thestral did nothing at all; then, with a sweeping movement thatnearly unseated him, the wings on either side extended; the horse crouched slowly, thenrocketed upwards so fast and so steeply that Harry had to clench his arms and legs tightlyaround the horse to avoid sliding backwards over its bony rump. He closed his eyes andpressed his face down into the horse's silky mane as they burst through the topmost branchesof the trees and soared out into a blood-red sunset.

Harry did not think he had ever moved so fast: the Thestral streaked over the castle, its widewings hardly beating; the cooling air was slapping Harry's face; eyes screwed up against therushing wind, he looked round and saw his five fellows soaring along behind him, each ofthem bent as low as possible into the neck of their Thestral to protect themselves from hisslipstream.

They were over the Hogwarts grounds, they had passed Hogsmeade; Harry could seemountains and gullies below them. As the daylight began to fail, Harry saw small collectionsof lights as they passed over more villages, then a winding road on which a single car wasbeetling its way home through the hills…

This is bizarre!' Harry barely heard Ron yell from somewhere behind him, and he imaginedhow it must feel to be speeding along at this height with no visible means of support.

Twilight fell: the sky was turning to a light, dusky purple littered with tiny silver stars, andsoon only the lights of Muggle towns gave them any clue of how far from the ground theywere, or how very fast they were travelling. Harry's arms were wrapped tightly around hishorses neck as he willed it to go even faster. How much time had elapsed since he had seenSirius lying on the Department of Mysteries floor? How much longer would Sinus be able toresist Voldemort? All Harry knew for sure was that his godfather had neither done asVoldemort wanted, nor died, for he was convinced that either outcome would have causedhim to feel Voldemort's jubilation or fury course through his own body, making his scar searas painfully as it had on the night Mr Weasley was attacked.

On they flew through the gathering darkness; Harry's face felt stiff and cold, his legs numbfrom gripping the Thestrals sides so tightly, but he did not dare shift his position lest he slip…

he was deaf from the thundering rush of air in his ears, and his mouth was dry and frozenfrom the cold night wind. He had lost all sense of how far they had come; all his faith was inthe beast beneath him, still streaking purposefully through the night, barely flapping its wingsas it sped ever onwards.

If they were too late…
He's still alive, he's still fighting, I can feel it…

If Voldemort decided Sirius was not going to crack…
I'd know…
Harrys stomach gave a jolt; the Thestrals head was suddenly pointing towards the groundand he actually slid forwards a few inches along its neck. They were descending at last… hethought he heard a shriek behind him and twisted around dangerously, but could see no signof a falling body .'.. presumably they had all received a shock from the change of direction,just as he had.
And now bright orange lights were growing larger and rounder on all sides; they could seethe tops of buildings, streams of headlights like luminous insect eyes, squares of pale yellowthat were windows. Quite suddenly, it seemed, they were hurtling towards the pavement;
Harry gripped the Thestral with every last ounce of his strength, braced for a sudden impact,but the horse touched the dark ground as lightly as a shadow and Harry slid from its back,looking around at the street where the overflowing skip still stood a short way from thevandalised telephone box, both drained of colour in the flat orange glare of the streetlights.
Ron landed a short way off and toppled immediately from his Thestral on to the pavement.
'Never again,' he said, struggling to his feet. He made as though to stride away from hisThestral, but, unable to see it, collided with its hindquarters and almost fell over again.
'Never, ever again… that was the worst -'
Hermione and Ginny touched down on either side of him: both slid off their mounts a littlemore gracefully than Ron, though with similar expressions of relief at being back on firmground; Neville jumped down, shaking; and Luna dismounted smoothly.
'Where do we go from here, then?' she asked Harry in a politely interested voice, as thoughthis was all a rather interesting day-trip.
'Over here,' he said. He gave his Thestral a quick, grateful pat, then led the way quickly to thebattered telephone box and opened the door. 'Come on!' he urged the others, as they hesitated.
Ron and Ginny marched in obediently; Hermione, Neville and Luna squashed themselves inafter them; Harry took one glance back at the Thestrals, now foraging for scraps of rotten foodinside the skip, then forced himself into the box after Luna.
'Whoever's nearest the receiver, dial six two four four two!' he said.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Ron did it, his arm bent bizarrely to reach the dial; as it whirred back into place the coolfemale voice sounded inside the box.

'Welcome to the Ministry of Magic. Please state your name and business.'
'Harry Potter, Ron Weasley Hermione Granger,' Harry said very quickly, 'Ginny Weasley,Neville Longbottom, Luna Lovegood… we're here to save someone, unless your Ministry cando it first!'
Thank you,' said the cool female voice. 'Visitors, please take the badges and attach them to thefront of your robes.'
Half a dozen badges slid out of the metal chute where returned coins normally appeared. Hermione scooped them up and handed them mutely to Harry over Ginny's head; he glancedat the topmost one, Harry Potter, Rescue Mission.
'Visitors to the Ministry, you are required to submit to a search and present your wands forregistration at the security desk, which is located at the far end of the Atrium.'
'Fine!' Harry said loudly, as his scar gave another throb. 'Now can we move?'
The floor of the telephone box shuddered and the pavement rose up past its glass windows;
the scavenging Thestrals were sliding out of sight; blackness closed over their heads and witha dull grinding noise they sank down into the depths of the Ministry of Magic.
A chink of soft golden light hit their feet and, widening, rose up their bodies. Harry bent hisknees and held his wand as ready as he could in such cramped conditions as he peeredthrough the glass to see whether anybody was waiting for them in the Atrium, but it seemedto be completely empty. The light was dimmer than it had been by day; there were no firesburning under the mantelpieces set into the walls, but as the lift slid smoothly to a halt he sawthat golden symbols continued to twist sinuously in the dark blue ceiling.
The Ministry of Magic wishes you a pleasant evening,' said the woman's voice.
The door of the telephone box burst open; Harry toppled out of it, closely followed by Nevilleand Luna. The only sound in the Atrium was the steady rush of water from the goldenfountain, where jets from the wands of the witch and wizard, the point of the centaur's arrow,the tip of the goblin's hat and the house-elf's ears continued to gush into the surrounding pool.
'Come on,' said Harry quietly and the six of them sprinted off down the hall, Harry in thelead, past the fountain towards the desk where the watchwizard who had weighed Harry'swand had sat, and which was now deserted.

Harry felt sure there ought to be a security person there, sure their absence was an ominoussign, and his feeling of foreboding increased as they passed through the golden gates to thelifts. He pressed the nearest 'down' button and a lift clattered into sight almost immediately,the golden grilles slid apart with a great, echoing clanking and they dashed inside. Harrystabbed the number nine button; the grilles closed with a bang and the lift began to descend,jangling and rattling. Harry had not realised how noisy the lifts were on the day he had comewith Mr Weasley; he was sure the din would raise every security person within the building,yet when the lift halted, the cool female voice said, 'Department of Mysteries,' and the grillesslid open. They stepped out into the corridor where nothing was moving but the nearesttorches, flickering in the rush of air from the lift.

Harry turned towards the plain black door. After months and months of dreaming about it,he was here at last.

'Let's go,' he whispered, and he led the way down the corridor, Luna right behind him, gazingaround with her mouth slightly open.

'OK, listen,' said Harry stopping again within six feet of the door. 'Maybe… maybe a couple ofpeople should stay here as a — as a lookout, and -'

'And how're we going to let you know something's coming?' asked Ginny, her eyebrowsraised. 'You could be miles away.'

'We're coming with you, Harry,' said Neville.

'Let's get on with it,' said Ron firmly.

Harry still did not want to take them all with him, but it seemed he had no choice. He turnedto face the door and walked forwards… just as it had in his dream, it swung open and hemarched over the threshold, the others at his heels.

They were standing in a large, circular room. Everything in here was black including the floorand ceiling; identical, unmarked, handleless black doors were set at intervals all around theblack walls, interspersed with branches of candles whose flames burned blue; their cool,shimmering light reflected in the shining marble floor made it look as though there was darkwater underfoot.

'Someone shut the door,' Harry muttered.

He regretted giving this order the moment Neville had obeyed it. Without the long chink oflight from the torchlit corridor behind them, the place became so dark that for a moment theonly things they could see were the bunches of shivering blue flames on the walls and their ghostly reflections in the floor.

In his dream, Harry had always walked purposefully across this room to the doorimmediately opposite the entrance and walked on. But there were around a dozen doors here.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Just as he was gazing ahead at the doors opposite him, trying to decide which was the rightone, there was a great rumbling noise and the candles began to move sideways. The circularwall was rotating.

Hermione grabbed Harry's arm as though frightened the floor might move, too, but it did not.

For a few seconds, the blue flames around them were blurred to resemble neon lines as thewall sped around; then, quite as suddenly as it had started, the rumbling stopped andeverything became stationary once again.

Harry's eyes had blue streaks burned into them; it was all he could see.

'What was that about?' whispered Ron fearfully.

'I think it was to stop us knowing which door we came in through,' said Ginny in a hushedvoice.

Harry realised at once she was right: he could no sooner identify the exit door than locate anant on the jet-black floor; and the door through which they needed to proceed could be anyone of the dozen surrounding them.

'How're we going to get back out?' said Neville uncomfortably.

'Well, that doesn't matter now,' said Harry forcefully, blinking to try to erase the blue linesfrom his vision, and clutching his wand tighter than ever, 'we won't need to get out till we'vefound Sinus -'

'Don't go calling for him, though!' Hermione said urgently; but Harry had never needed heradvice less, his instinct was to keep as quiet as possible.

'Where do we go, then, Harry?' Ron asked.

'I don't -' Harry began. He swallowed. 'In the dreams I went through the door at the end of thecorridor from the lifts into a dark room - that's this one - and then I went through anotherdoor into a room that kind of… glitters. We should try a few doors,' he said hastily, 'I'll knowthe right way when I see it. C'mon.'

He marched straight at the door now facing him, the others following close behind him, sethis left hand against its cool, shining surface, raised his wand ready to strike the moment it opened, and pushed.

It swung open easily.

After the darkness of the first room, the lamps hanging low on golden chains from this ceilinggave the impression that this long rectangular room was much brighter, though there were noglittering, shimmering lights as Harry had seen in his dreams. The place was quite emptyexcept for a few desks and, in the very middle of the room, an enormous glass tank of deepgreen liquid, big enough for all of them to swim in; a number of pearly-white objects weredrifting around lazily in it.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'What're those things?' whispered Ron.

'Dunno,' said Harry.

'Are they fish?' breathed Ginny.

'Aquavirius Maggots!' said Luna excitedly. 'Dad said the Ministry were breeding —'

'No,' said Hermione. She sounded odd. She moved forward to look through the side of thetank. They're brains.'

'Brains?'

'Yes… I wonder what they're doing with them?'

Harry joined her at the tank. Sure enough, there could be no mistake now he saw them atclose quarters. Glimmering eerily, they drifted in and out of sight in the depths of the greenliquid, looking something like slimy cauliflowers.

'Let's get out of here,' said Harry. This isn't right, we need to try another door.'

There are doors here, too,' said Ron, pointing around the walls. Harry's heart sank; how bigwas this place?

'In my dream I went through that dark room into the second one,' he said. 'I think we shouldgo back and try from there.'

So they hurried back into the dark, circular room; the ghostly shapes of the brains were nowswimming before Harry's eyes instead of the blue candle flames.

'Wait!' said Hermione sharply, as Luna made to close the door of the brain room behind them.

'Flagrate!'

She drew with her wand in midair and a fiery 'X' appeared on the door. No sooner had thedoor clicked shut behind them than there was a great rumbling, and once again the wallbegan to revolve very fast, but now there was a great red-gold blur in amongst the faint blueand, when all became still again, the fiery cross still burned, showing the door they hadalready tried.

'Good thinking,' said Harry. 'OK, let's try this one -'

Again, he strode directly at the door facing him and pushed it open, his wand still raised, theothers at his heels.

This room was larger than the last, dimly lit and rectangular, and the centre of it was sunken,forming a great stone pit some twenty feet deep. They were standing on the topmost tier ofwhat seemed to be stone benches running all around the room and descending in steep stepslike an amphitheatre, or the courtroom in which Harry had been tried by the Wizengamot.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Instead of a chained chair, however, there was a raised stone dais in the centre of the pit, onwhich stood a stone archway that looked so ancient, cracked and crumbling that Harry wasamazed the thing was still standing. Unsupported by any surrounding wall, the archway washung with a tattered black curtain or veil which, despite the complete stillness of the coldsurrounding air, was fluttering very slightly as though it had just been touched.

'Who's there?' said Harry, jumping down on to the bench below. There was no answeringvoice, but the veil continued to flutter and sway.

'Careful!' whispered Hermione.

Harry scrambled down the benches one by one until he reached the stone bottom of thesunken pit. His footsteps echoed loudly as he walked slowly towards the dais. The pointedarchway looked much taller from where he now stood than it had when he'd been lookingdown on it from above. Still the veil swayed gently, as though somebody had just passedthrough it.

'Sirius?' Harry spoke again, but more quietly now that he was nearer.

He had the strangest feeling that there was someone standing right behind the veil on theother side of the archway. Gripping his wand very tightly, he edged around the dais, butthere was nobody there; all that could be seen was the other side of the tattered black veil.

'Let's go,' called Hermione from halfway up the stone steps. This isn't right, Harry, come on, let's go.'

She sounded scared, much more scared than she had in the room where the brains swam, yetHarry thought the archway had a kind of beauty about it, old though it was. The gentlyrippling veil intrigued him; he felt a very strong inclination to climb up on the dais and walkthrough it.

'Harry, let's go, OK?' said Hermione more forcefully.

'OK,' he said, but did not move. He had just heard something. There were faint whispering,murmuring noises coming from the other side of the veil.

'What are you saying?' he said, very loudly, so that his words echoed all around the stonebenches.

'Nobody's talking, Harry!' said Hermione, now moving over to him.

'Someone's whispering behind there,' he said, moving out of her reach and continuing tofrown at the veil. 'Is that you, Ron?'

'I'm here, mate,' said Ron, appearing around the side of the archway.

'Can't anyone else hear it?' Harry demanded, for the whispering and murmuring wasbecoming louder; without really meaning to put it there, he found his foot was on the dais.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'I can hear them too,' breathed Luna, joining them around the side of the archway and gazingat the swaying veil. There are people in there!'

'What do you mean, "in there"?' demanded Hermione, jumping down from the bottom stepand sounding much angrier than the occasion warranted, 'there isn't any "in there", it's just anarchway, there's no room for anybody to be there. Harry, stop it, come away -'

She grabbed his arm and pulled, but he resisted.

'Harry, we are supposed to be here for Sirius!' she said in a high-pitched, strained voice.

'Sirius,' Harry repeated, still gazing, mesmerised, at the continuously swaying veil. 'Yeah…'

Something finally slid back into place in his brain; Sirius, captured, bound and tortured, andhe was staring at this archway…

He took several paces back from the dais and wrenched his eyes from the veil.

'Let's go,' he said.

That's what I've been trying to - well, come on, then!' said Hermione, and she led the wayback around the dais. On the other side, Ginny and Neville were staring, apparentlyentranced, at the veil too. Without speaking, Hermione took hold of Ginny's arm,J^^^jj l^^wRon grabbed Neville's, and they marched them firmly back to the lowest stone bench andclambered all the way back up to the door.

'What d'you reckon that arch was?' Harry asked Hermione as they regained the dark circularroom.

'I don't know, but whatever it was, it was dangerous,' she said firmly, again inscribing a fierycross on the door.

Once more, the wall span and became still again. Harry approached another door at randomand pushed. It did not move.

'What's wrong?' said Hermione.

'It's… locked…' said Harry, throwing his weight at the door, but it didn't budge.

This is it, then, isn't it?' said Ron excitedly, joining Harry in the attempt to force the door open.

'Bound to be!'

'Get out of the way!' said Hermione sharply. She pointed her wand at the place where a lockwould have been on an ordinary door and said, 'Alohomora!'

Nothing happened.

'Sirius's knife!' said Harry. He pulled it out from inside his robes and slid it into the crackbetween the door and the wall. The others all watched eagerly as he ran it from top to bottom,withdrew it and then flung his shoulder again at the door. It remained as firmly shut as ever.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

What was more, when Harry looked down at the knife, he saw the blade had melted.

'Right, we're leaving that room,' said Hermione decisively.

'But what if that's the one?' said Ron, staring at it with a mixture of apprehension and longing.

'It can't be, Harry could get through all the doors in his dream,' said Hermione, marking thedoor with another fiery cross as Harry replaced the now-useless handle of Sirius's knife in hispocket.

'You know what could be in there?' said Luna eagerly, as the wall started to spin yet again.

'Something blibbering, no doubt,' said Hermione under her breath and Neville gave a nervouslittle laugh.

The wall slid to a halt and Harry, with a feeling of increasing desperation, pushed the nextdoor open.

This is it!'

He knew it at once by the beautiful, dancing, diamond-sparkling light. As Harrys eyesbecame accustomed to the brilliant glare, he saw clocks gleaming from every surface, largeand small, grandfather and carriage, hanging in spaces between the bookcases or standing ondesks ranging the length of the room, so that a busy, relentless ticking filled the place likethousands of minuscule, marching footsteps. The source of the dancing, diamond-bright lightwas a towering crystal bell jar that stood at the far end of the room.

This way!'

Harry's heart was pumping frantically now that he knew they were on the right track; he ledthe way down the narrow space between the lines of desks, heading, as he had done in hisdream, for the source of the light, the crystal bell jar quite as tall as he was that stood on adesk and appeared to be full of a billowing, glittering wind.

'Oh, lookl' said Ginny, as they drew nearer, pointing at the very heart of the bell jar.

Drifting along in the sparkling current inside was a tiny, jewel-bright egg. As it rose in the jar,it cracked open and a hummingbird emerged, which was carried to the very top of the jar, butas it fell on the draught its feathers became bedraggled and damp again, and by the time ithad been borne back to the bottom of the jar it had been enclosed once more in its egg.

'Keep going!' said Harry sharply, because Ginny showed signs of wanting to stop and watchthe egg's progress back into a bird.

PUTCLUB BOOKS

'You dawdled enough by that old arch!' she said crossly, but followed him past the bell jar tothe only door behind it.

This is it,' Harry said again, and his heart was now pumping so hard and fast he felt it mustinterfere with his speech, 'it's through here -'

He glanced around at them all; they had their wands out and looked suddenly serious andanxious. He looked back at the door and pushed. It swung open.

They were there, they had found the place: high as a church and full of nothing but toweringshelves covered in small, dusty, glass orbs. They glimmered dully in the light issuing frommore candle-brackets set at intervals along the shelves. Like those in the circular room behindthem, their flames were burning blue. The room was very cold.

Harry edged forward and peered down one of the shadowy aisles between two rows ofshelves. He could not hear anything or see the slightest sign of movement.

'You said it was row ninety-seven,' whispered Hermione.

'Yeah,' breathed Harry, looking up at the end of the closest row. Beneath the branch of blueglowingcandles protruding from it glimmered the silver figure fifty-three.

'We need to go right, I think,' whispered Hermione, squinting to the next row. 'Yes… that'sfifty-four…'

'Keep your wands ready,' Harry said softly.

They crept forward, glancing behind them as they went on down the long alleys of shelves,the further ends of which were in near-total darkness. Tiny, yellowing labels had been stuckbeneath each glass orb on the shelves. Some of them had a weird, liquid glow; others were asdull and dark within as blown light bulbs.

They passed row eighty-four… eighty-five… Harry was listening hard for the slightest soundof movement, but Sirius might be gagged now, or else unconscious… or, said an unbiddenvoice inside his head, he might already be dead…

I'd have felt it, he told himself, his heart now hammering against his Adam's apple, I'dalready know…

'Ninety-seven!' whispered Hermione.

They stood grouped around the end of the row, gazing down the alley beside it. There wasnobody there.

'He's right down at the end,' said Harry, whose mouth had become slightly dry. 'You can't seeproperly from here.'

And he led them between the towering rows of glass balls, some of which glowed softly asthey passed…

'He should be near here,' whispered Harry, convinced that every step was going to bring theragged form of Sirius into view on the darkened floor. 'Anywhere here… really close…'

'Harry?' said Hermione tentatively, but he did not want to respond. His mouth was very dry.

'Somewhere about… here…' he said.

They had reached the end of the row and emerged into more dim candlelight. There wasnobody there. All was echoing, dusty silence.

'He might be…' Harry whispered hoarsely, peering down the next alley. 'Or maybe…' Hehurried to look down the one beyond that.

'Harry?' said Hermione again.

'What?' he snarled.

'I… I don't think Sirius is here.'

Nobody spoke. Harry did not want to look at any of them. He felt sick. He did not understandwhy Sirius was not here. He had to be here. This was where he, Harry, had seen him…

He ran up the space at the end of the rows, staring down them. Empty aisle after empty aisleflickered past. He ran the other way, back past his staring companions. There was no sign ofSirius anywhere, nor any hint of a struggle.

'Harry?' Ron called.

'What?'

He did not want to hear what Ron had to say; did not want to hear Ron tell him he had beenstupid or suggest that they ought to go back to Hogwarts, but the heat was rising in his faceand he felt as though he would like to skulk down here in the darkness for a long while beforefacing the brightness of the Atrium above and the others' accusing stares…

'Have you seen this?' said Ron,'What?' said Harry, but eagerly this time - it had to be a sign that Sirius had been there, a clue.

He strode back to where they were all standing, a little way down row ninety-seven, butfound nothing except Ron staring at one of the dusty glass spheres on the shelf.

What?' Harry repeated glumly.

'It's — it's got your name on,' said Ron.

Harry moved a little closer. Ron was pointing at one of the small glass spheres that glowedwith a dull inner light, though it was very dusty and appeared not to have been touched formany years.

'My name?' said Harry blankly.

He stepped forwards. Not as tall as Ron, he had to crane his neck to read the yellowish labelaffixed to the shelf right beneath j^^^ ^^^Hthe dusty glass ball. In spidery writing was written a date of some sixteen years previously,and below that:

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

S.P.T. to A.P.W.B.D.

Dark Lord and (?)Harry PotterHarry stared at it.

'What is it?' Ron asked, sounding unnerved. 'What's your name doing down here?'

He glanced along at the other labels on that stretch of shelf.

'I'm not here,' he said, sounding perplexed. 'None of the rest of us are here.'

'Harry, I don't think you should touch it,' said Hermione sharply, as he stretched out his hand.

'Why not?' he said. 'It's something to do with me, isn't it?'

'Don't, Harry,' said Neville suddenly. Harry looked at him. Neville's round face was shiningslightly with sweat. He looked as though he could not take much more suspense.

'It's got my name on,' said Harry.

And feeling slightly reckless, he closed his fingers around the dusty ball's surface. He hadexpected it to feel cold, but it did not. On the contrary, it felt as though it had been lying in thesun for hours, as though the glow of light within was warming it. Expecting, even hoping,that something dramatic was going to happen, something exciting that might make their longand dangerous journey worthwhile after all, Harry lifted the glass ball down from its shelfand stared at it.

Nothing whatsoever happened. The others moved in closer around Harry, gazing at the orbas he brushed it free of the clogging dust.

And then, from right behind them, a drawling voice spoke.

'Very good, Potter. Now turn around, nice and slowly, and give that to me.'

— CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE —

Beyond the VeilBlack shapes were emerging out of thin air all around them, blocking their way left and right; eyes glinted through slits in hoods, a dozen lit wand tips were pointing directly at theirhearts; Ginny gave a gasp of horror.

To me, Potter,' repeated the drawling voice of Lucius Malfoy as he held out his hand, palm up.

Harrys insides plummeted sickeningly. They were trapped, and outnumbered two to one.

To me,' said Malfoy yet again.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Where's Sirius?' Harry said.

Several of the Death Eaters laughed; a harsh female voice from the midst of the shadowyfigures to Harry's left said triumphantly, The Dark Lord always knows!'

'Always,' echoed Malfoy softly. 'Now, give me the prophecy Potter.'

'I want to know where Sirius is!'

'I want to know where Sirius is!' mimicked the woman to his left.

She and her fellow Death Eaters had closed in so that they were mere feet away from Harryand the others, the light from their wands dazzling Harry's eyes.

'You've got him,' said Harry, ignoring the rising panic in his chest, the dread he had beenfighting since they had first entered the ninety-seventh row. 'He's here. I know he is.'

The little baby woke up jwightened and fort what it dweamed was twoo,' said the woman in ahorrible, mock baby voice. Harry felt Ron stir beside him.

'Don't do anything,' Harry muttered. 'Not yet -'

The woman who had mimicked him let out a raucous scream of laughter.

'You hear him? You hear him? Giving instructions to the other children as though he thinks offighting us!'

'Oh, you don't know Potter as I do, Bellatrix,' said Malfoy softly. 'He has a great weakness forheroics; the Dark Lord understands this about him. Now give me the prophecy, Potter.'

'I know Sirius is here,' said Harry, though panic was causing his chest to constrict and he feltas though he could not breathe properly. 'I know you've got him!'

More of the Death Eaters laughed, though the woman laughed loudest of all.

'It's time you learned the difference between life and dreams, Potter,' said Malfoy. 'Now giveme the prophecy, or we start using wands.'

'Go on, then,' said Harry, raising his own wand to chest height. As he did so, the five wandsof Ron, Hermione, Neville, Ginny and Luna rose on either side of him. The knot in Harry'sstomach tightened. If Sirius really was not here, he had led his friends to their deaths for noreason at all…

But the Death Eaters did not strike.

'Hand over the prophecy and no one need get hurt,' said Malfoy coolly.

It was Harry's turn to laugh.

'Yeah, right!' he said. '1 give you this - prophecy, is it? And you'll just let us skip off home, willyou?'

The words were hardly out of his mouth when the female Death Eater shrieked: 'Accto proph—'

Harry was just ready for her: he shouted 'Protego!' before she had finished her spell, andthough the glass sphere slipped to the tips of his fingers he managed to cling on to it.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Oh, he knows how to play, little bitty baby Potter,' she said, her mad eyes staring through theslits in her hood. 'Very well, then -'
'I TOLD YOU, NO!' Lucius Malfoy roared at the woman. 'If you smash it -!'
Harry's mind was racing. The Death Eaters wanted this dusty spun-glass sphere. He had nointerest in it. He just wanted to get them all out of this alive, to make sure none of his friendspaid a terrible price for his stupidity…

The woman stepped forward, away from her fellows, and pulled off her hood. Azkaban hadhollowed Bellatrix Lestrange's face, making it gaunt and skull-like, but it was alive with afeverish, fanatical glow.
'You need more persuasion?' she said, her chest rising and falling rapidly. 'Very well - take thesmallest one,' she ordered the Death Eaters beside her. 'Let him watch while we torture thelittle girl. I'll do it.'
Harry felt the others close in around Ginny; he stepped sideways so that he was right in frontof her, the prophecy held up to his chest.
'You'll have to smash this if you want to attack any of us,' he told Bellatrix. 'I don't think yourboss will be too pleased if you come back without it, will he?'
She did not move; she merely stared at him, the tip of her tongue moistening her thin mouth.
'So,' said Harry, 'what kind of prophecy are we talking about, anyway?'
He could not think what to do but to keep talking. Neville's arm was pressed against his, andhe could feel him shaking; he could feel one of the others' quickened breath on the back of hishead. He was hoping they were all thinking hard about ways to get out of this, because hismind was blank.
'What kind of prophecy?' repeated Bellatrix, the grin fading from her face. 'You jest, HarryPotter.'
'Nope, not jesting,' said Harry, his eyes flicking from Death Eater to Death Eater,.looking for aweak link, a space through which they could escape. 'How come Voldemort wants it?'
Several of the Death Eaters let out low hisses.
'You dare speak his name?' whispered Bellatrix.
'Yeah,' said Harry, maintaining his tight grip on the glass ball, expecting another attempt tobewitch it from him. 'Yeah, I've got no problem with saying Vol—'
'Shut your mouth!' Bellatrix shrieked. 'You dare speak his name with your unworthy lips, youdare besmirch it with your half-blood's tongue, you dare -'
'Did you know he's a half-blood too?' said Harry recklessly. Hermione gave a little moan inhis ear. 'Voldemort? Yeah, his mother was a witch but his dad was a Muggle - or has he been telling you lot he's pure-blood?'

'STl/PEF—'
'NO/'
A jet of red light had shot from the end of Bellatrix Lestrange's wand, but Malfoy haddeflected it; his spell caused hers to hit the shelf a foot to the left of Harry and several of theglass orbs there shattered.
Two figures, pearly-white as ghosts, fluid as smoke, unfurled themselves from the fragmentsof broken glass upon the floor and each began to speak; their voices vied with each other, sothat only fragments of what they were saying could be heard over Malfoy and Bellatrix'sshouts.
'… at the solstice will come a new …' said the figure of an old, bearded man.
'DO NOT ATTACK! WE NEED THE PROPHECY!'
'He dared - he dares -' shrieked Bellatrix incoherently, 'he stands there - filthy half-blood -'
'WAIT UNTIL WE'VE GOT THE PROPHECY!' bawled Malfoy.
'… and none will come after…' said the figure of a young woman.
The two figures that had burst from the shattered spheres had melted into thin air. Nothingremained of them or their erstwhile homes but fragments of glass upon the floor. They had,however, given Harry an idea. The problem was going to be conveying it to the others.
'You haven't told me what's so special about this prophecy I'm supposed to be handing over,' he said, playing for time. He moved his foot slowly sideways, feeling around for someoneelse's.
'Do not play games with us, Potter,' said Malfoy.
'I'm not playing games,' said Harry, half his mind on the conversation, half on his wanderingfoot. And then he found someone's toes and pressed down upon them. A sharp intake ofbreath behind him told him they were Hermiones.
'What?' she whispered.

'Dumbledore never told you the reason you bear that scar was hidden in the bowels of theDepartment of Mysteries?' Malfoy sneered.
'I - what?' said Harry. And for a moment he quite forgot his plan. 'What about my scar?'
'What?' whispered Hermione more urgently behind him.
'Can this be?' said Malfoy, sounding maliciously delighted; some of the Death Eaters werelaughing again, and under cover of their laughter, Harry hissed to Hermione, moving his lipsas little as possible, 'Smash shelves -'

'Dumbledore never told you?' Malfoy repeated. 'Well, this explains why you didn't comeearlier, Potter, the Dark Lord wondered why -'

'- when I say now -'

'- you didn't come running when he showed you the place where it was hidden in yourdreams. He thought natural curiosity would make you want to hear the exact wording…'

'Did he?' said Harry. Behind him he felt rather than heard Hermione passing his message tothe others and he sought to keep talking, to distract the Death Eaters. 'So he wanted me tocome and get it, did he? Why?'

'Why?' Malfoy sounded incredulously delighted. 'Because the only people who are permittedto retrieve a prophecy from the Department of Mysteries, Potter, are those about whom it wasmade, as the Dark Lord discovered when he attempted to use others to steal it for him.'

'And why did he want to steal a prophecy about me?'

'About both of you, Potter, about both of you… haven't you ever wondered why the DarkLord tried to kill you as a baby?'

Harry stared into the slitted eye-holes through which Malfoy's grey eyes were gleaming. Wasthis prophecy the reason Harry's parents had died, the reason he carried his lightning-boltscar? Was the answer to all of this clutched in his hand?

'Someone made a prophecy about Voldemort and me?' he said quietly, gazing at LuciusMalfoy, his fingers tightening over the warm glass sphere in his hand. It was hardly largerthan a Snitch and still gritty with dust. 'And he's made me come and get it for him? Whycouldn't he come and get it himself?'

'Get it himself?' shrieked Bellatrix, over a cackle of mad laughter.

The Dark Lord, walk into the Ministry of Magic, when they are so sweetly ignoring hisreturn? The Dark Lord, reveal himself to the Aurors, when at the moment they are wastingtheir time on my dear cousin?'

'So, he's got you doing his dirty work for him, has he?' said Harry. 'Like he tried to get Sturgisto steal it - and Bode?'

'Very good, Potter, very good…' said Malfoy slowly. 'But the Dark Lord knows you are notunintell—'

'NOW!' yelled Harry.

Five different voices behind him bellowed, 'REDUCTO!' Five curses flew in five differentdirections and the shelves opposite them exploded as they hit; the towering structure swayedas a hundred glass spheres burst apart, pearly-white figures unfurled into the air and floatedthere, their voices echoing from who knew what long-dead past amid the torrent of crashingglass and splintered wood now raining down upon the floor -

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'RUN!' Harry yelled, as the shelves swayed precariously and more glass spheres began to fallfrom above. He seized a handful of Hermione's robes and dragged her forwards, holding onearm over his head as chunks of shelf and shards of glass thundered down upon them. ADeath Eater lunged forwards through the cloud of dust and Harry elbowed him hard in themasked face; they were all yelling, there were cries of pain, and thunderous crashes as the.

shelves collapsed upon themselves, weirdly echoing fragments of the Seers unleashed fromtheir spheres -

Harry found the way ahead clear and saw Ron, Ginny and Luna sprint past him, their armsover their heads; something . heavy struck him on the side of the face but he merely duckedhis head and sprinted onwards; a hand caught him by the shoulder; he heard Hermioneshout, 'Stupefy!' The hand released him at once -

They were at the end of row ninety-seven; Harry turned right and began to sprint in earnest;

he could hear footsteps right behind him and Hermione's voice urging Neville on; straightahead, the door through which they had come was ajar; Harry could see the glittering light ofthe bell jar; he pelted through the doorway, the prophecy still clutched tight and safe in hishand, and waited for the others to hurtle over the threshold before slamming the door behindthem -

'Colloportus!' gasped Hermione and the door sealed itself with an odd squelching noise.

'Where - where are the others?' gasped Harry.

He had thought Ron, Luna and Ginny were ahead of them, that they would be waiting in thisroom, but there was nobody there.

They must have gone the wrong way!' whispered Hermione, terror in her face.

'Listen!' whispered Neville.

Footsteps and shouts echoed from behind the door they had just sealed; Harry put his earclose to the door to listen and heard Lucius Malfoy roar, 'Leave Nott, leave him, I say — hisinjuries will be nothing to the Dark Lord compared to losing that prophecy. Jugson, comeback here, we need to organise! We'll split into pairs and search, and don't forget, be gentlewith Potter until we've got the prophecy, you can kill the others if necessary -Bellatrix,Rodolphus, you take the left; Crabbe, Rabastan, go right -Jugson, Dolohov, the door straightahead - Macnair and Avery, through here - Rookwood, over there - Mulciber, come with me!'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'What do we do?' Hermione asked Harry, trembling from head to foot.

'Well, we don't stand here waiting for them to find us, for a 't't start,' said Harry. 'Let's getaway from this door.' | They ran as quietly as they could, past the shimmering bell jar j wherethe tiny egg was hatching and unhatching, towards the exit I into the circular hallway at thefar end of the room. They were I almost there when Harry heard something large and heavycollide with the door Hermione had charmed shut.

'Stand aside!' said a rough voice. 'Alahomora!'

As the door flew open, Harry, Hermione and Neville dived under desks. They could see thebottom of the two Death Eaters' robes drawing nearer, their feet moving rapidly.

They might've run straight through to the hall,' said the rough voice.

'Check under the desks,' said another.

Harry saw the knees of the Death Eaters bend; poking his wand out from under the desk, heshouted, 'STUPEFY!'

A jet of red light hit the nearest Death Eater; he fell backwards into a grandfather clock andknocked it over; the second Death Eater, however, had leapt aside to avoid Harry's spell andwas pointing his own wand at Hermione, who was crawling out from under the desk to get abetter aim.

'Avada -

Harry launched himself across the floor and grabbed the Death Eater around the knees,causing him to topple and his aim to go awry. Neville overturned a desk in his anxiety tohelp; and pointing his wand wildly at the struggling pair, he cried:

'EXPELLIARMUS!'

Both Harry's and the Death Eater's wands flew out of their hands and soared back towardsthe entrance to the Hall of Prophecy; both scrambled to their feet and charged after them, theDeath Eater in front, Harry hot on his heels, and Neville bringing up the rear, plainlyhorrorstruck by what he had done.

'Get out of the way, Harry!' yelled Neville, clearly determined to repair the damage.

Harry flung himself sideways as Neville took aim again and shouted:

'STUPEFY!'

The jet of red light flew right over the Death Eater's shoulder and hit a glass-fronted cabineton the wall full of variously shaped hour-glasses; the cabinet fell to the floor and burst apart,glass flying everywhere, sprang back up on to the wall, fully mended, then fell down again,and shattered -

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

The Death Eater had snatched up his wand, which lay on the floor beside the glittering belljar. Harry ducked down behind another desk as the man turned; his mask had slipped so thathe couldn't see. He ripped it off with his free hand and shouted: 'STUP—'

'STUPEFY!' screamed Hermione, who had just caught up with them. The jet of red light hitthe Death Eater in the middle of his chest: he froze, his arm still raised, his wand fell to thefloor with a clatter and he collapsed backwards towards the bell jar. Harry expected to hear adunk, for the man to hit solid glass and slide off the jar on to the floor, but instead, his headsank through the surface of the bell jar as though it were nothing but a soap bubble and hecame to rest, sprawled on his back on the table, with his head lying inside the jar full ofglittering wind.

'Accio wand!' cried Hermione. Harry's wand flew from a dark corner into her hand and shethrew it to him.

Thanks,' he said. 'Right, let's get out of —'

'Look out!' said Neville, horrified. He was staring at the Death Eater's head in the bell jar.

All three of them raised their wands again, but none of them struck: they were all gazing,open-mouthed, appalled, at what was happening to the man's head.

It was shrinking very fast, growing balder and balder, the black hair and stubble retractinginto his skull; his cheeks becoming smooth, his skull round and covered with a peachlikefuzz…

A baby's head now sat grotesquely on top of the thick, muscled neck of the Death Eater as hestruggled to get up again; but even as they watched, their mouths open, the head began toswell to its previous proportions again; thick black hair was sprouting from the pate andchin…

'It's Time,' said Hermione in an awestruck voice. Time…"

The Death Eater shook his ugly head again, trying to clear it, but before he could pull himselftogether it began to shrink back to babyhood once more…

There was a shout from a room nearby, then a crash and a scream.

'RON?' Harry yelled, turning quickly from the monstrous transformation taking place beforethem. 'GINNY? LUNA?'

'Harry!' Hermione screamed.

The Death Eater had pulled his head out of the bell jar. His appearance was utterly bizarre, histiny baby's head bawling loudly while his thick arms flailed dangerously in all directions,narrowly missing Harry, who had ducked. Harry raised his wand but to his amazementHermione seized his arm.

'You can't hurt a baby!'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

There was no time to argue the point; Harry could hear moreIfootsteps growing louder from the Hall of Prophecy and knew, too late, that he ought not tohave shouted and given away their position.

'Come on!' he said, and leaving the ugly baby-headed Death Eater staggering behind them they took off for the door that stood open at the other end of the room, leading back into theblack hallway.

They had run halfway towards it when Harry saw through the open door two more DeathEaters running across the black room towards them; veering left, he burst instead into a small,dark, cluttered office and slammed the door behind them.

'Collo—' began Hermione, but before she could complete the spell the door had burst openand the two Death Eaters had come hurtling inside.

With a cry of triumph, both yelled:

'IMPEDIMENTA!'

Harry, Hermione and Neville were all knocked backwards off their feet; Neville was thrownover the desk and disappeared from view; Hermione smashed into a bookcase and waspromptly deluged in a cascade of heavy books; the back of Harry's head slammed into thestone wall behind him, tiny lights burst in front of his eyes and for a moment he was too dizzyand bewildered to react.

'WE'VE GOT HIM!' yelled the Death Eater nearest Harry. 'IN AN OFFICE OFF—'

'Silencio!' cried Hermione and the man's voice was extinguished. He continued to mouththrough the hole in his mask, but no sound came out. He was thrust aside by his fellow DeathEater.

'Petrificus Totalus!' shouted Harry, as the second Death Eater raised his wand. His arms andlegs snapped together and he fell forwards, face down on to the rug at Harry's feet, stiff as aboard and unable to move.

'Well done, Ha—'

But the Death Eater Hermione had just struck dumb made a sudden slashing movement withhis wand; a streak of what looked like purple flame passed right across Hermione's chest. Shegave a tiny 'Oh!' as though of surprise and crumpled on to the floor, where she lay motionless.

'HERMIONE!'

Harry fell to his knees beside her as Neville crawled rapidly towards her from under the desk,his wand held up in front of him. The Death Eater kicked out hard at Neville's head as heemerged - his foot broke Neville's wand in two and connected with his face. Neville gave ahowl of pain and recoiled, clutching his mouth and nose. Harry twisted around, his own wand held high, and saw that the Death Eater had ripped off his mask and was pointing hiswand directly at Harry, who recognised the long, pale, twisted face from the Daily Prophet:

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Antonin Dolohov, the wizard who had murdered the Prewetts.

Dolohov grinned. With his free hand, he pointed from the prophecy still clutched in Harryshand, to himself, then at Hermione. Though he could no longer speak, his meaning could nothave been clearer. Give me the prophecy, or you get the same as her…

'Like you won't kill us all anyway, the moment I hand it over!' said Harry.

A whine of panic inside his head was preventing him thinking properly: he had one hand onHermione's shoulder, which was still warm, yet did not dare look at her properly. Don't let herbe dead, don't let her be dead, it's my fault if she's dead…

'Whaddever you do, Harry,' said Neville fiercely from under the desk, lowering his hands toshow a clearly broken nose and blood pouring down his mouth and chin, 'don'd gib it to him!'

Then there was a crash outside the door and Dolohov looked over his shoulder - the babyheadedDeath Eater had appeared in the doorway, his head bawling, his great fists stillflailing uncontrollably at everything around him. Harry seized his chance:

'PETRIF1CUS TOTALUS!'

The spell hit Dolohov before he could block it and he toppled forwards across his comrade,both of them rigid as boards and unable to move an inch.

'Hermione,' Harry said at once, shaking her as the baby-headed Death Eater blundered out ofsight again. 'Hermione, wake up…"

'Whaddid he do to her?' said Neville, crawling out from under the desk to kneel at her otherside, blood streaming from his rapidly swelling nose.

'I dunno…"

Neville groped for Hermione's wrist.

'Dat's a pulse, Harry, I'b sure id is.'

Such a powerful wave of relief swept through Harry that for a moment he felt light-headed.

'She's alive?'

'Yeah, I dink so.'

There was a pause in which Harry listened hard for the sound of more footsteps, but all hecould hear were the whimpers and blunderings of the baby-headed Death Eater in the nextroom.

'Neville, we're not far from the exit,' Harry whispered, 'we're right next to that circularroom… if we can just get you across it and find the right door before any more Death Eaterscome, I'll bet you can get Hermione up the corridor and into the lift… then you could findsomeone… raise the alarm…'

'And whad are you going do do?' said Neville, mopping his bleeding nose with his sleeve andfrowning at Harry.

'I've got to find the others,' said Harry.

'Well, I'b going do find dem wid you,' said Neville firmly.

'But Hermione —'

'We'll dake her wid us,' said Neville firmly. 'I'll carry her — you're bedder at fighding demdan I ab -'

He stood up and seized one of Hermione's arms, glaring at Harry, who hesitated, thengrabbed the other and helped hoist Hermione's limp form over Neville's shoulders.

'Wait,' said Harry, snatching up Hermione's wand from the floor and shoving it into Neville'shand, 'you'd better take this.'

Neville kicked aside the broken fragments of his own wand as they walked slowly towardsthe door.

'My gran's going do kill be,' said Neville thickly, blood spattering from his nose as he spoke,'dat was by dad's old wand.'

Harry stuck his head out of the door and looked around cautiously. The baby-headed DeathEater was screaming and banging into things, toppling grandfather clocks and overturningdesks, bawling and confused, while the glass-fronted cabinet that Harry now suspected hadcontained Time-Turners continued to fall, shatter and repair itself on the wall behind them.

'He's never going to notice us,' he whispered. 'C'mon… keep close behind me…"

They crept out of the office and back towards the door into the black hallway, which nowseemed completely deserted. They walked a few steps forwards, Neville tottering slightly dueto Hermione's weight; the door of the Time Room swung shut behind them and the wallsbegan to rotate once more. The recent blow on the back of Harrys head seemed to haveunsteadied him; he narrowed his eyes, swaying slightly, until the walls stopped movingagain. With a sinking heart, Harry saw that Hermione's fiery crosses had faded from the doors.

'So which way d'you reck—?'

But before they could make a decision as to which way to try, a door to their right sprangopen and three people fell out of it.

'Ron!' croaked Harry, dashing towards them. 'Ginny - are you all -?'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Harry,' said Ron, giggling weakly, lurching forwards, seizing the front of Harry's robes andgazing at him with unfocused eyes, 'there you are… ha ha ha… you look funny, Harry…
you're all messed up…'
Ron's face was very white and something dark was trickling from the corner of his mouth. Next moment his knees had given way, but he still clutched the front of Harry's robes, so thatHarry was pulled into a kind of bow.
'Ginny?' Harry said fearfully. 'What happened?'
But Ginny shook her head and slid down the wall into a sitting position, panting and holdingher ankle.
'I think her ankle's broken, I heard something crack,' whispered Luna, who was bending overher and who alone seemed to be unhurt. 'Four of them chased us into a dark room full ofplanets; it was a very odd place, some of the time we were just floating in the dark -'
'Harry, we saw Uranus up close!' said Ron, still giggling feebly. 'Get it, Harry? We sawUranus - ha ha ha -'
A bubble of blood grew at the corner of Ron's mouth and burst.
'- anyway, one of them grabbed Ginny's foot, I used the Reductor Curse and blew up Pluto inhis face, but…'
Luna gestured hopelessly at Ginny, who was breathing in a very shallow way, her eyes stillclosed.

'And what about Ron?' said Harry fearfully, as Ron continued to giggle, still hanging off thefront of Harry's robes.
'I don't know what they hit him with,' said Luna sadly, 'but he's gone a bit funny, I couldhardly get him along at all.'
'Harry,' said Ron, pulling Harry's ear down to his mouth and still giggling weakly, 'you knowwho this girl is, Harry? She's Loony… Loony Lovegood… ha ha ha'We've got to get out of here,' said Harry firmly. 'Luna, can you help Ginny?'
'Yes,' said Luna, sticking her wand behind her ear for safekeeping, then putting an armaround Ginnys waist and pulling her up.
'It's only my ankle, I can do it myself!' said Ginny impatiently, but next moment she hadcollapsed sideways and grabbed Luna for support. Harry pulled Ron's arm over his shoulderjust as, so many months ago, he had pulled Dudley's. He looked around: they had a one intwelve chance of getting the exit right first time -
He heaved Ron towards a door; they were within a few feet of it when another door across thehall burst open and three Death Eaters sped in, led by Bellatrix Lestrange.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'There they are!' she shrieked.

Stunning Spells shot across the room: Harry smashed his way through the door ahead, flungRon unceremoniously from him and ducked back to help Neville in with Hermione: theywere all over the threshold just in time to slam the door against Bellatrix.

'Colloportus!' shouted Harry, and he heard three bodies slam into the door on the other side.

'It doesn't matter!' said a man's voice. There are other ways in - WE'VE GOT THEM, THEY'REHERE!'

Harry span around; they were back in the Brain Room and, sure enough, there were doors allaround the walls. He could hear footsteps in the hall behind them as more Death Eaters camerunning to join the first.

'Luna - Neville - help me!'

The three of them tore around the room, sealing the doors as they went; Harry crashed into a table and rolled over the top of it in his haste to reach the next door:

'Colloportus!'

There were footsteps running along behind the doors, every now and then another heavybody would launch itself against one, so it creaked and shuddered; Luna and Neville werebewitching the doors along the opposite wall - then, as Harry reached the very top of theroom, he heard Luna cry:

'Collo— aaaaaaaaargh…'

He turned in time to see her flying through the air; five Death Eaters were surging into theroom through the door she had not reached in time; Luna hit a desk, slid over its surface andon to the floor on the other side where she lay sprawled, as still as Hermione.

'Get Potter!' shrieked Bellatrix, and she ran at him; he dodged her and sprinted back up theroom; he was safe as long as they thought they might hit the prophecy -

'Hey!' said Ron, who had staggered to his feet and was now tottering drunkenly towardsHarry, giggling. 'Hey Harry, there are brains in here, ha ha ha, isn't that weird, Harry?'

'Ron, get out of the way, get down -'

But Ron had already pointed his wand at the tank.

'Honest, Harry, they're brains - look - Accio brain!'

The scene seemed momentarily frozen. Harry, Ginny and Neville and each of the DeathEaters turned in spite of themselves to watch the top of the tank as a brain burst from thegreen liquid like a leaping fish: for a moment it seemed suspended in midair, then it soaredtowards Ron, spinning as it came, and what looked like ribbons of moving images flew fromit, unravelling like rolls of film-

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Ha ha ha, Harry, look at it -' said Ron, watching it disgorge its gaudy innards, 'Harry comeand touch it; bet it's weird -'

'RON, NO!'

Harry did not know what would happen if Ron touched the tentacles of thought now flyingbehind the brain, but he was sure it would not be anything good. He darted forwards but Ronhad already caught the brain in his outstretched hands.

The moment they made contact with his skin, the tentacles began wrapping themselvesaround Ron's arms like ropes.

'Harry, look what's happen— No - no - I don't like it - no, stop - stop -'

But the thin ribbons were spinning around Ron's chest now; he tugged and tore at them as thebrain was pulled tight against him like an octopus's body.

'Diffindo!' yelled Harry, trying to sever the feelers wrapping themselves tightly around Ronbefore his eyes, but they would not break. Ron fell over, still thrashing against his bonds.

'Harry, it'll suffocate him!' screamed Ginny, immobilised by her broken ankle on the floor - then a jet of red light flew from one of the Death Eater's wands and hit her squarely in theface. She keeled over sideways and lay there unconscious.

'STUBEFY!' shouted Neville, wheeling around and waving Hermione's wand at the oncomingDeath Eaters, 'STUBEFY, STUBEFY!'

But nothing happened.

One of the Death Eaters shot their own Stunning Spell at Neville; it missed him by inches.

Harry and Neville were now the only two left fighting the five Death Eaters, two of whomsent off streams of silver light like arrows which missed but left craters in the wall behindthem. Harry ran for it as Bellatrix Lestrange raced right at him: holding the prophecy highabove his head, he sprinted back up the room; all he could think of doing was to draw theDeath Eaters away from the others.

It seemed to have worked; they streaked after him, knocking chairs and tables flying but notdaring to bewitch him in case they hurt the prophecy, and he dashed through the only doorstill open, the one through which the Death Eaters themselves had come; inwardly prayingthat Neville would stay with Ron and find some way of releasing him. He ran a few feet intothe new room and felt the floor vanish -

He was falling down steep stone step after steep stone step, bouncing on every tier until atlast, with a crash that knocked all the breath out of his body, he landed flat on his back in thesunken pit where the stone archway stood on its dais. The whole room was ringing with theDeath Eaters' laughter: he looked up and saw the five who had been in the Brain Roomdescending towards him, while as many more emerged through other doorways and beganleaping from bench to bench towards him. Harry got to his feet though his legs weretrembling so badly they barely supported him: the prophecy was still miraculously unbrokenin his left hand, his wand clutched tightly in his right. He backed away, looking around,trying to keep all the Death Eaters within his sight. The back of his legs hit something solid: he had reached the dais where the archway stood. He climbed backwards onto it.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

The Death Eaters all halted, gazing at him. Some were panting as hard as he was. One wasbleeding badly; Dolohov, freed of the Body-Bind Curse, was leering, his wand pointingstraight at Harrys face.
'Potter, your race is run,' drawled Lucius Malfoy, pulling off his mask, 'now hand me theprophecy like a good boy.'
'Let - let the others go, and I'll give it to you!' said Harry desperately.
A few of the Death Eaters laughed.
'You are not in a position to bargain, Potter,' said Lucius Malfoy, his pale face flushed withpleasure. 'You see, there are ten of us and only one of you… or hasn't Dumbledore ever taughtyou how to count?'
'He's dot alone!' shouted a voice from above them. 'He's still god be!'
Harry's heart sank: Neville was scrambling down the stone benches towards them,Hermiones wand held fast in his trembling hand.
'Neville - no - go back to Ron -'
'STUBEFY!' Neville shouted again, pointing his wand at each Death Eater in turn. 'STUBEFY!
STl/BE—'
One of the largest Death Eaters seized Neville from behind, pinioning his arms to his sides. He struggled and kicked; several of the Death Eaters laughed.
'It's Longbottom, isn't it?' sneered Lucius Malfoy. 'Well, your grandmother is used to losingfamily members to our cause… your death will not come as a great shock.'
'Longbottom?' repeated Bellatrix, and a truly evil smile lit her gaunt face. 'Why, I have had thepleasure of meeting your parents, boy,'
'I DOE YOU HAB!' roared Neville, and he fought so hard against his captors encircling gripthat the Death Eater shouted, 'Someone Stun him!'
'No, no, no,' said Bellatrix. She looked transported, alive with excitement as she glanced atHarry, then back at Neville. 'No, let's see how long Longbottom lasts before he cracks like his parents… unless Potter wants to give us the prophecy.'

'DON'D GIB ID DO DEM!' roared Neville, who seemed beside himself, kicking and writhingas Bellatrix drew nearer to him and his captor, her wand raised. 'DON'D GIB ID DO DEM,HARRY!'

Bellatrix raised her wand. 'Crude/'

Neville screamed, his legs drawn up to his chest so that the Death Eater holding him wasmomentarily holding him off the ground. The Death Eater dropped him and he fell to thefloor, twitching and screaming in agony.

'That was just a taster!' said Bellatrix, raising her wand so that Neville's screams stopped andhe lay sobbing at her feet. She turned and gazed up at Harry. 'Now, Potter, either give us theprophecy, or watch your little friend die the hard way!'

Harry did not have to think; there was no choice. The prophecy was hot with the heat of hisclutching hand as he held it out. Malfoy jumped forwards to take it.

Then, high above them, two more doors burst open and five more people sprinted into theroom: Sirius, Lupin, Moody, Tonks and Kingsley.

Malfoy turned, and raised his wand, but Tonks had already sent a Stunning Spell right at him.

Harry did not wait to see whether it had made contact, but dived off the dais out of the way.

The Death Eaters were completely distracted by the appearance of the members of the Order,who were now raining spells down upon them as they jumped from step to step towards thesunken floor. Through the darting bodies, the flashes of light, Harry could see Nevillecrawling along. He dodged another jet of red light and flung himself flat on the ground toreach Neville.

'Are you OK?' he yelled, as another spell soared inches over their heads.

'Yes,' said Neville, trying to pull himself up.

'And Ron?'

'I dink he's all righd - he was still fighding de brain when I lefd -'

The stone floor between them exploded as a spell hit it, leaving a crater right where Nevilleshand had been only seconds before; both scrambled away from the spot, then a thick armcame out of nowhere, seized Harry around the neck and pulled him upright, so that his toeswere barely touching the floor.

'Give it to me,' growled a voice in his ear, 'give me the prophecy -'

The man was pressing so tightly on Harry's windpipe that he could not breathe. Throughwatering eyes he saw Sirius duelling with a Death Eater some ten feet away;

Kingsley wasfighting two at once; Tonks, still halfway up the tiered seats, was firing spells down atBellatrix - nobody seemed to realise that Harry was dying. He turned his wand backwardstowards the man's side, but had no breath to utter an incantation, and the man's free handwas groping towards the hand in which Harry was grasping the prophecy -

'AARGH!'

Neville had come lunging out of nowhere; unable to articulate a spell, he had jabbedHermione's wand hard into the eyehole of the Death Eaters mask. The man relinquishedHarry at once with a howl of pain. Harry whirled around to face him and gasped:

'STUPEFY!'

The Death Eater keeled over backwards and his mask slipped off: it was Macnair, Buckbeak'swould-be killer, one of his eyes now swollen and bloodshot.

Thanks!' Harry said to Neville, pulling him aside as Sirius and his Death Eater lurched past,duelling so fiercely that their wands were blurs; then Harry's foot made contact withsomething round and hard and he slipped. For a moment he thought he had dropped theprophecy, but then he saw Moody's magical eye spinning away across the floor.

Its owner was lying on his side, bleeding from the head, and his attacker was now bearingdown upon Harry and Neville: Dolohov, his long pale face twisted with glee.

'Tarantallegra!' he shouted, his wand pointing at Neville, whose legs went immediately into akind of frenzied tap-dance, unbalancing him and causing him to fall to the floor again. 'Now,Potter -'

He made the same slashing movement with his wand that he had used on Hermione just asHarry yelled, 'Protege/'

Harry felt something streak across his face like a blunt knife; the force of it knocked himsideways and he fell over Neville's jerking legs, but the Shield Charm had stopped the worstof the spell.

Dolohov raised his wand again. 'Accio proph—'

Sirius had hurtled out of nowhere, rammed Dolohov with his shoulder and sent him flyingout of the way. The prophecy had again flown to the tips of Harry's fingers but he hadmanaged to cling on to it. Now Sirius and Dolohov were duelling, their wands flashing likeswords, sparks flying from their wand-tips -

Dolohov drew back his wand to make the same slashing movement he had used on Harryand Hermione. Springing up, Harry yelled, 'Petrificus Totalus!' Once again, Dolohov's armsand legs snapped together and he keeled over backwards, landing with a crash on his back.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

'Nice one!' shouted Sirius, forcing Harry's head down as a pair of Stunning Spells flewtowards them. 'Now I want you to get out of-'

They both ducked again; a jet of green light had narrowly missed Sirius. Across the roomHarry saw Tonks fall from halfway up the stone steps, her limp form toppling from stone seatto stone seat and Bellatrix, triumphant, running back towards the fray.

'Harry, take the prophecy, grab Neville and run!' Sirius yelled, dashing to meet Bellatrix.

Harry did not see what happened next: Kingsley swayed across his field of vision, battlingwith the pockmarked and no longer masked Rookwood; another jet of green light flew overHarry's head as he launched himself towards Neville -

'Can you stand?' he bellowed in Neville's ear, as Neville's legs jerked and twitcheduncontrollably. 'Put your arm round my neck -'

Neville did so - Harry heaved — Neville's legs were still flying in every direction, they wouldnot support him, and then, out of nowhere, a man lunged at them: both fell backwards,Neville's legs waving wildly like an overturned beetle's, Harry with his left arm held up in theair to try to save the small glass ball from being smashed.

The prophecy, give me the prophecy, Potter!' snarled Lucius Malfoy's voice in his ear, andHarry felt the tip of Malfoy's wand pressing hard between his ribs.

'No - get - off - me… Neville - catch it!'

Harry flung the prophecy across the floor, Neville span himself around on his back andscooped the ball to his chest. Malfoy pointed the wand instead at Neville, but Harry jabbedhis own wand back over his shoulder and yelled, 'Impedimenta!'

Malfoy was blasted off his back. As Harry scrambled up again he looked around and sawMalfoy smash into the dais on which Sirius and Bellatrix were now duelling. Malfoy aimedhis wand at Harry and Neville again, but before he could draw breath to strike, Lupin had jumped between them.

'Harry, round up the others and GO!'

Harry seized Neville by the shoulder of his robes and lifted him bodily on to the first tier ofstone steps; Neville's legs twitched and jerked and would not support his weight; Harryheaved again with all the strength he possessed and they climbed another step -

A spell hit the stone bench at Harrys heel; it crumbled away and he fell back to the step below.

Neville sank to the ground, his legs still jerking and thrashing, and he thrust the prophecyinto his pocket.

'Come on!' said Harry desperately, hauling at Nevilles robes. 'Just try and push with your legs-'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

He gave another stupendous heave and Nevilles robes tore all along the left seam - the smallspun-glass ball dropped from his pocket and, before either of them could catch it, one ofNeville's floundering feet kicked it: it flew some ten feet to their right and smashed on thestep beneath them. As both of them stared at the place where it had broken, appalled at whathad happened, a pearly-white figure with hugely magnified eyes rose into the air, unnoticedby any but them..Harry could see its mouth moving, but in all the crashes and screams andyells surrounding them, not one word of the prophecy could he hear. The figure stoppedspeaking and dissolved into nothingness.

'Harry, Fb sorry!' cried Neville, his face anguished as his legs continued to flounder. Tb sosorry, Harry, I didn'd bean do -'

'It doesn't matter!' Harry shouted. 'Just try and stand, let's get out of -'

'Dubbledore!' said Neville, his sweaty face suddenly transported, staring over Harry's shoulder.

'What?'

'DUBBLEDORE!'

Harry turned to look where Neville was staring. Directly above them, framed in the doorwayfrom the Brain Room, stood Albus Dumbledore, his wand aloft, his face white and furious.

Harry felt a kind of electric charge surge through every particle of his body - they were saved.

Dumbledore sped down the steps past Neville and Harry, who had no more thoughts ofleaving. Dumbledore was already at the foot of the steps when the Death Eaters nearestrealised he was there and yelled to the others. One of the Death Eaters ran for it, scrabbling like a monkey up the stone steps opposite. Dumbledore's spell pulled him back as easily andeffortlessly as though he had hooked him with an invisible line -

Only one pair was still battling, apparently unaware of the new arrival. Harry saw Sirius duckBellatrix's jet of red light: he was laughing at her.

'Come on, you can do better than that!' he yelled, his voice echoing around the cavernousroom.

The second jet of light hit him squarely on the chest.

The laughter had not quite died from his face, but his eyes widened in shock.

Harry released Neville, though he was unaware of doing so. He was jumping down the stepsagain, pulling out his wand, as Dumbledore, too, turned towards the dais.

It seemed to take Sirius an age to fall: his body curved in a graceful arc as he sank backwardsthrough the ragged veil hanging from the arch.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Harry saw the look of mingled fear and surprise on his godfather's wasted, once-handsomeface as he fell through the ancient doorway and disappeared behind the veil, which flutteredfor a moment as though in a high wind, then fell back into place.

Harry heard Bellatrix Lestrange's triumphant scream, but knew it meant nothing - Sirius hadonly just fallen through the archway, he would reappear from the other side any second…

But Sirius did not reappear.

'SIRIUS!' Harry yelled. 'SIRIUS!'

He had reached the floor, his breath coming in searing gasps. Sirius must be just behind thecurtain, he, Harry, would pull him back out…

But as he reached the ground and sprinted towards the dais, Lupin grabbed Harry around thechest, holding him back.

There's nothing you can do, Harry -'

'Get him, save him, he's only just gone through!'

'- it's too late, Harry.'

'We can still reach him -' Harry struggled hard and viciously, but Lupin would not let go…

There's nothing you can do, Harry… nothing… he's gone.'

CHAPTER THIRTY-SIX

The Only OneHe Ever Feared'He hasn't gone!' Harry yelled.

He did not believe it; he would not believe it; still he fought Lupin with every bit of strengthhe had. Lupin did not understand; people hid behind that curtain; Harry had heard themwhispering the first time he had entered the room. Sirius was hiding, simply lurking out ofsight'SIRIUS!' he bellowed. 'SIRIUS!'

`He can't come back, Harry,' said Lupin, his voice breaking as he struggled to contain Harry.

`He can't come back, because he's d-'

`HE - IS - NOT - DEAD!' roared Harry. 'SIRIUS!'

There was movement going on around them, pointless bustling, the flashes of more spells. ToHarry it was meaningless noise, the deflected curses flying past them did not matter, nothingmattered except that Lupin should stop pretending that Sirius - who was standing feet fromthem behind that old curtain - was not going to emerge at any moment, shaking back his darkhair and eager to re-enter the battle.

Lupin dragged Harry away from the dais. Harry, still staring at the archway, was angry atSirius now for keeping him waitingBut some part of him realised, even as he fought to break free from Lupin, that Sirius hadnever kept him waiting before… Sirius had risked everything, always, to see Harry, to helphim… if Sirius was not reappearing out of that archway when Harry was yelling for him asthough his life depended on it, the only possible explanation was that he could not comeback… that he really wasDumbledore had most of the remaining Death Eaters grouped in the middle of the room,seemingly immobilised by invisible ropes; Mad-Eye Moody had crawled across the room towhere Tonks lay, and was attempting to revive her; behind the dais there were still hashes of light, grunts and cries - Kingsley had run forward to continue Sirius's duel with Bellatrix.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

`Harry?'

Neville had slid down the stone benches one by one to the place where Harry stood. Harrywas no longer struggling against Lupin, who maintained a precautionary grip on his armnevertheless.

`Harry… I'b really sorry…' said Neville. His legs were still dancing uncontrollably. `Was dadman - was Sirius Black a - a friend of yours?'

Harry nodded.

`Here,' said Lupin quietly, and pointing his wand at Neville's legs he said, `Finite.' The spellwas lifted: Neville's legs fell back to the floor and remained still. Lupin's face was pale.

`Let's -

let's find the others. Where are they all, Neville?'

Lupin turned away from the archway as he spoke. It sounded as though every word wascausing him pain.

`Dey're all back dere,' said Neville. `A brain addacked Ron bud I dink he's all righd - andHerbione's unconscious, bud we could feel a bulse =There was a loud bang and a yell from behind the dais. Harry saw Kingsley hit the groundyelling in pain: Bellatrix Lestrange turned tail and ran as Dumbledore whipped around. Heaimed a spell at her but she deflected it; she was halfway up the steps now`Harry - no!' cried Lupin, but Harry had already ripped his arm from Lupin's slackened grip.

`SHE KILLED SIRIUS!' bellowed Harry. `SHE KILLED HIM I'LL KILL HER!'

And he was off, scrambling up the stone benches; people were shouting behind him but hedid not care. The hem of Bellatrix's robes whipped out of sight ahead and they were back inthe room where the brains were swimming…

She aimed a curse over her shoulder. The tank rose into the airand tipped. Harry was deluged in the foul-smelling potion within: the brains slipped and slidover him and began spinning their long coloured tentacles, but he shouted, `WingardiumLeviosa!' and they flew off him up into the air. Slipping and sliding, he ran on towards thedoor; he leapt over

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Luna, who was groaning on the floor, past Ginny, who said, `Harry - what -?', past Ron, who giggled feebly, and Hermione, who was still unconscious. He wrenchedopen the door into the circular black hall and saw Bellatrix disappearing through a door onthe other side of the room; beyond her was the corridor leading back to the lifts.

He ran, but she had slammed the door behind her and the walls were already rotating. Oncemore, he was surrounded by streaks of blue light from the whirling candelabra.

`Where's the exit?' he shouted desperately, as the wall rumbled to a halt again. `Where's theway out?'

The room seemed to have been waiting for him to ask. The door right behind him flew openand the corridor towards the lifts stretched ahead of him, torch-lit and empty. He ran …

He could hear a lift clattering ahead; he sprinted up the passageway, swung around thecorner and slammed his fist on to the button to call a second lift. It jangled and banged lowerand lower; the grilles slid open and Harry dashed inside, now hammering the button marked`Atrium'. The doors slid shut and he was rising …

He forced his way out of the lift before the grilles were fully open and looked around.

Bellatrix was almost at the telephone lift at the other end of the hall, but she looked back as hesprinted towards her and aimed another spell at him. He dodged behind the Fountain ofMagical Brethren: the spell zoomed past him and hit the wroughtgold gates at the other endof the Atrium so that they rang like bells. There were no more footsteps. She had stoppedrunning. He crouched behind the statues, listening.

`Come out, come out, little Harry!' she called in her mock baby voice, which echoed off thepolished wooden floors. `What did you come after me for, then? I thought you were here toavenge my dear cousin!'

`I am!' shouted Harry, and a score of ghostly Harrys seemed to chorus I am! I am! I am! allaround the room`Aaaaaah … did you love him, little baby Potter?'

Hatred rose in Harry such as he had never known before; he flung himself out from behindthe fountain and bellowed, `Crucio!'

Bellatrix screamed: the spell had knocked her off her feet, but she did not writhe and shriekwith pain as Neville had - she was already back on her feet, breathless, no longer laughing.

Harry dodged behind the golden fountain again. Her counter-spell hit the head of thehandsome wizard, which was blown off and landed twenty feet away, gouging long scratchesinto the wooden floor.

PUTCLUB BOOKS

`Never used an Unforgivable Curse before, have you, boy?' she yelled. She had abandonedher baby voice now. `You need to mean them, Potter! You need to really want to cause pain - to enjoy it - righteous anger won't hurt me for long - I'll show you how it is done, shall I? I'llgive you a lesson -'

Harry was edging around the fountain on the other side when she screamed, `Crucio!' and hewas forced to duck down again as the centaur's arm, holding its bow, span off and landedwith a crash on the floor a short distance from the golden wizard's head.

`Potter, you cannot win against me!' she cried.

He could hear her moving to the right, trying to get a clear shot of him. He backed around thestatue away from her, crouching behind the centaur's legs, his head level with the house-elf's.

`I was and am the Dark Lord's most loyal servant. I learned the Dark Arts from him, and Iknow spells of such power that you, pathetic little boy, can never hope to compete =`Stupefy!' yelled Harry. He had edged right around to where the goblin stood beaming up atthe now headless wizard and taken aim at her back as she peered around the fountain. Shereacted so fast he barely had time to duck.

`Protego!'

The jet of red light, his own Stunning Spell, bounced back at him. Harry scrambled backbehind the fountain and one of the goblin's ears went flying across the room.

`Potter, I'm going to give you one chance!' shouted Bellatrix. `Give me the prophecy - roll itout towards me now - and I may spare your life!'

`Well, you're going to have to kill me, because it's gone!' Harryroared and, as he shouted it, pain seared across his forehead; his scar was on fire again, andhe felt a surge of fury that was quite unconnected with his own rage. `And he knows!' saidHarry, with a mad laugh to match Bellatrix's own. `Your dear old mate Voldemort knows it'sgone! He's not going to be happy with you, is he?'

'What? What do you mean?' she cried, and for the first time there was fear in her voice.

`The prophecy smashed when I was trying to get Neville up the steps! What do you thinkVoldemort'll say about that, then?'

His scar seared and burned… the pain of it was making his eyes stream…

`LIAR!' she shrieked, but he could hear the terror behind the anger now. `YOU'VE GOT IT,POTTER, AND YOU WILL GIVE IT TO ME! Accio prophecy! ACCIO PROPHECY!'

Harry laughed again because he knew it would incense her, the pain building in his head sobadly he thought his skull might burst. He waved his empty hand from behind the one-earedgoblin and withdrew it quickly as she sent another jet of green light flying at him.

`Nothing there!' he shouted. `Nothing to summon! It smashed and nobody heard what it said,tell your boss that!'

`No!' she screamed. `It isn't true, you're lying! MASTER, I TRIED, I TRIED - DO NOTPUNISH ME =`Don't waste your breath!' yelled Harry, his eyes screwed up against the pain in his scar, nowmore terrible than ever. `He can't hear you from here!'

`Can't I, Potter?' said a high, cold voice.

Harry opened his eyes.

Tall, thin and black-hooded, his terrible snakelike face white and gaunt, his scarlet, slitpupilledeyes staring… Lord Voldemort had appeared in the middle of the hall, his wandpointing at Harry who stood frozen, quite unable to move.

`So, you smashed my prophecy?' said Voldemort softly, staring at Harry with those pitilessred eyes. `No, Bella, he is not lying… I see the truth looking at me from within his worthlessmind… months of preparation, months of effort… and my Death Eaters have let Harry Potterthwart me again …I'Master, I am sorry I knew not, I was fighting the Animagus Black!' sobbed Bellatrix, flinginghерself down at Voldemort's feet as he paced slowly nearer. `Master, you should know =`Be quiet, Bella,' said Voldemort dangerously. `I shall deal with you in a moment. Do youthink I have entered the Ministry of Magic to hear your snivelling apologies?T'But Master - he is here - he is below =Voldemort paid no attention.

`I have nothing more to say to you, Potter,' he said quietly. `You have irked me too often, fortoo long. AVADA KEDAVRA!'

Harry had not even opened his mouth to resist; his mind was blank, his wand pointinguselessly at the floor.

But the headless golden statue of the wizard in the fountain had sprung alive, leaping from itsplinth to land with a crash on the floor between Harry and Voldemort. The spell merelyglanced off its chest as the statue flung out its arms to protect Harry.

`What -?' cried Voldemort, staring around. And then he breathed, `Dumbledore!'

Harry looked behind him, his heart pounding. Dumbledore was standing in front of thegolden gates.

Voldemort raised his wand and another jet of green light streaked at Dumbledore, whoturned and was gone in a whirling of his cloak. Next second, he had reappeared behindVoldemort and waved his wand towards the remnants of the fountain. The other statuessprang to life. The statue of the witch ran at Bellatrix, who screamed and sent spells streaminguselessly off its chest, before it dived at her, pinning her to the floor. Meanwhile, the goblinand the house-elf scuttled towards the fireplaces set along the wall and the one-armed centaurgalloped at Voldemort, who vanished and reappeared beside the pool. The headless statuethrust Harry backwards, away from the fight, as Dumbledore advanced on Voldemort andthe golden centaur cantered around them both.

`It was foolish to come here tonight, Tom,' said Dumbledore calmly. `The Aurors are on theirway =`By which time I shall be gone, and you will be dead!' spat Voldemort. He sent another killingcurse at Dumbledore butmissed, instead hitting the security guard's desk, which burst into flame.

Dumbledore flicked his own wand: the force of the spell that emanated from it was such thatHarry, though shielded by his golden guard, felt his hair stand on end as it passed and thistime Voldemort was forced to conjure a shining silver shield out of thin air to deflect it. Thespell, whatever it was, caused no visible damage to the shield, though a deep, gong-like notereverberated from it - an oddly chilling sound.

`You do not seek to kill me, Dumbledore?' called Voldemort, his scarlet eyes narrowed overthe top of the shield. `Above such brutality, are you?'

'We both know that there are other ways of destroying a man, Tom,' Dumbledore said calmly,continuing to walk towards Voldemort as though he had not a fear in the world, as thoughnothing had happened to interrupt his stroll up the hall. `Merely taking your life would notsatisfy me, I admit =`There is nothing worse than death, Dumbledore!' snarled Voldemort.

`You are quite wrong,' said Dumbledore, still closing in upon Voldemort and speaking aslightly as though they were discussing the matter over drinks. Harry felt scared to see himwalking along, undefended, shieldless; he wanted to cry out a warning, but his headlessguard kept shunting him backwards towards the wall, blocking his every attempt to get outfrom behind it. `Indeed, your failure to understand that there are things much worse thandeath has always been your greatest weakness =Another jet of green light flew from behind the silver shield. This time it was the one-armedcentaur, galloping in front of Dumbledore, that took the blast and shattered into a hundredpieces, but before the fragments had even hit the floor, Dumbledore had drawn back his wandand waved it as though brandishing a whip. A long thin flame flew from the tip; it wrappeditself around Voldemort, shield and all. For a moment, it seemed Dumbledore had won, butthen the fiery rope became a serpent, which relinquished its hold on Voldemort at once andturned, hissing furiously, to face Dumbledore.

Voldemort vanished; the snake reared from the floor, ready to strikeThere was a burst of flame in midair above Dumbledore just as Voldemort reappeared,standing on the plinth in the middle of the pool where so recently the five statues had stood.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

`Look out!' Harry yelled.

But even as he shouted, another jet of green light flew at Dumbledore from Voldemort's wandand the snake struckFawkes swooped down in front of Dumbledore, opened his beak wide and swallowed the jetof green light whole: he burst into flame and fell to the floor, small, wrinkled and flightless. Atthe same moment, Dumbledore brandished his wand in one long, fluid movement - the snake,which had been an instant from sinking its fangs into him, flew high into the air and vanishedin a wisp of dark smoke; and the water in the pool rose up and covered Voldemort like acocoon of molten glass.

For a few seconds Voldemort was visible only as a dark, rippling, faceless figure, shimmeringand indistinct upon the plinth, clearly struggling to throw off the suffocating mass

Then he was gone and the water fell with a crash back into its pool, slopping wildly over thesides, drenching the polished floor.

`MASTER!' screamed Bellatrix.

Sure it was over, sure Voldemort had decided to flee, Harry made to run out from behind hisstatue guard, but Dumbledore bellowed: `Stay where you are, Harry!'

For the first time, Dumbledore sounded frightened. Harry could not see why: the hall wasquite empty but for themselves, the sobbing Bellatrix still trapped under the witch statue, andthe baby phoenix Fawkes croaking feebly on the floorThen Harry's scar burst open and he knew he was dead: it was pain beyond imagining, painpast enduranceHe was gone from the hall, he was locked in the coils of a creature with red eyes, so tightlybound that Harry did not know where his body ended and the creature's began: they werefused together, bound by pain, and there was no escapeAnd when the creature spoke, it used Harry's mouth, so that in his agony he felt his jaw move`Kill me now, Dumbledore…'

Blinded and dying, every part of him screaming for release, Harry felt the creature use himagain…

`If death is nothing, Dumbledore, kill the boy…'

Let the pain stop, thought Harry… let him kill us… end it, Dumbledore… death is nothingcompared to this…

And I'll see Sirius again…

And as Harry's heart filled with emotion, the creature's coils loosened, the pain was gone;

Harry was lying face down on the floor, his glasses gone, shivering as though he lay upon ice,not wood…

PUTCLUB E-BOOKS

And there were voices echoing through the hall, more voices than there should have been…

Harry opened his eyes, saw his glasses lying by the heel of the headless statue that had beenguarding him, but which now lay flat on its back, cracked and immobile. He put them on andraised his head a little to find Dumbledore's crooked nose inches from his own.

`Are you all right, Harry?'

`Yes,' said Harry, shaking so violently he could not hold his head up properly. `Yeah, I'm - where's Voldemort, where - who are all these - what's -

The Atrium was full of people; the floor was reflecting the emerald green flames that hadburst into life in all the fireplaces along one wall; and streams of witches and wizards wereemerging from them. As Dumbledore pulled him back to his feet, Harry saw the tiny goldstatues of the house-elf and the goblin, leading a stunned-looking Cornelius Fudge forward.

`He was there!' shouted a scarlet-robed man with a ponytail, who was pointing at a pile ofgolden rubble on the other side of the hall, where Bellatrix had lain trapped only momentsbefore. `I saw him, Mr Fudge, I swear it was You-Know-Who, he grabbed a woman andDisapparated!'

`I know, Williamson, I know, I saw him too!' gibbered Fudge, who was wearing pyjamasunder his pinstriped cloak and was gasping as though he had just run miles. `Merlin's beard - here - here! - in the Ministry of Magic! - great heavens above - it doesn't seem possible - myword - how can this be -?T'if you proceed downstairs into the Department of Mysteries, Cornelius,' said Dumbledore - apparently satisfied that Harry was all right, and walking forwards so that the newcomersrealised he was there for the first time (a few of them raised their wands; others simply lookedamazed; the statues of the elf and goblin applauded and Fudge jumped so much that hisslipper-clad feet left the floor) - `you will find several escaped Death Eaters contained in theDeath Chamber, bound by an Anti-Disapparation Jinx and awaiting your decision as to whatto do with them.'

'Dumbledore!' gasped Fudge, beside himself with amazement. `You-here-I-I=He looked wildly around at the Aurors he had brought with him and it could not have beenclearer that he was in half a mind to cry, `Seize him!'

'Cornelius, I am ready to fight your men - and win, again!' said Dumbledore in a thunderousvoice. `But a few minutes ago you saw proof, with your own eyes, that I have been telling youthe truth for a year. Lord Voldemort has returned, you have been chasing the wrong man fortwelve months, and it is time -you listened to sense!'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

`I - don't - well = blustered Fudge, looking around as though hoping somebody was going totell him what to do. When nobody did, he said, `Very well - Dawlish! Williamson! Go down tothe Department of Mysteries and see… Dumbledore, you - you will need to tell me exactly - the Fountain of Magical Brethren - what happened?' he added in a kind of whimper, staringaround at the floor, where the remains of the statues of the witch, wizard and centaur now layscattered.

`We can discuss that after I have sent Harry back to Hogwarts,' said Dumbledore.

`Harry - Harry Potter?'

Fudge wheeled around and stared at Harry, who was still standing against the wall beside thefallen statue that had guarded him during Dumbledore and Voldemort's duel.

`He - here?' said Fudge, goggling at Harry. `Why - what's all this about?T'I shall explain everything,' repeated Dumbledore, `when Harry is back at school.'

He walked away from the pool to the place where the golden wizard's head lay on the floor.

He pointed his wand at it and muttered, `Portus.' The head glowed blue and trembled noisilyagainst the wooden floor for a few seconds, then became still once more.

`Now see here, Dumbledore!' said Fudge, as Dumbledore picked up the head and walkedback to Harry carrying it. `You haven't got authorisation for that Portkey! You can't do thingslike that right in front of the Minister for Magic, you - you =His voice faltered as Dumbledore surveyed him magisterially over his half-moon spectacles.

`You will give the order to remove Dolores Umbridge from Hogwarts,' said Dumbledore.

`You will tell your Aurors to stop searching for my Care of Magical Creatures teacher so thathe can return to work. I will give you …' Dumbledore pulled a watch with twelve hands fromhis pocket and surveyed it'… half an hour of my time tonight, in which I think we shall bemore than able to cover the important points of what has happened here. After that, I shallneed to return to my school. If you need more help from me you are, of course, more thanwelcome to contact me at Hogwarts. Letters addressed to the Headmaster will find me.'

Fudge goggled worse than ever; his mouth was open and his round face grew pinker underhis rumpled grey hair.

`I - you =Dumbledore turned his back on him.

`Take this Portkey, Harry.'

He held out the golden head of the statue and Harry placed his hand on it, past caring

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

what he did next or where he went.
`I shall see you in half an hour,' said Dumbledore quietly `One … two … three …'
Harry felt the familiar sensation of a hook being jerked behind his navel. The polishedwooden floor was gone from beneath his feet; the Atrium, Fudge and Dumbledore had alldisappeared and he was flying forwards in a whirlwind of colour and sound …

— CHAPTER THIRTY-SEVEN —
The Lost ProphecyHarry's feet hit solid ground; his knees buckled a little and the golden wizard's head fell *ith aresounding dunk to the floor. He looked around and saw that he had arrived in Dumbledore'soffice.
Everything seemed to have repaired itself during the Headmaster's absence. The delicatesilver instruments stood once more on the spindle-legged tables, puffing and whirringserenely The portraits of the headmasters and headmistresses were snoozing in their frames,heads lolling back in armchairs or against the edge of the picture. Harry looked through thewindow. There was a cool line of pale green along the horizon: dawn was approaching.
The silence and the stillness, broken only by the occasional grunt or snuffle of a sleepingportrait, was unbearable to him. If his surroundings could have reflected the feelings insidehim, the pictures would have been screaming in pain. He walked around the quiet, beautifuloffice, breathing quickly, trying not to think. But he had to think… there was no escape…
It was his fault Sirius had died; it was all his fault. If he, Harry, had not been stupid enough tofall for Voldemort's trick, if he had not been so convinced that what he had seen in his dreamwas real, if he had only opened his mind to the possibility that Voldemort was, as Hermionehad said, banking on Harry's love of playing the hero…
It was unbearable, he would not think about it, he could not stand it… there was a terriblehollow inside him he did not want to feel or examine, a dark hole where Sirius had been,where Sirius had vanished; he did not want to have to be alonc with that great, silent space,he could not stand it -
A picture behind him gave a particularly loud grunting snore, and a cool voice said, 'Ali …
Harry Potter …'
Phineas Nigellus gave a long yawn, stretching his arms as he surveyed Harry out of shrewd,narrow eyes.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

`And what brings you here in the early hours of the morning?' said Phineas eventually `Thisoffice is supposed to be barred to all but the rightful Headmaster. Or has Dumbledore sentyou here? Oh, don't tell me …' He gave another shuddering yawn. `Another message for myworthless great-great-grandson?'

Harry could not speak. Phineas Nigellus did not know that Sirius was dead, but Harry couldnot tell him. To say it aloud would be to make it final, absolute, irretrievable.

A few more of the portraits had stirred now. Terror of being interrogated made Harry strideacross the room and seize the doorknob.

It would not turn. He was shut in.

`I hope this means,' said the corpulent, red-nosed wizard who hung on the wall behind theHeadmaster's desk, `that Dumbledore will soon be back among us?'

Harry turned. The wizard was surveying him with great interest. Harry nodded. He tuggedagain on the doorknob behind his back, but it remained immovable.

`Oh good,' said the wizard. `It has been very dull without him, very dull indeed.'

He settled himself on the throne-like chair on which he had been painted and smiled benignlyupon Harry'Dumbledore thinks very highly of you, as I am sure you know,' he said comfortably. `Oh yes.

Holds you in great esteem.'

The guilt filling the whole of Harry's chest like some monstrous, weighty parasite, nowwrithed and squirmed. Harry could not stand this, he could not stand being himself any more… he had never felt more trapped inside his own head and body, never wished so intenselythat he could be somebody; anybody, else …

The empty fireplace burst into emerald green flame, making Harry leap away from the door,staring at the man spinning inside the grate. As Dumbledore's tall form unfolded itself fromthe fire, the wizards and witches on the surrounding walls jerked awake, many of themgiving cries of welcome.

'Thank you,' said Dumbledore softly.

He did not look at Harry at first, but walked over to the perch beside the door and withdrew,from an inside pocket of his robes, the tiny, ugly, featherless Fawkes, whom he placed gentlyon the tray of soft ashes beneath the golden post where the full-grown Fawkes usually stood.

`Well, Harry,' said Dumbledore, finally turning away from the baby bird, `you will be pleasedto hear that none of your fellow students are going to suffer lasting damage from the night'sevents.'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Harry tried to say, `Good,' but no sound came out. It seemed to him that Dumbledore wasreminding him of the amount of damage he had caused, and although Dumbledore was foronce looking at him directly, and although his expression was kindly rather than accusatory,Harry could not bear to meet his eyes.

`Madam Pomfrey is patching everybody up,' said Dumbledore. 'Nymphadora Tonks mayneed to spend a little time in St Mungo's, but it seems she will make a full recovery.'

Harry contented himself with nodding at the carpet, which was growing lighter as the skyoutside grew paler. He was sure all the portraits around the room were listening closely toevery word Dumbledore spoke, wondering where Dumbledore and Harry had been, and whythere had been injuries.

'I know how you're feeling, Harry,' said Dumbledore very quietly.

`No, you don't,' said Harry, and his voice was suddenly loud and strong; white-hot angerleapt inside him; Dumbledore knew nothing about his feelings.

`You see, Dumbledore?' said Phineas Nigellus slyly `Never try to understand the students. They hate it. They would much rather be tragically misunderstood, wallow in self-pity, stewin their own -'

`That's enough, Phineas,' said Dumbledore.

Harry turned his back on Dumbledore and stared determinedly out of the window. He couldsee the Quidditch stadium in the distance. Sirius had appeared there once, disguised as theshaggy black dog, so he could watch Harry play … he had probably come to see whetherHarry was as good as James had been… Harry had never asked him …

`There is no shame in what you are feeling, Harry,' saidDumbledore's voice. `On the contrary… the fact that you can feel pain like this is your greateststrength.'

Harry felt the white-hot anger lick his insides, blazing in the terrible emptiness, filling himwith the desire to hurt Dumbledore for his calmness and his empty words.

`My greatest strength, is it?' said Harry, his voice shaking as he stared out at the Quidditchstadium, no longer seeing it. `You haven't got a clue… you don't know…'

`What don't I know?' asked Dumbledore calmly.

It was too much. Harry turned around, shaking with rage.

`I don't want to talk about how I feel, all right?T'Harry, suffering like this proves you are still a man! This pain is part of being human =`THEN - I - DON'T - WANT - TO - BE - HUMAN!' Harry roared, and he seized the delicatesilver instrument from the spindlelegged table beside him and flung it across the room; itshattered into a hundred tiny pieces against the wall. Several of the pictures let out yells ofanger and fright, and the portrait of Armando Dippet said, `Really!'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

`I DON'T CARE!' Harry yelled at them, snatching up a lunascope and throwing it into thefireplace. `I'VE HAD ENOUGH, I'VE SEEN ENOUGH, I WANT OUT, I WANT IT TO END, IDON'T CARE ANY MORE =He seized the table on which the silver instrument had stood and threw that, too. It brokeapart on the floor and the legs rolled in different directions.

`You do care,' said Dumbledore. He had not flinched or made a single move to stop Harrydemolishing his office. His expression was calm, almost detached. `You care so much you feelas though you will bleed to death with the pain of it.'

`I - DON'T!' Harry screamed, so loudly that he felt his throat might tear, and for a second hewanted to rush at Dumbledore and break him, too; shatter that calm old face, shake him, hurthim, make him feel some tiny part of the horror inside himself.

`Oh, yes, you do,' said Dumbledore, still more calmly. `You have now lost your mother, yourfather, and the closest thing to a parent you have ever known. Of course you care.'

`YOU DON'T KNOW HOW I FEEL!' Harry roared. `YOU - STANDING THERE - YOU =But words were no longer enough, smashing things was no morehelp; he wanted to run, he wanted to keep running and never look back, he wanted to besomewhere he could not see the clear blue eyes staring at him, that hatefully calm old face. Heturned on his heel and ran to the door, seized the doorknob again and wrenched at it.

But the door would not open.

Harry turned back to Dumbledore.

`Let me out,' he said. He was shaking from head to foot.

`No,' said Dumbledore., simply.

For a few seconds they stared at each other.

`Let me out,' Harry said again.

`No,' Dumbledore repeated.

`If you don't - if you keep me in here - if you don't let me =`By all means continue destroying my possessions,' said Dumbledore serenely. `I daresay Ihave too many.'

He walked around his desk and sat down. behind it, watchingHarry`Let me out,' Harry said yet again, in a voice that was cold and almost as calm asDumbledore's.

`Not until I have had my say,' said Dumbledore.

`Do you - do you think I want to - do you think I give a - I DON'T CARE WHAT YOU'VEGOT TO SAY!' Harry roared. `I don't want to hear anything you've got to say!'

`You will,' said Dumbledore steadily. `Because you are not nearly as angry with me as youought to be. If you are to attack me, asI know you are close to doing, I would like to have thoroughly earned it.'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

`What are you talking -?T'It is my fault that Sirius died,' said Dumbledore clearly. `Or should I say, almost entirely myfault - I will not be so arrogant as to claim responsibility for the whole. Sirius was a brave,clever and energetic man, and such men are not usually content to sit at home in hiding whilethey believe others to be in danger. Nevertheless, you should never have believed for aninstant that there was any necessityfor you to go to the Department of Mysteries tonight. If I had been open with you, Harry, as Ishould have been, you would have known a long time ago that Voldemort might try and lureyou to the Department of Mysteries, and you would never have been tricked into going theretonight. And Sirius would not have had to come after you. That blame lies with me, and withme alone.'

Harry was still standing with his hand on the doorknob but was unaware of it. He was gazingat Dumbledore, hardly breathing, listening yet barely understanding what he was hearing.

`Please sit down,' said Dumbledore. It was not an order, it was a request.

Harry hesitated, then walked slowly across the room now littered with silver cogs andfragments of wood, and took the seat facing Dumbledore's desk.

`Am I to understand,' said Phineas Nigellus slowly from Harry's left, `that my great-greatgrandson- the last of the Blacks - is dead?'

`Yes, Phineas,' said Dumbledore.

`I don't believe it,' said Phineas brusquely.

Harry turned his head in time to see Phineas marching out of his portrait and knew that hehad gone to visit his other painting in Grimmauld Place. He would walk, perhaps, fromportrait to portrait, calling for Sirius through the house …

`Harry, I owe you an explanation,' said Dumbledore. `An explanation of an old man'smistakes. For I see now that what I have done, and not done, with regard to you, bears all thehallmarks of the failings of age. Youth cannot know how age thinks and feels. But old men areguilty if they forget what it was to be young … and I seem to have forgotten, lately …'

The sun was rising properly now; there was a rim of dazzling orange visible over themountains and the sky above it was colourless and bright. The light fell upon Dumbledore,upon the silver of his eyebrows and beard, upon the lines gouged deeply into his face.

`I guessed, fifteen years ago,' said Dumbledore, `when I saw the scar on your forehead, whatit might mean. I guessed that it might be the sign of a connection forged between you andVoldemort.'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

`You've told me this before, Professor,' said Harry bluntly. He did not care about being rude.

He did not care about anything very much any more.

`Yes,' said Dumbledore apologetically. `Yes, but you see - it is necessary to start with yourscar. For it became apparent, shortly after you rejoined the magical world, that I was correct,and that your scar was giving you warnings when Voldemort was close to you, or else feelingpowerful emotion.'

`I know,' said Harry wearily`And this ability of yours - to detect Voldemort's presence, even when he is disguised, and toknow what he is feeling when his emotions are roused - has become more and morepronounced since Voldemort returned to his own body and his full powers.'

Harry did not bother to nod. He knew all of this already.

`More recently' said Dumbledore, `I became concerned that Voldemort might realise that thisconnection between you exists. Sure enough, there came a time when you entered so far intohis mind and thoughts that he sensed your presence. I am speaking, of course, of the nightwhen you witnessed the attack on Mr Weasley'

`Yeah, Snape told me,' Harry muttered.

`Professor Snape, Harry' Dumbledore corrected him quietly. `But did you not wonder why itwas not I who explained this to you? Why I did not teach you Occlumency? Why I had not somuch as looked at you for months?'

Harry looked up. He could see now that Dumbledore looked sad and tired.

`Yeah,' Harry mumbled. `Yeah, I wondered.'

`You see,' Dumbledore continued, `I believed it could not be long before Voldemort attemptedto force his way into your mind, to manipulate and misdirect your thoughts, and I was noteager to give him more incentives to do so. I was sure that if he realised that our relationshipwas - or had ever been - closer than that of headmaster and pupil, he would seize his chanceto use you as a means to spy on me. I feared the uses to which he would put you, thepossibility that he might try and possess you. Harry, I believe I was right to think thatVoldemort would have made use of youin such a way. On those rare occasions when we had close contact, I thought I saw a shadowof him stir behind your eyes …

Harry remembered the feeling that a dormant snake had risen in him, ready to strike, in thosemoments when he and Dumbledore had made eye-contact.

`Voldemort's aim in possessing you, as he demonstrated tonight, would not have been mydestruction. It would have been yours. He hoped, when he possessed you briefly a shortwhile ago, that I would sacrifice you in the hope of killing him. So you see, I have been trying,in distancing myself from you, to protect you, Harry. An old man's mistake …'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

He sighed deeply. Harry was letting the words wash over him. He would have been sointerested to know all this a few months ago, but now it was meaningless compared to thegaping chasm inside him that was the loss of Sirius; none of it mattered …

'Sirius told me you felt Voldemort awake inside you the very night that you had the vision ofArthur Weasley's attack. I knew at once that my worst fears were correct: Voldemort had realised he could use you. In an attempt to arm you against Voldemort's assaults on yourmind, I arranged Occlumency lessons with Professor Snape.'

He paused. Harry watched the sunlight, which was sliding slowly across the polished surfaceof Dumbledore's desk, illuminate a silver ink pot and a handsome scarlet quill. Harry couldtell that the portraits all around them were awake and listening raptly to Dumbledore'sexplanation; he could hear the occasional rustle of robes, the slight clearing of a throat.

Phineas Nigellus had still not returned …

`Professor Snape discovered,' Dumbledore resumed, `that you had been dreaming about thedoor to the Department of Mysteries for months. Voldemort, of course, had been obsessedwith the possibility of hearing the prophecy ever since he regained his body; and as hedwelled on the door, so did you, though you did not know what it meant.

`And then you saw Rockwood, who worked in the Department of Mysteries before his arrest,telling Voldemort what we had known all along -that the prophecies held in the Ministry ofMagic areheavily protected. Only the people to whom they refer can lift themfrom the shelves without suffering madness: in this case, either Voldemort himself wouldhave to enter the Ministry of Magic, and risk revealing himself at last - or else you would haveto take it for him. It became a matter of even greater urgency that you should masterOcclumency'

`But I didn't,' muttered Harry. He said it aloud to try and ease the dead weight of guilt insidehim: a confession must surely relieve some of the terrible pressure squeezing his heart. `Ididn't practise, I didn't bother, I could've stopped myself having those dreams, Hermionekept telling me to do it, if I had he'd never have been able to show me where to go, and -

Sirius wouldn't - Sirius wouldn't =Something was erupting inside Harry's head: a need to justify himself, to explain -

`I tried to check he'd really taken Sirius, I went to Umbridge's office, I spoke to Kreacher in thefire and he said Sirius wasn't there, he said he'd gone!'

PUTCLUB E-BOOKS

`Kreacher lied,' said Dumbledore calmly. `You are not his master, he could lie to you withouteven needing to punish himself. Kreacher intended you to go to the Ministry of Magic.'

`He - he sent me on purpose?T

'Oh yes. Kreacher, I am afraid, has been serving more than one master for months.'

`How?' said Harry blankly. `He hasn't been out of GrimmauldPlace for years.'

`Kreacher seized his opportunity shortly before Christmas,' said Dumbledore, `when Sirius,apparently, shouted at him to "get out". He took Sirius at his word, and interpreted this as anorder to leave the house. He went to the only Black family member for whom he had anyrespect left … Black's cousin Narcissa, sister of Bellatrix and wife of Lucius Malfoy'

`How do you know all this?' Harry said. His heart was beating very fast. He felt sick. Heremembered worrying about Kreacher's odd absence over Christmas, remembered himturning up againin the attic …

`Kreacher told me last night,' said Dumbledore. `You see, whenyou gave Professor Snape that cryptic warning, he realised that you had had a vision of Siriustrapped in the bowels of the Department of Mysteries. He, like you, attempted to contactSirius at once. I should explain that members of the Order of the Phoenix have more reliablemethods of communicating than the fire in Dolores Umbridge's office. Professor Snape foundthat Sirius was alive and safe in Grimmauld Place.

`When, however, you did not return from your trip into the Forest with Dolores Umbridge,Professor Snape grew worried that you still believed Sirius to be a captive of LordVoldemort's. He alerted certain Order members at once.'

Dumbledore heaved a great sigh and continued, `Alastor Moody, Nymphadora Tonks,Kingsley Shacklebolt and Remus Lupin were at Headquarters when he made contact. Allagreed to go to your aid at once. Professor Snape requested that Sirius remain behind, as heneeded somebody to remain at Headquarters to tell me what had happened, for I was duethere at any moment. In the meantime he, Professor Snape, intended to search the Forest foryou.

`But Sirius did not wish to remain behind while the others went to search for you. Hedelegated to Kreacher the task of telling me what had happened. And so it was that when Iarrived in Grimmauld Place shortly after they had all left for the Ministry, it was the elf whotold me - laughing fit to burst - where Sirius had gone.'

`He was laughing?' said Harry in a hollow voice.

`Oh, yes,' said Dumbledore. `You see, Kreacher was not able to betray us totally. He is notSecret Keeper for the Order, he could not give the Malfoys our whereabouts, or tell them anyof the Order's confidential plans that he had been forbidden to reveal. He was bound by theenchantments of his kind, which is to say that he could not disobey a direct order from hismaster, Sirius. But he gave Narcissa information of the sort that is very valuable to Voldemort,yet must have seemed much too trivial for Sirius to think of banning him from repeating it.'

`Like what?' said Harry.

`Like the fact that the person Sirius cared most about in the world was you,' said Dumbledorequietly. `Like the fact that you were coming to regard Sirius as a mixture of father and brother.

Voldemort knew already, of course, that Sirius was in the Order, and that you knew where hewas - but Kreacher's information made him realise that the one person for whom you wouldgo to any lengths to rescue was Sirius Black.'

Harry's lips were cold and numb.

`So… when I asked Kreacher if Sirius was there last night…'

`The Malfoys - undoubtedly on Voldemort's instructions - had told him he must find a way ofkeeping Sirius out of the way once you had seen the vision of Sirius being tortured. Then, ifyou decided to check whether Sirius was at home or not, Kreacher would be able to pretendhe was not. Kreacher injured Buckbeak the Hippogriff yesterday, and, at the moment whenyou made your appearance in the fire, Sirius was upstairs tending to him.'

There seemed to be very little air in Harry's lungs; his breathing was quick and shallow.

`And Kreacher told you all this… and laughed?' he croaked.

'He did not wish to tell me,' said Dumbledore. `But I am a sufficiently accomplishedLegilimens myself to know when I am being lied to and I - persuaded him - to tell me the fullstory, before I left for the Department of Mysteries.'

`And,' whispered Harry, his hands curled in cold fists on his knees, `and Hermione kepttelling us to be nice to him =`She was quite right, Harry,' said Dumbledore. `I warned Sirius when we adopted twelveGrimmauld Place as our Headquarters that Kreacher must be treated with kindness andrespect. I also told him that Kreacher could be dangerous to us. I do not think Sinus took mevery seriously, or that he ever saw Kreacher as a being with feelings as acute as a human's =

`Don't you blame - don't you - talk - about Sirius like -' Harry's breath was constricted, hecould not get the words out properly; but the rage that had subsided briefly flared in himagain: he would not let Dumbledore criticise Sirius. `Kreacher's a lying - foul - he deserved -

`Kreacher is what he has been made by wizards, Harry' said Dumbledore. `Yes, he is to bepitied. His existence has been as miserable as your friend Dobby's. He was forced to doSirius's bidding, because Sirius was the last of the family to which he wasenslaved, but he felt no true loyalty to him. And whatever Kreacher's faults, it must beadmitted that Sirius did nothing to make Kreacher's lot easier =`DON'T TALK ABOUT SIRIUS LIKE THAT!' Harry yelled.

He was on his feet again, furious, ready to fly at Dumbledore, who had plainly notunderstood Sirius at all, how brave he was, how much he had suffered …

`What about Snape?' Harry spat. `You're not talking about him, are you? When I told himVoldemort had Sirius he just sneered at me as usual -

`Harry, you know Professor Snape had no choice but to pretend not to take you seriously infront of Dolores Umbridge,' said Dumbledore steadily, `but as I have explained, he informedthe Order as soon as possible about what you had said. It was he who deduced where youhad gone when you did not return from the Forest. It was he, too, who gave ProfessorUmbridge fake Veritaserum when she was attempting to force you to tell her Sirius'swhereabouts.'

Harry disregarded this; he felt a savage pleasure in blaming Snape, it seemed to be easing hisown sense of dreadful guilt, and he wanted to hear Dumbledore agree with him.

`Snape - Snape g - goaded Sirius about staying in the house - he made out Sirius was a coward='Sirius was much too old and clever to have allowed such feeble taunts to hurt him,' saidDumbledore.

`Snape stopped giving me Occlumency lessons!' Harry snarled. `He threw me out of his office!'

`I am aware of it,' said Dumbledore heavily `I have already said that it was a mistake for menot to teach you myself, though I was sure, at the time, that nothing could have been moredangerous than to open your mind even further to Voldemort while in my presence -

`Snape made it worse, my scar always hurt worse after lessons with him = Harry remembered

Ron's thoughts on the subject and plunged on `- how do you know he wasn't trying to softenme up for Voldemort, make it easier for him to get inside my =`I trust Severus Snape,' said Dumbledore simply `But I forgot - another old man's mistake - that some wounds run too deep for the healing. I thoughtProfessor Snape could overcome his feelings about your father - I was wrong.'

`But that's OK, is it?' yelled Harry, ignoring the scandalised faces and disapprovingmutterings of the portraits on the walls. `It's OK for Snape to hate my dad, but it's not OK forSirius to hate Kreacher?'

'Sirius did not hate Kreacher,' said Dumbledore. `He regarded him as a servant unworthy ofmuch interest or notice. Indifference and neglect often do much more damage than outrightdislike … the fountain we destroyed tonight told a lie. We wizards have mistreated andabused our fellows for too long, and we are now reaping our reward.'

`SO SIRIUS DESERVED WHAT HE GOT, DID HE?' Harry yelled.

`I did not say that, nor will you ever hear me say it,' Dumbledore replied quietly. `Sinus wasnot a cruel man, he was kind to houseelves in general. He had no love for Kreacher, becauseKreacher was a living reminder of the home Sirius had hated.'

`Yeah, he did hate it!' said Harry, his voice cracking, turning his back on Dumbledore andwalking away. The sun was bright inside the room now and the eyes of all the portraitsfollowed him as he walked, without realising what he was doing, without seeing the office atall. `You made him stay shut up in that house and he hated it, that's why he wanted to get outlast night =`I was trying to keep Sirius alive,' said Dumbledore quietly`People don't like being locked up!' Harry said furiously, rounding on him. `You did it to meall last summer =Dumbledore closed his eyes and buried his face in his longfingered hands. Harry watchedhim, but this uncharacteristic sign of exhaustion, or sadness, or whatever it was fromDumbledore, did not soften him. On the contrary, he felt even angrier that Dumbledore wasshowing signs of weakness. He had no business being weak when Harry wanted to rage andstorm at him.

Dumbledore lowered his hands and surveyed Harry through his half-moon glasses.

'It is time,' he said, `for me to tell you what I should have told you five years ago, Harry. Please sit down. I am going to tell you everything. I ask only a little patience. You will haveyour chanceto rage at me - to do whatever you like - when I have finished. I will not stop you.'

Harry glared at him for a moment, then flung himself back into the chair oppositeDumbledore and waited.

Dumbledore stared for a moment at the sunlit grounds outside the window, then looked backat Harry and said, `Five years ago you arrived at Hogwarts, Harry, safe and whole, as I hadplanned and intended. Well - not quite whole. You had suffered. I knew you would when Ileft you on your aunt and uncle's doorstep. I knew I was condemning you to ten dark anddifficult years.'

He paused. Harry said nothing.

`You might ask - and with good reason - why it had to be so. Why could some wizardingfamily not have taken you in? Many would have done so more than gladly, would have beenhonoured and delighted to raise you as a son.

`My answer is that my priority was to keep you alive. You were in more danger than perhapsanyone but I realised. Voldemort had been vanquished hours before, but his supporters - andmany of them are almost as terrible as he - were still at large, angry, desperate and violent.

And I had to make my decision, too, with regard to the years ahead. Did I believe thatVoldemort was gone for ever? No. I knew not whether it would be ten, twenty or fifty yearsbefore he returned, but I was sure he would do so, and I was sure, too, knowing him as I havedone, that he would not rest until he killed you.

`I knew that Voldemort's knowledge of magic is perhaps more extensive than any wizardalive. I knew that even my most complex and powerful protective spells and charms wereunlikely to be invincible if he ever returned to full power.

`But I knew, too, where Voldemort was weak. And so I made my decision. You would beprotected by an ancient magic of which he knows, which he despises, and which he hasalways, therefore, underestimated - to his cost. I am speaking, of course, of the fact that yourmother died to save you. She gave you a lingering protection he never expected, a protectionthat flows in your veins to this day. I put my trust, therefore, in your mother's blood. Idelivered you to her sister, her only remaining relative.'

`She doesn't love me,' said Harry at once. `She doesn't give a damn -

`But she took you,' Dumbledore cut across him. `She may have taken you grudgingly,furiously, unwillingly, bitterly, yet still she took you, and in doing so, she sealed the charm Iplaced upon you. Your mother's sacrifice made the bond of blood the strongest shield I couldgive you.'

`I still don't =`While you can still call home the place where your mother's blood dwells, there you cannotbe touched or harmed by Voldemort. He shed her blood, but it lives on in you and her sister.

Her blood became your refuge. You need return there only once a year, but as long as you canstill call it home, whilst you are there he cannot hurt you. Your aunt knows this. I explainedwhat I had done in the letter I left, with you, on her doorstep. She knows that allowing youhouseroom may well have kept you alive for the past fifteen years.'

`Wait,' said Harry. `Wait a moment.'

He sat up straighter in his chair, staring at Dumbledore.

`You sent that Howler. You told her to remember - it was your voice -

`I thought,' said Dumbledore, inclining his head slightly, `that she might need reminding ofthe pact she had sealed by taking you. I suspected the Dementor attack might have awokenher to the dangers of having you as a surrogate son.'

`It did,' said Harry quietly. `Well - my uncle more than her. He wanted to chuck me out, butafter the Howler came she - she said I had to stay'

He stared at the floor for a moment, then said, `But what's this got to do with =He could not say Sinus's name.

`Five years ago, then,' continued Dumbledore, as though he had not paused in his story, `youarrived at Hogwarts, neither as happy nor as well-nourished as I would have liked, perhaps,yet alive and healthy You were not a pampered little prince, but as normal a boy as I couldhave hoped under the circumstances. Thus far, my plan was working well.

`And then … well, you will remember the events of your first year at Hogwarts quite asclearly as I do. You rose magnificently to the challenge that faced you and sooner - muchsooner - than I had anticipated, you found yourself face to face with Voldemort. You survivedagain. You did more. You delayed his return to full power and strength. You fought a man'sfight. I was … prouder of you than I can say.

`Yet there was a flaw in this wonderful plan of mine,' said Dumbledore. `An obvious flaw that I knew, even then, might be the undoing of it all. And yet, knowing how important it was thatmy plan should succeed, I told myself that I would not permit this flaw to ruin it. I alonecould prevent this, so I alone must be strong. And here was my first test, as you lay in thehospital wing, weak from your struggle with Voldemort.'

`I don't understand what you're saying,' said Harry.

`Don't you remember asking me, as you lay in the hospital wing, why Voldemort had tried tokill you when you were a baby?'

Harry nodded.

`Ought I to have told you then?'

Harry stared into the blue eyes and said nothing, but his heart was racing again.

`You do not see the flaw in the plan yet? No … perhaps not. Well, as you know, I decided notto answer you. Eleven, I told myself, was much too young to know. I had never intended totell you when you were eleven. The knowledge would be too much at such a young age.

`I should have recognised the danger signs then. I should have asked myself why I did notfeel more disturbed that you had already asked me the question to which I knew, one day, Imust give a terrible answer. I should have recognised that I was too happy to think that I didnot have to do it on that particular day … YOU were too young, much too young.

`And so we entered your second year at Hogwarts. And once again you met challenges evengrown wizards have never faced: once again you acquitted yourself beyond my wildestdreams. You did not ask me again, however, why Voldemort had left that marl; on you. Wediscussed your scar, oh yes … we came very, veryclose to the subject. Why did I not tell you everything?

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

`Well, it seemed to me that twelve was, after all, hardly better than eleven to receive suchinformation. I allowed you to leave my presence, bloodstained, exhausted but exhilarated,and if I felt a twinge of unease that I ought, perhaps, to have told you then, it was swiftlysilenced. You were still so young, you see, and I could not find it in myself to spoil that nightof triumph …

`Do you see, Harry? Do you see the flaw in my brilliant plan now? I had fallen into the trap Ihad foreseen, that I had told myself I could avoid, that I must avoid.'

`I don't -

`I cared about you toy much,' said Dumbledore simply. `I cared more for your happiness thanyour knowing the truth, more for your peace of mind than my plan, more for your life thanthe lives that might be lost if the plan failed. In other words, I acted exactly as Voldemortexpects we fools who love to act.

`Is there a defence? I defy anyone who has watched you as I have - and I have watched youmore closely than you can have imagined - not to want to save you more pain than you hadalready suffered. What did I care if numbers of nameless and faceless people and creatureswere slaughtered in the vague future, if in the here and now you were alive, and well, andhappy? I never dreamed that I would have such a person on my hands.

`We entered your third year. I watched from afar as you struggled to repel Dementors, as youfound Sirius, learned what he was and rescued him. Was I to tell you then, at the momentwhen you had triumphantly snatched your godfather from the jaws of the Ministry? But now,at the age of thirteen, my excuses were running out. Young you might be, but you had provedyou were exceptional. My conscience was uneasy, Harry. I knew the time must come soon …

`But you came out of the maze last year, having watched Cedric Diggory die, having escapeddeath so narrowly yourself … and I did not tell you, though I knew, now Voldemort hadreturned, I must do it soon. And now, tonight, I know you have long been ready for theknowledge I have kept from you for so long, because you have proved that I should haveplaced the burden upon youbefore this. My only defence is this: I have watched you struggling under more burdens thanany student who has ever passed through this school and I could not bring myself to addanother - the greatest one of all.'

Harry waited, but Dumbledore did not speak.

`I still don't understand.'

`Voldemort tried to kill you when you were a child because of a prophecy made shortlybefore your birth. He knew the prophecy had been made, though he did not know its fullcontents. He set out to kill you when you were still a baby, believing he was fulfilling theterms of the prophecy. He discovered, to his cost, that he was mistaken, when the curseintended to kill you backfired. And so, since his return to his body, and particularly sinceyour extraordinary escape from him last year, he has been determined to hear that prophecyin its entirety. This is the weapon he has been seeking so assiduously since his return: theknowledge of how to destroy you.'

The sun had risen fully now: Dumbledore's office was bathed in it. The glass case in which thesword of Godric Gryffindor resided gleamed white and opaque, the fragments of the instruments Harry had thrown to the floor glistened like raindrops, and behind him, the babyFawkes made soft chirruping noises in his nest of ashes.

`The prophecy's smashed,' Harry said blankly. `I was pulling Neville up those benches in the - the room where the archway was, and I ripped his robes and it fell …'

`The thing that smashed was merely the record of the prophecy kept by the Department ofMysteries. But the prophecy was made to somebody, and that person has the means ofrecalling it perfectly'

`Who heard it?' asked Harry, though he thought he knew the answer already`I did,' said Dumbledore. `On a cold, wet night sixteen years ago, in a room above the bar atthe Hog's Head inn. I had gone there to see an applicant for the post of Divination teacher,though it was against my inclination to allow the subject of Divination to continue at all. Theapplicant, however, was the great-great-granddaughter of a very famous, very gifted Seer andI thought it common politeness to meet her. I was disappointed. It seemed to me that she hadnota trace of the gift herself. I told her, courteously I hope, that I did not think she would besuitable for the post. I turned to leave.'

Dumbledore got to his feet and walked past Harry to the black cabinet that stood besideFawkes's perch. He bent down, slid back a catch and took from inside it the shallow stonebasin, carved with runes around the edges, in which Harry had seen his father tormentingSnape. Dumbledore walked back to the desk, placed the Pensieve upon it, and raised hiswand to his own temple. From it, he withdrew silvery, gossamer-fine strands of thoughtclinging to the wand and deposited them into the basin. He sat back down behind his deskand watched his thoughts swirl and drift inside the Pensieve for a moment. Then, with a sigh,he raised his wand and prodded the silvery substance with its tip.

A figure rose out of it, draped in shawls, her eyes magnified toenormous size behind her glasses, and she revolved slowly; her feet in the basin. But whenSybill Trelawney spoke, it was not in her usual ethereal, mystic voice, but in the harsh, hoarsetones Harry had heard her use once before:

`The one with the power to vanquish th'e- Dark Lord approaches… born to those who have thrice defiedhim, born as the seventh month dies … and the Dark Lord will mark him as his equal, but he will havcpower the Dark Lord knows not … and either must die at the hand of the other for neither can live whilethe other survives … the one with the power to vanquish the Dark Lord will be born as the seventh month dies …'

The slowly revolving Professor Trelawney sank back into the silver mass below and vanished.

The silence within the office was absolute. Neither Dumbledore nor Harry nor any of theportraits made a sound. Even Fawkes had fallen silent.

`Professor Dumbledore?' Harry said very quietly, for Dumbledore, still staring at thePensieve, seemed completely lost in thought. It .. did that mean … what did that mean?T'It meant,' said Dumbledore, `that the person who has the only chance of conquering LordVoldemort for good was born at the end of July, nearly sixteen years ago. This boy would beborn to parents who had already defied Voldemort three times.'

Harry felt as though something was closing in on him. His breathing seemed difficult again.

`It means - me?'

Dumbledore surveyed him for a moment through his glasses.

`The odd thing, Harry,' he said softly, `is that it may not have meant you at all. Sybill'sprophecy could have applied to two wizard boys, both born at the end of July that year, bothof whom had parents in the Order of the Phoenix, both sets of parents having narrowlyescaped Voldemort three times. One, of course, was you. The other was Neville Longbottom.'

`But then … but then, why was it my name on the prophecy and not Neville's?'

`The official record was re-labelled after Voldemort's attack on you as a child,' saidDumbledore. `It seemed plain to the keeper of the Hall of Prophecy that Voldemort couldonly have tried to kill you because he knew you to be the one to whom Sybill was referring.'

`Then - it might not be me?' said Harry`I am afraid,' said Dumbledore slowly, looking as though every word cost him a great effort,`that there is no doubt that it is you.

`But you said - Neville was born at the end of July, too - and his mum and dad =`You are forgetting the next part of the prophecy, the final identifying feature of the boy whocould vanquish Voldemort … Voldemort himself would mark him as his equal. And so he did,Harry He chose you, not Neville. He gave you the scar that has proved both blessing andcurse.'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

`But he might have chosen wrong!' said Harry. `He might have marked the wrong person!'
`He chose the boy he thought most likely to be a danger to him,' said Dumbledore. `Andnotice this, Harry: he chose, not the pureblood (which, according to his creed, is the only kindof wizard worth being or knowing) but the half-blood, like himself. He saw himself in youbefore he had ever seen you, and in marking you with that scar, he did not kill you, as heintended, but gave you powers, and a future, which have fitted you to escape him not once,but four times so far - something that neither your parents, nor Neville's parents, everachieved.'
`Why did he do it, then?' said Harry, who felt numb and cold. `Why did he try and kill me asa baby? He should have waited to see whether Neville or I looked more dangerous when wewere older and tried to kill whoever it was then =`That might, indeed, have been the more practical course,' said Dumbledore, `except thatVoldemort's information about the prophecy was incomplete. The Hog's Head inn, whichSybill chose for its cheapness, has long attracted, shall we say, a more interesting clientelethan the Three Broomsticks. As you and your friends found out to your cost, and I to minethat night, it is a place where it is never safe to assurpe you are not being overheard. Ofcourse, I had not dreamed, when I set out to meet Sybill Trelawney, that I would hearanything worth overhearing. My - our - one stroke of good fortune was that the eavesdropperwas detected only a short way into the prophecy and thrown from the building.'
`So he only heard -?T'He heard only the beginning, the part foretelling the birth of a boy in July to parents who hadthrice defied Voldemort. Consequently, he could not warn his master that to attack youwould be to risk transferring power to you, and marking you as his equal. So Voldemortnever knew that there might be danger in attacking you, that it might be wise to wait, to learnmore. He did not know that you would have power the Dark Lord knows not =`But I don't!' said Harry, in a strangled voice. `I haven't any powers he hasn't got, I couldn'tfight the way he did tonight, I can't possess people or - or kill them -'
`There is a room in the Department of Mysteries,' interrupted Dumbledore, `that is keptlocked at all times. It contains a force that is at once more wonderful and more terrible thandeath, than human intelligence, than the forces of nature. It is also, perhaps, the mostmysterious of the many subjects for study that reside there. It is the power held within thatroom that you possess in such quantities and which Voldemort has not at all. That power tookyou to save Sirius tonight. That power also saved you from possession by Voldemort, becausehe could not bear to reside in a body so full of the force he detests. In the end, it mattered notthat you could not close your mind. It was your heart that saved

you.'

Harry closed his eyes. If he had not gone to save Sirius, Sirius would not have died… More tostave off the moment when he would have to think of Sirius again, Harry asked, withoutcaring much about the answer, `The end of the prophecy… it was something about… neithercan live…'

`… while the other survives,' said Dumbledore.

`So,' said Harry, dredging up the words from what felt like a deep well of despair inside him,`so does that mean that… that one of us has got to kill the other one… in the end?'

`Yes,' said Dumbledore.

For a long time, neither of them spoke. Somewhere far beyond the office walls, Harry couldhear the sound of voices, students heading down to the Great Hall for an early breakfast,perhaps. It seemed impossible that there could be people in the world who still desired food,who laughed, who neither knew nor cared that Sirius Black was gone for ever. Sirius seemeda million miles away already; even now a part of Harry still believed that if he had onlypulled back that veil, he would have found Sirius looking back at him, greeting him, perhaps,with his laugh like a bark…

`I feel I owe you another explanation, Harry,' said Dumbledore hesitantly. `You may, perhaps,have wondered why I never chose you as a prefect? I must confess… that I rather thought…

you had enough responsibility to be going on with.'

Harry looked up at him and saw a tear trickling down Dumbledore's face into his long silverbeard

- CHAPTER THIRTY-EIGHT —

The Second War BeginsHE WHO MUST NOT BE NAMED RETURNS`In a brief statement on Friday night, Minister for Magic Cornelius Fudge confirmed that He WhoMust Not Be Named has returned to this country and is once more active.

"`It is with great regret that I must confirm that the wizard styling himself Lord - well, you know who Imean - is alive and among us again," said Fudge, looking tired and flustered as he addressed reporters.

"It is with almost equal regret that we report the mass revolt of the Dementors of Azkaban, who haveshown themselves averse to continuing in the Ministry's employ. We believe the Dementors arecurrently taking direction from Lord - Thingy.

"`We urge the magical population to remain vigilant. The Ministry is currently publishing guides toelementary home and personal defence which will be delivered free to all wizarding homes within thecoming month. "

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

`The Minister's statement was met with dismay and alarm from the wizarding community, which asrecently as last Wednesday was receiving Ministry assurances that there was "no truth whatsoever inthese persistent rumours that You-Know-Who is operating amongst us once more".

`Details of the events that led to the Ministry turnaround are still hazy, though it is believed that HeWho Must Not Be Named and a select band of followers (known as Death Eaters) gained entry to theMinistry of Magic itself on Thursday evening.

'Albus Dumbledore, newly reinstated Headmaster of Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry,reinstated member of the International Confederation of Wizards and reinstated Chief Warlock of theWizengamot, has so far been unavailable for comment. He has insisted over the past year that You-Know-Who isnot dead, as was widely hoped and believed, but is recruiting followers once more for afresh attempt to seize power. Meanwhile,the "Boy Who Lived" -

`There you are, Harry, I knew they'd drag you into it somehow,' said Hermione, looking overthe top of the paper at him.

They were in the hospital wing. Harry was sitting on the end of Ron's bed and they were bothlistening to Hermione read the front page of the Sunday Prophet. Ginny, whose ankle had beenmended in a trice by Madam Pomfrey, was curled up at the foot of Hermione's bed; Neville, whose nose had likewise been returned to its normal size and shape, was in a chair betweenthe two beds; and Luna, who had dropped in to visit, clutching the latest edition of TheQuibbler, was reading the magazine upside-down and apparently not taking in a wordHermione was saying.

`He's the "boy who lived" again now, though, isn't he?' said Ron darkly. `Not such a deludedshow-off any more, eh?'

He helped himself to a handful of Chocolate Frogs from the immense pile on his bedsidecabinet, threw a few to Harry, Ginny and Neville and ripped off the wrapper of his own withhis teeth. There were still deep welts on his forearms where the brain's tentacles had wrappedaround him. According to Madam Pomfrey, thoughts could leave deeper scarring than almostanything else, though since she had started applying copious amounts of Dr Ubbly'sOblivious Unction there seemed to have been some improvement.

`Yes, they're very complimentary about you now, Harry,' said Hermione, scanning down thearticle. "`A lone voice of truth… perceived as unbalanced, yet never wavered in his story… forced tobear ridicule and slander… " H mmm,' she said, frowning, `I notice they don't mention the factthat it was them doing all the ridiculing and slandering in the Prophet…'

She winced slightly and put a hand to her ribs. The curse Dolohov had used on her, thoughless effective than it would have been had he been able to say the incantation aloud, hadnevertheless caused, in Madam Pomfrey's words, `quite enough damageto be going on with'. Hermione was having to take ten different types of potion every day,was improving greatly, and was already bored with the hospital wing.

`You-Know-Who's Last Attempt to Take Over, pages two to four, What the Ministry Should HaveTold Us, page five, Why Nobody Listened to Albus Dumbledore, pages six to eight, Exclusive Interviewwith Harry Potter, page nine… Well,' said Hermione, folding up the newspaper and throwing itaside, `it's certainly given them lots to write about. And that interview with Harry isn'texclusive, it's the one that was in The Quibbler months ago…'

`Daddy sold it to them,' said Luna vaguely, turning a page of The Quibbler. `He got a verygood price for it, too, so we're going to go on an expedition to Sweden this summer to see ifwe can catch a Crumple-Horned Snorkack.'

Hermione seemed to struggle with herself for a moment, then said, `That sounds lovely'

Ginny caught Harry's eye and looked away quickly, grinning.

`So, anyway,' said Hermione, sitting up a little straighter and wincing again, `what's going on in school?T'Well, Flitwick's got rid of Fred and George's swamp,' said Ginny, `he did it in about threeseconds. But he left a tiny patch under the window and he's roped it off =Why?' said Hermione, looking startled.

`Oh, he just says it was a really good bit of magic,' said Ginny, shrugging.

`I think he left it as a monument to Fred and George,' said Ron, through a mouthful ofchocolate. `They sent me all these, you know,' he told Harry, pointing at the small mountainof Frogs beside him. `Must be doing all right out of that joke shop, eh?'

Hermione looked rather disapproving and asked, `So has all the trouble stopped nowDumbledore's back?'

`Yes,' said Neville, `everything's settled right back to normal.'

`I's'pose Filch is happy, is he?' asked Ron, propping a Chocolate Frog Card featuringDumbledore against his water jug.

`Not at all,' said Ginny `He's really, really miserable, actually…' She lowered her voice to awhisper. `He keeps saying Umbridge was the best thing that ever happened to Hogwarts…

All six of them looked around. Professor Umbridge was lying in a bed opposite them, gazingup at the ceiling. Dumbledore had strode alone into the Forest to rescue her from the centaurs;

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

how he had done it - how he had emerged from the trees supporting Professor Umbridgewithout so much as a scratch on him - nobody knew, and Umbridge was certainly not telling.
Since she had returned to the castle she had not, as far as any of them knew, uttered a singleword. Nobody really knew what was wrong with her, either. Her usually neat mousy hairwas very untidy and there were still bits of twigs and leaves in it, but otherwise she seemed tobe quite unscathed.
`Madam Pomfrey says she's just in shock,' whispered Hermione.
`Sulking, more like,' said Ginny`Yeah, she shows signs of life if you do this,' said Ron, and with his tongue he made soft clipcloppingnoises. Umbridge sat bolt upright, looking around wildly.
`Anything wrong, Professor?' called Madam Pomfrey, poking her head around her office door.

`No… no…' said Umbridge, sinking back into her pillows. `No, I must have been dreaming…'
Hermione and Ginny muffled their laughter in the bedclothes.
`Speaking of centaurs,' said Hermione, when she had recovered a little, `who's Divinationteacher now? Is Firenze staying?'
`He's got to,' said Harry, `the other centaurs won't take him back, will they?'
`It looks like he and Trelawney are both going to teach,' said Ginny`Bet Dumbledore wishes he could've got rid of Trelawney for good,' said Ron, now munchingon his fourteenth Frog. `Mind you, the whole subject's useless if you ask me, Firenze isn't a lotbetter…'
`How can you say that?' Hermione demanded. `After we've just found out that there are realprophecies?'
Harry's heart began to race. He had not told Ron, Hermione or anyone else what the prophecyhad contained. Neville had told them it had smashed while Harry was pulling him up thesteps in the Death Room and Harry had not yet corrected this impression. He was not readyto see their expressions when he told themthat he must be either murderer or victim, there was no other way…
`It is a pity it broke,' said Hermione quietly, shaking her head.
`Yeah, it is,' said Ron. `Still, at least You-Know-Who never found out what was in it either - where are you going?' he added, looking both surprised and disappointed as Harry stood up.

`Er - Hagrid's,' said Harry. `You know, he just got back and I promised I'd go down and seehim and tell him how you two are.'

`Oh, all right then,' said Ron grumpily, looking out of the dormitory window at the patch ofbright blue sky beyond. `Wish we could come.'

`Say hello to him fir us!' called Hermione, as Harry proceeded down the ward. `And ask himwhat's happening about… about his little friend!'

Harry gave a wave of his hand to show he had heard and understood as he left the dormitory.

The castle seemed very quiet even for a Sunday. Everybody was clearly out in the sunnygrounds, enjoying the end of their exams and the prospect of a last few days of termunhampered by revision or homework. Harry walked slowly along the deserted corridor,peering out of windows as he went; he could see people messing around in the air over theQuidditch pitch and a couple of students swimming in the lake, accompanied by the giantsquid.

He was finding it hard to decide whether he wanted to be with people or not; whenever hewas in company he wanted to get away and whenever he was alone he wanted company. Hethought he might really go and visit Hagrid, though, as he had not talked to him properlysince he'd returned…

Harry had just descended the last marble step into the Entrance Hall when Malloy, Crabbeand Goyle emerged from a door on the right that Harry knew led down to the Slytherincommon room. Harry stopped dead; so did Malfoy and the others. The only sounds were theshouts, laughter and splashes drifting into the Hall from the grounds through the open frontdoors.

Malfoy glanced around - Harry knew he was checking for signs of teachers - then he lookedback at Harry and said in a low voice, `You're dead, Potter.'

Harry raised his eyebrows.

Funny' he said, `you'd think I'd have stopped walking around…'

Malloy looked angrier than Harry had ever seen him; he felt a kind of detached satisfaction atthe sight of his pale, pointed face contorted with rage.

'You're going to pay,' said Malloy in a voice barely louder than a whisper. `I'm going to makeyou pay for what you've done to my father…'

`Well, I'm terrified now,' said Harry sarcastically. `I's'pose Lord Voldemort's just a warm-upact compared to you three - what's the matter?' he added, for Malfoy Crabbe and Goyle hadall looked stricken at the sound of the name. `He's a mate of your dad, isn't he?

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Not scared ofhim, are you?T'You think you're such a big man, Potter,' said Malfoy, advancing now, Crabbe and Goyleflanking him. `You wait. I'll have you. You can't land my father in prison =`I thought 1 just had,' said Harry.

`The Dementors have left Azkaban,' said Malfoy quietly. `Dad and the others'll be out in notime…'

`Yeah, I expect they will,' said Harry `Still, at least everyone knows what scumbags they arenow =Malfoy's hand flew towards his wand, but Harry was too quick for him; he had drawn hisown wand before Malfoy's fingers had even entered the pocket of his robes.

`Potter!'

The voice rang across the Entrance Hall. Snape had emerged from the staircase leading downto his office and at the sight of him Harry felt a great rush of hatred beyond anything he felttowards Malloy… whatever Dumbledore said, he would never forgive Snape… never…

`What are you doing, Potter?' said Snape, as coldly as ever, as he strode over to the four ofthem.

'1'm trying to decide what curse to use on Malloy, sir,' said Harry fiercely.

Snape stared at him.

`Put that wand away at once,' he said curtly. `Ten points from Gryff-'

Snape looked towards the giant hour-glasses on the walls and gave a sneering smile.

`Ah. I see there are no longer any points left in the Gryffindor hour-glass to take away. In thatcase, Potter, we will simply have to -

`Add some more?'

Professor McGonagall had just stumped up the stone steps into the castle; she was carrying atartan carpetbag in one hand and leaning heavily on a walking stick with her other, butotherwise looked quite well.

`Professor McGonagall!' said Snape, striding forwards. `Out of St Mungo's, I see!'

`Yes, Professor Snape,' said Professor McGonagall, shrugging off her travelling cloak, `I'mquite as good as new. You two - Crabbe - Goyle =She beckoned them forwards imperiously and they came, shuffling their large feet and looking awkward.

`Here,' said Professor McGonagall, thrusting her carpetbag into Crabbe's chest and her cloakinto Goyle's; `take these up to my office for me.'

They turned and stumped away up the marble staircase.

`Right then,' said Professor McGonagall, looking up at the hourglasses on the wall. `Well, Ithink Potter and his friends ought to have fifty points apiece for alerting the world to thereturn of YouKnow-Who! What say you, Professor Snape?'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

What?' snapped Snape, though Harry knew he had heard perfectly well. `Oh - well - Isuppose…'

`So that's fifty each for Potter, the two Weasleys, Longbottom and Miss Granger,' saidProfessor McGanagall, and a shower of rubies fell down into the bottom bulb of Gryffindor'shour-glass as she spoke. `Oh - and fifty for Miss Lovegood, I suppose,' she added, and anumber of sapphires fell into Ravenclaw's glass. `Now, you wanted to take ten from MrPotter, I think, Professor Snape - so there we are…'

A few rubies retreated into the upper bulb, leaving a respectable amount below nevertheless.

`Well, Potter, Malloy I think you ought to be outside on a752HARRY POTTERglorious day like this,' Professor McGonagall continued briskly.

Harry did not need telling twice- he thrust his wand back inside his robes and headed straightfor the front doors without another glance at Snape and Malfoy.

The hot sun hit him with a blast as he walked across the lawns towards Hagrid'scabin.

Students lying around on the grass sunbathing, talking, reading the Sunday Prophet andeating sweets, looked up at him as he passed; some called out to him, or else waved, clearlyeager to show that they, like the Prophet, had decided he was something of a hero. Harry saidnothing to any of them. He had no idea how much they knew of what had happened threedays ago, but he had so far avoided being questioned and preferred to keep it that way.

He thought at first when he knocked on Hagrid's cabin door that he was out, but then Fangcame charging around the corner and almost bowled him over with the enthusiasm of hiswelcome. Hagrid, it transpired, was picking runner beans in his back garden.

`All righ', Harry!' he said, beaming, when Harry approached the fence. `Come in, come in,we'll have a cup o' dandelion juice…

`How's things?' Hagrid asked him, as they settled down at his wooden table with a glassapiece of iced juice. `Yeh - er - feelin' all righ', are yeh?'

Harry knew from the look of concern on Hagrid's face that he was not referring to Harry'sphysical well-being.

`I'm fine,' Harry said quickly, because he could not bear to discuss the thing that he knew wasin Hagrid's mind. `So, where're you been?T'Bin hidin' out in the mountains,' said Hagrid. `Up in a ca`°e, like Sirius did when he =Hagrid broke off, cleared his throat gruffly, looked at Harry, and took a long draught of juice.

`Anyway, back now,' he said feebly.

`You -you look better,' said Harry, who was determined to keep the conversation movingaway from Sirius.

`Wha'?' said Hagrid, raising a massive hand and feeling his face. `Oh - oh yeah. Well,Grawpy's loads better behaved now, loads. Seemed right pleased ter see me when I got back,ter tell yeh thetruth. He's a good lad, really… I've bin thinkin' abou' tryin' ter find him a lady friend,actually…'

Harry would normally have tried to persuade Hagrid out of this idea at once; the prospect ofa second giant taking up residence in the Forest, possibly even wilder and more brutal thanGrawp, was positively alarming, but somehow Harry could not muster the energy necessaryto argue the point. He was starting to wish he was alone again, and with the idea of hasteninghis departure he took several large gulps of his dandelion juice, half-emptying his glass.

`Ev'ryone knows yeh've bin tellin' the truth now, Harry,' said Hagrid softly and unexpectedly.

He was watching Harry closely. `Tha's gotta be better, hasn' it?'

Harry shrugged.

`Look…' Hagrid leaned towards him across the table, `I knew Sirius longer 'n yeh did… hedied in battle, an' tha's the way he'd've wanted ter go =

`He didn't want to go at all!' said Harry angrily.

Hagrid bowed his great shaggy head…

`Nah, I don' reckon he did,' he said quietly. `But still, Harry… he was never one ter sit aroun' at home an' let other people do the fightin'. He couldn've lived with himself if he hadn' goneter help =Harry leapt up.

`I've got to go and visit Ron and Hermione in the hospital wing,' he said mechanically.

`Oh,' said Hagrid, looking rather upset. `Oh… all righ' then, Harry… take care o' yerself then,an' drop back in if yeh've got a`Yeah… right…'

Harry crossed to the door as fast as he could and pulled it open; he was out in the sunshineagain before Hagrid had finished saying goodbye, and walking away across the lawn. Onceagain, people called out to him as he passed. He closed his eyes for a few moments, wishingthey would all vanish, that he could open his eyes and find himself alone in the grounds…

A few days ago, before his exams had finished and he had seen754 HARRY PO-1-1 ER THE SECOND WAR BEGINS 75:

the vision Voldemort had planted in his mind, he would have given almost anything for thewizarding world to know he had been telling the truth, for them to believe that

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Voldemortwas back, and to know that he was neither a liar nor mad. Now, however…

He walked a short way around the lake, sat down on its bank, sheltered from the gaze ofpassers-by behind a tangle of shrubs, and stared out over the gleaming water, thinking…

Perhaps the reason he wanted to be alone was because he had felt isolated from everybodysince his talk with Dumbledore. An invisible barrier separated him from the rest of the world.

He was - he had always been - a marked man. It was just that he had never really understoodwhat that meant…

And yet sitting here on the edge of the lake, with the terriblc weight of grief dragging at him,with the loss of Sirius so raw and fresh inside, he could not muster any great sense of fear. Itwas sunny, and the grounds around him were full of laughing people, and even though hefelt as distant from them as though he belonged to a different race, it was still very hard to believe as he sat here that his life must include, or end in, murder…

He sat there for a long time, gazing out at the water, trying not to think about his godfather orto remember that it was directl't across from here, on the opposite bank, that Sirius had oncecollapsed trying to fend off a hundred Dementors…

The sun had set before he realised he was cold. He got up and returned to the castle, wipinghis face on his sleeve as he went.

Ron and Hermione left the hospital wing completely cured three days before the end of term.

Hermione kept showing signs of wanting to talk about Sirius, but Ron tended to make`hushing noises every time she mentioned his name. Harry was still not sure whether or nothe wanted to talk about his godfather yet; his wishes varied with his mood. He knew onething, though: unhappy as he felt at the moment, he would greatly miss Hogwarts in a fewdays' time when he was back at number four, Privet Drive. Even though he now understoodexactly why he had to return there every summer, he did not feel any better about it. Indeed,he had never dreaded his return more.

Professor Umbridge left Hogwarts the day before the end of term. It seemed she had crept outof the hospital wing during dinnertime, evidently hoping to depart undetected, butunfortunately for her, she met Peeves on the way, who seized his last chance to do as Fredhad instructed, and chased her gleefully from the premises whacking her alternately with awalking stick and a sock full of chalk. Many students ran out into the Entrance Hall to watchher running away down the path and the Heads of Houses tried only half-heartedly torestrain them. Indeed, Professor McGonagall sank back into her chair at the staff table after afew feeble remonstrances and was clearly heard to express a regret that she could not runcheering after Umbridge herself, because Peeves had borrowed her walking stick.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

Their last evening at school arrived; most people had finished packing and were alreadyheading down to the end-of-term leaving feast, but Harry had not even started.

`Just do it tomorrow!' said Ron, who was waiting by the door of their dormitory. `Come on,I'm starving.'

`I won't be long… look, you go ahead…'

But when the dormitory door closed behind Ron, Harry made no effort to speed up hispacking. The very last thing he wanted to do was to attend the Leaving Feast. He was worriedthat Dumbledore would make some reference to him in his speech. He was sure to mentionVoldemort's return; he had talked to them about it last year, after all…

Harry pulled some crumpled robes out of the very bottom of his trunk to make way for folded ones and, as he did so, noticed a badly wrapped package lying in a corner of it. Hecould not think what it was doing there. He bent down, pulled it out from underneath histrainers and examined it.

He realised what it was within seconds. Sirius had given it to him just inside the front door ofnumber twelve Grimmauld Place. `Use it if you need me, all right?'

Harry sank down on to his bed and unwrapped the package. Out fell a small, square mirror. Itlooked old; it was certainly dirty. Harry held it up to his face and saw his own reflectionlooking back at himHe turned the mirror over. There on the reverse side was a scribbled note from Sirius.

This is a two-way mirror, I've got the other one of the pair. If youneed to speak to me, just say my name into it; you'll appear inmy mirror and I'll be able to talk in yours. James and I used touse them when we were in separate detentions.

Harry's heart began to race. He remembered seeing his dead parents in the Mirror of Erisedfour years ago. He was going to be able to talk to Sirius again, right now, he knew it -

He looked around to make sure there was nobody else there; the dormitory was quite empty.

He looked back at the mirror, raised it in front of his face with trembling hands and said,loudly and clearly, 'Sirius.'

His breath misted the surface of the glass. He held the mirror even closer, excitement floodingthrough him, but the eyes blinking back at him through the fog were definitely his own.

He wiped the mirror clear again and said, so that every syllable rang clearly through the room:

'Sirius Black!'

Nothing happened. The frustrated face looking back out of the mirror was still, definitely, hisown…

Sirius didn't have his mirror on him when he went through the archway, said a small voice inHarry's head. That's why it's not working…

Harry remained quite still for a moment, then hurled the mirror back into the trunk where itshattered. He had been convinced, for a whole, shining minute, that he was going to seeSirius, talk to him again…

Disappointment was burning in his throat; he got up and began throwing his things pell-mellinto the trunk on top of the broken mirror -

But then an idea struck him… a better idea than a mirror… a much bigger, more importantidea… how had he never thought of it before - why had he never asked?

He was sprinting out of the dormitor't and down the spiralTHE SECOND WAR BEGINSstaircase. hitting the walls as he ran and barely noticing; he hurtled across the empty commonroom, through the portrait hole and off along the corridor, ignoring the Fat Lady, who calledafter him: `The feast is about to start, you know, you're cutting it very fine!'

But Harry had no intention of going to the feast…

How could it be that the place was full of ghosts whenever you didn't need one, yet now…

He ran down staircases and along corridors and met nobody either alive or dead. They wereall, clearly, in the Great Hall. Outside his Charms classroom he came to a halt, panting andthinking disconsolately that he would have to wait until later, until after the end of the feast…

But just as he had given up hope, he saw it - a translucent somebody drifting across the end ofthe corridor.

`Hey - hey Nick! NICK!'

The ghost stuck its head back out of the wall, revealing the extravagantly plumed hat anddangerously wobbling head of Sir Nicholas de Mimsy-Porpington.

`Good evening,' he said, withdrawing the rest of his body from the solid stone and smiling atHarry `I am not the only one who is late, then? Though,' he sighed, `in a rather different sense,of course…

`Nick, can I ask you something?'

A most peculiar expression stole over Nearly Headless Nick's face as he inserted a finger inthe stiff ruff at his neck and tugged it a little straighter, apparently to give himself thinkingtime. He desisted only when his partially severed neck seemed about to give way completely.

`Er - now, Harry?' said Nick, looking discomfited. `Can't it wait until after the feast?T'No - Nick - please,' said Harry, `I really need to talk to you. Can we go in here?'
Harry opened the door of the nearest classroom and Nearly Headless Nick sighed.
`Oh, very well,' he said, looking resigned. `I can't pretend I haven't been expecting it.'
Harry was holding the door open for him, but he drifted through the wall instead.
`Expecting what?' Harry asked, as he closed the door.
`You to come and find me,' said Nick, now gliding over to the window and looking out at thedarkening grounds. `It happens, sometimes… when somebody has suffered a… loss.'
`Well,' said Harry, refusing to be deflected. `You were right, I've - I've come to find you.'
Nick said nothing.
`It's -'said Harry, who was finding this more awkward than he had anticipated, `it's just - you're dead. But you're still here, aren't you?'
Nick sighed and continued to gaze out at the grounds.
`That's right, isn't it?' Harry urged him. `You died, but I'm talking to you…you can walkaround Hogwarts and everything, can't you?'
'Yes,' said Nearly Headless Nick quietly, `I walk and talk, yes.'
`So, you came back, didn't you?' said Harry urgently. `People can come back, right? As ghosts.
They don't have to disappear completely. Well?' he added impatiently, when Nick continuedto say nothing.
Nearly Headless Nick hesitated, then said, `Not everyone can come back as a ghost.'
`What d'you mean?' said Harry quickly`Only… only wizards.'
`Oh,' said Harry, and he almost laughed with relief. `Well, that's OK then, the person I'm asking about is a wizard. So he can come back, right?'
Nick turned away from the window and looked mournfully at Harry.
`He won't come back.'
`Who?'
`Sinus Black,' said Nick.
`But you did!' said Harry angrily. `You came back -you're dead and you didn't disappear -'
`Wizards can leave an imprint of themselves upon the earth, to walk palely where their livingselves once trod,' said Nick miserably. `But very few wizards choose that path.'
`Why not?' said Harry. `Anyway - it doesn't matter - Sirius won't care if it's unusual, he'llcome back, I know he will!'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

And so strong was his belief, Harry actually turned his head to check the door, sure, for a splitsecond, that he was going to see Sirius, pearly-white and transparent but beaming, walkingthrough it towards him.

`He will not come back,' repeated Nick. `He will have… gone on.'

`What d'you mean, "gone on"?' said Harry quickly `Gone on where? Listen - what happenswhen you die, anyway? Where do you go? Why doesn't everyone come back? Why isn't thisplace full of ghosts? Why -?T'I cannot answer,' said Nick.

`You're dead, aren't you?' said Harry exasperatedly. `Who can answer better than you?T'I was afraid of death,' said Nick softly. `I chose to remain behind. I sometimes wonderwhether I oughtn't to have… well, that is neither here nor there… in fact, I am neither herenor there…' He gave a small sad chuckle. `I know nothing of the secrets of death, Harry, for Ichose my feeble imitation of life W stead. I believe learned wizards study the matter in theDepartment of Mysteries -'

`Don't talk to me about that place!' said Harry fiercely.

`I am sorry not to have been more help,' said Nick gently `Well… well, do excuse me… thefeast, you know…'

And he left the room, leaving Harry there alone, gazing blankly at the wall through whichNick had disappeared.

Harry felt almost as though he had lost his godfather all over again in losing the hope that hemight be able to see or speak to him once more. He walked slowly and miserably back upthrough the empty castle, wondering whether he would ever feel cheerful again.

He had turned the corner towards the Fat Lady's corridor when he saw somebody up aheadfastening a note to a board on the wall. A second glance showed him it was Luna. There wereno good hiding places nearby, she was bound to have heard his footsteps, and in any case,Harry could hardly muster the energy to avoid anyone at the moment.

`Hello,' said Luna vaguely, glancing around at him as she stepped back from the notice.

`How come you're not at the feast?' Harry asked.

`Well, I've lost most of my possessions,' said Luna serenely. 'People take them and hide them,you know. But as it's the last night, I really do need them back, so I've been putting up signs.'

She gestured towards the noticeboard, upon which, sure enough, she had pinned a list of allher missing books and clothes, with a plea for their return.

An odd feeling rose in Harry; an emotion quite different from the anger and grief that hadfilled him since Sirius's death. It was a few moments before he realised that he was feelingsorry for Luna.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

`How come people hide your stuff?' he asked her, frowning.

`Oh… well…' she shrugged. `I think they think I'm a bit odd, you know. Some people call me"Loony" Lovegood, actually.'

Harry looked at her and the new feeling of pity intensified rather painfully.

`That's no reason for them to take your things,' he said flatly. D'you want help finding them?'

'Oh, no,' she said, smiling at him. `They'll come back, they always do in the end. It was justthat I wanted to pack tonight. Anyway… why aren't you at the feast?'

Harry shrugged. Just didn't feel like it.'

`No,' said Luna, observing him with those oddly misty, protuberant eyes. `I don't supposeyou do. That man the Death Eaters killed was your godfather, wasn't he? Ginny told me.'

Harry nodded curtly, but found that for some reason he did not mind Luna talking aboutSirius. He had just remembered that she, too, could see Thestrals.

`Have you…' he began. `I mean, who… has anyone you known ever died?'

`Yes,' said Luna simply, `my mother. She was a quite extraordinary witch, you know, but shedid like to experiment and one of her spells went rather badly wrong one day. I was nine.'

`I'm sorry' Harry mumbled.

'Yes, it was rather horrible,' said Luna conversationally. `I still feel very sad about itsometimes. But I've still got Dad. And anyway, it's not as though I'll never see Mum again, isit?'

`Er - isn't it?' said Harry uncertainly.

She shook her head in disbelief.

`Oh, come on. You heard them, just behind the veil, didn't you?'

`You mean…'

`In that room with the archway. They were just lurking out of sight, that's all. You heard them.'

They looked at each other. Luna was smiling slightly. Harry did not know what to say, or tothink; Luna believed so many extraordinary things… yet he had been sure he had heardvoices behind the veil, too.

`Are you sure you don't want me to help you look for your stuff?' he said.

`Oh, no,' said Luna. `No, I think I'll just go down and have some pudding and wait for it all toturn up… it always does in the end… well, have a nice holiday Harry'

`Yeah… yeah, you too.'

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

She walked away from him and, as he watched her go, he found that the terrible weight in hisstomach- seemed to have lessened slightly.

The journey home on the Hogwarts Express next day was eventful in several ways. FirstlyMalfoy, Crabbe and Goyle, who had clearly been waiting all week for the opportunity tostrike without teacher witnesses, attempted to ambush Harry halfway down the train as hemade his way back from the toilet. The attack might have succeeded had it not been for thefact that they unwittingly chose to stage the attack right outside a compartment full of DAmembers, who saw what was happening through the glass and rose as one to rush to Harry'said. By the time Ernie Macmillan, Hannah Abbott, Susan Bones, Justin Finch-FletchleyAnthony Goldstein and Terry Boot had finished using a wide variety of the hexes and jinxesHarry had taught them, Malfoy Crabbe and Goyle resembled nothing so much as threegigantic slugs squeezed into Hogwarts uniform as Harry, Ernie and Justin hoisted them intothe luggage rack and left them there to ooze.

`I must say, I'm looking forward to seeing Malfoy's mother's face when he gets off the train,' said Ernie, with some satisfaction, ashe watched Malloy squirm above him. Ernie had never quite got over the indignity of Malloydocking points from Hufflepuff during his brief spell as a member of the Inquisitorial Squad.

`Goyle's mum'll be really pleased, though,' said Ron, who had come to investigate the sourceof the commotion. `He's loads betterlooking now… anyway, Harry, the food trolley's juststopped if you want anything…'

Harry thanked the others and accompanied Ron back to their compartment, where he boughta large pile of cauldron cakes and pumpkin pasties. Hermione was reading the Daily Prophetagain, Ginny was doing a quiz in The Quibbler and Neville was stroking his Mimbulusmimbletonia, which had grown a great deal over the year and now made odd crooning noiseswhen touched.

Harry and Ron whiled away most of the journey playing wizard chess while Hermione readout snippets from the Prophet. It was now full of articles about how to repel Dementors,attempts by the Ministry to track down Death Eaters and hysterical letters claiming that thewriter had seen Lord Voldemort walking past their house that very morning…

`It hasn't really started yet,' sighed Hermione gloomily, folding up the newspaper again. `Butit won't be long now…'

`Hey, Harry' said Ron softly, nodding towards the glass window on to the corridor.

Harry looked around. Cho was passing, accompanied by Marietta Edgecombe, who was wearing a balaclava. His and Cho's eyes met for a moment. Cho blushed and kept walking. Harry looked back down at the chessboard just in time to see one of his pawns chased off itssquare by Ron's knight.

`What's - er - going on with you and her, anyway?' Ron asked quietly`Nothing,' said Harry truthfully.

`I - er - heard she's going out with someone else now,' said Hermione tentatively.

Harry was surprised to find that this information did not hurt at all. Wanting to impress Choseemed to belong to a past that was no longer quite connected with him; so much of what hehad wanted before Sinus',' death felt that .°av these days… the weekthat had elapsed since he had last seen Sirius seemed to have lasted much, much longer; itstretched across two universes, the one with Sirius in it, and the one without.

`You're well out of it, mate,' said Ron forcefully. `I mean, she's quite good-looking and all that,but you want someone a bit more cheerful.'

`She's probably cheerful enough with someone else,' said Harry, shrugging.

`Who's she with now, anyway?' Ron asked Hermione, but it was Ginny who answered.

`Michael Corner,' she said.

`Michael - but = maid Ron, craning around in his seat to stare at her. `But you were going outwith him!'

`Not any more,' said Ginny resolutely. `He didn't like Gryffindor beating Ravenclaw atQuidditch, and got really sulky, so I ditched him and he ran off to comfort Cho instead.' Shescratched her nose absently with the end of her quill, turned The Quibbler upsidedown andbegan marking her answers. Ron looked highly delighted.

`Well, I always thought he was a bit of an idiot,' he said, prodding his queen forwardstowards Harry's quivering castle. `Good for you. Just choose someone - better - next time.'

He cast Harry an oddly furtive look as he said it.

`Well, I've chosen Dean Thomas, would you say he's better?' asked Ginny vaguely.

WHAT?' shouted Ron, upending the chessboard: Crookshanks went plunging after the piecesand Hedwig and Pigwidgeon twittered and hooted angrily from overhead.

As the train slowed down in the approach to King's Cross, Harry thought he had neverwanted to leave it less. He even wondered fleetingly what would happen if he simply refusedto get off, but remained stubbornly sitting there until the first of September, when it wouldtake him back to Hogwarts. When it finally puffed to a standstill, however, he lifted downHedwig's cage and prepared to drag his trunk from the train as usual.

When the ticket inspector signalled to Harry, Ron and Hermione that it was safe to walkthrough the magical barrier between platforms nine and ten, however, he found a surpriseawaiting him onthe other side: a group of people standing there to greet him who he had not expected at all.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

There was Mad-Eye Moody, looking quite as sinister with his bowler hat pulled low over hismagical eye as he would have done without it, his gnarled hands clutching a long staff, hisbody wrapped in a voluminous travelling cloak. Tonks stood just behind him, her brightbubble-gum-pink hair gleaming in the sunlight filtering through the dirty glass of the stationceiling, wearing heavily patched jeans and a bright purple T-shirt bearing the legend TheWeird Sisters. Next to Tonks was Lupin, his face pale, his hair greying, a long and threadbareovercoat covering a shabby jumper and trousers. At the front of the group stood Mr and MrsWeasley, dressed in their Muggle best, and Fred and George, who were both wearing brandnewjackets in some lurid green, scaly material.

'Ron, Ginny!' called Mrs Weasley, hurrying forwards and hugging her children tightly `Oh,and Harry dear - how are you?T'Fine,' lied Harry, as she pulled him into a tight embrace. Over her shoulder he saw Rongoggling at the twins' new clothes.

`What are they supposed to be?' he asked, pointing at the jackets.

`Finest dragonskin, little bro',' said Fred, giving his zip a little tweak. `Business is boomingand we thought we'd treat ourselves.'

`Hello, Harry' said Lupin, as Mrs Weasley let go of Harry and turned to greet Hermione.

`Hi,' said Harry `I didn't expect … what are you all doing here?T'Well,' said Lupin with a slight smile, `we thought we might have a little chat with your auntand uncle before letting them take you home.'

`I dunno if that's a good idea,' said Harry at once.

`Oh, I think it is,' growled Moody, who had limped a little closer. That'll be them, will it,Potter?'

He pointed with his thumb over his shoulder; his magical eye was evidently peering throughthe back of his head and his bowler hat. Harry leaned an inch or so to the left to see whereMad-Eye was pointing and there, sure enough, were the three Dursleys, who lookedpositively appalled to see Harry's reception committee.

`Ah, Harry' said Mr Weasley, turning from Hermione's parents,who he had just greeted enthusiastically, and who were now taking it in turns to hugHermione. `Well - shall we do it, then?T'Yeah, I reckon so, Arthur,' said Moody.

He and Mr Weasley took the lead across the station towards the Dursleys, who wereapparently rooted to the floor. Hermione disengaged herself gently from her mother to jointhe group.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

`Good afternoon,' said Mr Weasley pleasantly to Uncle Vernon as he came to a halt right infront of him. `You might remember me, my name's Arthur Weasley'

As Mr Weasley had single-handedly demolished most of the Dursleys' living room two yearspreviously, Harry would have been very surprised if Uncle Vernon had forgotten him. Sureenough, Uncle Vernon turned a deeper shade of puce and glared at Mr Weasley, but chose notto say anything, partly, perhaps, because the Dursleys were outnumbered two to one. AuntPetunia looked both frightened and embarrassed; she kept glancing around, as thoughterrified somebody she knew would see her in such company. Dudley, meanwhile, seemed tobe trying to look small and insignificant, a feat at which he was failing extravagantly.

`We thought we'd just have a few words with you about Harry, said Mr Weasley, still smiling.

`Yeah,' growled Moody. `About how he's treated when he's at your place.'

Uncle Vernon's moustache seemed to bristle with indignation. Possibly because the bowlerhat gave him the entirely mistaken impression that he was dealing with a kindred spirit, headdressed himself to Moody.

`I am not aware that it is any of your business what goes on in my house -

`I expect what you're not aware of would fill several books, Dursley,' growled Moody.

`Anyway, that's not the point,' interjected Tonks, whose pink hair seemed to offend AuntPetunia more than all the rest put together, for she closed her eyes rather than look at her.

`The point is, if we find out you've been horrible to Harry =`- And make no mistake, we'll hear about it,' added Lupin pleasantly.

`Yes,' said Mr Weasley, `even if you won't let Harry use the fellytone =`Telephone,' whispered Hermione.

`- Yeah, if we get any hint that Potter's been mistreated in any way, you'll have us to answerto,' said Moody.

Uncle Vernon swelled ominously. His sense of outrage seemed to outweigh even his fear ofthis bunch of oddballs.

`Are you threatening me, sir?' he said, so loudly that passers-by actually turned to stare.

`Yes, I am,' said Mad-Eye, who seemed rather pleased that Uncle Vernon had grasped this factso quickly.

`And do I look like the kind of man who can be intimidated?' barked Uncle Vernon.

`Well…' said Moody, pushing back his bowler hat to reveal his sinisterly revolving magicaleye. Uncle Vernon leapt backwards in horror and collided painfully with a luggage trolley.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS

`Yes, I'd have to say you do, Dursley'

He turned away from Uncle Vernon to survey Harry.

`So, Potter… give us a shout if you need us. If we don't hear from you for three days in a row,we'll send someone along…'

Aunt Petunia whimpered piteously. It could not have been plainer that she was thinking ofwhat the neighbours would say if the't caught sight of these people marching up the gardenpath.

`Bye, then, Potter,' said Moody, grasping Harry's shoulder for a moment with a gnarled hand.

`Take care, Harry,' said Lupin quietly. `Keep in touch.'

`Harry, we'll have you away from there as soon as we can,' Mrs Weasley whispered, hugginghim again.

`We'll see you soon, mate,' said Ron anxiously, shaking Harry's hand.

`Really soon, Harry' said Hermione earnestly. `We promise.'

Harry nodded. He somehow could not find words to tell them what it meant to him, to seethem all ranged there, on his side. Instead, he smiled, raised a hand in farewell, turned aroundand led the way out of the station towards the sunlit street, with Uncle Vernon, Aunt Petuniaand Dudley hurrying along in his wake.

PUTCLUB EBOOKS